Title to land to be purchased by the United States.
Sept. 11, 1841, Res. No. 6, v. 5, p. 468.
Sec. 355, R. S.

1593. No public money shall be expended upon any site or land purchased by the United States for the purpose of erecting thereon any armory, arsenal, fort, fortification, navy-yard, custom-house, light-house, or other public building, of any kind whatever, until the written opinion of the Attorney-General shall be had in favor of the validity of the title, nor until the consent of the legislature of the State in which the land or site may be, to such purchase, has been given. The district attorneys of the United States, upon the application of the Attorney-General, shall furnish any assistance or information in their power in relation to the titles of the public property lying within their respective districts. And the Secretaries of the Departments, upon the application of the Attorney-General, shall procure any additional evidence of title which he may deem necessary, and which may not be in the possession of the officers of the Government, and the expense of procuring it shall be paid out of the appropriations made for the contingencies of the Departments respectively.[1]

erty, purchased or about to be purchased, in their possession to furnish the same forthwith to the Attorney-General.

Joint resolution No. 21, of April 11, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 737), contains the requirement that "in case of emergency, when, in the opinion of the President, the immediate erection of any temporary fort or fortification is deemed important and urgent, such temporary fort or fortification may be constructed upon the written consent of the owner of the land upon which such work is to be placed; and the requirements of section three hundred and fifty-five of the Revised Statutes shall not be applicable in such cases."

The expense of procuring an abstract of title to land to be used as a site for a fortification is a proper charge against the appropriation made for the purchase of the site, if the abstract is needed by the United States attorney to assist him in examining the title, provided the land is to be purchased and not condemned. 111 Compt. Dig., 216.

The title to lands purchased on account of the United States is not properly assured by a certificate of "no liens," signed by the attorney who made the abstract of title. The proper person to make such a certificate is the custodian of the records of judgments and other record liens in the county in which the land is located.[a] Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., par. 2114.

"Section 355 of the Revised Statutes prescribes that no public money shall be expended upon any site or land purchased by the United States for the purpose of erecting thereon any armory, arsenal, fort, fortification, navy-yard, custom-house, light-house, or other building, of any kind whatever, until the * * * consent of the legislature of the State in which the land or site may be, to such purchase, has been given. This section is part based on the clause of the Constitution referred to, and in part not. The consent of the State to a purchase, given in order to satisfy the requirement of this section, would invest the United States with exclusive jurisdiction, if the purchase be for one of the constitutional purposes; but the section provides for other purposes also, and as to these it would seem that a simple consent to the purchase (assuming that such consent, being for a purpose not falling under the clause of the Constitution, amounts to a cession of jurisdiction) would only carry with it so much jurisdiction as would be necessary for the purpose of the purchase. Probably this would be held to be concurrent jurisdiction. Taking into consideration the fact that States can not, under any circumstances, interfere with the instrumentalities of the Government of the United States, it may, indeed, be questioned whether, even under this view, unnecessary precautions have not been taken in regard to the acquisition of jurisdiction; and certainly it can not be presumed that a State intends to part with more of its sovereignty than is necessary. A consent to the purchase, under section 355, Revised Statutes, if the purchase be for other than one of the purposes described in the clause of the Constitution, may, therefore, be accompanied with any limitations not interfering with an instrumentality of the Government of the United States.

"The most common way of acquiring jurisdiction, however, is by the State's expressly ceding it to the United States. In such case the State may make similar limitations, and this even if the place be used by the United States for one of the purposes mentioned in the clause of the Constitution. To bring the case under the clause there must be a purchase with consent. Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S., 539; Chicago and Pacific Ry. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S., 549; Benson v. U. S., 146 U. S., 331; in re Kelly, 71 Fed. Rep., 545; in re Ladd, 74 Fed. Rep., 399.)" Gen. G. N. Lieber, Sept. 28, 1897 (see Military Res., etc., Title and Jurisdiction, p. 288).

[1] In the absence of statutory authority, land can not be purchased for the United States with any more legality than land of the United States can be sold or disposed of. By a provision of an act of May 1, 1820, now contained in section 2736, Revised Statutes, it is declared that "No land shall be purchased on account of the United States except under a law authorizing such purchase." Held that the term "purchase" was to be understood in its legal sense, as embracing any mode of acquiring property other than by descent; (b) and that therefrom the Secretary of War would not be empowered to accept a gift of land or interest in land for any use or purpose independently of statutory authority. (a) And similarly held as to the construction of the same word ("purchase") as employed in section 355, Revised Statutes, and advised that an appropriation of public money could not legally be expended for the erection of a public building upon land donated to the United States until the Attorney-General had passed the title and the legislature of the State in which the land was situated had given its consent to the grant. (b) Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 627, par. 5.

The statutory authority relied upon for the purchase of land by a head of a Department should be clear and indisputable. Thus, held that authority to purchase additional land for the interment of soldiers could not be derived from the general provision of the annual appropriation act, appropriating a certain sum for maintaining the existing national cemeteries. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., par. 2105.

A statute conferring a specific authority to purchase certain land should, in the exercise of the authority, be strictly construed. Thus, where a statute authorized the Secretary of War to purchase, for a certain stated sum, a certain described tract containing a specified number of acres, held that the act did not invest him with discretion to purchase a portion only of such tract. Ibid., par. 2108.

Authority to acquire land in a State, by the exercise of the right of eminent domain, whether by proceedings for condemnation in the United States circuit court or in the courts of the State, (c) can be vested in an executive official of the United States only by express legislation of Congress. Ibid., 2109.

The Constitution vests in Congress the exclusive power to dispose of the property of the United States, real or personal. (d) The Secretary of War, in the absence of authority from Congress, can not alienate land of the United States. Thus, where a company proposed to cut out and remove a part of a dam (some 140 feet) on Fox River, Wisconsin, belonging to the United States, and to substitute another, as a private improvement, below, held that this was a proposition for the alienation by an executive official of public property, and could not legally be entertained. Ibid., par. 2113.

In view of the prohibition of section 3736, Revised Statutes, that "no land shall be purchased on account of the United States, except under a law authorizing the same," the Secretary of War can not accept a grant by gift of land or of an easement in land without authority of special statute. [By act of April 24, 1888, he is expressly empowered to purchase, or accept donations of, land for river and harbor improvements.] And held that, in the absence of authority from Congress, a purchase of lots in a city cemetery, for the burial purposes of a neighboring military post, would not be legal or operative. Ibid., par. 2106.

[1] The State of North Carolina ceded to the United States, by an act of its legislature of 1794, the land of the present military reservation at Southport, N. C., the site of old Fort Johnson. A condition of the deed of cession was to the effect that a fortification should be erected on the land within three years and be maintained forever thereafter for the public service, or the land should revert to the State. The time allowed was repeatedly extended, the last extension expiring in 1818, when a fortification had been constructed if not fully completed. The fort has long since ceased to be garrisoned. In 1889 an individual citizen "entered" the site as State

[a] See this opinion concurred in by an opinion of the Attorney-General, in XVI Opins., 414. As statutes specially authorizing the acceptance of donations of land, note the early acts of March 20 and May 9, 1794, and, later, the acts of February 18, 1867; March 3, 1875; June 23, 1879. That authority, however, to purchase, and, a fortiori perhaps, to accept a gift of, the necessary land, may be implied from an appropriation act granting a sum of money for a public work requiring for its construction the occupation and use of certain land of an individual or corporation. See opinions of the Attorney-General in XV Opins., 212; XVI ibid., 119, 387. In the opinion in XVI Opins., 119, it was held that where no statutory authority whatever existed for accepting a gift of land a head of a Department would not be justified in accepting the same on the condition that Congress ratify the acceptance and in anticipation of such ratification.

[b] But under the implied authority contained in section 1838, Revised Statutes, lands required as sites for forts, arsenals, etc., or needful public buildings, may be purchased (or acquired by gift) without the consent of the State, though in the absence of such consent public money can not, in view of the provisions of section 355, legally be expended upon the building. [1] The power to take private property for public uses, generally termed the right of eminent domain, belongs to every independent government. It is an incident of sovereignty and requires no constitutional recognition. The provision found in the fifth amendment to the Federal Constitution, and in the constitutions of the several States, for just compensation for property taken, is merely a limitation upon the use of the power. It is no part of the power itself, but a condition upon which the power may be exercised. U. S. v. Jones, 109 U. S., 513, 518; Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S., 106; Kohl v. U. S., 91 U. [1] The manner in which the power of eminent domain of the United States shall be exercised is a matter of legislative discretion, and Congress, by the act of August 1, 1888, 25 Stat. L., 357, has vested in the United States circuit and district courts of the district in which the land is situated jurisdiction of proceedings authorized to be instituted by any public officer to condemn such land for public purposes. By the act of August 18, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 316), the Secretary of War is authorized to cause proceedings to be instituted for the condemnation of land for military purposes "in any court having jurisdiction of such proceedings." Held, that said acts are in pari materia, and upon an application by the Secretary of War under the latter act the Attorney-General may, at his election, cause proceedings to be instituted for the condemnation of land for military purposes in either the State or Federal courts. Chappell v. U. S., 81 Fed. Rep., 764. By the Constitution of the United States, the estimate of the just compensation for property taken for the public use, under the right of eminent domain, is not required to be made by a jury, but may be intrusted to commissioners appointed by a court or by the Executive, or to an inquest consisting of more or fewer men than an ordinary jury. Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S., 548. [1] Lands may be acquired by the United States, within the territory of a State, in any one of three ways: (1) By purchase without the consent of the legislature of the State within which the lands are situated; (2) by purchase with such consent; (3) by an exercise of the right of eminent domain. Kohl v. U. S., 91 U. S., 367.

When the United States acquire lands within the limits of a State, with the consent of the legislature of the State, for the erection of forts, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings, the Constitution confers upon them exclusive jurisdiction of the tract so acquired; but when they acquire such lands in any other way than by purchase with the consent of the legislature they will hold the lands subject to this qualification, that if upon them forts, arsenals, or other public buildings are erected for the uses of the General Government such buildings, with their appurtenances, as instrumentalities for the execution of its powers, will be free from any such interference and jurisdiction of the State as would destroy or impair their effective use for the purposes designed. Such is the law with reference to all instrumentalities created by the General Government. Their exemption from State control is essential to the independence and sovereign authority of the United States within the sphere of their delegated powers. But when not used as such instrumentalities the legislative power of the State will be as full and complete as over any other places within her limits. Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S., 525, 539. Where the absolute title to property remains in the United States, no matter for what purpose it is acquired or held, it is not subject to State or municipal taxation. Am. and Engl. Ency. of Law, vol. 25, p. 110, and cases cited.

The purchase of lands in a State by the General Government, with legislative consent, does not, ipso facto, confer upon the General Government exclusive jurisdiction, unless the purchase is for a fort or for some other purpose distinctly named in Article I, section 8, of the Constitution; and in order that exclusive jurisdiction may be acquired over land taken for any other purpose the act providing therefor and calling for the consent must unequivocally declare that exclusive jurisdiction is intended and necessary, or such necessity must be manifest from the purpose of the act. Accordingly, held, that the acts of Congress establishing the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and creating a corporation authorized to take and hold lands for the purpose of such homes, containing no declaration of the necessity of exclusive jurisdiction in the General Government over such lands, do not vest such exclusive jurisdiction in the United States, upon the consent of the State being given to the acquisition of such lands. In re Kelly, 71 Fed. Rep., 545.

A cession to the General Government, in the act giving the consent of the State to the purchase of such land, of "jurisdiction" does not confer exclusive jurisdiction the purpose of the act not requiring it, but such jurisdiction only, concurrent with that of the State, as Congress may find necessary for the objects of the cession. Ibid.

Upon lands so ceded for the purpose of a home for disabled volunteers the criminal laws of the United States, which apply only to places within their exclusive jurisdiction, are not operative. Ibid.

A State may cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over a tract within its limits in a manner not provided for in the Constitution of the United States, and may prescribe conditions to the cession, if they are not inconsistent with the effective use of the property for the purpose intended. The reservation which has usually accompanied the consent of the States, that civil and criminal process of the State courts may be served in the places purchased, is not considered as interfering in any respect with the supremacy of the United States over them, but is admitted to prevent them from becoming an asylum for fugitives from justice. Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S., 525, 533. Such reservations provide only that civil and criminal process issued under the authority of the State, which must, of course, be for acts done and cognizable by the State, may be executed within the ceded lands, notwithstanding the cession. Not a word is said from which we can infer that it was intended that the State should have a right to punish for acts done within the ceded lands. An act of the legislature of a State ceding to the United States the jurisdiction of the State over a tract of land used as a military reservation upon condition that such jurisdiction shall continue only so long as the United States shall own and occupy such reservation; that the State shall have the right within the reservation to serve civil process and to execute criminal process against persons charged with crime committed within the State, and that roads may be opened and kept in repair within such reservation, cedes to the United States the entire political jurisdiction of the State over the place in question, including judicial and legislative jurisdiction, except as to service of process and opening roads, and the same can not be affected or further limited without the consent of the United States by a subsequent act of the State legislature attempting to impose additional restrictions on the jurisdiction ceded. In re Ladd, 74 Fed. Rep., 31.

After such cession a justice of the peace acting under authority of the State has no jurisdiction over the ceded territory in matters of alleged criminal violation of the laws of the State committed on such territory. Ibid.

It is a general rule of public law, recognized and acted upon by the United States, that whenever political jurisdiction and legislative power over any territory are transferred from one nation or sovereign to another the municipal laws of the country—that is, laws which are intended for the protection of private rights—continue in force until abrogated or changed by the new government or sovereign. By the cession public property passes from one government to the other, but private property remains as before, and with it those municipal laws which are designed to secure its peaceful use and enjoyment. As a matter of course, all laws, ordinances, and regulations in conflict with the political character, institutions, and constitution of the new government are at once displaced. * * * But with respect to other laws affecting the possession, use, and transfer of property, and designed to secure good order and peace in the community and promote its health and prosperity, which are of a strictly municipal character, the rule is general that a change of government leaves them in force until by direct action of the new government they are altered or repealed. Chicago and Pacific R. R. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S., 542, 547; American Insurance Co. v. Cantor, 1 Pet., 542; Halleck Int. Law, ch. 34, sec. 14.

While after such cession the municipal laws of the State governing property and property rights continue in force in the ceded territory, except so far as in conflict with the laws and regulations of the United States applying thereto, the criminal laws of the State cease to be of force within the ceded territory, and laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, requiring a license therefor, and punishing unlicensed sales cease to be operative, both as in conflict with the regulations of the United States governing military reservations and as penal in character. In re Ladd, 74 Fed. Rep., 31.

Such cessions are "necessarily temporary, to be exercised only so long as the places continue to be used for the public purposes for which the property was acquired, or reserved from sale." When they cease to be so used, the jurisdiction reverts to the State. Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S., 525, 542.

Palmer v. Barrett, 162 U. S., 399. Over lands reserved for military or other governmental purposes in the Territories the jurisdiction of the United States is necessarily paramount. When a Territory is admitted as a State it is within the power of Congress to stipulate for the power of exclusive jurisdiction over such reservations, or to except them from the jurisdiction of the State. Failing to do this, however, the State can exercise such authority and jurisdiction over them as over similar property held by private individuals; and the United States can acquire exclusive jurisdiction only when the same has been formally ceded by the legislature of the State in which the lands are situated. Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S., 525. Lands acquired by the United States for public uses, by purchase with the consent of the States, or by an exercise of the right of eminent domain, are not public lands, that term applying only to "such lands as are subject to sale or other disposition under general laws." Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S., 761.

When an act admitting a State into the Union, or organizing a Territorial government, provides that the lands in possession of an Indian tribe shall not be a part of such State or Territory, the new government has no jurisdiction over them. Langford v. Monteith, 102 U. S., 145. For an example of such a reservation on the part of Congress in the admission of a State into the Union, see the act of July 10, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 222), admitting the State of Wyoming.

SUPERVISION OF RESERVATIONS.

Department commanders will supervise all military reservations within the limits of their commands, and if necessary will use force to remove trespassers. No license or permission to any civilian to use or occupy any part of a reservation will be given, except by the Secretary of War, unless he be in the employ of the Government, or in the family or service of persons there employed. (a) Par. 228, A. R., 1901.

The general principle of the authority to remove trespassers, their structures, and property from the land of the United States embraced in a military reservation, held specially applicable where the intrusion was for an injurious purpose, as where the object was to lay a sewer intended to discharge into a main sewer constructed by the United States upon and for the use of its own premises. In this instance, as the trespass was committed by the authorities of a municipality, advised that reasonable notice be given them to remove their property before resorting to military force for the purpose, and meantime that precautions be taken to prevent a connection between the proposed sewer and the sewers under the control of the United States. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1717.

Intruding settlers on the public lands may be removed by military force under the act of March 3, 1807 (2 Stat. L., 445). The United States have, also, all the common law and chancery remedies of individuals, under similar circumstances, for protection and redress. I Opin. Att. Gen., 471. The President may employ such military force as he may judge necessary and proper to remove persons who may intrude upon any lands ceded to the United States by any treaty made with a foreign nation, or by a cession from any individual State, and may adopt that method with respect to the lands ceded to the United States by the Creek treaty of March 4, 1832. II ibid., 575; III ibid., 255; VII ibid., 534.

Squatters and other trespassers and intruders may and should be expelled, by military force if necessary, from a military reservation. (b) But such persons, when they have been suffered to own and occupy buildings on a reservation, should be allowed reasonable time to remove them. If not removed after due notice, the same should be removed by the military. Material abandoned on a reservation by a trespasser, on vacating, may lawfully be utilized by the commander for completing roads, walks, etc. Squatters on United States reservations may be forced therefrom by criminal proceedings had under section 5388, Revised Statutes, or ejected by civil action. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1713.

Where squatters have made any considerable improvements upon a reservation, and their value has been duly estimated—as by a board constituted by the department commander and presenting in its report all the evidence on the subject—an award by the Secretary of War, acquiesced in by the claimant, may be sued upon in the Court of Claims, which (in the absence of evidence of fraud or mistake) will accept such award as conclusive. (a) Ibid., par. 1714.

That this authority is not deemed to be affected by the provision of section 15 of the act of June 18, 1878, see chapter entitled EMPLOYMENT OF MILITARY FORCE. See, also, Dig. J. A. G., par. 487; ibid. 165, par. 9.

The cutting of timber on a military reservation is an offense against the United States made punishable by section 5388, Revised Statutes, as amended by the acts of June 4, 1888, and of March 3, 1875, chapter 151. So, grass cut on a reservation and removed as hay would be personal property of which the asportation would be larceny under the act of March 3, 1875, chapter 144. And persons coming upon a military reservation for the purpose of cutting wood or grass, or to plow up the soil, or commit other trespass, may be removed as intruders, and the post commander should not hesitate to resort to military force if necessary for the purpose. And he may of course prevent such trespassers from carrying off with them any property of the United States. Ibid., par. 1715.

In the absence or any statute directly or by necessary implication extending the powers of the local government of the District of Columbia over the military reservation and post at the Arsenal in Washington, held (May, 1879) that the health officer appointed by the Commissioners (constituting such government) would not be empowered of his own authority, and without the consent of the military commander, to enter upon such reservation and remove or abate a nuisance deemed by him to exist thereon. The effect of the legislation in regard to the government of the District is to except therefrom the public buildings and grounds of the United States, which are left to the charge of certain specified officials. Even farther removed from such government is the reservation at the Arsenal, the same being a military post commanded by the President through a military subordinate, and governed by military orders and regulations. Ibid., par. 1705.

Held, that an act of Congress granting a railroad company a right of way through "the public lands" of the United States did not authorize it to enter and construct a track upon the soil of a military reservation, the same being no part of "the public lands," (a) and that such entry was therefore a trespass. Ibid., par. 1700, but see par. 1619, post.

The right of way through several military reservations has been granted to various railroads, or other corporate bodies, by express legislation in each case.

TAXATION ON RESERVATIONS.

The authorities of a State or Territory (or, of course, of a county, town, etc.) are not empowered to tax an officer or soldier of the Army on account of his pay, or for any personal property in his possession properly required for the due exercise of his office or performance of his military duties. Officers and soldiers of the Army are instrumentalities provided by law to enable or assist the President to exercise his constitutional function of Commander in Chief and Executive of the nation. The pay and emoluments furnished them by Congress are means to make their services possible and effective, and their right to receive and enjoy the same can not be in any degree impaired or infringed upon by the authorities of a distinct and inferior sovereignty. And the same principle of exemption properly applies to their arms, equipments, horses, and other personal property required to be possessed and employed by them in the military service. (b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2425.

The principle exempting from taxation the office or salary of an officer of the United States applies to officers on the retired list equally as to those on the active list of the Army. Retired officers, being a part of the Army, are a part of the machinery of the Government, though a part not often called into active operation. But though a retired officer can not legally be taxed by State or municipal authorities on account of his Army pay as property or income, he is subject to be taxed for other property owned and held at his place of residence, like any other citizen. Ibid., par. 2426.

An officer or soldier of the Army, though not taxable officially, may be and often is taxable personally. He is not taxable by a State for his pay, or for the arms, instruments, uniform clothing, or other property pertaining to his military office or capacity, but as to household furniture and other personal property, not military, he is (except where stationed at a place under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States) equally subject with other residents or inhabitants to taxation under the local law. (a) Ibid., par. 2428.

[1] This statute replaces section 5391 of the Revised Statutes, which provided that any offense committed in any place ceded to and under the jurisdiction of the United States shall, where not specially made punishable by any law of the United States, be visited with the same punishment as is provided for such offense by the laws "now in force" of the State within which such place is situated. This provision, originally enacted March 3, 1825, was substantially reenacted April 5, 1866. In 1832 it was ruled by the Supreme Court (b) that the provision of 1825 was "limited to the laws of the several States in force at the time of its enactment." And in recent cases, arising in Montana (c) and Colorado (d) it has been held that the provision in sec. 5391 did not apply to the offense because these States, with their laws, did not come into existence till subsequently to the date of the enactment of 1866. Thus the section was operative neither as to offenses committed in States which entered the Union since 1866 nor as to those committed in States where, at the date of the commission, there existed no criminal statute providing for the punishment of the particular offense. "For the reasons above set forth a remedy was applied by the enactment of the act of July 7, 1898."

far as it authorized the taxing of the office of a captain in the U. S. revenue service, held as follows: "The compensation of an officer of the United States is fixed by a law made by Congress. It is in its exclusive discretion to declare what shall be given. It exercises the discretion and fixes the amount, and confers upon the officer the right to receive it when it has been earned. Any law of a State imposing a tax upon the office, diminishing the recompense, is in conflict with the law of the United States which secures the allowance to the officer." Further: "Taxation by a State can not act upon the instruments, emoluments, and persons which the United States may use and employ as necessary and proper means to execute their sovereign powers. * * * The State governments can not lay a tax upon the constitutional means employed by the Government of the Union to execute its constitutional powers." In a later case—Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wallace, 605—the same court declares: "All subjects over which the sovereign power of a State extends are, as a general rule, proper subjects of taxation, but the power of a State to tax does not extend to those means which are employed by Congress to carry into execution the powers conferred in the Federal Constitution. Unquestionably the taxing power of the States is very comprehensive and pervading, but it is not without limits. State tax laws can not restrain the action of the National Government, nor can they abridge the operation of any law which Congress may constitutionally pass." This general doctrine is applied by Attorney-General Black, IX Opins, 477, as follows: "The authorities of a State can not impose a tax upon the salary of a Federal officer, or upon the compensation paid by the United States to any person engaged in their service." And as illustrating the principle involved, see also McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheaton, 316; Weston v. Charlestown, 2 Peters, 449; Searight v. Stokes, 3 Howard, 151; Bank of Commerce v. New York, 2 Black, 620; Provident Inst. v. Mass., 6 Wallace, 611; The Banks v. The Mayor, 7 id., 16; Bank v. Supervisors, id., 26; Railroad Co. v. Peniston, 18 id., 5; Carrol v. Perry, 4 McLean, 25; Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Maine, 274; Opinion of Justices, 53 N. In the late case of Railroad Company v. Peniston, 18 Wallace, 30, it is specified by Strong, J., that "the States may not levy taxes the direct effect of which shall be to hinder the exercise of any powers which belong to the National Government."

[2] The scope of this provision is most comprehensive, the authority conferred thereby upon the legislative branch of the Government being held to extend from the formation of a territorial government to the matter of the sale of a small amount of personalty. That neither land nor any interest in land of the United States can be sold or otherwise disposed of by the head of an Executive Department or other executive official or by a military officer, without the authority of Congress, is settled law. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2087.

The Constitution vests in Congress the exclusive power to dispose of the property of the United States, real or personal. The Secretary of War, in the absence of authority from Congress, can not alienate land of the United States. Ibid., pars. 2087–2089.

There is no way for titles to land to be divested out of the United States except in strict pursuance of some law of the United States; and, as no statute of limitations runs against the United States, occupancy and possession alone, even for a great length

[a] This fundamental rule of our public law is expressed by Attorney-General Hoar (XIII Opins., 46) as follows: "I am clearly of opinion that the Secretary of War can not convey to any person any interest in land belonging to the United States, except in pursuance of an act of Congress expressly or impliedly authorizing him to do so." of time, can not ripen into title as against the United States. Drew v. Valentine, 18 Fed. Rep., 212; Villey v. Jarbeau, 35 Louisiana Ann., 542.

In the absence of such authority, the lands of the United States, whether held by original proprietorship, or acquired by purchase or gift, or by conquest, can not, even for a purely benevolent or religious purpose, be given away any more than they can be transferred for a valuable consideration. Nor, without such authority, can they be conveyed temporarily by lease, whether for a short or long period. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2087. But for authority to lease lands not needed for the use of the War Department, see the act of July 28, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 321), par. 1620, post.

Nor, without authority from Congress, can an Executive Department or officer convey away any usufructuary interest in land of the United States. Thus it has been repeatedly held by the Judge-Advocate-General that the Secretary of War, or a military commander, was not empowered, of his own authority, to grant a right of way over a military reservation to a railroad company or other corporation, and in numerous statutory enactments such a right has been expressly given by Congress as the only authority competent for the purpose. Ibid., par. 2088.

So held that the Secretary of War would not be authorized to transfer a lot belonging to the United States in Washington to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the erection of a hospital. So held that neither the Secretary of War nor a department commander could grant to an individual or individuals the exclusive right to use for an indefinite period certain water power belonging to the United States, nor the exclusive right to mine the soil of a military reservation for a certain term of years, nor a similar right to make and maintain for an indefinite period ditches through a portion of such a reservation for the purpose of irrigating the lands of private parties, nor the right annually to enter upon and occupy a military reservation and cut and possess the hay crop growing thereon, (b) nor the right permanently or indefinitely to occupy and use a portion of a reservation for a burying ground. Ibid., par. 2088.

Disposition of buildings, etc.—The provision of the Constitution in regard to the disposition of public property applies to personalty equally as to realty. Thus no Executive Department or officer can be empowered, except by the authority of Congress, to dispose of personal property of the United States. (c) So held that, in the absence of such authority, a military commander could not legally dispose of temporary buildings—not "fixtures"—erected upon a military reservation. So held that the Secretary of War would not be authorized, in the absence of enabling legislation, to sell or negotiate the bonds or promissory notes made to the United States by certain railroad companies, in consideration of rolling stock, etc., sold and transferred to the same. And similarly held as to the authority of the Secretary to dispose of articles of [a] See Friedman v. Goodwin, 1 McAllister, 148, where a lease made by the post commander at San Francisco, of a part of a "government reserve," though approved by the military governor of the then Territory, and also by the Secretary of the Interior, was held void because not authorized by Congress. The court declares the "utter impotency of any attempt by an officer of the Government to alien any land, the property of the United States, without the authority of an act of Congress;" adding that "the President, with the heads of the Departments combined," could not effect such an object. And see IV Opins. At. Gen., 480; 9 id., 476; 13 id., 46; United States v. Hare, 4 Sawyer, 670–671. In the last case the court say: "The Secretary of the Treasury can not execute or approve of a lease of any property belonging to the United States without special authority of law."

[b] A fortiori in regard to growing timber. See Spencer v. United States, 10 Ct. Cls., 255.

[c] The leading case on this point is United States v. Nichols, 1 Paine, U. S. Circ. Ct. R., 646, in which it was held that a sale or loan, by the commandant of an arsenal, of a quantity of lead belonging to the United States, was illegal and invalid. The court say: "The Constitution declares that 'Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.' No public property can therefore be disposed of without the authority of law, either by an express act of Congress for that purpose, or by giving the authority to some Department or subordinate agent. No law has been shown authorizing the sale of this lead; nor is any such authority to be inferred from the general power vested in any of the Departments of the Government. The power, if lodged anywhere, would seem most appropriately to belong to the War Department. But there is no such express or implied power in that Department to sell the public property put under its management." And see the same principle recognized in an opinion of the Attorney-General, in XVI Opins., 477, in which it is held that the Secretary of War was not empowered to sell arms to a State in the absence of authority from Congress.

inferior value, not impliedly authorized to be sold by section 1316, Revised Statutes. And held that the fact that certain valuable public property was perishable and liable to waste was not legally sufficient to justify the sale in the absence of statutory authority.(a) Ibid., par. 2090.

The principle that buildings erected on the land of another without his consent become his property does not apply to buildings erected by the United States on land occupied jure belli by the Army in an enemy's country; but that, on subsequently surrendering the land to the owner, the military authorities might legally remove and retain or dispose of the buildings. Ibid., par. 2097.

Temporary buildings only erected by military orders on land of the United States at a military post, to serve a temporary purpose, are in general personal property of the United States, which may be removed by the direction or authority of the Secretary of War.(b) But if the same be permanent structures and real estate, the authority of Congress is necessary to their removal. Ibid., par. 2098.

The United States being tenant of land leased for military purposes at Fort Davis, Tex., erected buildings thereon for the purposes of a military post. In view of the fact that the relation was that of landlord and tenant, that the buildings were erected for a purpose analogous to that of trade, and for a public use, and that in their erection there could certainly have been no intention to benefit the inheritance or add to the freehold—held that such buildings were to be regarded not as fixtures but as personal property, and removable by the tenant at any time before the expiration of his lease. Should the Government sell the buildings standing, the purchaser would have the same right of disposition as the United States and no more. He would therefore be obliged to remove them before the termination of the lease, unless otherwise permitted by the owner of the premises. And held similarly of like buildings erected at Fort Union, N. Mex., where the United States was tenant at will, the buildings not being intended as improvements, but merely for the use of the troops. Ibid., par. 2099.

Where a post commander, without authority, took possession of land of the United States for the purpose of erecting thereon a building for his personal use, and having erected it assumed to hold and dispose of it as his own property, held that his act was unauthorized and illegal, and that he acquired no legal estate in the building. And similarly held where, without authority, he permitted an enlisted man of his command to use land of the United States for the erection thereon of a dwelling and to hold and dispose of such dwelling as his own property. Ibid., par. 2100.

Wood growing on a military reservation is the property of the United States. So held that a contractor who cut such wood to fill a contract made by him with the United States to furnish wood to a military post could not legally be allowed to remove or dispose of the same as his own property, and advised that he be paid merely for the cutting. Ibid., par. 2101.

[a] Held that the "Cavalry Tactics," a work prepared under the orders of the Secretary of War by a board of officers, was the property of the United States, and therefore could not, without the authority of Congress, be disposed of to a bookseller with a view to its publication and sale by him on his private account. [1] For other statutes authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to grant rights of way over the public lands of the United States, not included within military, Indian, or other reservations, see the acts of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. L., 482; March 3, 1891, 26 ibid., 1101; January 21, 1895, 28 ibid., 635; May 14, 1898, 29 ibid., 120; May 11, 1898, 30 ibid., 404, and February 15, 1901, 31 ibid., 790. This last enactment confers authority upon the Secretary of the Interior to grant rights of way over lands included in certain national parks and forest reservations, but with the condition that such grants shall be made through military and Indian reservations with the approval of the chief officer of the department under whom the supervision of the reservation falls, and upon a finding by him that the same is not incompatible with the public interest.

[2] A license is an authority, revocable at pleasure, to do a particular act or series of acts upon the land of another without possessing an estate therein. Morgan v. U. S., 14 Ct. Cls., 319.

The Constitution (Art. IV, sec. 3, par. 2) provides that "The Congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting, the territory or other property belonging to the United States." The scope of this provision is most comprehensive, the authority conferred thereby upon the legislative branch of the Government being held to extend from the formation of a Territorial government to the matter of the sale of a small amount of personalty. That neither land nor any interest in land of the United States can be sold or otherwise disposed of by the head of an Executive Department or other executive official, or by a military officer, without the authority of Congress is settled law. (a)

In the absence of such authority, the lands of the United States, whether held by original proprietorship or acquired by purchase or gift, or by conquest, can not, even for a purely benevolent or religious purpose, be given away, any more than they can be transferred for a valuable consideration. Nor without such authority can they be conveyed temporarily by lease, whether for a short or long term. (b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2087.

Nor, without authority from Congress, can an Executive Department or officer convey away any usufructuary interest in land of the United States. Thus it has been repeatedly held by the Judge-Advocate-General that the Secretary of War (or a military commander) was not empowered, of his own authority, to grant a right of way over a military reservation to a railroad company or other corporation, and in numerous statutory enactments such a right has been expressly given by Congress as the only authority competent for the purpose.

And such rights when given can be exercised only within the terms of the grant. Thus, where by an act of Congress there was granted to a railroad company a limited and defined right of way across a military reservation (occupied by a military post), held that the company was authorized simply to construct a track or roadway, and was not empowered to put up depots, stock yards, cattle pens, or other erections upon the land, or to appropriate land otherwise than for the roadway. (c)

So held that the Secretary of War could not, of his own authority, grant, in consideration of the payment of toll to the United States, a right of way over a bridge belonging to the United States. So held that the Secretary could not legally grant to a company or individul the right to erect and maintain for an indefinite period a hotel on the military reservation at Sandy Hook. (d) So held that the Secretary would not be authorized to transfer a lot belonging to the United States at Washington to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the erection of a hospital. So held that neither the Secretary of War nor a department commander could grant to an individual or individuals the exclusive right to use for an indefinite period cer-

[a] This fundamental rule of our public law is expressed by Attorney-General Hoar, XIII Opins., 46, as follows: "I am clearly of opinion that the Secretary of War can not convey to any person any interest in land belonging to the United States, except in pursuance of an act of Congress expressly or impliedly authorizing him to do so." And see United States v. Nichols, 1 Paine, 646 (cited post); Seabury v. Field, McAllister, 1; United States v. Hare, 4 Sawyer, 653, 669.

[b] See Friedman v. Goodwin, 1 McAllister, 148, where a lease made by the post commander at San Francisco of a part of a "Government reserve," though approved by the military governor of the then Territory, and also by the Secretary of the Interior, was held void because not authorized by Congress. The court declares the "utter impotency of any attempt by an officer of the Government to alien any land, the property of the United States, without the authority of an act of Congress;" adding that "the President with the heads of the Departments combined" could not effect such an object. And see IV Opins. Att. Gen., 480; 9 ibid., 476; 13 ibid., 46; United States v. Hare, 4 Sawyer, 670–671. In the last case the court say: "The Secretary of the Treasury can not execute or approve of a lease of any property belonging to the United States without special authority of law."

[c] See this opinion affirmed by the Attorney-General in XIV Opins., 135.

[d] See confirmatory opinion of the Attorney-General in XVI Opins., 205. In this case there was the further objection that the State of New Jersey, in ceding to the United States jurisdiction over the premises, by deed of March 10, 1846, had expressly declared that the grant was "for military purposes," adding "and the said United States shall retain such jurisdiction so long as the said tract shall be applied to the military or public purposes of the said United States, and no longer."

tain water power belonging to the United States, nor the exclusive right to mine the soil of a military reservation for a certain term of years, nor a similar right to make and maintain for an indefinite period ditches through a portion of such a reservation for the purpose of irrigating the lands of private parties, nor the right annually to enter upon and occupy a military reservation and cut and possess the hay crop growing thereon, (a) nor the right permanently or indefinitely to occupy and use a portion of a reservation for a burying ground. Ibid., 2088.

Held, however, that a distinction was to be observed between a grant of a usufructuary interest in land and a revocable license not involving a transfer of such an interest. (b) Thus held that the Secretary of War would be authorized to permit a telegraph company to erect posts upon a military reservation and attach to the same telegraph wires, subject to their being removed at the will of the Government, if found to interfere with the purposes for which the reservation was established. So held that a municipal corporation might legally be permitted by the Secretary of War to lay water pipes in the soil of the arsenal grounds at Springfield, Mass., the same being equally for the benefit of the military authorities and the citizens, and subject to removal at the will of the Government. And held that a post trader might legally be licensed by the Secretary of War to erect the buildings necessary for his business upon the land of the post for which he was appointed. (c) But held that the Secretary of War was not empowered to accede to the application of an individual to establish a ferry across a river within the limits of a military reservation, where what was asked was not a mere license revocable at the will of the Secretary, but a permanent franchise and grant of an exclusive usufructuary interest in the premises, including even the right to charge tolls to the United States. And similary held in a case of an application to be permitted to erect and maintain a permanent bridge across a river forming a boundary of a military reservation, one end of which was to be built upon the soil of the reservation, the application contemplating not a mere license revocable at the will of the Government, but a permanent right of property in the bridge, involving an easement in the land. Ibid., 2089.

The act of July 28, 1882, authorizes the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to "lease for a period not exceeding five years, and revocable at any time, such property of the United States under his control as may not for the time be required for public use," such leases to be "reported annually to Congress;" but does not prescribe as to the disposition of the moneys received as rents. Sec. 3621, Revised Statutes, provides for the disposition of public moneys coming into the possession of any person, and par. 698, Army Regulations of 1895, directs that "the face of the certificate or receipt" shall "show to what appropriation" the funds belong. Advised that it would be sufficient for any post quartermaster or other disbursing officer into whose hands such rents should come to note the character of the payment upon his certificate, leaving it to the War Department to report the same in the aggregate to Congress at the end of each year. Ibid., par. 2084.

From the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 103), it may be regarded as certain that it was the view of Congress that an explicit authority was necessary for even a transient occupation of a military reservation for other than its special purpose. The act of July 28, 1892, authorizing the Secretary of War to lease such property of the United States under his control as may not for the time be required for public use, forbids an occupation which contemplates permanency, or duration longer than five years. The Secretary of War has no power to accept a donation of property for the Government for use in perpetuity by Roman Catholics. A revocable license, without limitation as to time, by the Secretary of War to a Roman Catholic archbishop, to erect and maintain a chapel on the military reservation at West Point, transcends the statute. XXI Opin. Att. Gen., 537; ibid., 473; ibid., 47; XIX ibid., 28.

POSTS.

Permanent military posts are established under the direction of the Secretary of War, by whom their names will be designated. Par. 216, A. R., 1901.

Permanent posts will be styled "forts," and points occupied temporarily by troops, "camps." Par. 217, ibid.

The commander of a post is responsible for its safety and defense, and for the discipline, drill, and tactical instruction of his command, to which ends all other garrison duties will be made subservient. He will be responsible for the preservation and proper application of public property, for the strict enforcement of laws and regulations, and for the proper condition of quarters and defenses. He will make an inspection of his command on the last day of every month, will satisfy himself by frequent personal examination that the disbursements of all officers in charge of funds are in accordance with law and regulations and their accounts correctly stated, and will make such reports of these inspections and examinations as the department commander may direct. Par. 218, ibid.

The staff of a post commander will consist of such staff officers as are on duty at the post and such line officers as may be required for staff duties. Their official designations will be as follows: Adjutant, quartermaster, commissary, surgeon, assistant surgeon, engineer officer, ordnance officer, and signal officer. Par. 221, ibid.

the erection, construction, and repair of all buildings and other public structures in the Quartermaster's Department shall, as far as may be practicable, be made by contract, after due legal advertisement.[1] Act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 484).

1625. For the erection of barracks and quarters for artillery in connection with the project adopted for seacoast defense, there shall not hereafter be expended at any one post more than one thousand two hundred dollars per man for each man required for one relief to man the guns at the post up to eighty-three men, the present permanent strength of a battery, enlisted and commissioned, and for each man required beyond this number six hundred dollars per man, from any appropriation made by Congress, unless special authority of Congress be granted for a greater expenditure. *Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. Expenditures of labor, money, or material upon posts will be strictly limited to the amounts allowed by law and regulations. Par. 222, A. R., 1901.

When practicable, temporary buildings for the use of the Army will be erected by its enlisted force, and necessary repairs of public buildings at garrisoned posts not appropriated for or specially authorized will be made by the troops. Par. 223, ibid.

In case of emergency, when reference to higher authority is impracticable, department commanders may order the purchase of material and engagement of services necessary for the preservation of public buildings or property, not to exceed in amount $500 for any post, but no greater sum will be expended without the sanction of the Secretary of War. Par. 224, ibid.

When a military post located upon lands belonging to the United States is abandoned the Secretary of War has no power, in the absence of authority from Congress, to order a sale of the building, and such a sale is void. Lear v. U. S., 50 Fed. Rep., 65. A sale by a military officer if not authorized by the usages of war, or if of property not under a valid condemnation, is a trespass and passes no title. Bowlew v. Lewis, 48 Mo., 32.

[2] Section 1113 of the Revised Statutes, which authorized the Secretary of War to "permit one or more trading establishments to be maintained at any military post on the frontier not in the vicinity of any city or town," was repealed and replaced by section 3 of the act of July 24, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 100), which authorized "one trader at each military post, to be appointed by the Secretary of War upon the recommendation of the council of administration." These statutes have been replaced and rendered inoperative by the act of January 28, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 426).

[1] See also the chapter entitled CONTRACTS AND PURCHASES.

[2] See note to paragraph 1615, ante.

The provision of the Constitution in regard to the disposition of public property applies to personalty equally as to realty. Thus no Executive Department or officer can be empowered, except by the authority of Congress, to dispose of personal property of the United States.(a) So, held that, in the absence of such authority, a military commander could not legally dispose of temporary buildings—not "fixtures"—erected upon a military reservation. So, held that the Secretary of War would not be authorized, in the absence of enabling legislation, to sell or negotiate the bonds or promissory notes made to the United States by certain railroad companies, in consideration of rolling stock, etc., sold and transferred to the same. And similarly held as to the authority of the Secretary to dispose of articles of inferior value, not impliedly authorized to be sold by section 1316, Revised Statutes. And held that the fact that certain valuable public property was perishable and liable to waste was not legally sufficient to justify the sale in the absence of statutory authority. Held that the Cavalry Tactics, a work prepared under the orders of the Secretary of War by a board of officers, was the property of the United States, and therefore could not, without the authority of Congress, be disposed of to a bookseller with a The leading case on this point is United States v. Nichols (1 Paine, U. S. Circ. Ct. R., 646), in which it was held that a sale or loan, by the commandant of an arsenal, of a quantity of lead belonging to the United States was illegal and invalid. The court say: "The Constitution declares that 'Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.' No public property can therefore be disposed of without the authority of law, either by an express act of Congress for that purpose or by giving the authority to some Department or subordinate agent. No law has been shown authorizing the sale of this lead, nor is any such authority to be inferred from the general power vested in any of the Departments of the Government. The power, if lodged anywhere, would seem most appropriately to belong to the War Department; but there is no such express or implied power in that Department to sell the public property put under its management." And see the same principle recognized in an opinion of the Attorney-General (in XVI Opins., 477), in which it is held that the Secretary of War was not empowered to sell arms to a State in the absence of authority from Congress.

Accountability of company commander for clothing, etc.
10 Art. War.

1632. Every officer commanding a troop, battery, or company is charged with the arms, accouterments, ammunition, clothing, or other military stores belonging to his command, and is accountable to his colonel in case of their being lost, spoiled, or damaged otherwise than by unavoidable accident, or on actual service.[1] Tenth Article of War.

PROPERTY ACCOUNTABILITY.

Certificates of loss to be forwarded to Treasury accounting officers.
Mar. 29, 1894, v. 28, p. 47.

1633. That instead of forwarding to the accounting officers of the Treasury Department returns of public property intrusted to the possession of officers or agents, the Quartermaster-General, the Commissary-General of Subsistence, the Surgeon-General, the Chief of Engineers, the Chief of Ordnance, the Chief Signal Officer, the Paymaster-General of the Navy, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, or other like chief officers in any Department, by, through, or under whom stores, supplies, and other public property are received for distribution, or whose duty it is to receive or examine returns of such property, shall certify to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury Department, for debiting on the proper account, any charge against any officer or agent intrusted with public property, arising from any loss, accruing by his fault, to the Government as to the property so intrusted to him.[2] Sec. 1, act of March 29, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 47).

a view to its publication and sale by him on his private account. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2090.

Temporary buildings only erected by military orders on land of the United States at a military post, to serve a temporary purpose, are in general personal property of the United States which may be removed by the direction or authority of the Secretary of War.[a] But if the same be permanent structures and real estate, the authority of Congress is necessary to their removal. Ibid., par. 2098.

[1] Under existing laws and regulations there is no system of fiscal accountability to regimental commanders for property belonging to the United States. For statutory provisions respecting such accountability see the title Property Accountability.

[2] The effect of the above statute was to divest the Auditor of the jurisdiction theretofore possessed by him over the property accounts and transactions of officers of the Navy (and War) Department, and to relieve him of all responsibility in relation to the disposition of property intrusted to said officers, except in cases where the officer "whose duty it is to receive or examine returns of such property shall certify to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury Department (the Auditor), for debiting on the proper account any charge against any officer or agent intrusted with public property, arising from any loss, accruing by his fault, to the Government as to the property so intrusted to him."

Under this act the duty and responsibility of determining questions relating to the correct disposition or loss of property in the Marine Corps have been transferred to and vested in the proper officer of the Navy Department, and it seems clear that the Auditor will have no authority over or in relation to the property mentioned in the cash voucher evidencing the purchase of forage under consideration until he has been furnished with a certificate required by section 1 of said act.

papers into cash accounts tending to show what disposition has been made of the property. Such evidence may well be excluded from the cash accounts, and the responsibility for determining questions relating to property accountability be left where it belongs, where the law has placed it. II Compt. Dec., 264, 267, 268; IV ibid., 422.

In the case of Isaac W. Patrick, Indian agent at the Great Nemaha Agency, upon a suit to recover on his bond for public property alleged to have been unaccounted for, such failure to account having been shown to be due to clerical errors, it was held by the circuit court of appeals for the Eighth circuit, in March, 1896, that "a Government agent is not to be held liable for property still in the possession of the agency and which has never been lost, merely because a careless clerk, appointed by the Government itself to keep the accounts of the agent, has omitted it from the return which he is required to make." U. S. v. Patrick (73 Fed. Rep., 800).

The failure of an Indian agent, through clerical errors, to include in his accounts property which, in fact, remains at the agency, and which is not lost to the Government, does not entitle the United States to recover the value thereof in a suit on his bond; and he may show these facts in defense. The technical failure to account would authorize a recovery of no more than nominal damages. Ibid.

[1] Section 12 of the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 208), requiring certain quarterly accounts to be rendered within twenty days after the expiration of the quarter to which they relate, has no application to property returns, the rendition of which is regulated by the act of March 29, 1894. And in case of damage to any military supplies, the value of such damage shall be charged against such officer and deducted from his monthly pay, unless he shall, in like manner, show that such damage was not occasioned by any fault on his part.[1]

Sec. 225, R. S.

1639. The Secretary of War is authorized to detail one or more of the employees of the War Department for the purpose of administering the oaths required by law in the settlement of officers' accounts for clothing, camp and garrison equipage, quartermaster's stores, and ordnance, which oaths shall be administered without expense to the parties taking them.

Sec. 225, R. S.

1640. In settling the accounts of the commanding officer of a company for clothing and other military supplies, the affidavit of any such officer may be received to show the loss of vouchers or company books, or any matter or circumstance tending to prove that any apparent deficiency was occasioned by unavoidable accident or lost in actual service, without any fault on his part, or that the whole or any part of such clothing and supplies had been properly and legally used and appropriated; and such affidavit may be considered as evidence to establish the facts set forth, with or without other evidence, as may seem to the Secretary of War just and proper under the circumstances of the case.[2]

[1] See paragraph 697, Army Regulations of 1895.

[2] Causes of damage to, and of loss and destruction of, military property are classified as follows:

(1) Unavoidable causes, being those over which the responsible officers have no control, occurring (a) in the ordinary course of service, or (b) as incident to an active campaign.

(2) Avoidable causes, being those due to carelessness, willfulness, or neglect. Par. 763, A. R., 1901.

Officers responsible for property will be charged for any damage to, or loss or destruction of the same, and the money value deducted from their monthly pay, unless they show, to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War, by their own affidavits or certificates or by one or more depositions, that the damage, loss, or destruction was occasioned by unavoidable causes, and without fault or neglect on their part. Par. 764, ibid.

Sales of stores. Mar. 3, 1825, c. 93, ss. 1, 2, v. 4, p. 127. Sec. 1241, R.S.

1641. The President may cause to be sold any military stores which, upon proper inspection or survey, appear to be damaged, or unsuitable for the public service. Such inspection or survey shall be made by officers designated by the Secretary of War, and the sales shall be made under regulations prescribed by him.[1]

Army (except when otherwise specially provided) are judge-advocates of departments, judge-advocates of courts-martial, and trial officers of summary courts, and, in the cases of boards of survey, the recorder, or, if there be no recorder, the president thereof. When none of these are within reach and available, recourse must be had to a notary public or other civil officer competent to administer oaths for general purposes. Par. 765, ibid.

If an article of public property be lost or damaged by the neglect or fault of any officer or soldier, he shall pay the value thereof, or the cost of repairs, at such rates as a board of survey may determine. Par. 766, ibid.

The amount charged against an enlisted man on the muster and pay rolls on account of loss or damage of or repairs to Government property shall not exceed the value of the article or cost of repairs; and such charge will only be made on conclusive proof, and never without an inquiry, if the soldier demand it. He will be informed at the time of signing the pay rolls that his signature will be regarded as an acknowledgment of the justice of the charge. Par. 767, ibid.

When a deserter carries away public property, or when such property is lost through his desertion, its value will be determined by a board of survey and charged against him on the next muster and pay rolls. Par. 768, ibid.

If articles of public property are embezzled, or lost or damaged through neglect, by a civilian employee, the value or damage as ascertained (and by a board of survey if necessary) shall be charged to him and set against any pay or money due him. Par. 769, ibid.

For provisions respecting boards of survey, see paragraphs 790–807, ibid.

[1] The word "unsuitable," as used in sec. 1241, Rev. Sts., evidently refers to some unfitness for use other than that caused by being "damaged." Uniform clothing, for instance, of sizes that could not be used would be unsuitable. But held that the meaning of the word could not properly be restricted to things of a quality inferior to that which is required for the service. A thing may be unsuitable by reason of its being of such superior quality as not to be adaptable for the purpose for which it was intended. And held that military stores can not properly be deemed unsuitable under this statute for the sole reason that they are in excess of the quantity required for use. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2279.

For other statutes authorizing the sale of obsolete and unsuitable property, see the chapters entitled THE ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT and THE PUBLIC LANDS. For provisions respecting the disposition of funds arising from the sale of public property or stores, see the chapters entitled THE PUBLIC MONEYS, THE STAFF DEPARTMENTS, and THE ORDNANCE AND SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENTS.

Unserviceable public property can only be disposed of by sale according to the provisions of sections 1241, 3618, Revised Statutes. It can not be exchanged for other property not belonging to the United States. Thus, held that an old and useless printing press, the property of the United States, could not be disposed of by exchanging it for certain new property belonging to a regiment. Ibid., par. 2103.

Held that, in the absence of specific authority from Congress, the Secretary of War would not be empowered to sell to a State, for the use of its militia, an amount of clothing in excess of the State's quota as already appropriated. And held that, without such authority, he would not be empowered to exchange Government property for property owned or possessed by a State; thus, that he could not legally deliver to the State of Pennsylvania certain arms, the property of the United States, in exchange for arms formerly issued to the State for the use of its militia, and in which the State had a qualified property. Ibid., par. 2104.

Held that under section 1241, Revised Statutes, unserviceable tools and materials, which had been in use at a national cemetery, could not legally be ordered to be sold upon the mere inspection and report of their unserviceableness made by the superintendent of the cemetery, but that, as required in the section, there must be first an inspection "by an officer (i. e., commissioned officer) designated by the Secretary of War." Ibid., par. 2281.

In view of the general authority vested in the President and Secretary of War by the provision, in regard to the sale of military stores damaged or unsuitable for the public service, of the act of March 3, 1825 (now contained in section 1241, Revised Statutes), held that such stores might legally be sold on credit, if such mode of disposition was deemed for the public interest. Ibid., par. 2277.

Held that an officer of the Army, duly charged with the duty of making a sale of damaged, etc., medical supplies under the authority of section 1241, Revised Statutes (by which the President is empowered to order such sales in certain cases), could not lawfully be required to take out and pay for a license as a merchant under the laws of the State in which the sale was to be made. Such a requirement would be a restriction upon the regular and legal execution of the powers of the General Government, and therefore beyond the authority of a State. Ibid., par. 2278.

Held that a noncommissioned officer, who acted as auctioneer at a public sale of condemned quartermaster stores, could not legally be paid, out of the proceeds of the sale, a commission of ten per cent, or any other commission or compensation, for his services as auctioneer. The pay and allowances of all enlisted men are fixed by law, and, in the absence of any authority in the statute providing for such sales or other statutory provision, such a compensation must necessarily be without legal sanction. But held that a civilian employee hired by the Quartermaster's Department, under the provision for "hire of teamsters and other employees" in the appropriation for "transportation of the Army and its supplies," whose pay is not fixed by "law or regulations," may legally be paid for services as an auctioneer at a public sale of condemned quartermaster property. Ibid., par. 2284.

May be tried before or after conviction of principal.

1644. And any officer connected with, or employed in, the internal-revenue service of the United States, and any assistant of such officer, who shall embezzle or wrongfully convert to his own use any money or property which may have come into his possession or under his control in the execution of such office or employment, or under color or claim of authority as such officer or assistant, whether the same shall be the money or property of the United States or of some other person or party, shall, where the offense is not otherwise punishable by some statute of the United States, be punished by a fine equal to the value of the money and property thus embezzled or converted, or by imprisonment not less than three months nor more than ten years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.[1] *Act of February 3, 1879 (20 Stat. Held, that the provisions of section 23 of the act of March 3, 1863, prohibiting the sale, etc., of their arms, etc., by soldiers, and declaring that no right of property or possession should be acquired thereby, etc., were not limited in their operation to the period of the war, but were still in force, (a) and that an officer of the Army would therefore be authorized to seize arms, etc., disposed of contrary to such prohibition, whenever and wherever found. But inasmuch as there have been sundry authorized sales of arms and other ordnance stores since the end of the war; Advised, that officers, before making seizures, should assure themselves that the parties in possession have not acquired title in a legal manner. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2273. See as to method of recovery, par. 2275, ibid.

A person who illegally purchases army clothing from a soldier can not now be proceeded against for merely purchasing or receiving, under the existing law (secs. 1242 and 3748, Rev. Stat.), but if, in so purchasing, he aids a soldier to desert, he is subject to trial and punishment under section 5455, Revised Statutes. Ibid. p. 2274.

[a] See these provisions as now incorporated in the Revised Statutes, in sections 1242 and 3748. The further provision of the original act making punishable with fine and imprisonment persons purchasing from soldiers their arms, equipments, clothing, etc., has not been retained in the Revised Statutes.

The militia. Second amendment to Constitution.

1650. A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.[1] Constitution of the United States, second amendment.

[1] The right to bear arms is not granted by the Constitution; neither is it in any manner dependent upon that instrument for its existence. The second amendment means no more than that it shall not be infringed by Congress, and has no other effect than to restrict the powers of the National Government. U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S., 542.

The right voluntarily to associate together as a military company or organization, or to drill or parade with arms, without and independent of an act of Congress or law of the State authorizing the same, is not an attribute of national citizenship. Military organization and military drill and parade under arms are subjects especially under the control of the government of every country. They can not be claimed as a right independent of law. Under our political system they are subject to the regulation and control of the State and Federal governments, acting in due regard to their respective prerogatives and powers. The Constitution and laws of the United States will be searched in vain for any support to the view that these rights are privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, independent of some specific legislation on the subject. It can not be successfully questioned that the State governments, unless restrained by their own constitutions, have the power to regulate or prohibit associations and meetings of the people, except in the case of peaceable assemblies to perform the duties or exercise the privileges of citizens of the United States; and have also the power to control and regulate the organization, drilling, and parading of military bodies and associations, except when such bodies or associations are authorized by the militia laws of the United States. The exercise of this power, by the States, is necessary to the public peace, safety, and good order. To deny the power would be to deny the right of the State to disperse assemblages organized for sedition and treason, and the right to suppress armed mobs bent on riot and rapine. May 8, 1792, c. 33, s. 1, v. 1, p. 271; Mar. 2, 1803, c. 15, s. 2, v. 2, p. 207.

1653. Each captain or commanding officer shall, without delay, notify every such citizen of his enrollment, by a proper non-commissioned officer of his company, who may prove the notice. And any notice or warning to a citizen enrolled, to attend a company, battalion, or regimental muster, which is according to the laws of the State in which it is given for that purpose, shall be deemed a legal notice of his enrollment.

Arms and accouterments.
May 8, 1792, c. 33, s. 1, v. 1, p. 271; Mar. 2, 1803, c. 15, s. 2, v. 2, p. 207.
Sec. 1628, R.S.

1654. Every citizen shall, after notice of his enrollment, be constantly provided with a good musket or firelock of a bore sufficient for balls of the eighteenth part of a pound, a sufficient bayonet and belt, two spare flints, and a knapsack, a pouch with a box therein to contain not less than twenty-four cartridges, suited to the bore of his musket or firelock, each cartridge to contain a proper quantity of powder and ball; or with a good rifle, knapsack, shot-pouch and powder-horn, twenty balls suited to the bore of his rifle, and a quarter of a pound of powder; and shall appear, so armed, accoutered, and provided when called out to exercise, or into service, except that when called out on company days to exercise only he may appear without a knapsack. And all arms, ammunition, and accouterments so provided and required shall be held exempted from all suits, distresses, executions, or sales for debt or for the payment of taxes. Each commissioned officer shall be armed with a sword or hanger and spontoon.

EXEMPTIONS.

Arrangement into divisions, brigades, etc.
May 8, 1792, c. 33, s. 3, v. 1, p. 272.
Sec. 1630, R.S.

1656. The militia of each State shall be arranged into divisions, brigades, regiments, battalions, and companies, as the legislature of the State may direct. Each brigade may consist of four regiments; each regiment of two battalions; each battalion of five companies; each company of sixty-four privates. Each division, brigade, and regiment shall be numbered at the formation thereof; and a record of such numbers shall be made in the adjutant-general's office of the State. When in the field, or in service in the State, each division, brigade, and regiment shall respectively take rank according to its number, reckoning the first or lowest number highest in rank.[1]

1659. There shall be formed for each battalion at least one company of grenadiers, light infantry, or riflemen, and for each division at least one company of artillery and one troop of horse. For each company of artillery there shall be one captain, two lieutenants, four sergeants, four corporals, six gunners, six bombardiers, one drummer, and one fifer. The officers shall be armed with a sword or hanger, a fusee, bayonet, and belt, with a cartridge box to contain twelve cartridges; and each private shall furnish himself with all the equipments of a private in the infantry, until proper ordnance and field artillery is provided. For each troop of horse there shall be one captain, two lieutenants, one cornet, four sergeants, four corporals, one saddler, one farrier, and one trumpeter. The commissioned officers shall furnish themselves with good horses of at least fourteen hands and a half high, and shall be armed with a sword and pair of pistols, the holsters to be covered with bearskin caps. Each dragoon shall furnish himself with a serviceable horse, at least fourteen hands and a half high, a good saddle, bridle, mail pillion, and valise, holsters, and a breastplate and crupper, a pair of boots and spurs, a pair of pistols, a saber, and a cartridge box, to contain twelve cartridges for pistols. Each company of artillery and troop of horse shall be formed of volunteers from the brigade, at the discretion of the commander in chief of the State, not exceeding one company of each to a regiment, nor more in number than one-eleventh part of the infantry, and shall be uniformly clothed in regimentals, to be furnished at their own expense; the color and fashion to be determined by the brigadier commanding the brigade to which they belong.

Regimental colors. May 8, 1792, c. 33, s. 5, v. 1, p. 273. Sec. 1633, R.S.

[1] There is no existing statute of the United States authorizing the President to call out the militia for drill merely. The Constitution, in empowering Congress "to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia," leaves their training to the States, and it is at least doubtful whether an act of Congress regulating the drill of the militia would be constitutional. Martin v. Mott, 12 Wh., 19; McCall's Case, 5 Phila., 259.
Sec. 1642, R. S.

1669. Whenever the United States are invaded, or are in imminent danger of invasion from any foreign nation or Indian tribe, or of rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, it shall be lawful for the President to call forth such number of the militia of the State or States, most convenient to the place of danger, or scene of action, as he may deem necessary to repel such invasion, or to suppress such rebellion, and to issue his orders for that purpose to such officers of the militia as he may think proper.[1]

[1] The President has no original authority over the militia by right of his office. He can only call them out when Congress provides for his doing so as the agent of the United States for such purpose. When the call is complied with, the militia becomes national militia, and he becomes their commander in chief. The law governing his exercise of power in calling out is found in sections 1642, 5297, 5298, and 5299, Revised Statutes. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1724.

The manner of the calling out of the militia by the President under the act of 1795 (sec. 1642, R. S.), is indicated by the Supreme Court in the leading case of Houston v. Moore, (a) where it is observed that "the President's orders may be given to the chief executive magistrate of the State, or to any militia officer he may think proper.". The call would ordinarily be addressed to the governor, who, in most of the States, is made commander in chief of the active militia of the State. A further form, indeed, of calling out the militia, viz, by a conscription, was authorized during the late war, by the act of July 17, 1862. Ibid., par. 1723.

The calling forth of the militia into the United States service is an administrative function, a ministerial act, in which the Secretary of War may issue the necessary orders as the origin of the Executive, and his act is the act of the President. Ibid., par. 1725.

The President, in calling out a force of militia, authorized the governor of a State to designate the particular militia of that State to be included in the call, and the governor thereupon designated a certain regiment, and formally accepted its service. Held, that in so doing he acted as the agent of the President and that his acceptance was in law an acceptance by the President, and was equivalent to a muster in of the regiment. Ibid., par. 1727.

In 1836 an Indian agent in Indiana applied for assistance, in an emergency, to a militia colonel, who furnished three companies of his regiment, which were employed and rendered faithful service for seven days in assisting to execute the laws of the United States. Upon a claim now (1893) made for compensation for such service, held that the same could not legally be allowed by the Secretary of War, who could have no authority to recognize, as in the United States service, militia who had not been called out by the President or by his direction; and that such claim could be entertained by Congress alone. Ibid., par. 1728.

In the exercise of its constitutional power "to provide for calling forth the militia," and "to provide for organizing" the same, etc., Congress has made no distinction between any different portions of this force, or recognized any such portion as "National Guard." The law relating to the subject, Revised Statutes, Title XVI, sections 1625, 1642, etc., contemplates but a single integral body as constituting the militia and as liable to be called out. Under the existing law, the "National Guard" of a State can not legally be called out as such. Upon a call, the governor may indeed order them out, as being organized and available, so far as they will go to make up the number of the militia required. Ibid., par. 1729.

The United States statutes take no notice of "National Guard" as such. If called

1671. The militia, when called into the actual service of the United States for the suppression of rebellion against and resistance to the laws of the United States, shall be subject to the same rules and articles of war as the regular troops of the United States.

Courts-martial, how composeed.

1672. Courts-martial for the trial of militia shall be composed of militia officers only.[1]

Feb. 28, 1795, c. 36, s. 6, v. 1, p. 424; July 29, 1861, c. 25, s. 5, v. 12, p. 282. Sec. 1658, R.S.

When called forth, term of service to be specified.
July 17, 1862, c. 201, s. 1, v. 12, p. 597.
Sec. 1648, R.S.

1673. Whenever the President calls forth the militia of the States, to be employed in the service of the United States, he may specify in his call the period for which such service will be required, not exceeding nine months, and the militia so called shall be mustered in and continued to serve during the term so specified, unless sooner discharged by command of the President.

out, it is not as "National Guard," but as militia; and when so called forth or included in a call it must be governed by the existing laws providing for the organization, discipline, etc., of the militia. Ibid., par. 1730.

The "National Guard," so called, being merely militia, can not (where not called forth) be "supported" or "maintained" by Congress, which is authorized by the Constitution to "support" and "maintain" the Army and Navy only. So officers of the National Guard can not be commissioned by the President without a violation of the Constitution, which "reserves the appointment of militia officers to the States, respectively." Ibid., par. 1734.

The act of February 28, 1895 (1 Stat. L., 424), authorizing the President under certain circumstances to call out the militia, is constitutional, and the President is the final judge of the emergency justifying such call. This construction necessarily results from the nature of the power itself and from the manifest object contemplated by the act of Congress. The power itself is to be exercised upon sudden emergencies, upon great occasions of state, and under circumstances which may be vital to the existence of the Union. A prompt and unhesitating obedience to orders is indispensable to the complete attainment of the object. The service is a military service, and the command of a military nature; and in such case every delay and every obstacle to an efficient and immediate compliance necessarily tend to jeopard the public interests. Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat., 19, 30.

Where a power is confided to the President by law the presumption is that in the exercise of that power he has pursued the law. The existence of an exigency justifying the calling out of the militia is not traversable and need not be averred. It is not necessary to set forth the orders of the President; it is sufficient to state that the call of the governor for the militia was in obedience to them. For disobedience to a call made by a governor for the militia, in pursuance of the orders of the President, a citizen is liable to be tried by a court-martial organized under the laws of the United States. Ibid., 33.

In the case of Houston v. Moore (5 Wheat., 1), it was decided that although a militiaman who refused to obey the orders of the President calling him into the public service was not, in the sense of the act of 1795, "employed in the service of the United States" so as to be subject to the Rules and Articles of War, yet that he was liable to be tried for the offense under the fifth section of the same act by a court-martial called under the authority of the United States.

[1] Section 1658, Revised Statutes, prescribes that "courts-martial for the trial of militia shall be composed of militia officers only." Held that the enactment applied also in principle to courts of inquiry convened in the militia, and that officers of the Army could not, for purposes of instruction or assistance, legally be detailed to be associated with militia officers as members of such courts. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1735.

1674. Every officer, noncommissioned officer, or private of the militia who fails to obey the orders of the President when he calls out the militia into the actual service of the United States shall forfeit of his pay a sum not exceeding one year's pay, and not less than one month's pay, to be determined and adjudged by a court-martial; and such officer shall be liable to be cashiered by a sentence of court-martial, and be incapacitated from holding a commission in the militia for a term not exceeding twelve months; and such noncommissioned officer and private shall be liable to imprisonment, by a like sentence, on failure to pay the fines adjudged against him, for one calendar month for every twenty-five dollars of such fine.

Where militia are called out and mustered into actual service, the staff officers of their commanding general can not be considered as in any sense appointed by the Secretary of War or commissioned by the President. Nor are they given the corresponding rank of staff officers of the Regular Army, but their rank remains the same as it was before in the militia under the State laws. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1736.

It is not essential for a militia organization that there should be a formal muster in to bring it into the actual service of the United States. The provision of the act of 1862 relating to the muster in of militia is directory only. Ibid., par. 1726.

There is no existing statute of the United States authorizing the President to call out the militia for drill merely. The Constitution, in empowering Congress "to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia," leaves their training to the States, and it is at least doubtful whether an act of Congress regulating the drill of the militia would be constitutional. Ibid., par. 1733.

[2] There are no acts of Congress providing pay, rations, and expenses to militia called out by State or Territorial authority, but disbanded without their having been employed or mustered into the service of the United States previous to their dismissal; such cases, as they have arisen, having been, from time to time, specially provided for. 1689. All fines assessed under the provisions of law concerning the militia or volunteer corps, when called into the actual service of the United States, shall be certified by the presiding officer of the court-martial, before whom they are assessed, to the marshal of the district in which the delinquent presides, or to one of his deputies, and to the Comptroller of the Treasury, who shall record the certificate in a book to be kept for that purpose. The marshal or his deputy shall forthwith proceed to levy the fines with costs, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the delinquent, which costs and the manner of proceeding, with respect to the sale of goods distrained, shall be agreeable to the laws of the State in which the same may be in other cases of distress. And where any noncommissioned officer or private is adjudged to suffer imprisonment, there being no goods or chattels to be found whereof to levy the fines, the marshal of the district or his deputy shall commit such delinquent to jail, during the term for which he is so adjudged to imprisonment, or until the fine is paid, in the same manner as other persons condemned to fine and imprisonment at the suit of the United States may be committed.

1690. The marshal shall pay all fines collected by him or his deputy, under the authority of the preceding section, into the Treasury of the United States, within two months after he has received the same, deducting five per centum for his compensation, and in case of failure, it shall be the duty of the Comptroller of the Treasury to give notice to the district attorney of the United States, who shall proceed against the marshal in the district court, by attachment, for the recovery of the same.

[1] The appropriation for "providing arms and equipments for the whole body of the militia, either by purchase or manufacture," authorizes the use of the money in the manufacture of arms at the National Armories. IX Opin. Att. Gen., 16.

The cost of transporting arms and equipments to the points designated by proper authority for issue to the militia of the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia is an expenditure incident to the object of the appropriation "Arming and equipping the militia," made by the act of February 12, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 401, 402), and is therefore properly chargeable to it, unless provision is specifically made therefor. (3 Dig. 2d Comp. Dec., 356.)

designated as section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes, and which was increased to four hundred thousand dollars by the act of February twelfth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, being for the procurement of ordnance and ordnance stores and quartermaster's stores and camp equipage for the use of the militia of the country, shall not lapse with the end of any fiscal year nor be turned into the surplus fund, but shall remain a permanent appropriation and be available for the several States and Territories and District of Columbia until expended as provided in said acts or otherwise disposed of by Congress.[1] Act of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 406).

1693. Said appropriation shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories, under the direction of the Secretary of War, according to the number of Senators and Representatives to which each State respectively is entitled in the Congress of the United States, and to the Territories and District of Columbia in such proportion and under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, however, That no State shall be entitled to the benefits of the appropriation apportioned to it unless the number of its regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active militia shall be at least one hundred men for each Senator and Representative to which such State is entitled in the Congress of the United States. And the amount of said appropriation which is thus determined not to be available shall be covered back into the Treasury.[2] Sec. 2, Act of February 12, 1901 (24, Stat. L., 401).

[1] The States do not, by the existing laws, have an absolute right of property in such arms, and they derive no authority therefrom to sell or dispose of them at pleasure. XIV Opin. Att. Gen., 491.

[2] The arms transmitted to the States under the laws which are embodied in sections 1661, 1667, and 1670 of the Revised Statutes are, in contemplation of the provisions thereof, to be held by the States for a specific purpose only, which is pointed out therein; hence, they become invested with nothing more than a qualified property in such arms; and they can not, as a matter of right, and without interfering with the regulations of Congress on a subject over which its authority is paramount, make any disposition or use of such arms which defeats the purpose referred to. XIV Opin. Atty. Gen. 491. Yet those laws make no provision for any accountability to the United States respecting the disposition of the arms after they are once delivered to the State authorities, Congress having seen fit to leave it entirely to the good faith of the States, when the delivery takes place, to carry out the purpose contemplated in furnishing the same. Ibid. Congress, by the act of February 12, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 401), has provided a system of accountability for the several States in respect to the arms, ammunition, equipage and other public property issued to the States for the use of the militia. [1] The act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 455), authorized the Secretary of War to credit the several States and Territories with arms drawn by them between January 1, 1861, and April 23, 1868, and not sold or otherwise misapplied, or used for the purchase of arms to be distributed to the States in rebellion. The act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 551), repealed so much of the act of March 3, 1875, as required the unexpended balances of the appropriations for the purchase of arms for distribution to the States in rebellion to be covered into the Treasury.

[2] By several statutes special authority is conferred upon the Secretary of War to adjust the accounts of particular States and Territories for issues of arms and munitions of war. For such provisions as to the State of Kansas, see the acts of August 15, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 206); July 28, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 159); as to the Territory of Montana, see the act of February 15, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 404); as to the Territory of Dakota, see the act of February 28, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 432); as to the State of Washington, see the act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 130); as to the State of Colorado, see the act of August 4, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 219). The act of January 16, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 646), authorized the Secretary of War to issue additional arms and military stores to the Territory of Montana; the same statute authorized a similar issue to the State of Oregon. The joint resolution of June 7, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 252), authorized the issue of 1,000 stand of arms, with 50 cartridges to each, to each of the Territories, in addition to those already authorized by law. Staff officers. Sec. 8, ibid.

1714. The staff of the militia of the District of Columbia shall be appointed and commissioned by the President, and hold office until their successors are appointed and qualified, but may be removed at any time by the President. It shall consist of one adjutant-general, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel; one inspector-general, one quartermaster-general, one commissary-general, one chief of ordnance, one chief engineer, one surgeon-general, one judge-advocate-general, and one inspector-general of rifle practice, each with the rank of major; and four aids-de-camp, each with the rank of captain. The commanding general may appoint a noncommissioned staff of the militia to consist of one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, one commissary-sergeant, one ordnance-sergeant, two staff sergeants, one hospital steward, one color-sergeant, and one sergeant-bugler. Sec. 8, ibid.

Noncommissioned staff.

Detail for adjutant-general. Sec. 9, ibid.

1715. The President may assign an officer of the Army to act as adjutant-general of the militia of the District of Columbia, who, while so assigned, shall be commissioned as such and be subject to the orders of the commanding general and the provisions of this act: Provided, however, That the officer so assigned shall receive no other pay or emolument than that to which his rank in the Army entitles him when on detached service.[1] Sec. 9, ibid.

Detail of retired officer. June 6, 1900, v. 31, p. 671.

1716. The President of the United States may detail as adjutant-general of the District of Columbia militia any retired officer of the Army who may be nominated to the President by the brigadier-general commanding the District of Columbia militia, said retired officer while so detailed to have the active-service pay and allowances of his rank in the Regular Army. Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 671).

[1] Held that it would not be within the prohibitions of section 1222, Revised Statutes, but legal, to detail an officer of the Army to act as adjutant-general of the militia of the District of Columbia, there being no such office established by law; that such officer, in so acting, would be performing military service and would not be holding a "civil office." Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 521, par. 16.

THE ACTIVE MILITIA.

ORGANIZATION.

Par.
1717. The active militia; the National Guard.
1718. Strength, peace basis.

1725. Disbanding companies below minimum in strength.

Organization of National Guard.
Mar. 1, 1889, s. 10, v. 25, p. 772.

1717. The active militia shall be composed of volunteers, and shall be designated the National Guard of the District of Columbia; and in case the militia of the District of Columbia are called into the service of the United States, or required for the suppression of riots, or to aid civil officers in the execution of the laws, shall be the first to be ordered into service. Sec. 10, act of March 1, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 772).

Strength on peace basis.
Sec. 11, ibid.

1718. In time of peace the National Guard shall consist of not more than twenty-eight companies of infantry, which shall be arranged by the commanding general into such regiments, battalions, and unattached companies as he may deem expedient; one battery of light artillery; one signal corps; one ambulance corps; one engineer corps; one band of music, and one corps of field musicians. Sec. 11, ibid.

Regiments of infantry.
Sec. 12, ibid.

1719. Regiments of infantry shall consist of three battalions; and to each regiment there shall be one colonel and one lieutenant-colonel, and a staff to consist of one surgeon, one adjutant, one quartermaster, one inspector of rifle practice, and one chaplain, each with the rank of captain; and a noncommissioned staff, consisting of one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, one commissary-sergeant, and one hospital steward. Sec. 12, ibid.

Infantry battalions.
Sec. 13, ibid.

1720. Battalions of infantry shall consist of four companies; and to each battalion there shall be one major, and a staff consisting of one surgeon, one adjutant, one quartermaster, and one inspector of rifle practice, each with the rank of first lieutenant; and a noncommissioned staff, consisting of one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, and one hospital steward. Sec. 13, ibid.

Infantry companies.
Sec. 14, ibid.

1721. To each company of infantry there shall be one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, four sergeants, one corporal to each ten privates, and not more than eighty-seven privates; and the minimum number of enlisted men shall be forty. Sec. 14. ibid.

Artillery battery.

1722. The battery of light artillery shall have not less than four nor more than six guns. To four guns there shall be one captain, two first lieutenants, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, five sergeants, eight corporals, two buglers, and not more than eighty-two privates; and the minimum number of enlisted men shall be fifty-seven. To more than four guns there shall be, for each additional gun, one sergeant, two corporals, and not more than twenty nor less than ten privates; for two additional guns there shall be one additional second lieutenant. Sec. 15, ibid.

Signal, ambulance, and engineer corps.
Sec. 16, ibid.

1723. To each signal corps, ambulance corps, and engineer corps there shall be one first lieutenant, two sergeants, two corporals, and not more than thirty-two nor less than fourteen privates. Sec. 16, ibid.

1724. The band of music shall consist of one chief musician, two sergeants, two corporals, and thirty-two privates; and the corps of field music of one principal musician, two sergeants, two corporals, and thirty-two privates. The chief musician, principal musician, and other noncommissioned officers of the band and field music shall be appointed by the commanding general. Sec. 17, ibid.

Disbanding of companies below minimum strength.
Sec. 18, ibid.

1725. When any company of the National Guard shall, for a period of not less than ninety days, contain less than the minimum number of enlisted men prescribed by this act, or upon a duly ordered inspection shall be found to have fallen below a proper standard of efficiency, the commanding general may either disband such company or consolidate it with any other company of the National Guard, and grant an honorable discharge to the supernumerary officers and noncommissioned officers produced by such consolidation. Officers and enlisted men discharged by reason of such disbanding or consolidation and at any time thereafter reentering the service shall have allowed to them, as part of their term of service, the time already served. Sec. 18, ibid.

COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

1731. Discharges.

Commission.
Sec. 19, ibid.

1726. All officers shall be commissioned by the President of the United States. In time of peace, or when not in the service of the United States, they shall previously be elected or nominated as herein provided. No person commissioned as an officer shall assume such rank or enter upon the duties of the office to which he may be commissioned until he has accepted such commission and taken such oath or affirmation as may be prescribed. Sec. 19, ibid.

Staff officers. Sec. 20, ibid.

1727. The staff officers of a regiment or battalion shall be nominated by the permanent commander thereof. Sec. 20, ibid.

1728. Field officers of regiments or battalions shall be nominated by the commanding general. Captains and lieutenants of companies shall be elected by the written votes of the enlisted men of the respective companies.[1] Sec. 21, ibid.

1729. Elections of officers shall be ordered and held under such regulations as may be prescribed by the commanding general. Sec. 22, ibid.

1730. Every person accepting an election or nomination as an officer shall appear before an examining board, to be appointed by the commanding general, which board shall examine said officer as to his military and other qualifications. If any officer shall fail to appear before the board of examination within thirty days after being notified, or shall fail to pass a satisfactory examination, the fact shall be certified by the board to the commanding general, who shall thereupon declare the election or nomination of such officer null and void. If, in the opinion of the board, such officer is competent and otherwise qualified, they shall certify the fact to the commanding general, who shall thereupon recommend him to the President for commission. Sec. 23, ibid.

1731. A commissioned officer may be honorably discharged—

Upon tender of resignation;

Upon disbandment of the organization to which he belongs;

Upon report of a board of examination, or for failure to appear before such board when ordered.

[1] Section 21 of the act of March 1, 1889, reorganizing the District of Columbia militia, requires that captains and lieutenants of companies shall be elected by the enlisted men of the same. Held, that this enactment would prevent the assignment to a company of an officer not first elected thereby. So that it would require that such officers be appointed as officers of the particular companies by which they had been elected, and would not permit of their appointment simply to the arm of service, as in the Army. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 22, par. 17.

He may be dismissed upon the sentence of a court-martial or conviction in a court of justice of an infamous offense. Sec. 24, ibid.

NONCOMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

Noncommissioned officers. Appointment. Sec. 25, ibid.

1732. Noncommissioned staff officers shall be appointed by the permanent commander of the organization to which they belong; and permanent commanders of battalions shall appoint the noncommissioned officers of companies, upon the written nomination of the respective captains; but they may withhold such appointment if, in their judgment, there be proper cause; noncommissioned officers of unattached companies shall be appointed by their respective captains. The permanent commander of any battalion or unattached company may reduce to the ranks any company noncommissioned officers of his command. Sec. 25, ibid.

ENLISTED MEN.

Par.
1733. Enlistment; term; reenlistment.
1734. Oath.
1735. Discharge, honorable.
1736. Dishonorable discharge.
1737. Discharge certificates.

Enlistment. Term. Reenlistment. Sec. 26, ibid.

1733. Enlistment in the National Guard shall be for the term of three years: Provided, however, That any soldier who may have received an honorable discharge, by reason of the expiration of his term of service, may, within thirty days thereafter, reenlist for a term of one, two, or three years, to date from the expiration of his previous term. All terms of service, except in case of reenlistment, shall commence at noon on the day of enlistment and expire at noon on the day of discharge. Sec. 26, ibid.

1734. Every person enlisting in the National Guard shall sign an enlistment paper which shall contain an oath of allegiance to the United States. The requisites and regulations for enlistment and the form of enlistment paper and oath for enlisting men shall be prescribed by the commanding general. Sec. 27, ibid.

Discharges: Honorable. Sec. 28, ibid.

1735. No enlisted man shall be honorably discharged before the expiration of his term of service, except by order of the commanding general, and for the following reasons:

Upon his own application, approved by the commanding officer of his company and by superior commanders;

Upon removal from the District;

Upon disability, established by certificate of medical officer;

To accept promotion by commission;

Whenever, in the opinion of the commanding general, the interest of the service demand such discharge. Sec. 28, ibid.

Dishonorable. Sec. 29, ibid.

1736. Enlisted men shall be dishonorably discharged by order of the commanding general:

To carry out the sentence of a court-martial;

Upon conviction of felony in a civil court;

Upon expulsion from his company, in accordance with its by-laws or regulations;

Upon discovery of reenlistment after previous dishonorable discharge. Sec. 29, ibid.

Certificate of discharge. Sec. 30, ibid.

1737. Every soldier discharged from the service of the District shall be furnished with a certificate of such discharge, which shall state clearly the reasons therefor. Dishonorable discharges will have the word "dishonorable" written or printed diagonally across their faces, in large characters, with red ink, and the reenlistment clause will be erased by a line. Sec. 30, ibid.

ARMS, UNIFORMS, AND EQUIPMENTS.

Par.
1738. Arms, equipments, etc.
1739. Issued by Secretary of War.
1740. Issues made from army stores.
1741. Regulations for issue, care, etc.
1742. Returns.
1743. Selling, disposing, pawning, etc., penalty.
Par.
1744. Accountability of officers.
1745. Unserviceable property.
1746. Distinctive uniforms.
1747. Private property of organizations.
1748. Armories.
1749. Deductions of pay, deposit.
1750. The same, expenditure.

1738. The uniforms, arms, and equipments of the National Guard shall be the same as prescribed and furnished to the Army of the United States. Every organization of the National Guard shall be provided with such ordnance and ordnance stores, clothing, camp and garrison equipage, quartermaster's stores, medical supplies, and other military stores, as may be necessary for the proper training and instruction of the force and for the proper performance of the duties required under this act. Sec. 31, ibid.

To be issued by Secretary of War. The same.

1739. Such property shall be issued from the stores and supplies appropriated for the use of the Army, upon the approval and by the direction of the Secretary of War, to the commanding general, upon his requisitions for the same. The property so issued shall remain and continue to be the property of the United States, and shall be accounted for by the commanding general at such times, in manner, and on such forms, as the Secretary of War may require.[1] Sec. 31, ibid.

Issues to be made from Army stores. July 23, 1888, v. 25, p. 627.

1740. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to issue from the stores of the Army such arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster's stores, and camp equipage to the militia of the District of Columbia as he may deem necessary for their proper equipment and instruction. The property so issued shall remain and continue to be the property of the United States, and shall be annually accounted for in such manner as the Secretary of War may require. Act of July 23, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 627).

Regulations for issue, care, etc. Mar. 1, 1889, s. 32, v. 25, p. 772.

1741. The commanding general may transfer all public property, received by him for the use of the National Guard under the provision of this act, to the several departmental offices of the general staff, and may make and prescribe regulations for its issue by them, and for its care and preservation by the officers or soldiers to whom issued. Sec. 32, act of March 1, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 772).

1742. Every officer receiving public property for military use shall be accountable for the articles so received by him, and shall make returns of such property at such times, in such manner, and on such forms as may be prescribed. He shall be liable to trial by court-martial for neglect of duty, and also make good to the United States the value of all such property defaced, injured, destroyed, or lost, by any neglect or default on his part, to be recovered in an action of tort, or by any other action at law, to be instituted by the judge-advocate-general of the militia at the order of the commanding general. All money received on account of loss or damages shall be paid in the Treasury of the United States, and shall be accounted for by the commanding general in his returns to the Secretary of War. Sec. 33, ibid.

1743. Any officer or soldier who shall sell, dispose of, pawn or pledge, willfully destroy or injure, or retain after proper demand made any public property issued under the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding two months, or by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by both; and it is hereby made the duty of the judge of the police court of the District of Columbia, upon information filed or complaint made under oath, to issue process for the arrest of the offender, and to cause him to be brought before the police court to be dealt with according to the provisions of this section. Sec. 34, ibid.

[1] Held that the "military stores" required by section 31 of the act of March 1, 1889, to be furnished for the militia of the District of Columbia, did not include copies of the Infantry Drill Regulations. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 521, par. 14.

Held that the clothing and camp and garrison equipage issued to the District of Columbia militia, under section 31 of the act of March 1, 1889, was properly to be inspected by militia, not by army officers; and that the condemned portion, if any, was to be reported by the commanding general of the militia to the Secretary of War, to be disposed of as he should direct. Ibid., par. 15. See also act of July 23, 1888, paragraph 1287, post.

1744. Until an officer or his legal representative shall have received notice that the property accounts of such officer have been examined and found correct, the liability of such officer, or of his estate, for public property for which he is or may have been responsible shall be in no way affected by resignation, discharge, change in official position, or death. Upon the death or desertion of an officer responsible for public property his immediate commander shall at once cause the property for which such officer was responsible to be collected, and a correct inventory made by actual count and examination; which inventory shall be forwarded to the commanding general, in order that any deficiency may be made good from the estate of the deceased or deserting officer; compensation for such deficiency may be recovered in the manner provided in section thirty-four. Sec. 35, ibid.

1745. Property issued or provided under the provisions of this act which becomes unfit for use and is condemned as unserviceable shall be reported by the commanding general to the Secretary of War, and shall be disposed of as may be directed by him. Sec. 36, ibid.

Distinctive uniforms. Sec. 37, ibid.

1746. Any organization of the active militia may, with the approval of the commanding general and at its own expense, adopt any other uniform than that issued to it; but such uniform shall not be worn when such organization is on duty under the orders of the commanding general except by his permission. Sec. 37, ibid.

Actions for injuries to.

1747. Organizations of the National Guard shall have the right to own and keep personal property, which shall belong to and be under the control of the active members thereof; and the commanding officer of any organization may recover for its use any debts or effects belonging to it, or damages for injury to such property; action for such recovery to be brought, in the name of such commanding officer, before any justice of the peace, with the right of appeal to the supreme court of the District of Columbia, or before the supreme court of the District of Columbia; and no suit or complaint pending in his name shall be abated by his ceasing to be commanding officer of the organization; but, upon the motion of the commander succeeding him, such commander shall be admitted to prosecute the suit or complaint in like manner and with like effect as if it had been originally commenced by him. Sec. 38, ibid.

Armories to be provided.

1748. The quartermaster-general of the militia shall provide, by rental or otherwise, such armories for the National Guard as may be allowed and directed by the commanding general. He shall also provide each organization with such lockers, closets, gunracks, and cases or desks, as may be necessary for the care, preservation, and safekeeping of the arms, equipments, uniforms, records, and other military property in their possession. He shall also provide suitable rooms for the offices of the commanding general and staff, for the keeping of books, the transaction of business, and the instruction of officers, and also suitable places for the storage and safe-keeping of public property. Sec. 39, ibid.

Deductions from pay to be deposited.
Mar. 1, 1901, v. 31, p. 845

1749. All moneys collected on account of deductions made from the pay of any officer or enlisted man of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, on account of Government property lost or destroyed by such individual, shall be repaid into the United States Treasury to the credit of the officer of the militia of the District of Columbia, who is accountable to the United States Government for such property lost or destroyed. Act of March 1, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 845).

Expenditure of funds obtained by deduction.
Mar. 1, 1901, v. 31, p. 845.

1750. All moneys collected on account of deductions made from the pay of any officer or enlisted man of the National Guard of the District of Columbia for or on account of any violation of the regulations governing said National Guard shall be held by the commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia, who is authorized to expend such moneys so collected for general incidental expenses of the service; and for all moneys so collected and expended the commanding general shall make an accounting in like manner as for the appropriation disbursed for pay of troops. Act of March 1, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 845).

MILITARY DUTIES.

Par.
1751. Drill, a military duty.
1752. Commanding general to prescribe drills, etc.
1753. Annual inspection.
1754. Encampments.
1755. Use of grounds at Washington Barracks.

Par.
1756. Suppression of riots.
1757. Excuses from duty.
1758. Parades, right of way.
1759. Parades and encampments, rules for.
1760. Government employees.

Drills, etc., to be a military duty.
Sec. 40, ibid.

1751. Any drill, parade, encampment, or duty that is required, ordered, or authorized to be performed under the provisions of this act shall be deemed to be a military duty, and while on such duty every officer and enlisted man of the National Guard shall be subject to the lawful orders of his superior officers, and for any military offense may be put and kept under arrest or under guard for a time not extending beyond the term of service for which he is then ordered. Sec. 40, ibid.

Prescribing drills, etc.

1752. The commanding general shall prescribe such stated drills and parades as he may deem necessary for the instruction of the National Guard, and may order out any portion of the National Guard for such drills, inspections, parades, escort, or other duties, as he may deem proper.[1] The commanding officer of any regiment, battalion, or company may also assemble his command, or any part thereof, in the evening for drill, instruction, or other business, as he may deem expedient; but no parade shall be performed by any regiment, battalion, company, or part thereof without the permission of the commanding general. Sec. 41, ibid.

Annual inspection.

1753. An annual inspection and muster of each organization of the National Guard, and an inspection of their armories and of public property in their possession, shall be made at such times and places as the commanding general may order and direct. Sec. 42, ibid.

Encampments.
Sec. 43, ibid.

1754. The National Guard shall perform not less than six consecutive days of camp duty in each year, at such time as may be ordered by the commanding general; and the quartermaster-general of the militia, subject to the approval of the commanding general, shall provide, by rental or otherwise, a suitable camp ground for the annual encampment of the militia, make the necessary provisions thereon for the encampment, and provide necessary transportation to and from the same for baggage and supplies. Sec. 43, ibid.

[1] It was held by the Attorney-General, in an opinion rendered at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, in May, 1896, that leaves of absence to employees of the Government in Washington granted for the purpose of enabling them to discharge their military duties, were not to be charged to the thirty days allowed them annually for rest and recreation. XXI Opin. Att. Gen., 353; but see VI Compt. Dec., 856.

Use of Washington Barracks. Sec. 44, ibid.

1755. National Guard shall have the use of the drill grounds and rifle-range at the Washington Barracks, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, and the commanding general of the militia shall provide such additional targets and accessories as may be necessary for the use of the militia. Sec. 44, ibid.

1756. When there is in the District of Columbia a tumult, riot, mob, or a body of men acting together by force with attempt to commit a felony; or to offer violence to persons or property, or by force and violence to break and resist the laws, or when such tumult, riot, or mob is threatened, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or for the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, to call on the commander in chief to aid them in suppressing such violence and enforcing the laws; the commander in chief shall thereupon order out so much and such portion of the militia as he may deem necessary to suppress the same, and no member thereof who shall be thus ordered out by proper authority for any such duty shall be liable to civil or criminal prosecution for any act done in the discharge of his military duty. Sec. 45, ibid.

Excuse from duty. Sec. 46, ibid.

1757. No officer or soldier of the National Guard, when ordered on duty to aid the civil authorities, or when ordered into the service of the United States in obedience to the call or order of the President, shall be excused from such duty except upon the certificate of the surgeon of his command of physical disability, such certificate to be presented to the commanding general in case of an officer, or to his company commander in case of a soldier. If such officer or soldier fail to furnish such excuse he shall be tried and punished by a court-martial. For absence from any other military duty required or ordered under the provisions of this act the penalty shall be such as may be prescribed by the commanding general or the by-laws of the organization to which the officer or soldier belongs. Sec. 46, ibid.

Parade, etc., to have right of way. Sec. 47, ibid.

1758. The United States forces or troops, or any portion of the militia, parading, or performing any duty according to law, shall have the right of way in any street or highway through which they may pass: Provided, That the carriage of the United States mails, the legitimate functions of the police, and the progress and operations of fire-engines and fire departments shall not be interfered with thereby. Sec. 47, ibid.

Rules for parades and encampments. Sec. 48, ibid.

1759. Every commanding officer, when on duty, may ascertain and fix necessary bounds and limits to his parade or encampment. Whoever intrudes within the limits of the parade or encampment after being forbidden, or whoever shall interrupt, molest, or obstruct any officer or soldier while on duty, may be put and kept under guard until the parade, encampment, or duty be concluded; and the commanding officer may turn over such person to any police officer, and said police officer is required to detain him in custody for examination or trial before the police court, and the judge thereof may punish such offense by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars. Sec. 48, ibid.

Governmental employees. Sec. 49, ibid.

1760. All officers and employees of the United States and of the District of Columbia who are members of the National Guard shall be entitled to leave of absence from their respective duties, without loss of pay or time, on all days of any parade or encampment ordered or authorized under the provisions of this act.[1] Sec. 49, ibid.

MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

Par.
1761. Courts of inquiry.
1762. Courts-martial.
1763. Trials of enlisted men.
1764. Procedure.
1765. Procedure to conform to that in Army.

Courts of inquiry. Sec. 50, ibid.

1761. Courts of inquiry, to consist of not more than three officers, may be ordered by the commanding general, for the purpose of investigating the conduct of any officer, either at his own request or on a complaint or charge of conduct unbecoming an officer. Such court of inquiry shall report the evidence adduced, a statement of facts, and an opinion thereon, when required, to the commanding general, who may, in his discretion, thereupon order a court-martial for the trial of the officer whose conduct has been inquired into. Sec. 50, ibid.

Courts-martial. Sec. 51, ibid.

1762. General courts-martial for the trial of commissioned officers or enlisted men shall be ordered by the commanding general at such times as the interests of the service may require, and shall consist of not less than five nor more than thirteen officers and a judge-advocate, none of whom shall be of less rank than the accused, when it can be avoided. Sec. 51, ibid.

Trials of enlisted men. Sec. 52, ibid.

1763. For the trial of enlisted men for all minor offenses the commanding officer of each battalion and unattached company shall, at such times as may be necessary, appoint courts-martial. Such battalion and company courts-martial shall consist, for a battalion, of one officer whose rank is not below that of captain; and for a company, of a lieutenant. Such courts shall have power, subject to the approval of the officer ordering the court, to sentence to be reprimanded by said officer in battalion or company orders; or, in case of a company, noncommissioned officers to be reduced to the ranks or to pay such fines as may be imposed and allowed by the regulations or by-laws of the organization to which the accused belongs; and such court may, with the approval of the commanding general, sentence to be reprimanded in general orders or to be dishonorably discharged. Sec. 52, ibid.

Proceedings in trials. Sec. 53, ibid.

1764. The president of a general court-martial or court of inquiry, and the officer constituting a battalion or company court-martial, shall have power to administer the usual oath to witnesses, and may issue summonses for all witnesses whose attendance at such court may, in his opinion, be necessary, and any officer or soldier failing to serve such summons, and any witness failing to appear and testify when so summoned, shall be liable to trial by court-martial. Sec. 53, ibid.

To conform to Army trials. Sec. 54, ibid.

1765. In all courts-martial and courts of inquiry the arraignment of the accused, the proceedings, trial, and record shall in all respects conform as nearly as practicable to the regulations for the same in the Army of the United States. Sec. 54, ibid.

EXPENSES AND ALLOWANCES.

Par.
1766. General expenses.
1767. Bands.
1768. Subsistence while on duty.
1769. Estimates; disbursements.
1770. Leases, contracts, etc.

General expenses. Sec. 55 ibid.

1766. There shall be allowed for the general expenses of the militia such sums as may be necessary for the rental and furnishing of offices for headquarters, stationery, postage, printing and issuing orders, advertising orders, providing necessary blanks for the use of the militia, the cost of storing, caring for, and issuing all public property, and such other contingent expenses, not herein specially provided for, as may be estimated and appropriated for; the accounts for which shall be certified to by the officer receiving the service or property charged for, approved by the commanding general, and paid in the manner provided in section sixty. Sec. 55, ibid.

Payment to band, etc. Sec. 56, ibid.

1767. During the annual encampment, and on every duty or parade ordered by the commanding general, there shall be allowed and paid for each day of service: To each member of the regularly enlisted band, four dollars; to each member of the regularly enlisted corps of field music, two dollars; to the chief musician, eight dollars, and to the principal musician, six dollars. In event there is no enlisted band or field music, or not a sufficient number of either, the commanding general may authorize the employment of such as he may deem necessary for the occasion. The payments for bands of music and drum corps shall be made in the manner provided in section sixty. Sec. 56, ibid.

Subsistence while on duty. Sec. 57, ibid.

1768. During the annual encampment, or when ordered on duty to aid the civilian authorities, the National Guard shall be furnished with subsistence stores of the kind, quality, and amount allowed and prescribed by the Army. Such stores shall be issued from the stores and supplies apportioned for the use of the Army, upon the approval and by the direction of the Secretary of War, to the commanding general upon his requisitions for the same. Sec. 57, ibid.

Estimates. Sec. 58, ibid. Disbursements.

1769. The commanding general shall annually transmit to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia an estimate of the amount of money required for the next ensuing fiscal year to pay the expenses authorized by this act, and the said Commissioners shall include the same in their annual estimates of appropriations for the District; and all money apportioned to pay the expenses authorized by this act shall be disbursed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, upon vouchers duly certified and approved by the commanding general, and accounted for by them in the same manner as all other moneys appropriated for the expenses of the District. Sec. 58, ibid.

Leases, etc., to be made by Commissioners of the District of Columbia. June 11, 1896, v. 29, p. 412.

1770. Hereafter, all leases and contracts involving expenditures on account of the militia shall be made by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia; and the appropriations for the militia shall be disbursed only upon vouchers duly authorized by the Commissioners, for which they shall be held strictly accountable. And no contract shall be made or liability incurred under appropriations for the militia of the District of Columbia beyond the sums herein appropriated. Act of June 11, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 412).

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Par.
1771. By-laws, etc., restrictions.
1772. Duties of officers.
1773. Discipline, instruction, etc.
1774. Regulations.
1775. Status of members.
1776. Repealing clause.

Regulations. Mar. 1, 1889, s. 59, v. 25, p. 772. Not to be repugnant to law, etc. Company and battalion rules.

1771. Companies, battalions, or regiments may adopt constitutional articles of agreement or by-laws, subject to the approval of the commander in chief, for the government of matters relating to the civic affairs of their respective organizations, the regulation of fines for nonperformance of duty, and the determination of causes upon which excuses from fines may be based: Provided, however, That such articles or rules shall not be repugnant to law or the regulations for the government of the militia: And provided further, That the articles or rules adopted by any company or battalion shall not be repugnant to the articles or rules adopted for the general government of the regiment or battalion to which it belongs. Certified copies of such articles or rules, with like copies of all alterations, as finally approved by the commanding general, shall be deposited in the office of the Adjutant-General. Sec. 59, act of March 1, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 772).

Discipline. Sec. 61, ibid.

1773. The system of discipline and field exercise ordered to be observed by the Army of the United States, or such other system as may hereafter be directed for the militia by laws of the United States, shall be observed by the National Guard. Sec. 61, ibid.

Commanding general to make regulations. Sec. 62, ibid.

1774. The commanding general, subject to the approval of the Commander in Chief, is authorized to make and publish regulations for the government of the militia in all matters not specifically provided for by law, conforming the same to the practice and regulations of the Army so far as they may be applicable. Sec. 62, ibid.

Status of members.

1775. Members of the National Guard of the District of Columbia who receive compensation for their services as such shall not be held or construed to be officers of the United States, or persons holding any place of trust or profit, or discharging any official function under or in connection with any Executive Department of the Government of the United States within the provision of section fifty-four hundred and ninety-eight of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Act of March 1, 1901.

1776. The act "more effectually to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia," approved March third, eighteen hundred and three, is hereby repealed. Sec. 63, act of March 1, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 772).

1777. The executive power of each Territory shall be vested in a governor, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor is appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President. He shall reside in the Territory for which he is appointed, and shall be commander in chief of the militia thereof. He may grant pardons and reprieves, and remit fines and forfeitures, for offenses against the laws of the Territory for which he is appointed, and respites for offenses against the laws of the United States, till the decision of the President can be made known thereon. He shall commission all officers who are appointed under the laws of such Territory, and shall take care that the laws thereof be faithfully executed.

65 Art. War.

1782. Officers charged with crime shall be arrested and confined in their barracks, quarters, or tents, and deprived of their swords by the commanding officer.[1] And any officer who leaves his confinement before he is set at liberty by his commanding officer shall be dismissed from the service.[2] Sixty-fifth Article of War.

[1] Arrests, how executed.—The manner in which the arrest, or personal attachment of the alleged offender, if an officer, shall be executed, is not described in the article any further than it shall be done by the hand or authority of the commanding officer; neither is it explained by the article what the degree of the personal restraint shall be imposed by such arrest. Both of these must rest on the usages and customs of war obtaining in the several cases. Samuels, Military Law, 640.

[2] An officer may be put in arrest by a verbal or written order or communication from an authorized superior, advising him that he is placed in arrest or will consider himself in arrest or in terms to that effect. The reason for the arrest need not be specified. At the same time he is usually required to surrender his sword, though this formality may be dispensed with. But an arrest, though an almost invariable, is not an essential preliminary to a military trial. To give the court jurisdiction it is not necessary that the accused should have been arrested; it is sufficient if he voluntarily, or in obedience to an order directing him to do so, appears and submits himself to trial. So neither the fact that an accused has not been formally arrested or arrested at all, nor the fact that having been once arrested and released from arrest he has not been rearrested before trial, can be pleaded in bar of trial or constitute any ground of exception to the validity of the proceedings or sentence. An officer is in no case entitled to demand to be arrested. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 502. See, also, MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, pp. 4–8.

The term "crime" is here employed in a general sense, referring to offenses of a military character, as well as to those of a civil character which are cognizable by court-martial. An offense in violation of this article is only committed when an officer, confined in "close arrest" to his quarters, leaves the same without authority. A breach of a mere formal arrest, or of any arrest not accompanied by confinement to quarters, would be an offense, not within this article, but under article 62. Ibid., par. 170.

Except in the class of cases indicated in article 24, only "commanding officers" can place commissioned officers in arrest. The commanding officer thus authorized is the commander of the regiment, company, detachment, post, department, etc., in which the officer is serving. Where a company is included in a post command, the commander of the post rather than the company commander is the proper officer to make the arrest of a subaltern of the company. Ibid., par. 503.

An officer is not privileged from arrest by virtue of being at the time a member of a general court-martial. But an arrest of an officer while actually engaged upon court-martial duty should, if possible, be avoided. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 507.

Status of arrest.—Although the martial law makes no mention of any difference in the nature of arrests in order to trial, a difference is established by the custom of the Army, according to the degree or measure of the crime. An officer accused of a capital crime, or any offense of which the penalty is so severe as to afford a natural temptation to escape from justice, ought to be detained in a state of confinement as secure as the closest civil imprisonment. If the offense is of a lighter nature the presumption is that the officer, whose character is thus impeached must be solicitous to obtain a judicial investigation of his conduct; and he is therefore generally allowed to be in arrest at large—that is, to walk about, within certain limits, without his sword, on his word of honor to await the issue of his trial, or his enlargement by the proper authority. The degree and measure of the arrest must, however, be entirely at the discretion of the commanding officer, who will in all cases regulate his conduct by the particular circumstances and by the dictates of propriety and humanity. Tytler, p. 202. Besides the presumption mentioned by this writer in favor of an officer being allowed to remain under a liberal restraint, is the positive security of his commission. This confers upon him a beneficial office, and would be subject to forfeiture on his withdrawing himself from the reach of military justice. This affords one great reason for the distinction taken between a commissioned officer and soldier in the circumstances of the arrest. Samuels, Military Law, 641.

The status of being in arrest is inconsistent with the performing of military duty. Placing an arrested officer or soldier on duty terminates his arrest. Releasing a soldier from arrest and requiring him to perform military duty after his trial and while he is awaiting the promulgation of his sentence, can be justified only by an extraordinary exigency of the service. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 505.

It is clearly to be inferred from paragraphs 998–999 of the Army Regulations, 1901, that unless other limits are specially assigned him, an officer in arrest must confine himself to his quarters. It is generally understood, indeed, that he can go to the mess house or other place of necessary resort. It is not unusual, however, for the commander, in the order of arrest, to state certain limits within which the officer is to be restricted, and except in aggravated cases these are ordinarily the limits of the post where he is stationed or held. An officer or soldier, though detained in close arrest, should be permitted to receive such visits from his counsel, witnesses, etc., as may be necessary to enable him to prepare his defense. Ibid., par. 504.

An officer under arrest is not disqualified to prefer charges. Ibid., par. 508.

The imposition of an arrest affects in no manner the right of an officer or soldier to receive the pay and allowances of his rank. Except in a case of a deserter (see par. 140, Army Regulations, 1901) no legal inhibition exists to paying a soldier while in arrest—either before trial or while awaiting sentence—his regular pay and emoluments. Ibid., par. 509.

An arrest imposed by the Secretary of the Navy upon a chief of bureau in the Navy Department in the following terms, "You are placed under arrest, and you will confine yourself to the limits of the city of Washington," held not to constitute a restraint 1783. Soldiers charged with crimes[1] shall be confined until tried by court-martial or released by proper authority.[2] Sixty-sixth Article of War.

66 Art. of War.

upon liberty sufficient to justify the use of the writ of habeas corpus." Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S., 564.

[2] Breach of arrest.—An offense in violation of this article is only committed when an officer confined in "close arrest" to his quarters leaves the same without authority. A breach of a mere formal arrest, or of any arrest not accompanied by confinement to quarters, would be an offense not within this article, but under article 62. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 170.

Simply disobeying an order to proceed and report in arrest to a certain commander, held not an offense chargeable under this article. Ibid., par. 171.

Where an officer in close arrest was permitted by his commanding officer to leave temporarily his confinement, held that his delaying his return for a brief period beyond the time fixed therefor did not properly constitute an offense under this article. Ibid., par. 172.

Though any unauthorized leaving of his confinement by an officer in close arrest is strictly a violation of the article, it would seem, in view of the severe mandatory punishment prescribed, that an officer should not in general be brought to trial under the same unless his act was of a reckless or deliberately insubordinate character. Ibid., par. 173.

It is no defense to a charge of breach of arrest in violation of this article that the accused is innocent of the offense for which he was arrested. (b) It is a defense, however, that subsequently to the original confinement the accused has been put on duty, or allowed to go on duty, provided that before the breach assigned he has not been duly rearrested and reconfined. (c)

The requirement of this article, that an offender "shall be dismissed," is held to be exclusive of any other punishment. A sentence of dismissal, with forfeiture of pay, is unauthorized and inoperative as to the forfeiture, and as to this should be disapproved. Ibid., par. 174.

[1] The word "crimes," as used in this article, is construed to mean serious military offenses. So that a soldier will not properly be "confined" where not charged with one of the more serious of the military offenses—in other words, where charged only with an offense of a minor character. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 176.

[2] Soldiers held in military arrest, while they may be subjected to such restraint as may be necessary to prevent their escaping or committing violence, can not legally be subjected to any punishment. The imposition of punishment upon soldiers while thus detained has been on several occasions emphatically denounced by department commanders. (d) Ibid., par. 175.

A soldier while confined in arrest should not be fettered or ironed except where such extreme means are necessary to restrain him from violence, or there is good reason to believe that he will attempt an escape and he can not otherwise be securely held. Ibid., 511. See, also, par. 1010, A. R., 1901.

Under the regulations (par. 1004, A. R., 1901) soldiers in confinement awaiting action on the proceedings of their trials are assimilated to those awaiting trial, and both classes may, at the discretion of the commanding officer, be employed, separately from prisoners undergoing sentence, upon such labor as is habitually required of soldiers. More severe or other labor would not be legal, nor would labor with a police party consisting in whole or in part of men under sentence, however slight their sentence might be. (e) A soldier in arrest in quarters may be required to do cleaning or police work about his quarters which otherwise other soldiers would have to do for him. See, also, MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, pp. 4–8.

The fact that a soldier has been held in arrest for an unreasonably protracted period before trial, or while awaiting the promulgation of his sentence, is a good ground for a mitigation of his punishment. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 506.

a In all cases of "constructive" breach of arrest, such as exercising military authority, wearing sword, etc., the accused can not be charged under the sixty-fifth article, as the punishment is mandatory and authorizes the sentence of dismissal only in case of "leaving his confinement." The same. 71 Art. of War. 1785. When an officer is put under arrest for the purpose of trial, except at remote military posts or stations, the officer by whose order he is arrested shall see that a copy of the charges[2] on which he is to be tried is served upon

[1] One might be inclined to think, in reading the concluding branch of the article, that the words "until such time as a court-martial can be conveniently assembled," intended some time within the eight days mentioned in the preceding member of the sentence. But military usage is against such supposition. Samuels, 642. Referring to this passage, Tytler observes that "the latter part of the clause evidently allows a latitude which is capable of being abused; but as in a free country there is no wrong without a remedy, the military law prescribes a mode of redress for all officers or soldiers who conceive themselves injured by the commanding officer, which must always be sufficient for the restraint of every act of material injustice or oppression." Tytler, p. 204.

Detaining soldiers in arrest for long and unreasonable periods, when it is practicable to bring them to trial, is arbitrary and oppressive, and in contravention both of the letter and spirit of this article. Whether the delay in any case is to be regarded as so far unreasonable as properly to subject the commander responsible therefor to military charges or a civil action must depend upon the circumstances of the situation and the exigencies of the service at the time.(a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 177.

To give a court-martial jurisdiction of the person of an officer or soldier charged with a military offense, it is not necessary that he shall have been subjected to any particular form of arrest, or that he shall have been arrested at all, or even ordered to attend the court. Here, as before a civil tribunal, his voluntary appearance and submission for trial is all that is essential. Ibid., par. 1035.

[2] CHARGES AND SPECIFICATIONS.

Charges and specifications.—In our practice, unlike that of the English courts-martial, a military charge properly consists of two parts—the technical "charge" and the "specification." The former designates by its name, particular or general, the alleged offense; the latter sets forth the facts supposed to constitute such offense. An accusation against an officer or soldier not thus separated in form would be irregular and exceptional in our practice, and, till amended, would not be accepted as a proper basis for proceedings under the code. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 694, See also MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, pp. 15–20.

Framing of charges.—The same particularity is not called for in military charges which is required in indictments.(b) The essentials of a charge are: (1) That it shall be laid under the proper article of war or other statute; (2) that it shall set forth (in the specification) facts sufficient substantially to constitute the particular offense. These essentials being observed, the simpler and less encumbered with verbiage and technical terms the charge is, the better, provided it be expressed in clear and intelligible English. However inartificial a pleading may be, it will properly be held sufficient as a legal basis for a trial and sentence, provided that the charge and specification, taken together, amount to a statement of a military offense either under a specific article or under the general article, No. 62. Ibid., par. 695.

There can be no legal objection to charging an offense as a "violation of" a particular article of war, although, in general, it will be preferable to charge it by its

[a] Compare Blake's case, 2 Maule and Selden, 428; Bailey v. Warden, 4 ibid., 400.

[b] In regard to the proper form for a military charge, Attorney-General Cushing (VII Opins., 603) says: "There is no one of exclusive rigor and necessity in which to state military accusations." He adds further: "Trials by court-martial are governed by the nature of the service, which demands intelligible precision of language, but regards the substance of things rather than their forms. * * * The most bald statement of the facts alleged as constituting the offense, provided the legal offense itself be distinctively and accurately described in such terms of precision as the rules of military jurisprudence require, will be tenable in court-martial proceedings, and will be adequate groundwork of conviction and sentence." So it is observed by Attorney-General Wirt (I Opins., 286) that "all that is necessary" in a military charge is that it be "sufficiently clear to inform the accused of the military offense for which he is to be tried, and to enable him to prepare his defense." And see Tytler, 209; Kennedy, 69. It is ably remarked by Gould (Pleading, p. 4) that "all pleading is essentially a logical process;" and that, in analyzing a correct pleading, "if we take into view, with what is expressed, what is necessarily supposed or implied, we shall find in it the elements of a good syllogism." But it can hardly be expected that military charges in general will stand this test.

familiar and received name—as "drunkenness on duty," "misbehavior before the enemy," "desertion," etc. Ibid., 225, par. 3.

Where an offense is clearly defined in a specific article, it is irregular and improper to charge it under another specific article. So, where the article in which the offense is defined makes it punishable with a specific punishment to the exclusion of any other, it is error to charge it under an article, such as the sixty-second, which leaves the punishment to the discretion of the court. On the other hand, it is equally erroneous to charge under a specific article, making mandatory a particular punishment, an offense properly charged only under article 62. Ibid., par. 697.

Where a specific offense is charged (i. e., an offense made punishable by an article other than the general—sixty-second—article) and the specification does not state facts constituting such specific offense, the pleading will be insufficient as a pleading of that offense. Legal effect may, however, be given to a pleading if the charge and specification, taken together, amount to an allegation of an offense cognizable by a court-martial under article 62. And in all cases—whatever be the form of the charge or specification—if the two are not inconsistent, and, taken together, make out an averment of a neglect or disorder punishable under this general article, the pleading will be sufficient in law and will constitute a legal basis for a conviction and sentence. Ibid., par. 699.

It is illogical and faulty pleading to charge a secondary offense in lieu of the actual or principal offense, of which that charged was merely a consequence or incident. But where the act committed involves several distinct offenses the party may properly be arraigned upon the same number of separate charges. And all the offenses with which an officer or soldier may be at one time chargeable should, if practicable (and if the same are sufficiently grave), be charged and brought to trial together. Undue multiplication, however, of charges, or forms of charge, is to be avoided; thus charges should not in general be added for minor offenses which were simply acts included in and going to make up graver offenses duly charged. It may, indeed, sometimes be expedient, where the offenses are slight in themselves, and it is deemed desirable to exhibit a continued course of conduct, to wait before preferring charges till a series of similar acts have been committed, provided the period be not unreasonably prolonged; but in general charges should be preferred and brought to trial immediately or presently upon the commission of the offenses. Anything like an accumulation or saving up of charges through a hostile animus on the part of the accuser is discountenanced by the sentiment of the service.(a) Ibid., pars. 700 and 701.

The prosecution is at liberty to charge an act under two or more forms where it is doubtful under which it will more properly be brought by the testimony.(b) In the military practice the accused is not entitled to call upon the prosecution to "elect" under which charge it will proceed in such or, indeed, any case. Ibid., par. 702.

Where there are two sets of charges against an accused they should, if practicable, be consolidated and one trial be had upon the whole, instead of two trials, one upon each set. But after the accused has been arraigned upon certain charges, and has pleaded thereto, and the trial on the same has been entered upon, new and additional charges, which the accused has had no notice to defend, can not be introduced or the accused required to plead thereto. Such charges should be made the subject of a separate trial, upon which the accused may be enabled properly to exercise the right of challenge to the court and effectively to plead and defend. Ibid., par. 703.

Such loose and indefinite forms of charge as "fraud," "worthlessness," "inefficiency," "habitual drunkenness," and the like will be avoided by good pleaders. Such charges, indeed, in connection with specifications setting forth actual military neglects or disorders (not properly chargeable under specific articles), may be sustained as equivalent to charges of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline." But a charge of "worthlessness," with specifications setting forth repeated instances of arrests, confinements in the guardhouse, or trials and convictions for slight offenses of the accused, held an insufficient pleading; such instances not constituting military offenses, but merely the punishments or penal consequences of such offenses. (What is really called for in such a case is a discharge of the soldier under the fourth article of war.) A specification averring a general incapacity induced by habitual intoxication does not set forth a military offense. The accused in such a case should be charged with the acts of drunkenness committed as separate and distinct instances of offense.(c) Ibid., par. 704.

A charge expressed in too general terms is faulty and imperfect; the accused is entitled to know for what particular act he is called to account. Thus a specification under article 62, in a case of an officer, which set forth, not a specific act of offense, but an habitual course of conduct as incapacitating the accused for service or for the performance of his proper duty, held seriously defective and subject to be stricken out on motion. For such conduct, indeed, the remedy is not by charge and trial, but by retirement under section 1252, Revised Statutes. Ibid., par. 726.

A charge expressed in the alternative—either under article 17 or article 60—is irregular and defective, and, upon motion, may be stricken out or required to be amended. Ibid., par. 727.

The specification should be appropriate to the charge. A charge of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," with a specification setting forth a violation of a specific article, is an irregular and defective pleading, and so of course is a charge of a specific offense with a specification describing not that but a different specific offense, or a simple disorder or neglect of duty. Ibid., par. 705.

Where a specification to a charge preferred by a superior against an inferior officer, instead of referring to the former in the third person, alleged that the accused addressed abusive language to "me," and committed an assault upon "me," without naming or otherwise indicating the subject of the abuse or assault, Held that such a form, though supported by some of the English precedents, was not sanctioned by our practice, and that, on objection being made to the same by the accused, the court would properly either require that the specification be amended, or that, in incorporating the charge in the record, the name of the preferring officer be added. Ibid., par. 707.

A specification, in alleging the violation of an order which has been given in writing, or of any written obligation—as an oath of allegiance, parole, etc.—should preferably set forth the writing verbatim, or at least state fully its substance, and then clearly detail the act or acts which constituted its supposed violation. Ibid., par. 709.

Allegations of time and place.—The time and place of the commission of the offense charged should properly be averred in the specification in order that it may appear that the offense was committed within the period of limitation fixed by the one hundred and third article, and in order to enable the accused to understand what particular act or omission he is called upon to defend.(a) A reasonably exact allegation of the time is also important in some cases—especially those of desertion and absence without leave—in order that the accused, if subsequently brought to trial for the same offense, or, what is the same thing in law, for an offense included in the original offense, may be enabled (by an exhibition of the record) properly to plead a former acquittal or conviction of that offense. Ibid., par. 710.

Where the exact time or place of the commission of the offense is not known it is frequently preferable to allege it as having occurred "on or about" a certain date or time, or "at or near" a certain locality, rather than to aver it as committed on a particular day or between two specified days, or at a particular place. There is no defined construction to be placed upon the words "on or about" as used in the allegation of time in a specification. The phrase can not be said to cover any precise number of days or latitude in time. It is ordinarily used in military pleading for the purpose of indicating some period, as nearly as can be ascertained and set forth, at or during which the offenses charged are believed to have been committed, in cases where the exact day can not well be named. And the same is to be said as to use of the words "at or near" in connection with the averment of place. These terms "on or about" and "at or near" are, however, not infrequently (though unnecessarily) employed in practice where the exact time or place is known and can readily be alleged. Ibid., par. 711.

The allegation of time in a specification should be as nearly defined as the facts will permit; but where the act or acts charged extended over a considerable space of time it may be necessary to cover such period in the allegation. Thus, allegations of "from March to September, 1887," and "from May to October, 1888," have been countenanced in a case in which the accused was charged with the neglect of a duty the performance of which was thus continuous. See G. C. M. O. 21, of 1889. Ibid., par. 729.

The same exactness in the averment of time is in general scarcely required where the offense charged is one of omission as where it is one of the commission of a specific act. It is sufficient in the former case to allege that the offense occurred between certain named dates not unreasonably separated. So, an offense of commission, which probably was not completed, or may not have been completed on any particular day, may be similarly charged. Thus held that the allegations of time and place were sufficient in a specification in which it was set forth that the offense charged (which consisted of an improper disposition of public property) was committed by the accused "while en route between Austin, Tex., and Waco, Tex., between the 5th and 25th days of May, 1867." Ibid., par. 712.

[a] As to the latitude allowable in the allegation of time in military pleadings, compare I Opin. Att. Gen., 295, 296. In the civil practice, "nothing is better settled than that proof of guilt is not confined to the day mentioned in the indictment. It may extend back to any period previous to the finding of the bill and within the statutory limit for prosecuting the offense." McBryde v. State, 34 Ga., 203.

But where it was alleged in a specification that the accused was drunk on duty at some time or times during a period of seventy days, held that the specification did not give sufficient notice to the accused of the specific offense which he was required to defend, and was therefore uncertain and insufficient. [a] Ibid.

Where a specification alleged that the accused was absent without leave at various times between two dates, twenty days apart, held that the same was defective and subject to exception as being double, each such absence being a substantive and distinct offense. [b] X, 471. But where the specification to a charge of violation of the sixtieth article alleged the presentation by the accused of a fraudulent claim for rations furnished for recruits and also for lodgings furnished for the same recruits at the same time, held that the specification related to one transaction and was not therefore to be necessarily regarded as double or defective, in view of the liberal rules of pleading applicable to military charges. Ibid., par. 708.

Where time or place is omitted to be averred, or is averred without sufficient definiteness, and the defect is excepted to by the accused on being called upon to plead, the court will probably direct that an amendment be made. But where in either such case no objection is interposed by the accused, the proceedings will be sufficient in law provided the time and place of the offense can be made out with reasonable certainty from the testimony in connection with the specifications. If otherwise, the proceedings will, where practicable, properly be returned to the court for correction, or where this can not be done, will, in general, probably be disapproved. And where the offense is alleged to have been committed on a particular day, and the evidence shows that it was committed on quite a different day, in such case, provided time is not of the essence of the offense, and the specific act charged is sufficiently identified by the other testimony, the variance between the allegation and the proof will not constitute a fatal defect, and need not induce a disapproval of the sentence where there has been a conviction. A return, however, of the record to the court for correction, if practicable, would well be resorted to by the reviewing officer before taking final action. Ibid., par. 713.

Matter of evidence in pleading.—While it is in general irregular to plead matter of evidence, there is no objection to noting in brief in the specification the immediate result or effect of the act charged, as a circumstance of description illustrating the character and extent of the offense committed. Thus, while a homicide, if amounting to murder, and capital under section 5339, Revised Statutes, or by the law of the State, etc., can not as such be made the subject of a military charge in time of peace (see sixty-second article), yet a capital homicide, where it has been committed in connection with or as a consequence of a specific military offense charged against the accused, as, for example, "mutiny," or "offering violence to a superior officer," may properly be stated in the conclusion of the specification as matter of aggravation and as indicating the animus of the accused or the amount of force employed. Ibid., par. 714.

Joint charges.—Properly to warrant the joining of several persons in the same charge and the bringing them to trial together thereon, the offense must be such as requires for its commission a combination of action and must have been committed by the accused in concert or in pursuance of a common intent. The mere fact of their committing the same offense together and at the same time, although material as going to show concert, does not necessarily establish it. Thus the fact that several soldiers have absented themselves together without leave will not, in the absence of evidence indicating a conspiracy or concert of action, justify their being arraigned together on a common charge, for they may merely have been availing themselves of the same convenient opportunity for leaving their station. Ibid., par. 715.

By whom preferred.—Military charges, though commonly originating with military persons, may be initiated by civilians; indeed, it is but performing a public duty for a civilian, who becomes cognizant of a serious offense committed by an officer or soldier, to bring it to the attention of the proper commander. So a charge may originate with an enlisted man. But, by the usage of the service, all military charges should be formally preferred by, i. e., authenticated by the signature of, a commissioned officer. Charges proceeding from a person outside the Army, and based upon testimony not in the possession or knowledge of the military authorities, should, in general, be required to be sustained by affidavits or other reliable evidence, as a condition to their being adopted. Ibid., par. 716.

[b] In the military, as in the civil, practice, double pleading—i. e., specifications setting forth two (or more) distinct offenses (especially when chargeable under different articles of war) are properly condemned, and in sundry cases the conviction and sentence have been disapproved on account of the duplicity in law of the pleadings. See G. C. M. O. 80, War Department, 1875; G. O. 3, 83, Department of the Missouri, 1863; id. 49, Department of the Ohio, 1864.

Any officer may prefer charges; an officer is not disqualified from preferring charges by the fact that he is himself under charges or in arrest. Charges should be preferred to the authority empowered to convene the court for their trial. The signing of charges, like orders, with the name of an officer, adding "by the order of" his commander, is unusual and objectionable. Charges, where not signed voluntarily by the officer by whom they are preferred, are, in practice, usually subscribed by the judge-advocate of the court. Ibid., par. 717.

In cases where charges preferred against an officer are apparently susceptible of a reasonable explanation, it is not unusual, especially where the charges are preferred by an inferior against a superior, to afford the officer charged an opportunity to make explanation before it be determined whether to bring him to trial. Ibid., par. 718.

It is a reprehensible practice to allow charges to lie long dormant before being preferred. Charges should not be delayed, but should be brought to trial as soon as practicable and while the evidence is fresh. A delay of five months remarked upon as prejudicial to the administration of justice and unfair to the accused. Ibid., par. 722.

Commanding officers are not required to bring every dereliction of duty before a court for trial, but will endeavor to prevent their recurrence by admonitions, withholding of privileges, and taking such steps as may be necessary to enforce their orders. Par. 1027, A. R., 1901.

Charges, though preferred in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General, are not to be signed by him. If not signed by the officer actually preferring them, they will properly be authenticated by the signature of the acting judge-advocate of the department, or, preferably, by the judge-advocate of the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 723.

An objection that a charge is not signed should be taken at the arraignment, when the omission may be supplied by the judge-advocate affixing his signature. By pleading the general issue the accused waives the objection. Ibid., par. 724.

But to be taken cognizance of by the court, it is not essential that a charge should be signed by any officer. If, though not so signed, it be duly officially transmitted by the convening commander, or other competent superior authority, to the court, either directly or through the judge-advocate "for trial," or "for the action of the court," or in terms to such effect, it is sufficiently authenticated for the purposes of trial, and trial upon it may be proceeded with by arraignment thereon of the accused. Ibid., par. 725.

Reference for trial.—In general, charges can regularly and properly be ordered to be tried, or transmitted for trial to the court, only by the authority of the officer convening the court or that of his superior. An inferior to the convening officer can not properly refer charges to the court for trial except under some specific or general authority received from that officer. [a] The mere fact, however, that a court has proceeded to the trial of charges, referred to it without due authority by a commander inferior to the one who convened the court, can not affect the legality of the finding or sentence in the case. Ibid., par. 719.

Withdrawal of charges.—A withdrawal of charges constitutes no legal bar to their being subsequently revived and repreferred. Charges, however, once formally withdrawn will not in general properly be revived except upon new material evidence being obtained. Charges once accepted as a sufficient basis for action, by the commander competent to convene a court for their trial, can not properly be withdrawn except by his authority. Ibid., par. 720.

Amendment of charges.—How far charges may be amended by the judge-advocate before the organization of the court depends mainly upon his authority, general or special, to make amendments. After the arraignment, amendments of form may always be made, with the assent of the accused or by the direction of the court; and so may slight amendments of substance not so modifying the pleading as to make it a charge of a new and distinct offense. An amendment so substantial as materially to modify the "matter" before the court, will not in general be authorized (see eighty-fourth article), and any amendment whatever of substance should be allowed by the court with caution and subject to the right of the accused to apply for a continuance (see ninety-third article). Ibid., par. 720, note 1.

The judge-advocate is not unfrequently directed to prepare or reframe charges;

[a] This rule, though not always insisted upon in practice, has been repeatedly enjoined in express terms by department commanders. See, for example, G. O. 67, Department of Arkansas, 1864; G. O. 88, Department of Dakota, 1869; G. O. 8, Department of Texas, 1874.

him within eight days after his arrest, and that he is brought to trial within ten days thereafter, unless the necessities of the service prevent such trial; and then he shall be brought to trial within thirty days after the expiration of said ten days.[1] If a copy of the charges be not served, or the arrested officer be not brought to trial, as herein required, the arrest shall cease.[2] But officers released from arrest, under the provisions of this article, but where charges, already formally preferred, are transmitted to him for prosecution, he should not assume to modify them in material particulars in the absence of authority from the convening officer. While he may ordinarily correct obvious mistakes of form or patent or slight errors in names, dates, amounts, etc., he can not without such authority make substantial amendments in the allegations, or—least of all—reject or withdraw a charge of specification, or enter a nolle prosequi as to the same, or substitute a new and distinct charge for one transmitted to him for trial by the proper superior. (a) Ibid., par. 1532.

A list of the proposed witnesses is no part of the military charge, though such a list may properly be and is not unfrequently appended to a charge. In serving upon the accused a copy of the charges, it is not essential, though the better practice, to add a copy of the list of witnesses where one is appended to the original charges. Appending such a list does not preclude the prosecution from calling witnesses not named therein. Ibid., par. 721.

A middle name or initial is no part of a person's name in law, and except where it is necessary to identify the individual, may be omitted from the charge without affecting the validity of the finding or execution of the sentence. So a misnomer in a charge, consisting of an erroneous middle name or initial, may be disregarded in a charge unless the accused moves to strike out or interpose an objection, in the nature of a plea in abatement, when he must also state his true name. The charge may then be amended accordingly in court, without delaying the proceedings. Ibid., par. 730.

A material amendment of a charge should properly be made before the actual trial. Where a court-martial, after the trial was concluded, directed a specification to be amended so as to render it more definite as to time and place, and then caused the accused to be arraigned and to plead over again, nunc pro tunc, held, that its action was without sanction of law or precedent. Ibid., par. 731.

A failure at the arraignment to take notice of a variance between the form of a specification to which the accused is called upon to plead and such specification as it appeared in the copy of the charges served at his arrest, is a waiver of the objection, and the same can not be taken advantage of at a subsequent stage of the proceedings. Ibid., par. 732.

Statement of enlistments.—The statement as to enlistments, discharges, etc., required by paragraph 927, Army Regulations 1895, to be furnished with the original charge to the convening authority, is not intended to be accompanied by a declaration on the part of the commanding officer of the accused as to his present character. The regulation does not call for the officer's opinion on the subject, or contemplate that the character of the accused will be taken into consideration at this time. Ibid., par. 733.

[1] Though an officer in whose case the provisions of this article in regard to service of charges and trial have not been complied with is entitled to be released from arrest, he is not authorized to release himself therefrom. If he be not released in accordance with the article, he should apply for his discharge from arrest, through the proper channels, to the authority by whose order the arrest was imposed or other proper superior. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 178.

The term "within ten days thereafter," held, to mean after his arrest. Ibid., par 179.

[2] Held, a sufficient compliance with the requirement as to the service of charges, to have served a true copy of the existing charges and specifications, though the list of witnesses appended to the original charges was omitted, and though the charges themselves were not in sufficient legal form, and were intended to be amended and redrawn. Ibid., par. 180.

[1] The fact that cases of officers put in arrest "at remote military posts or stations" are excepted from the application of the article does not authorize an abuse of the power of arrest in these cases. And where in such a case an arrest, considering the facilities of communication with the department headquarters and other circumstances, was in fact unreasonably protracted without trial, held, that the officer was entitled to be released from arrest upon a proper application submitted for the purpose. Ibid., par. 181.

[3] The report required in this article is that habitually submitted to the post or other commander by the old officer of the day at the completion of his tour of duty. See in this connection the requirements of the official Manual of Guard Duty in respect to the duties of the officer of the day and the officer or noncommissioned officer commanding the guard.

[4] The Executive order of March 30, 1898 (G. O. 16, A. G. O., 1898), fixing the limits of punishment, appoints different limits of punishment for willfully and for negligently allowing an escape, as separate offenses. A charge of suffering an escape, under this article, should therefore indicate in the specification whether the act is alleged to be willful or negligent only. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., p. 79.

[1] This article specifies by what military officer a general court-martial may be constituted. The President of the United States has the power to order such a court, as the con- stitutional Commander in Chief of the Army, irrespective of this article or other statute. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 182.

It is within the power of the President, as Commander in Chief, to convene a general court-martial, even when the commander of the accused officer to be tried is not the accuser. Swaim v. U. S., 165 U. S., 553. The President, as Commander in Chief, has a right, virtute officio, to appoint a general court-martial. Runkle v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 396. A power to appoint courts-martial devolved, by statute, on any other officer is shared by the President, though be be not named therein. Since the earliest legislation of our Government it has been understood and intended that powers granted to general officers in regard to courts-martial are thereby granted to the President. His name is to be understood as written in every statute which confers upon a military officer military authority. Swaim v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 173. The President is empowered to convene general courts-martial not merely in the class of cases specified in the seventy-second article of war (viz, where a military officer thereby authorized to convene such a court is the "accuser or prosecutor" of an officer in his command whom it is desired to bring to trial), but, generally and in any case, by virtue of his authority as Commander in Chief of the Army. As such he is authorized to give orders to his subordinates, and the convening of a court-martial is simply the giving of an order to certain officers to assemble as a court and exercise certain powers conferred upon them, when so assembled, by the Articles of War. This general power has been exercised in repeated instances by the President since the formation of the Government. Indeed, if the same could not be exercised, it would be impracticable, in the absence of an assignment of a general officer to command the Army, to administer military justice in a considerable class of cases of officers and soldiers not under the command of any department, etc., commander, as a large proportion of the officers of the general staff, for example. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2038.

A convening of a general court-martial nominally by the Secretary of War is in law a convening by the President, and therefore as legal as if the President himself had signed the order. Ibid., par. 2039.

This article, in empowering certain commanders to constitute the superior courts-martial, makes them the judges in general of the expediency of ordering such courts in particular instances. Except where specially authorized to do so by law or regulation, an officer or soldier can not demand a court-martial in his own case. Ibid., par. 183.

Where a commander empowered by this article to convene a general court-martial declines, in the exercise of his discretion, to approve charges submitted to him by an inferior and to order a court thereon, his decision should in general be regarded as final. Ibid., par. 184.

The authority to order a court under this article is an attribute of command. Thus a department commander, detached and absent from his command for any considerable period by reason of having received a leave of absence (whether of a formal or informal character), or having been placed upon a distinct and separate duty (as that of a member of a court or board convened outside his department, for example), is held to be incompetent during such absence to order a general court-martial as department commander, even though no other officer has been assigned or has succeeded to the command of the department. Ibid., par. 185.

Nor can a department commander, thus absent, exercise such authority through a staff officer or other subordinate, or delegate the same to a subordinate to be exercised by him. Nor, where a general court-martial duly convened by a department commander has, at a time when the commander is thus absent from his command, been reduced, by an incident of the service, below five members, can another member legally be detailed upon the court, by the assistant adjutant-general, or other subordinate officer remaining in charge of the headquarters, since such a detail would be an exercise of a portion of the authority vested by this article in the commander, and which can in no part be delegated. Ibid.

[a] The authority of the President as Commander in Chief to institute general courts-martial has been in fact exercised from time to time from an early period, in a series of cases, commencing with those of Brigadier-General Hull, Major-General Wilkinson, and Major-General Gaines, tried in 1813-1816, and including that of Brevet Major-General Twiggs, tried in 1858. His authority in this particular has been in substance affirmed by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, in Report No. 868, dated March 3, 1879, Forty-fifth Congress, third session. (A single member of the committee apparently dissented, in a subsequent report of April 7, 1879, Mis. Doc. No. 21, Forty-sixth Congress, first session.)

the accuser or prosecutor[1] of any officer under his command the court shall be appointed by the President; and its proceedings and sentence shall be sent directly to the Secretary of War, by whom they shall be laid before the President for his approval or orders in the case. Seventy-second Article of War; act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 121).

1790. In time of war the commander of a division, or of a separate brigade[2] of troops, shall be competent to appoint a general court-martial. But when such commander is the accuser or prosecuter[3] of any person under his command, the court shall be appointed by the next higher commander.[2] Seventy-third Article of War.

[2] According to the definition given in the act of March 3, 1799 (1 Stat. L., 752, sec. 1114, Rev. Stat.), a division is an organized command consisting of at least two brigades, and a brigade is an organized command consisting of at least two regiments of infantry or cavalry. By section 9 of the act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 362), a division, in time of war, is required to be composed of three brigades, and each brigade of three or more regiments. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 192.

[3] A brigade, to be a separate brigade in the sense of this article, must not exist as a component part of a division; to authorize its commander to convene a general court-martial it must be detached from, or disconnected with, any division, and be operating as a distinct command. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 85, par. 1. So, where a command, not attached to a division, but occupying a separate post or district, or operating separately in the field, was made up of regiments or parts of regiments, sufficient to compose a brigade, and such as were commonly, or might properly be, organized into a brigade command, the same might in general be viewed as constituting a separate brigade in the sense of this article, i. e., so far as to empower its commander to convene a general court-martial. Ibid. See also ibid., par. 194–198.

CONVENING OFFICER AS ACCUSER OR PROSECUTOR.

It is not essential that the commander who convenes the court-martial for the trial of an officer should sign the charges to make him the "accuser or prosecutor" within the meaning of this article. Nor is the fact that they have been signed by another conclusive on the question whether the convening commander is the actual accuser or prosecutor. The objection that such commander is such calls in question the legal constitution of the court, and while such objection, if known or believed to exist, should regularly be interposed at or before the arraignment, it may be taken during the trial at any stage of the proceedings. (a) If not admitted by the prosecution to exist the accused is entitled to prove it like any other issue. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 186.

Whether the commander who convened the court is to be regarded as the "accuser or prosecutor" in the sense of the article in question, where he has had to do with the preparing and preferring of the charges, is mainly to be determined by his animus in the matter. He may like any other officer initiate an investigation of an officer's conduct and formally prefer, as his individual act, charges against such officer; or by reason of a personal interest adverse to the accused he may adopt practically as his own charges initiated by another; in which cases he is clearly the accuser or prosecutor within the article. On the other hand, it is his duty to determine, when the facts are brought to his knowledge, whether an officer within his command charged with a military offence shall, in the interest of discipline and for the good of the service, be brought to trial. To this end he may formally refer or revise or cause to be revised and then formally referred charges preferred against such officer by another; or, when the facts of an alleged offence are communicated to him, he may direct a suitable officer, as a member of his staff, or the proper commander of the accused, to investigate the matter, formulate and prefer such charges as the facts may warrant, and having been submitted to him he may revise and refer them for trial as in other cases; all this he may do in the proper performance of his official duty without becoming the accuser or prosecutor in the case. (a) Of course he can not be deemed such accuser or prosecutor where he causes charges to be preferred and proceeds to convene the court by direction of the Secretary of War or a competent military superior. See also par. 188, ibid., and note to par. 187.

The provision of this article (and of Art. 73) that, when the convening commander is "accuser or prosecutor," the court shall be convened by the President or "next higher commander," being expressly restricted to general courts, has of course no application to regimental or garrison courts. [But see SUMMARY COURT.] The same principle, however, will properly be applied to proceedings before these courts, if it can be done without serious embarrassment to the service. Ibid., par. 189.

[1] Under this article all officers of the active list of the Army are eligible to be detailed as members of general courts-martial. Chaplains, however, are not so detailed in practice. Retired officers, in view of sections 1259, 1260, Revised Statutes, can not legally be assigned to court-martial duty. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 199.

But only officers can be so detailed. Courts-martial composed in whole or in part of enlisted men are unknown to our law. So an "acting assistant surgeon," being a civilian, is not qualified to sit on a court-martial. Though any officer may legally be detailed, it is desirable that no officer should be selected who, from having preferred the charges or other known reason, may be presumed to be biased or interested in the case. Ibid., par. 200.

[2] This section is merely directory to the officer appointing the court, and his decision as to the number which can be convened without manifest injury to the service, being a matter submitted to his sound discretion, must be conclusive. Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat., 19, 35; Mullan v. U. S., 140 U. S., 240. The limitation with reference both to the numbers and rank of the members of a general court-martial is discretionary with the appointing power. Mullan v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 34. Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How., 81.

It is not essential to the validity of the proceedings that the order convening a general court-martial of less than thirteen members should state that "no other officers" or "no greater number" "than those named can be assembled without manifest injury to the service." Attorney-General Wirt (I Opins., 296) did hold such a statement to be essential, but simply expressed the opinion that the President, before confirming a certain death sentence, adjudged by a court of less than thirteen members, would properly satisfy himself that a court of the full number could not have been convened without prejudice to the service. It was held at an early period by the United States Supreme Court that it was for the convening authority to determine as to what number of officers could be detailed without manifest injury to to service, and that his decision on the subject would be conclusive. (b)

[a] Compare late opinion, to a somewhat similar effect, of the Attorney-General of August 1, 1878 (XVI Opins., 106), in which it is also held that where the record of the trial fails to indicate that the convening officer was the "accuser or prosecutor" of the accused, the latter in applying to the Secretary of War to have the proceedings pronounced invalid on this ground, may establish the facts by the production of affidavits setting forth the circumstances of the case and the action of the commander.

[1] The volunteer force during the late war with Spain was not a part of the militia, but of the Army of the United States. Though assimilated to the militia in some respects, as, for example, in the mode of original appointment of regimental and company officers, it was as distinct in law from the militia as was the so-called "regular" contingent of the Army.(a) Volunteer officers once mustered into the service of the United States and while they remained in that service did not differ substantially from regular officers in their status, rights, or otherwise. Their tenure of office was indeed briefer; this, however, was not a material legal distinction, since the term of regular officers was also in some cases limited by a statute to a definite period, as the duration of the existing war. See Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 208 and 2444, par. 1.

As the act "to provide for temporarily increasing the military establishment of the United States in time of war," approved April 22, 1898, declares that the Army of the United States in time of war shall consist of both the Regular Army and the Volunteer Army, it can not be held that the Volunteer Army is, with reference to the Regular Army, "other forces," within the meaning of the 77th Article of War, but regular officers may now sit on courts-martial for the trial of volunteer officers or soldiers. Ibid., par. 209.

[2] Courts-martial (though, within their scope and province, authoritative and independent tribunals) are bodies of exceptional and restricted powers and jurisdiction, their cognizance being confined to the distinctive classes of offenses recognized by the military code.(b) Their jurisdiction is criminal, their functions being to assign (in proper cases) punishment; they have no authority to adjudge damages for personal injuries or private wrongs.(c). Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1024.

The court-martial having jurisdiction of the person of the accused and of the offense charged, and having acted within the scope of its lawful power, its decision and sentence can not be reviewed or set aside by the civil courts by writ of habeas corpus

Whenever the law permits the civil courts of the United States to review the proceedings of courts-martial, such review must be confined to the question of jurisdiction alone. If the court-martial is found to have acted with jurisdiction, the civil court can not and will not go into the case further. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S., 564; Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How., 82.

In order to become amenable to the military jurisdiction, an officer or soldier must have been legally and fully admitted into the military service of the United States. Thus held that an officer of the State volunteers appointed by a governor of a State, but not yet mustered into the United States service, was not amenable to the jurisdiction of a court-martial of the United States for an offense committed while engaged in recruiting service under the authority of the governor. So held that the making of fraudulent representations in the course of the preliminaries to an enlistment—as in the "declaration of the recruit"—and before the enlistment was legally complete and the soldier thus fully in the United States service, did not constitute an offense within the cognizance of a court-martial. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1026.

As regards offenses, general courts-martial have exclusive jurisdiction over all offenses punishable capitally, and over those defined in the fifty-eighth article, when committed in time of war. Over other offenses they have concurrent jurisdiction with the inferior courts; but all offenses for which the limit of punishment is in excess of the limits of punishing power of an inferior court, as well as all serious noncapital offenses for which limits of punishment have not been prescribed, will, when practicable, be tried by general court-martial. MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.

[1] Whether the trial of an officer by officers of an inferior rank can be avoided or not is a question, not for the accused or the court, but for the officer convening the court; and his decision (as indicated by the detail itself as made in the convening order) upon this point, as upon that of the number of members, is conclusive. An officer, therefore, can not successfully challenge a member because, merely, of being of a rank inferior to his own. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 210.

The statement added in orders convening courts-martial to the effect that "no officers other than those named can be assembled without manifest injury to the service" is as superfluous and unnecessary, for the purpose of excusing the detail of officers junior to the accused, as it is for accounting for the fact that less than the maximum number have been selected for the court.

[2] A "retainer" is defined to be an attendant, or servant, and the term is applied to one who attends upon a superior, as upon an officer or other person, and accompanies the Army in such dependent capacity; the other class mentioned in the article and designated as "persons serving with the Armies of the United States in the field," consists in and is composed of the authorized civilian employes of an army in the field, or of its several staff departments. In both cases the persons designated in the article, by accompanying the Army of their own free will, may be said, by such act, to have voluntarily subjected themselves to military jurisdiction during the period of their sojourn in the theater of active military operations.

[3] The following classes of persons are, by statute, made subject to military law, and are therefore amenable to trial by general court-martial:

(1) Members of the military establishment. Section 1094, Revised Statutes.

(2) Persons admitted to the Soldiers' Home at Washington, D. C. Section 4824, Revised Statutes.

(3) Inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteers. Section 4835, Revised Statutes.

(4) Persons guilty of contempt of court. Eighty-sixth Article of War.

(5) Post traders (in time of war only). Section 3, act of July 26, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 100).

(6) The Marine Corps, when serving with the Army. Section 1621, Revised Statutes.

(7) The Militia, when called into active service. Sections 1642–1644, Revised Statutes. Sixty-fourth Article of War.

(8) Persons relieving or harboring the enemy. Forty-fifth Article of War.

(9) Persons giving intelligence to the enemy. Forty-sixth Article of War.

(10) Retainers to the camp, and all persons serving with armies in the field. Sixty-third Article of War.

(11) Spies. Section 1343, Revised Statutes. See, also, in connection with the subject of jurisdiction, Manual for Courts-Martial, pp. 11–14.

(12) Soldiers sentenced by courts-martial to dishonorable discharge and confinement. Section 5, act of June 18, 1898.

While it will in general be more for the interest and convenience of the service to bring an accused officer or soldier to trial near the locality of his offense, he may with equal legality be tried by a court convened in any other part of the United States. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 322, par. 2.

The jurisdiction over persons in the military service covers all military offenses committed by them, whether within or beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the United States. Military offenses are not territorial. (Manual for Courts-Martial, p. 14.)

The jurisdiction of courts-martial is nonterritorial. In a case of an officer who exhibited himself in a drunken condition at a public ball in Mexico, held that his offense was cognizable by a court-martial of the United States, subsequently convened in Texas by the department commander. This for the reason that the military jurisdiction does not recognize territoriality as an essential element of military offenses, but extends to the same wherever committed, a principle which is amply confirmed by the comprehensive provision of the sixty-fourth Article of War. See Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 169.

An officer or soldier (except as otherwise provided in the sixtieth article) ceases to be amenable to the military jurisdiction for offenses committed while in the military service after he has been separated therefrom by resignation, dismissal, being dropped for desertion, muster out, discharge, etc., and has thus become a civilian. The old English precedent of Sackville's case ([a]) (which appears, indeed, to stand alone even in England) has not been followed in this country or recognized in our laws. Ibid., par. 1027.

A discharge of a soldier, when subject to trial and punishment for a military offense, is a formal waiver and abandonment by the United States of jurisdiction over him. Nor does a soldier, after having been once discharged, as where he has been dishonorably discharged by sentence, remain liable to the military jurisdiction for desertion or any other military offense committed before discharge by reason of being still held in military custody as a prisoner in confinement under the same sentence; for he is then held, not as a soldier, but as a civilian convict.

Nor can a person who, by reason of acceptance of resignation, dismissal, discharge, etc., has become wholly detached from the military service, be made liable to trial by court-martial, for offenses committed while in the service, on the ground that such offenses were not discovered till after he had left the Army.

The returning by a dismissed, etc., officer, to the service under a new commission does not revive a jurisdiction for offenses committed while he was in the service which had lapsed upon his being separated from it.

It is to be understood that the general rule of the nonamenability to military trial of officers and soldiers, after discharge, dismissal, etc., is subject to a specific statutory exception, viz, that provided for in the concluding provision of the sixtieth article. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1028.

Where a soldier in the Army of the United States was arrested for a crime, and his term of enlistment expired before his trial and conviction by court-martial, held that the jurisdiction of the court-martial having once attached by arrest, it retained jurisdiction for all the purposes of trial, judgment, and execution. Barret v. Hopkins, 7 Fed. Rep., 312. Now, by section 5 of the act of June 18, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 484), enlisted men sentenced to dishonorable discharge, and to periods of confinement in

A soldier, however, provided he has not been in fact discharged, may be brought to trial by court-martial after the term of service for which he enlisted has expired, provided, before such expiration, proceedings with a view to trial have been duly commenced against him by arrest or service of formal charges. (a) By such arrest or service the military jurisdiction attaches, and, once attached, trial by court-martial and punishment upon conviction may legally ensue, though the soldier's term of enlistment may in fact expire before the trial be entered upon. In the leading case on this point, of a seaman in the Navy (In re Walker, 3 American Jurist, 281) (b), the supreme court of Massachusetts held (January 25, 1830) as follows: "In this case the petitioner was arrested, or put in confinement, and charges were preferred against him to the Secretary of the Navy before the expiration of the time of his enlistment; and this was clearly a sufficient commencement of the prosecution to authorize a court-martial to proceed to trial and sentence, notwithstanding the time of service had expired before the court-martial had convened." So held, in a case of a soldier in the Regular Army, arrested on the day before the expiration of his term of enlistment, with a view to a trial for a military offense by court-martial, that the jurisdiction of the court had duly attached, and that his trial might legally be proceeded with. And similarly held in repeated cases of soldiers and officers of regular and volunteer regiments. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1029.

Where the amenability of a soldier for a military offense had been finally severed by his due discharge from the service, held that it did not revive upon his reentering the service within the period of limitation. Ibid., 331, par. 18.

By the sixth amendment of the Constitution, civilians are guaranteed the right of trial by jury "in all criminal prosecutions." Thus, in time of peace, a court-martial can not assume jurisdiction of an offense committed by a civilian without a violation of the Constitution. It is only under the exceptional circumstances of a time of war that civilians may, in certain situations, become amenable to trial by court-martial. (c) Ibid., par. 1031.

A civilian brought to trial before a court-martial can not, by a plea of guilty or other form of legal assent, confer jurisdiction upon the court, where no jurisdiction exists in law. (d)

Any statute by which any class of civilians is attempted to be made amenable to trial by court-martial for offenses committed while civilians and in time of peace is necessarily unconstitutional. Ibid., par. 1032.

It can not affect the authority of a court-martial to take cognizance of the military offense involved in an injury committed by a soldier against an officer that before the trial the latter has resigned or been otherwise separated from the Army. Ibid., par. 1037.

Whether a soldier may legally be held amenable to trial by court-martial for an offense committed by him while on furlough will depend upon the nature of the offense and the circumstances of his situation. In general, indeed, where he is thus absent at his home or at such a distance from his station and from troops that his offenses will not directly prejudice military discipline, he will not render himself amenable to the military jurisdiction unless, indeed, he commits a desertion. See MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, p. 16, par. 7.

The discharge of a soldier not taking effect till notice thereof, actual or constructive, held that a soldier who committed a military offense on the day on which he was to be dishonorably discharged under sentence but before the discharge was delivered to him (or to the officer in charge of the prison at which he was also to be confined under the same sentence) was amenable to the military jurisdiction for the trial and punishment of such offense as being still in the military service. Ibid., par. 1039.

Courts-martial are no part of the judiciary of the United States, but simply instrumentalities of the Executive power. They are creatures of orders, the power to convene them, as well as the power to act upon their proceedings, being an attribute of command. But, though transient and summary, their judgments, when rendered upon subjects within their limited jurisdiction, are as legal and valid as those of any other tribunals, nor are the same subject to be appealed from, set aside, or reviewed by the courts of the United States or of any State.(a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 992. Their jurisdiction is criminal, their function being to assign (in proper cases) punishment; they have no authority to adjudge damages for personal injuries or private wrongs.(b)

It is no objection to the assuming by a court-martial of jurisdiction of a military offense committed by an officer or soldier that he may be amenable to trial or may actually have been tried and convicted by a criminal court of the State, etc., for a criminal offense involved in his act.(c) And the reverse is also law, viz, that the civil court may legally take cognizance of the criminal offense involved without regard to the fact that the party has been subjected to a trial and conviction by court-martial for his breach of military law or discipline. In such instances the act committed is an offense against the two jurisdictions and may legally subject the offender to be tried and punished under both. Ibid., par. 1036.

[1] Any commissioned officer may legally be appointed judge-advocate of a court-martial. Thus a surgeon, assistant surgeon, or even a chaplain, is legally eligible to be so detailed. Dig. Opin. J A. G., par. 1521.

A separate judge-advocate should be appointed for each general court-martial convened by a department or other competent commander. The same officer may, indeed, be selected to perform the duties of judge-advocate as often as may be deemed desirable by the commander, but he should be detailed anew for every court-martial on which he acts. To appoint in a general order a particular officer to act as judge-advocate for all the courts to be held in the same command would be quite irregular and without the sanction of precedent. Ibid., par. 1522.

It is competent for the commander who has convened a court-martial to relieve the judge-advocate originally detailed for it and substitute another in his place, and the second may in the same manner be relieved by a third, etc. The relieving, however, of a judge-advocate, pending a trial, must in general embarrass the prosecution of a case, and should not be resorted to if it can well be avoided. Ibid., par. 1523.

Where there have been two or more judge-advocates successively detailed in the course of a trial, the one who is acting at the close is the one (and the only one) required to authenticate the proceedings by his signature. Ibid., par. 1524.

An officer serving as judge-advocate on the staff of a department or army commander has as such no authority to act as judge-advocate of a court-martial convened by such commander. If it is desired that he should act as judge-advocate of such a court, he should be specially detailed for the purpose. Ibid., par. 1527.

Where a court-martial has jurisdiction, "its proceedings can not be collaterally impeached for any mere error or irregularity committed within the sphere of its authority. of a court-martial, such an employment has, for the past fifty years, been of the rarest occurrence in the military service. Civil judge-advocates have been much more frequently employed for naval than for military courts-martial.(a) Ibid., par. 1528.

A direction in an order convening a general court-martial, that if the judge-advocate be prevented from attending the junior member of the court will act in his stead, held irregular and improper; the function of a judge-advocate as prosecuting officer, not being properly compatible with that of a member of a court-martial. And—the member having acted as judge-advocate in this case—advised that the proceedings (though the court had still retained five members) be disapproved by the reviewing authority. A court-martial has of course no authority to direct or empower its junior member or any other officer to act as its judge-advocate. Ibid., par. 1526.

Challenge of judge-advocate.—While a judge-advocate is not subject to challenge, and it can not affect the legal validity of the proceedings of a court-martial that the judge-advocate was personally objectionable or hostile to the accused, it is yet desirable to detail as judge-advocate, if practicable, an officer who has no considerable prejudice against the party to be tried, or any decided personal interest in his case.(b) Ibid., par. 1529.

An officer can not in general fitly or becomingly act as judge-advocate in a case in which he is personally interested as accuser or prosecutor. Where the judge-advocate had prepared the charges and was the accuser in the case, and moreover entertained a strong personal prejudice or hostility against the accused, held that he was ill-chosen to act as judge-advocate especially in the capacities of prosecuting official and adviser to the court. A personal animus against the accused is particularly unbefitting a judge-advocate in a case where the accused is not represented by counsel. One who, without personal prejudice against the accused, or interest in his conviction, has signed the charges as company commander, may not improperly act as judge-advocate in the case. Ibid., par. 1530.

In the case of an officer tried by general court-martial in 1871 and sentenced to be dismissed, the judge-advocate was not only a material witness for the prosecution, but, as the senior first-liutenant in the same regiment with the accused, was the expectant of promotion to the next vacancy in the grade of captain. In his review of the case, it was remarked by the Secretary of War that, "while there is no ground for doubting that the officer charged with this duty performed it with honest and pure intentions, yet certainly his selection for it was unsuitable, inasmuch as by military law and usage it has always been held that the judge-advocate should be free from bias or interest in the result of the proceedings in which he officiates." G. C. M. O. 5, War Dept., 1871. See also G. C. M. O. No. 41, War Dept., 1875.

[1] A judge-advocate is not authorized to entertain charges in the first instance; he can properly act upon charges—i. e., make service of the same, prepare the case for trial, etc.—only when the charges are transmitted to him for the purpose by the officer who has convened the court or detailed him as judge-advocate. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1531.

The judge-advocate is not unfrequently directed to prepare or reframe charges; but where charges already formally preferred are transmitted to him for prosecution, he should not assume to modify them in material particulars in the absence of authority from the convening officer. While he may ordinarily correct obvious mistakes of form or patent or slight errors in names, dates, amounts, etc., he can not without such authority make substantial amendments in the allegations, or—least of all—reject or withdraw a charge or specification, or enter a nolle prosequi as to the same, or substitute a new and distinct charge for one transmitted to him for trial by the proper superior. Ibid., par. 1532.

A judge-advocate of a court-martial has no authority to place in arrest an officer or soldier about to be tried by the court or to compel the attendance of the accused a The last occasions of such employment are believed to have been those of the trial of the persons charged with complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln, and the trial of Major Haddock, Prov. Mar. Dept. (see G. C. M. O., 356 and 565, War Dept., 1865), upon which Hon. J. A. Bingham and Hon. Roscoe Conkling were, respectively, employed as judge-advocates. For an early case in which a civilian, who was afterwards a President of the United States, was employed as judge-advocate, see the reply dated March 7, 1814, of the Secretary of War, Hon. John Armstrong, to the communication of the "acting special judge-advocate," Hon. Martin Van Buren, submitting questions for the court. Forbes' Trial of Hull.

before the court by requiring a noncommissioned officer to bring him or otherwise: these are duties which devolve upon the convening authority or upon the post commander or other proper officer in whose custody or command the accused is at the time. Ibid., par. 1535.

Prosecutor.—Other than the judge-advocate, who by the 90th Article of War, is "required to prosecute in the name of the United States," our military law and practice recognize no official prosecutor. The party who is in fact the accuser or the prosecuting witness is, in important cases, not unfrequently permitted by the court to remain in the court room and advise with the judge-advocate during the trial if the latter requests it; and in some cases he has been allowed to be accompanied by his own counsel. If such a party is to testify, he should ordinarily be the first witness examined; this course, however, is not invariable. Ibid., par. 2078.

Duty of judge-advocate at the trial.—A competent judge-advocate will properly be left by the court to introduce the testimony in the form and order deemed by him to be the most advantageous and generally to bring on cases for trial and conduct their prosecution according to his own judgment.

The general presumption of law, made in favor of all public officers, in the absence of affirmative evidence to the contrary, that they duly fulfill their functions, applies to the judge-advocate. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1546.

An absence of the judge-advocate from the court during the trial does not per se affect the validity of the proceedings, but is, of course, to be avoided if possible. When the judge-advocate is obliged to temporarily absent himself, the court should in general suspend the proceedings for the time; or, if his absence is to be prolonged, should adjourn for a certain period. Ibid., par. 1539.

Should the judge-advocate be required to give evidence as a witness, the clerk or reporter of the court may go on to record his testimony while on the stand; or, if there be no clerk or reporter, he may record his own testimony as that of any other witness. Ibid., par. 1540.

The judge-advocate in our practice is entitled to the closing argument or address to the court, and he may present an address although the accused waives his right to present any, the function of the judge-advocate at this stage of the proceedings not being confined merely to a replying to the accused. The judge-advocate, in his address, is not authorized to read to the court evidence or written statements not introduced upon the trial and which the accused has had no opportunity to controvert or comment upon. Ibid., par. 1539.

The judge-advocate is entitled by usage to sum up the case and present an argument at the conclusion of the trial, even though the accused declines to make argument or statement. The court is not authorized to deny to the judge-advocate this right to be heard. Ibid., par. 1542.

For the court or the president of the court to place or order the judge-advocate in arrest would be an unauthorized proceeding. The court, indeed, in a proper case under Art. 86, might proceed against its judge-advocate as for a contempt. But an arrest could not be imposed nor a punishment executed in the case of such officer, except through the convening authority or other competent commander. Ibid., par. 1544.

[1] Duty of judge-advocate as counsel for accused.—The duty of the judge-advocate toward the accused should not be regarded as confined to the limited province of "counsel for the prisoner" as the same is defined in the 90th Article of War. Where the accused is ignorant and inexperienced and without counsel—especially where he is an enlisted man—the judge-advocate should take care that he does not suffer upon the trial from any ignorance or misconception of his legal rights and has full opportunity to interpose such plea and make such defense as may best bring out the facts, the merits, or the extenuating circumstances of his case. Ibid., par. 1533.

For the judge-advocate to counsel the accused, when a soldier or inferior in rank, to plead guilty, must in general be unbefitting and inadvisable. But where such plea is voluntarily and intelligently made, the judge-advocate should properly advise the accused of his right to offer evidence in explanation or extenuation of his offense, and, if any such evidence exists, should assist him in securing it. And where no such evidence is attainable in the case, the judge-advocate should still see that the accused has an opportunity to present a "statement," written or verbal, to the court if he has any desire to do so. Ibid., par. 1534.

1800. The commanding officer of a post where a general court-martial is convened will, at the request of any prisoner who is to be arraigned, detail as counsel for his defense a suitable officer, one not directly responsible for the discipline of an organization serving thereat nor acting as a summary court. If there be no such officer available, the fact will be reported to the appointing authority for action. An officer so detailed should perform such duties as usually devolve upon counsel for defendant before civil courts in criminal cases. As such counsel he should guard the interests of the prisoner by all honorable and legitimate means known to the law, so far as they are not inconsistent with military relations.[1] Par. 626, A. R.

Opinion.—It is strictly the proper practice for a judge-advocate not to give his opinion upon a point of law arising upon a military trial, unless the same may be required by the court. This practice, however, is often departed from; and the opinions of judge-advocates, suitably tendered, are in general received and entertained by the court without objection, whether or not formally called for. But where the court does object to the giving of an opinion by the judge-advocate, he is not authorized to attempt to give it, and, of course, not authorized to enter it upon the record. Whether the fact—that the opinion was offered and objected to by the court—shall be entered upon the record, is a matter for the court alone to decide. It is, however, certainly the better practice that all the proceedings, even those that are irregular, which transpire in connection with the trial should be set out in the record for the inspection of the reviewing authority. Ibid., par. 1536.

At the trial of Major Porter in 1857 the court refused to admit an argument of the judge-advocate in support of an objection to an application by the defense for delay. This action was disapproved by the Secretary of War, whose decision was that "it was the duty of the judge-advocate to make the objection, and the argument by which he sustained it was very proper. It was a part of the proceedings which ought to have been entered upon their record. G. O., No. 5, A. G. O., 1857.

[1] Counsel for accused.—An officer or soldier put upon trial before a court-martial is not entitled as of right to have counsel present with him to assist him in his defense, but the privilege is one which is almost invariably conceded; (a) and where it is unreasonably refused, such refusal may constitute ground for the disapproval of the proceedings. A court-martial, however, is not required to delay an unreasonable time to enable an accused to provide himself with counsel. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 984.

While reasonable facilities for procuring such counsel as he may desire should be afforded an accused, his claim must be regarded as subordinate to the interests of the service. Thus where an accused officer applied to the department commander who had convened the court to authorize a particular officer whom he desired as counsel to act in that capacity, and this officer could not at the time be spared from his regular duties without material prejudice to the public interests, held that the commander was justified in denying the application, and further that the validity of the subsequent proceedings and sentence in the case was not affected by such denial. (b) Ibid., par. 985.

A military court has no authority, analogous to that sometimes exercised by civil b Held, that par. 1037, A. R. 1901, providing for the detail by the commander of a post at which a general court-martial is ordered to sit of a suitable officer of his command to act as counsel for prisoners to be arraigned, if requested by them, was not to be construed as sanctioning the detail or voluntary appearance of a post commander himself in such capacity at his own post. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 988. See, also, for duties of counsel so detailed, par. 1037 A. R., 1901; circulars 5 and 8, H. Q. A., 1894; and Davis's Military Law, pp. 36, 37.

The rule that an accused person is not entitled to counsel as of right grows out of the fact that courts-martial are without the authority possessed by civil courts having criminal jurisdiction of awarding a fee to counsel by way of compensation for his services, nor can a military tribunal of any sort assign counsel to the defense of a particular accused person. This for the reason that courts-martial are quite without the authority to require the services of civilian attorneys.

courts in criminal cases, to assign counsel to an accused unprovided with counsel. Nor can such a court excuse one of its members to enable him to act as counsel for an accused. Ibid., par. 987. See, for a case in which this was attempted, General Court-Martial Orders, No. 62, War Dept., 1874.

An application by an accused officer to be furnished, at the expense of the United States, with civil-counsel to defend him on his trial by court-martial remarked upon as unprecedented and not to be entertained. Par. 1072, A. R., 1901, relates to no such a case. No authority exists for the payment, by the United States, of civil counsel employed by an officer to defend him on his trial by court-martial. Ibid., par. 991.

[1] The power to appoint the reporter is vested exclusively in the "judge-advocate" and can not be exercised by the court. The employment, however, of a stenographic reporter should be resorted to only in an important case. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2168.

The description, "the judge-advocate of a military court," does not strictly include the recorder of a court of inquiry, especially as a court of inquiry is not properly a court at all. The same reason, however, often exists for appointing a reporter for a court of inquiry as for a general court-martial, and it is understood that the Pay Department recognizes and pays the accounts of reporters appointed by reporters of courts of inquiry. Ibid., 659, par. 2.

The employment of a stenographic reporter, under section 1203 Revised Statutes, is authorized for general courts only, and in cases where the convening authority considers it necessary. The convening authority may also, when necessary, authorize the detail of an enlisted man to assist the judge-advocate of a general court in preparing the record. Par. 1062, A. R., 1901.

There is no authority for the employment of a civilian clerk for a court-martial, other than the "reporter" authorized by Sec. 1203, Rev. Sts., and referred to in pars. 958 and 1062, Army Regulations. An enlisted man may be detailed as such clerk under par. 1063. A court-martial, member of court, or judge-advocate can not of course lawfully communicate to a reporter or clerk, by allowing him to record the same or otherwise, the finding or sentence of the court. Before proceeding to deliberate upon its finding, the court should require the reporter or clerk, if it has one, to withdraw. But the fact that the finding or sentence, or both, may have been made known to the reporter or clerk of a court-martial can not affect the legal validity of its proceedings or sentence.

The statute does not indicate by whom the reporter shall be sworn. In practice he is sworn by the judge-advocate, a form of oath being prescribed in the MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL. If the same party is employed as a reporter for more than one case, he should, properly, be sworn anew in each case. The reporter should be excluded from the court during its deliberations and not permitted to record the findings or sentence. Ibid., par. 2169.

1803. A court-martial shall, for reasonable cause, grant a continuance to either party, for such time, and as often, as may appear to be just: Provided, That if the prisoner be in close confinement, the trial shall not be delayed for a period longer than sixty days.[1] Ninety-third Article of War.

lenged, because, being composed of but one member, there is no authority provided which is competent to pass upon the validity of the challenge. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 234.

The article imposes no limitation upon the exercise of the right of challenge other than that "more than one member shall not be challenged at a time." Thus while the panel, or the court as a whole, is not subject to challenge, yet all the members may be challenged provided they are challenged separately. The article contains no authority for challenging the judge-advocate. Ibid., par. 248.

Courts should be liberal in passing upon challenges, but should not entertain an objection which is not specific, or allow one upon its mere assertion by the accused, without proof and in the absence of any admission on the part of the member. A positive declaration by the challenged member to the effect that he has no prejudice or interest in the case will, in general, in the absence of material evidence in support of the objection, justify the court in overruling it. Ibid., par. 245.

It is not necessary, though usual and proper, for a member to withdraw from the court room on being challenged and pending the deliberation on the objection. Ibid., par. 244.

An accused challenged the entire court on the ground that the convening officer was "accuser." Held properly overruled; the array can not be challenged at military law. The article declares that "the court * * * shall not receive a challenge to more than one member at a time." Ibid., par. 250.

Where, before arraignment, the accused, an officer, without having personal knowledge of the existence of ground of challenge to a member, had credible hearsay information of its existence, held that he should properly have raised the objection before the members were sworn, and that the court was not in error in refusing to allow him to take it at a subsequent stage of the trial. Ibid., par. 246.

The fact that a sufficient cause of challenge exists against a member, but, through ignorance of his rights, is not taken advantage of by the accused, or if asserted is improperly overruled by the court, can affect in no manner the validity in law of the proceedings or sentence, though it may sometimes properly furnish occasion for a disapproval of the proceedings, etc., or a remission in whole or in part of the sentence. (a) Ibid., par. 247.

A court-martial can not relieve or "excuse" a member except upon a challenge duly interposed and sustained under this article. The fact that a member has been absent from the court for several days and has not heard the testimony meanwhile taken constitutes no legal ground for excusing him by the court. Ibid., par. 251.

[1] In making an application for a continuance or postponement under this article, on account of the absence of a witness, such application should be supported by a duly executed affidavit. (b) It should, however, in all cases require that the desired evidence appear or be shown to be material, and not merely cumulative (c), and that to await its production will not delay the trial for an unreasonable period. It should also, in general, before granting the continuance, be assured that the absence

[a] See opinion of the Attorney-General of January 19, 1878 (XV Opins., 432), in which the opinion, expressed by the Judge-Advocate-General in the most recent of the cases upon which this paragraph is based—that the fact that one of the charges upon which the accused was convicted was preferred by a member of the court who also testified as a witness on the trial (but who, though clearly subject to objection, was not challenged by the accused) could not affect the validity of the sentence of dismissal after the same had been duly confirmed—is concurred in by the Attorney-General. And to a similar effect see Keyes v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 532; ibid., 137 U. S., 224.

In G. C. M. O. 88, Department of Dakota, 1878, the point is noticed that where a challenge interposed by the accused has been improperly disallowed a subsequent plea of guilty is not to be treated as a waiver of the advantage to which he may be entitled by reason of the improper ruling.

OATHS.

Oath of president and members.

1804. The judge-advocate shall administer to each member of the court, before they proceed upon any trial, the following oath,[1] which shall also be taken by all members of regimental and garrison courts-martial: You, A B, do swear that you will well and truly try and determine, according to evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America and the prisoner to be tried, and that you will duly administer justice, without partiality, favor, or affection, according to the provisions of the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States, and if any doubts should arise, not explained by said articles, then according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in like cases; and you do further swear that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it shall be published by the proper authority, except to the judge-advocate; neither will you disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any par- of the witness is not owing to any neglect on the part of the applicant. This feature, however, will not be so much insisted upon in military as in civil cases (a).

Where "reasonable cause" is, in the judgment of the court, exhibited, the party is entitled to some continuance under the article (b). A refusal, indeed, by the court to grant such continuance will not invalidate the proceedings, but, if the accused has thus been prejudiced in his defense, may properly constitute good ground for disapproving the sentence, or for mitigating or partially remitting the punishments. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 276.

Where an accused soldier, by reason of his regiment having been moved a long distance since his arrest, was separated at his trial from certain witnesses material to his defense, held that he was entitled to a reasonable continuance for the purpose of procuring their attendance or their depositions. Ibid., par. 277.

That the charges and specifications upon which an accused is arraigned differ in a material particular from those contained in the copy served upon him before arraignment may well constitute a sufficient ground for granting him additional time for the preparation of his defense. Ibid., par. 278.

Where, after arraignment, a material and substantial amendment is allowed by the court to be made by the judge-advocate in a specification, the effect of which amendment is to necessitate or make desirable a further preparation for his defense on the part of the accused, a reasonable postponement for this purpose will, in general, properly be granted by the court. Ibid., par. 279.

It is, in general, good ground for a reasonable continuance that the accused needs time to procure the assistance of counsel, if it is made to appear that such counsel can probably be obtained within the time asked, and that the accused is not chargeable with remissness in not having already provided himself with counsel. Ibid., par. 280.

[1] This article makes the administering to the court of the form of oath thereby prescribed an essential preliminary to its entering upon a trial. Until the oath is taken as specified, the court is not qualified "to try and determine." The arraignment of a prisoner and reception of his plea—which is the commencement of the trial—before the court is sworn, is without legal effect. The article requires that a A military accused can not be charged with laches in not procuring the attendance at his trial of a witness who is prevented from being present by superior military authority. Thus in a case in G. O. 63, Department of Dakota, 1872, an accused soldier was held entitled to a continuance till the return of material witnesses then absent on an Indian expedition.

b It would properly be so held upon common-law principles, even independently of the positive terms of the article. In Rex v. D'Eon, 1 W. Black., 514, it was declared by Lord Mansfield that "No crime is so great, no proceeding so instantaneous, but that, upon sufficient grounds, the trial may be put off."

the oath shall be taken not by the court as a whole, but by "each member." Where, therefore, all the members are sworn at the same time, the judge-advocate will preferably address each member by name, thus, "you, A. B., C. D., E. F., etc., do severally swear," etc. A member added to the court, after the members originally detailed have been duly sworn, should be separately sworn by the judge-advocate in the full form prescribed by the article; otherwise he is not qualified to act as a member of the court. A member who prefers it may be affirmed instead of sworn. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 225.

The members are sworn to try and determine the matter before them at the time of the administering of the oath. In a case therefore, where, after the court had been sworn and the accused had been arraigned and had pleaded, an additional charge, setting forth a new and distinct offense, was introduced into the case, and the accused was tried and convicted upon the same; held that, as to this charge, the proceedings were fatally defective, the court not having been sworn to try and determine such charge.(a) Ibid., par. 226.

It is a departure from the engagement expressed in the body of the oath—to try and determine according to evidence, and administer justice according to the Articles of War, etc.,—for a court martial to determine a case either upon personal knowledge of the facts possessed by the members and not put in evidence, or according to the private views of justice of the members independently of the provisions of the code.

The words "a court of justice" are deemed to mean a civil or criminal court of the United States, or of a State, etc., and not to include a court-martial. A case can hardly be supposed in which it would become proper or desirable for a court-martial to inquire into the votes or opinions given in closed court by the members of another similar tribunal.(b) b The only case which has been met with in which the members of a court-martial have been required to disclose their votes by the process of a civil court, is that of in re Mackenzie, 1 Pa. Law J. R., 356, in which the members of a naval court-martial were compelled, against their objections, to state their votes as given upon the findings at a particular trial.

[1] Presiding officer.—No special rank or qualifications are required for the position of president of a military court.(c) In our practice the president is not appointed as

In the present corresponding British article, the words "or a court-martial" are added after the words "a court of justice."

c In the British service certain important powers are vested by law and regulations in the president of a court-martial who is appointed in the order convening the court. In our service the presiding officer becomes such solely by reason of his seniority in point of rank, and he may exercise as such presiding officer only such powers as are usually exercised by the presiding officers of deliberative bodies.

such; he is simply the senior in rank of the members present and he presides by virtue of his seniority alone. If the senior of the officers detailed in the convening order is not present with the court at the original organization, the next senior present becomes president; so, if the officer who presided at the beginning of a trial is at a subsequent stage of the proceedings relieved or compelled to be absent by sickness, etc., the next ranking officer present presides as a matter of course, and the senior officer present with the court at the termination of the trial authenticates the proceedings as president. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2043.

While a special authority—that of swearing the judge-advocate—is devolved upon the president of a military court by statute (the 85th Article of War (a)), such officer has in other respects, as in performing the usual duties of a presiding officer, in authenticating the proceedings with his signature and in communicating with the convening officer or other commander, no original authority but acts simply as the representative and "organ" of the court. (b) Ibid., par. 2044.

In deliberations on questions raised upon a trial, as well as in the finding and the adjudging of the sentence, the presiding member is on a perfect equality with the other members. [See paragraphs 1020 and 1021, Army Regulations of 1895]. He has no casting vote, nor, if the vote is even, does his vote have any greater or other weight or effect than that of any other member.

The president of a military court has no command as such. As president he can not give an order to any other member. As the organ of the court he gives of course the directions necessary to the regular and proper conduct of the proceedings; but a failure to comply with a direction given by him while it may constitute "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," can not properly be charged as a "disobedience of a lawful command of a superior officer" in violation of Article 21. (c) Ibid., par. 2045.

Absent members.—A member of a court-martial, though, strictly, answerable only to the convening authority for a neglect to be present at a session of the court, will properly, when prevented from attending, communicate the cause of his absence to the president or judge-advocate, so that the same may be entered in the proceedings. Where a member, on reappearing after an absence from a session, fails to offer any explanation of such absence, it will be proper for the president of the court to ask of him such statement as to the cause of his absence as he may think proper to make. It need scarcely be added that the absence of a member does not affect the legality of the proceedings, provided a quorum of members remain. (d) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1662.

A court-martial can not relieve or "excuse" a member except upon a challenge duly interposed and sustained under this article. The fact that a member has been absent from the court for several days, and has not heard the testimony meanwhile taken, constitutes no legal ground for excusing him by the court. Ibid., par. 251.

Performance of other duties.—Officers detailed and serving as members of courts-martial are not in general properly ordered to perform other duties while the court remains in session or not adjourned. (e) And they are not to be considered as any more subject to such orders now that they are no longer allowed a special compensation for their services than they were formerly. (f) In an emergency indeed arising out of a state of war, or other public exigency, additional service may be imposed upon such officers; in a case of this kind, however, their service on the court would, preferably, be temporarily suspended. Members of inferior courts-martial are not unfrequently required to perform additional duty because of the limited number of officers at the post.

Protests.—Where the majority of the members of a court-martial have come to a decision upon any question raised in the course of the proceedings, or upon the finding or sentence, no individual of the minority, whether the president or other member, is entitled to have a protest made by himself against such decision entered upon the record. The conclusions of the court (except in cases of death sentences, where a concurrence of two-thirds is required) are to be determined invariably by the vote of the majority of its members, and it is much less important that individual members should have an opportunity of publishing their personal convictions than that the action of the court should appear upon the formal record as that of the aggregate body, and should carry weight and have effect as such.(a) Nor can a protest (against the finding or otherwise) by a minority of the members be appended to the record, on a separate paper. Ibid., par. 2079.

[1] The power of a court-martial to punish under this article being confined practically to acts done in its immediate presence, such a court can have no authority to punish, as for a contempt, a neglect by an officer or soldier to attend as a witness in compliance with a summons.(b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 230.

A court-martial has none of the common-law power to punish for contempt vested in the ordinary courts of justice, but only such authority as is given it by this article. Thus held that a court-martial was not authorized to punish, as for a contempt, under this article (or otherwise), a civilian witness duly summoned and appearing before it, but, when put on the stand, declining (without disorder) to testify. Ibid., par. 231.

The authority of a court-martial to punish as for a contempt being confined by the code (article 86) to cases of acts of menace or disorder committed in its presence, such a court would not be empowered to punish, as being in contempt, a witness appearing before it whose attendance it had been necessary to compel by process of attachment. (Ibid., par. 232.

Where a contempt within the description of this article has been committed, and the court deems it proper that the offender shall be punished, the proper course is to suspend the regular business, and after giving the party an opportunity to be heard, explain, etc., (c) to proceed—if the explanation is insufficient—to impose a punishment, resuming thereupon the original proceedings. The action taken is properly summary, a formal trial not being called for. Close confinement in quarters or in the guardhouse during the trial of the pending case, or forfeiture of a reasonable amount of pay, has been the more usual punishment. Instead of proceeding against a military person for a contempt in the mode contemplated by this article, the alternative course may be pursued of bringing him to trial before a new court on a charge for a disorder under article 62. (d) Ibid., par. 233.

Where a civilian witness is brought before a court-martial, but refuses to testify, the court is not invested with any inherent power to punish the witness in such case, either summarily or otherwise, as for a contempt, but must proceed in accordance with the method prescribed in the act of March 2, 1901. Such power can only be exercised by it when given by the positive terms of some statute. Section 1202 of the Revised Statutes arms the court with authority to compel the witness to appear and testify as far as this can be done by process; but in securing his testimony the court is restricted to the means which it is authorized to employ. It can not inflict any punishment where the power to impose it is not clearly conferred by Congress. XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 278. Power to compel the giving of testimony has upon several occasions been conferred upon military tribunals. Article 5, section 14, of the articles adopted by resolution of Congress of September 20, 1776, contained the requirement that "all persons called to give evidence in any cause before a court-martial, who shall refuse to give evidence, shall be punished for such refusal at the discretion of such court-martial." The terms of this article were broad enough to include civilian witnesses, and it was doubtless meant to apply to them. It was repealed, however, by the resolution of Congress of May 31, 1786. Section 4 of the act of April 8, 1814 (3 Stat. L., 135), conferred similar authority upon courts-martial for the trial of members of the militia forces; but this statute was limited by its terms to the period of the then existing war. Prior to the year 1800 no power existed in the British service to secure the attendance of witnesses or to compel them

THE ARRAIGNMENT.

Prisoner standing mute. 89 Art. of War.

1808. When a prisoner, arraigned before a general court-martial, from obstinacy and deliberate design, stands mute, or answers foreign to the purpose, the court may proceed to trial and judgment, as if the prisoner had pleaded not guilty.[1] Eighty-ninth Article of War.

to testify in the event of their voluntary appearance. Power to issue compulsory process was conferred by statute in the mutiny act for the year 1800, and in 1830 the power to compel civilian witnesses to testify was conferred by a similar statute, authorizing such witness to be attached in the court of the King's Bench for such failure to testify. Clode, Military Law, 125.

[1] The provisions of this article in respect to an accused person standing mute, contemplate a formal arraignment of the prisoner in accordance with the rules of procedure prescribed for the courts of the United States having criminal jurisdiction. An accused may, therefore, follow one of four courses in reply to the charges read by the judge-advocate as a part of his arraignment, and may: (a) stand mute, in which event the provisions of the Eighty-ninth Article of War become operative, (b) confess in open court; (c) submit one of the special pleas, presently to be described; or (d) plead to the general issue ("guilty" or "not guilty").(a)

It is a general rule of criminal law that where the accused pleads guilty, no testimony on the merits is to be introduced. But, on military trials the court, even against the objection of the accused, may, in its discretion, call upon the judge-advocate to offer evidence, or approve of his doing so, in a case where such evidence is deemed to be essential to the due administration of military justice.(b) An accused can not be allowed, by pleading guilty, to shut out testimony where the interests of the service require its introduction. But in all cases where evidence is introduced by the prosecution after a plea of guilty, the accused should of course be afforded an opportunity to offer rebutting evidence, or evidence as to character, should he desire to do so. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1988. See also ibid, par. 1999.

Wherever, in connection with the plea of guilty, a statement or confession, whether verbal or written, is interposed by the accused, both plea and statement should be considered together by the court; and if it is to be gathered from the statement that evidence exists in regard to the alleged offense which will constitute a defense to the charge, or relieve the accused from a measure of culpability, the court will properly call upon the judge-advocate to obtain and introduce such evidence, if practicable. Ibid, par. 1991. See also ibid., par. 1992.

By a plea of "guilty" the accused, if a military person, submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court, admitting that it has jurisdiction over both person and

[a] If a man, being put on his trial, says nothing at all in cases of felony, the court, says Lord Chief Justice Hale, ought, ex officio, to empanel a jury and swear it, as an inquest of office, to inquire whether he stands mute, ex visitatione Dei (of the act of God), or of malice. Adye, 131; Hale Hist. Pl. Cor., 317. Where an accused stands mute ex visitatione Dei,* a court-martial would be authorized to resort to a similar course of procedure; or, the trial could be desisted from until the facts had been represented to the reviewing authority for such action as he might deem proper in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case. Where the accused stands mute through malice, or answers foreign to the purpose, the terms of the article become operative, and the trial proceeds as if a plea of not guilty had been formally entered.†

Where an accused declined to plead on the ground that he was so much under the influence of liquor at the time of the acts charged that he could not remember what occurred, held that the court properly directed a plea of "not guilty" to be entered. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1999.

For the method of executing the judgment of peine forte et dure, see Adye, p. 134, Hale Hist. Pl. Cor., 219. By 33 Henry VIII, those who stood mute, who were notorious felons, were to have "strong and hard imprisonment;" by 12 George III, ch. 20, standing mute through malice was made equivalent to a conviction upon evidence or confession. At present an accused who "refuses to plead, or does not plead intelligibly," is regarded as having pleaded "not guilty." Army act of 1884, p. 603.

[b] The principle that, in cases in which the plea is guilty, the court should take testimony, where necessary to the comprehending of the facts and the doing of justice, though apparently in a measure lost sight of at a later period, was clearly enunciated in early General Orders of the War Department. Thus, in G. O. 23 of 1830, Major-General Macomb (commanding the Army) expresses himself as follows: "In every case in which a prisoner pleads guilty, it is the duty of the court-martial, notwithstanding, to receive and to report in its proceedings such evidence as may afford a full knowledge of the circumstances, it being essential that the facts and particulars should be known to those whose duty it is to report on the case, or who have discretion in carrying the sentence into effect." And see G. O. 21 of 1833 to a similar effect.

offense. In re Davidson, 21 Fed. Rep., 618; in re Zimmerman, 30 ibid., 176; Vanderheyden v. Young, 11 Johns, 160.

Withdrawal of plea.—A court-martial is authorized, in any case, in its discretion, to permit an accused to withdraw a plea of not guilty, and substitute one of guilty, and vice versa, or to withdraw either of these general pleas and substitute a special plea. And wherever the accused applies to be allowed to change or modify his plea, the court should in general consent, provided the application is made in good faith and not for the purpose of delay, and to grant it will not result in unreasonably protracting the investigation. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1994.

Pleas to the jurisdiction.—An objection to the jurisdiction of the court—that is, of its power to try a particular case, as where, for example, the convening officer is the accuser or prosecutor, or is otherwise without power to constitute the court, or where the accused is not amenable to military jurisdiction—will properly be met by a formal plea to the jurisdiction, which must be decided by the court on the evidence submitted by both parties in the trial of the issue set forth in the defendant's plea. (a)

Pleas in abatement.—Objections to the charges or specifications in matters of form should be taken advantage of by special pleas in the nature of pleas in abatement, or, better, by motion to strike out. Such are objections to the specifications as inartificial, indefinite, or redundant; or as misnaming the accused (or other person required to be specified) or misdescribing him as to his rank or office; or as containing insufficient allegations of time or place, etc. In such cases the objection should be raised by a special plea in abatement, or by motion, in order that errors capable of amendment may be amended (b) on the spot by the judge-advocate, and—the plea of not guilty (or guilty) being then made—the trial may proceed in the usual manner. Objections of this class, not thus taken, will properly be considered as waived by the plea of guilty or not guilty, and their existence will not then affect the validity of the proceedings or sentence. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1995.

Where without preliminary objection the accused pleads guilty or not guilty to a specification, in which he is incorrectly named or described, such plea will be regarded as an admission by the accused of his identity with the person thus designated, and he can not thereafter object to the pleadings on account of misnomer or misdescription. Ibid.

A misnaming or misdescription of the rank of the accused in the specification should be taken advantage of by exception in the nature of a plea in abatement. Where not objected to, the error is immaterial after sentence, provided the accused is sufficiently identified by the plea, testimony, etc. It is not essential to state in a specification the full Christian name of the accused, or other party required to be indicated. Only such name or initial need be given as will be sufficient unmistakably to identify the party. Ibid., par. 706.

A failure, at the arraignment, to take notice of a variance between the form of a specification to which the accused is called upon to plead and such specification as it appeared in the copy of the charges served at his arrest is a waiver of the objection, and the same can not be taken advantage of at a subsequent stage of the proceedings. Ibid., par. 732.

Pardons.—The President is empowered, by Art. II, sec. 2, § 1, of the Constitution "to grant pardons for offences against the United States"; and a pardon, like a deed, must, in order to take effect, be delivered to and accepted by the party to whom it is granted (c). Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1866.

Pleading.—For a pardon to be operative as a bar to prosecution, it must be formally pleaded—that is, the original instrument must be produced and submitted to the inspection of the court; this to enable the court to determine whether the offense with which the accused is charged and that named in the pardon are the same. If the pardon be by proclamation, the burden rests upon the accused of showing that his case falls within the terms of the amnesty set forth in the proclamation (U. S. v. Wilson, 7 Peters, 150). Where a conditional pardon is pleaded, the burden rests upon the accused of showing that all the conditions named therein have been ful-

[a] Objections to the charges and specifications on account of matters of substance—as that they do not contain the necessary allegations, or otherwise do not set forth facts constituting military offenses—should properly be made at the outset of the proceedings by a special plea in the nature of a demurrer, or they will in general be regarded as waived.

So, objections going to the legal constitution or composition of the court, or to its jurisdiction, should also properly be specially presented when the accused is first called upon to plead; valid objections of this radical character, however, are not waived if the accused, instead of submitting a special plea, pleads over to the merits, since consent can not make legal that which is illegal, or, in a criminal case, confer jurisdiction where none exists in law.

[b] Courts-martial have no authority to arraign a prisoner upon charges other than those upon which he has been ordered for trial, except what is manifestly a mere clerical error, unless such altered charges receive the sanction of the convening authority. Simmons, 458.

filled or otherwise complied with. Haym v. U. S., 7 Ct. Cls., 443; Waring v. U. S., ibid., 501; Scott v. U. S., 8 ibid., 457; Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1997, 1998. See, also, the title "The Pardoning Power," in the chapter entitled THE EXECUTIVE.

Constructive pardons.—While to restore to or place upon duty an officer or soldier, when under arrest or charges on account of an alleged offense, would not probably in this country, to the same extent as in England (a), be regarded as operating as a condonation of the offense, the promotion of an officer while under arrest on charges, has been viewed as a constructive pardon of the offense or offenses on account of which he has been arrested (b). But held that such a promotion could not operate as a pardon of other offenses committed by him, of the commission of which no knowledge was had by the Executive at the date of the promotion. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1873.

While ordering or authorizing an officer or soldier, when under sentence, to exercise a command or perform any other duty inconsistent with the continued execution of his sentence, has been viewed as a constructive pardon, (c) held that to allow an officer, while under a sentence of suspension from rank, to perform certain slight duties in closing his accounts with the United States could not be regarded as having any such effect. Ibid.

An officer charged with certain offenses in violation of specific articles of war, pleaded as to two specifications that he had been pardoned by his post commander. The pleas in bar, thus submitted by the accused, were sustained by the court, but were disapproved by the reviewing authority (the Secretary of War), upon the ground that the post commander was without authority to grant pardons in cases in which commissioned officers were the offenders. G. C. M. O., No. 13, War Dept., 1871.

Conditional pardons.—It is settled that a pardon may be conditional—may be granted upon a condition precedent or subsequent. (d) Thus, where the President, by his proclamation of March 11, 1865, granted a pardon to all deserters "on condition that" they duly returned (within a certain time stated) to their regiments, etc., and served the remainder of their original terms and, in addition, a period equal to the time lost by desertion—held that a soldier who duly returned under this proclamation, but after remaining with his regiment a portion of the period indicated, abandoned the service and went to his home, was liable (the legal period of limitation fixed by the one hundred and third article of war not having expired) to be brought to trial for his original desertion; the condition subsequent upon which his pardon for the same had been extended not having been performed.

Statutes which operate to trespass upon or diminish the constitutional power of the President to pardon offenses against the United States are strictly construed in their application. Acts of mercy, therefore, which may be appropriate when proceeding from the President, in whom the pardoning power is vested by the Constitution, are otherwise regarded when they originate with a military officer whose power in respect to pardons is measured by the express terms of the statutes which confer it.

Judgments on special pleas.—Where a special plea is set up in behalf of the defendant as a plea to the jurisdiction, or in bar of trial, or in abatement, or a special plea in the nature of a demurrer, and the court, after a trial of the issue outlined in the plea, decides that it has not been sustained, the judgment of the court is required to be that the accused answer over—that is, that he plead the "general issue" of guilty or not guilty.

Statutes of limitation.—A limitation in point of time in military offenses is properly matter of defense to be specially pleaded and proved. By pleading guilty the accused is assumed to waive the right to plead the limitation by a special plea in bar. But under a plea of not guilty the limitation may be taken advantage of by evidence showing that it has taken effect. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 320; in re Bogart, 2 Sawyer, 397; in re White, 17 Fed. Rep., 723; in re Davison, 21 ibid., 18; in re Zimmerman, 30 ibid., 17; and compare U. S. v. Cooke, 17 Wallace, 168.

Facts and circumstances which are properly matters of evidence are not properly legitimate subjects of pleas; as, for example, circumstances going to extenuate the offense. Thus held, that good conduct of the accused in battle subsequent to the commission of the offense charged could not properly be presented in the form of a plea. So held that the fact that the charge was preferred through personal hostility to the accused was not a matter for plea, but, if desired to be taken advantage of, should be offered in evidence. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1996.

Defense at trial.—In order that he may not be embarrassed in making his defense, the accused party on trial before a court-martial should be subjected to no restraint other than such as may be necessary to enforce his presence or prevent disorderly conduct on his part. Except, therefore, in an extreme case, as where, the accused being charged with an aggravated and heinous offense, there is reasonable ground to believe that he will attempt to escape or to commit acts of violence, the keeping or placing of irons upon him while before the court will not be justified. (a) Even in such a case it will be preferable to place ana dequate guard over him. (b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1047.

The fact that the accused is an officer of high rank should not be regarded as constituting a ground for allowing him any special right or privilege in his defense before a court-martial. The administration of justice by a military, as by a civil court, must be strictly impartial, or it ceases to be pure. All persons on trial by the one species of tribunal, as by the other, are deemed to be equal before the law. Ibid., par. 1049.

The judge-advocate should advise the accused, especially when ignorant and unassisted by counsel, of his rights in defense—particularly as to his right, if it exists in the case, to plead the statute of limitations, and of his right to testify in his own behalf. A failure to do so, however, will not affect the legal validity of the proceedings; though if it appear that the accused was actually ignorant of these rights, the omission may be ground for a mitigation of sentence. Ibid., par. 1533.

It is the duty of the court to see that injustice is not done the accused by the admission on the trial of improper testimony prejudicing his defense, or unfairly tending to aggravate the misconduct charged. In the interests of justice, therefore, the court may exclude such testimony, although its admission may not be objected to on the part of the accused. On a similar ground or for the purpose of fully informing itself of the facts, the court may, in its discretion, allow the introduction, by either side, of material testimony after the case has been formally closed. (c) Such a proceeding, however, must be of course exceptional, and a party should not be permitted to offer testimony at this stage unless he exhibits good reason for not having produced it at the usual and proper time.

An accused, prior to arraignment, even if in close arrest, should be allowed to have interviews with such counsel, military or civil, as he may have selected. So, his counsel should be permitted to have interviews with any accessible military person whom it may be proposed to use as a material witness, or whose knowledge of facts may be useful to the accused in preparing for trial. Ibid., par. 986.

ARGUMENTS AND STATEMENTS.

Defense.—In any case tried by court-martial the accused may, if he thinks proper (and whether or not he has taken the stand as a witness), (d) present to the court a statement or address, either verbal or in writing. Such statement is not evidence; (e) as a personal defense or argument, however, it may and properly should be taken into consideration by the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2352.

While the statement is not evidence, and the accused is not in general to be held bound by the argumentative declarations contained in the same, yet, if he clearly and unequivocally admits therein facts material to the prosecution, such may properly be viewed by the court and reviewing officer as practically facts in the case. (f) So, where the accused, in his statement, fully admits that certain facts existed substantially as proved, he may be regarded as waiving objection to any irregularity in the form of the proof of the same. Ibid., par. 2353.

A large freedom of expression in his statement to the court is allowable to an accused, especially in his comments upon the evidence. So, an accused may be permitted to reflect within reasonable limits upon the apparent animus of his accuser or [b] Arraignment means the calling the offender to the bar of the court to answer the matter he is charged with, and in doing which the law directs (and, indeed, common compassion points out to us) that every person ought to be used with all the humanity and gentleness which is consistent with the nature of the thing, and under no terror or uneasiness than what proceeds from a sense of his guilt and the misfortune of his present circumstances, and, therefore, ought not to be brought to the bar in a contumelious manner, though charged with the highest crimes, as with his hands tied together, or any mark of ignominy and reproach, nor even with fetters on his feet, unless there be some danger of an escape or rescue. prosecutor, though a superior officer and of high rank. But an attack upon such a superior, of a personal character and not apposite to the facts of the case, is not legitimate; nor is language of marked disrespect employed toward the court. Matter of this description may indeed be required by the court to be omitted by the accused as a condition to his continuing his address or filing it with the record. Ibid., par. 2354.

Judge-advocate.—It is settled in our military procedure that the closing statement or argument, where addresses are presented on both sides, shall be made on the part of the prosecution. The judge-advocate, however, may, and, in practice, not rarely does, waive the right of offering any argument or remarks in reply to the address of the accused. On the other hand, the accused may waive the right, and the judge-advocate alone present a "statement."[a] Ibid., par. 2355.

In the trial of a commissioned officer in 1872 the judge-advocate proposed to present an argument in behalf of the prosecution, but his request was denied by the court on the ground that no statement or address had been submitted by the accused. In reviewing the case the Secretary of War disapproved the action of the court in this respect on the ground that "the judge-advocate has an undoubted right at the close of the trial to address the court for the purpose of commenting on the whole evidence and the law applicable to it; and this right is in no degree abridged by a waiver of the accused of his like privilege." G. C. M. O. No. 111, War Dept., 1872.

In the case of a commissioned officer tried in 1872 and sentenced to dismissal, the court refused to permit certain witnesses to be summoned at the request of the accused. In disapproving the action of the court in this respect the court was reminded by the reviewing authority that "the least denial to an accused person of any proper facility or opportunity for defense can serve only to defeat the ends of justice and may often lend impunity to guilt." G. C. M. O. No. 21, War Dept., 1872. In the case published in G. C. M. O. No. 24, War Dept., 1872, the exclusion of a single question caused the original reviewing authority (the department commander) to disapprove the finding upon an important specification. "Courts-martial had much better err on the side of liberality toward a prisoner than, by endeavoring to solve nice and technical refinements of the laws of evidence, assume the risk of injuriously denying him a proper latitude for defense." G. C. M. O. No. 32, War Dept., 1872; G. C. M. O. No. 7, War Dept., 1873; G. C. M. O. No. 25, ibid., 1875.

[1] Military witnesses.—The attendance of military witnesses is obtained by the issue of orders or instructions by the post, department, or other proper military commander, upon the request of the judge-advocate made in pursuance of paragraphs 1023 and 1024, Army Regulations of 1901.

An officer or enlisted man who receives a summons to attend as a witness before any military court, board, civil court, or other tribunal competent to issue subpœnas, which is sitting beyond the limits of the department where he is serving, will, before starting to obey the summons, forward it through the proper channel to his department commander, that necessary orders, or authority to obey a civil process, may be given. In urgent cases, or when the public interest would be liable to suffer by delay, a post commander may authorize immediate departure, reporting his action and reasons therefor to the department commander. Par. 1025, Army Regulations of 1901.

[a] The judge-advocate in our practice is entitled to the closing argument or address to the court, and he may present an address although the accused waives his right to present any; the function of the judge-advocate, at this stage of the proceedings, not being confined merely to a replying to the accused. The judge-advocate in his address is not authorized to read to the court evidence or written statements not introduced upon the trial and which the accused has had no opportunity to controvert or comment upon. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1542.

Civilian witnesses.—The ordinary process for obtaining the attendance of a civilian witness is the writ of subpœna. This is a judicial writ commanding the witness to appear in court, on a day therein mentioned, to testify in the particular case named in the writ. In the practice of the Federal courts and that of courts-martial, the command of the writ runs in the name of the President (see the form of subpœna on page 128, Manual for Courts-Martial), and the writ is addressed, not to the officer who serves it, but to the witness himself. For this reason the writ may be served by any person of competent age and discretion. As there is no appropriation, however, which is available for the payment of officers of court, or for the compensation of civilians for the service of subpœnas, they should be served by military persons.

A summons may legally be served either by a military or a civil person, (a) but, for the reason above stated, will in general preferably be served by an officer or noncommissioned officer of the Army. A judge-advocate or a commanding or other officer to whom a summons is sent for service will not be authorized, by employing for the purpose a U. S. marshal or deputy marshal, or other civil official, to commit the United States to the payment of fees to such official. The action, however, of a judge-advocate in employing a deputy marshal to serve a summons, where apparently the service could not otherwise be so effectually or economically made, has in a few cases been so far ratified by the Secretary of War as to allow, out of the appropriation for army contingencies, the payment of a small and reasonable account of charges rendered by such official. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2470.

Service, to be legal or sufficient, must be personal; to constitute such service the original writ of subpœna must be delivered or read to the witness by the person deputed to serve it. Return of service is made by indorsing the fact of service on the back of the duplicate subpœna (for form of such affidavit of service, see p. 129, Manual for Courts-Martial). Service, to be sufficient as the basis for a writ of attachment, must be personal and must be made in the manner above described; to warrant the mere payment of fees, however, service by telegraph or in any other form will ordinarily suffice. See MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.

Except where their testimony will be merely cumulative, and will clearly add nothing whatever to the strength of the defense, the accused is in general entitled to have any and all material witnesses summoned to testify in his behalf. (b) A prompt obedience to a summons is incumbent upon all witnesses, nor is a commanding or superior officer in general authorized to place any obstacles in the way of the prompt attendance, as a witness, of an inferior duly summoned or ordered to attend as such. Where the judge-advocate has declined to summon a witness for the accused, for the reason that he is not "satisfied" (in the words of par. 922 of the Army Regulations) that his testimony is "material and necessary to the ends of justice," the court may, in its discretion, direct him to be summoned. The court, however, will not in general properly sanction the summoning of a witness where it is not probable that his attendance can be secured within a reasonable time and his deposition legally be taken pursuant to the 91st Article of War. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2467.

In military law an accused party can not be deemed to be entitled to have a witness summoned from a distance whose military or administrative duties are of such a character that they can not be left without serious prejudice to the public interests. Article VI of the amendments to the Constitution, declaring that the accused shall be entitled "to be confronted with the witnesses against him," applies only to cases before the United States courts. (c) Thus, where the offense charged is not capital, and a deposition may therefore legally be taken under the 91st Article of War, the Secretary of War will not in general authorize the personal attendance at the place of trial of a witness whose office or duty makes it necessary or most important that he should remain elsewhere. Ibid., par. 2468.

The subpœna duces tecum.—In addition to the ordinary writ of subpœna (ad testificandum) for obtaining the attendance of a civilian witness, the judge-advocate is empowered, in a proper case, to issue writs of subpœna duces tecum. It is the purpose of this writ to secure the production of documents or writings which are in possession of a witness and are deemed, by either party, to be material to his case. This form of subpœna is issued in the same manner and under the same conditions as the subpœna ad testificandum, and contains a clause of requisition in which the writing or document which is desired to be produced shall be particularly described. The operation of this writ does not extend to the production of any objects or things save documents or written instruments.

A subpœna duces tecum can only be used to compel the production of documentary evidence, books, papers, accounts, and the like. In re Shephard, 3 Fed. Rep., 12; 3 Starkie on Evidence, 172; Arny v. Long, 9 East, 473.

Telegraphic messages in the hands of telegraph companies are not privileged communications, so far as the companies are concerned, and their production will be compelled by subpœna duces tecum in aid of an investigation by a grand jury of supposed criminal acts of the senders and receivers of the messages, with which such companies and their officers are in no way connected. In re Storrow, 3 Fed. Rep., 564; Southern Law Review, vol. v (n. s.), 473; ex parte Brown, 72 Mo., 83; U. S. v. Babcock, 3 Dill., 566; U. S. v. Hunter, 15 Fed. Rep., 712; State v. Litchfield, 58 Maine, 267.

In view of the embarrassment which must generally attend the proof, before a court-martial, of the sending or receipt of telegraphic messages by means of a resort, by subpœna duces tecum, to the originals in possession of the telegraph company, (a) advised that the written or printed copy furnished by the company and received by the person to whom it is addressed should in general be admitted in evidence by a court-martial in the absence of circumstances casting a reasonable doubt upon its genuineness or correctness. But where it is necessary to prove that a telegram which was not received, or the receipt of which is denied and not proven, was actually duly sent, the operator or proper official of the company, or other person cognizant of the fact of sending, should be summoned as a witness. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1295.

A court-martial (by subpœna duces tecum, through the judge-advocate) may summon a telegraph operator to appear before it, bringing with him a certain telegraphic dispatch. But it is beyond the power of such court to require such witness against his will to surrender the dispatch, or a copy, to be used in evidence. Ibid., par. 1296.

[1] The authority to issue process to compel civilian witnesses to appear and testify is vested, by section 1202, Revised Statutes, in "every judge-advocate of a court-martial." The present statute, however (unlike the original form), does not extend the authority to recorders of courts of inquiry. Further, the authority, being vested exclusively and independently in the judge-advocate, can not be exercised by the court. The attachment is thus not a writ or process of the court, but simply a compulsory instrumentality placed at the disposition of the judge-advocate as the prosecuting official representing the United States. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2478.

Section 1202, Revised Statutes, authorizes only judge-advocates of courts-martial to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses. The court itself, general or inferior, has no such power. Ibid., par. 1551.

To authorize a resort to an attachment, there must have been a formal summons, duly issued and served upon the witness, and not complied with. Ibid., 2479.

A judge-advocate can not properly direct an attachment to a United States marshal or deputy marshal or other civil official. Some military officer or person should be designated by him, or detailed for the purpose by superior authority. In executing the attachment, the needful force may be employed, but no more. Ibid., par. 2481.

The judge-advocate is authorized only to initiate the process of attachment. The statute does not specify by whom it shall be executed, and the judge-advocate is not authorized to command any officer or person to serve it, nor has the court any such power. Ibid., par. 1551.

Judge-advocates of military posts, in issuing process under section 1202 of the Revised Statutes, to compel the attendance of witnesses, will formally direct the Refusal to appear or testify.

Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 950.

1811. Every person not belonging to the Army of the United States who, being duly subpœnaed to appear as a witness before a general court-martial of the Army, willfully neglects or refuses to appear, or refuses to qualify as a witness or to testify or produce documentary evidence which such person may have been legally subpœnaed to produce, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, for which such person shall be punished on information in the district court of the United States; and it shall be the duty of the United States district attorney, on the certification of the facts to him by the general court-martial, to file an information against and prosecute the person so offending, and the punishment of such person, on conviction, shall be a fine of not more than five hundred dollars or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both, at the discretion of the court: Provided, That this shall not apply to persons residing beyond the State, Territory, or District in which such general court-martial is held, and that the fees of such witness, and his mileage at the rates provided for witnesses in the United States district court for said State, Territory, or District shall be duly paid or tendered said witness, such amounts to be paid by the Pay Department of the Army out of the appropriation for compensation of witnesses: Provided, That no witness shall be compelled to incriminate himself or to answer any question which may tend to incriminate or degrade him.[1] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 950).

same to an officer designated by the department commander to execute it. The nearest military commander will furnish the necessary military force for the execution of the process, if force be required. A subpœna may be served by any person. Par. 1026, Army Regulations of 1901. See also MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, pp. 31–34, 130.

A judge-advocate, having attached a civilian witness and had him brought to the place of the court, detained him one hour in the guardhouse before bringing him before the court. For this he was indicted for false imprisonment in a United States district court in Texas. Held, that his action was warranted under section 1202, Revised Statutes, and advised that the Attorney-General be requested to cause the prosecution to be discontinued. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1552.

The form of the process of attachment should, under the statute conferring authority to issue it, be "like" that employed in the procedure of the criminal courts, or a criminal court, of the State, Territory, or District (of Columbia) in which the court-martial is ordered to sit. Where there is no special form of process for the attachment of witnesses in criminal cases in use in the State, the statute will be sufficiently complied with if the general form of attachment of a witness for contempt for not obeying a summons be substantially followed. For form of attachment, see MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, p. 161.

FEES OF WITNESSES.[1]

Civilians in employ of the Government. Par. 1066, A. R. 1901.

1812. Civilians in the employ of the Government when traveling upon summons as witnesses before military courts are entitled to transportation in kind from their place of residence to the place where the court is in session and return. If no transportation be furnished they are entitled to reimbursement of the cost of travel actually performed by the shortest usually traveled route, including transfers to and from railway stations, at rates not exceeding fifty cents for each transfer, and the cost of a double berth in a sleeping car or steamer when an extra charge is made therefor. They are also entitled to reimbursement of the actual cost of meals and rooms at a rate not exceeding three dollars per day for each day actually and unavoidably consumed in travel or in attendance upon the court under the order or summons. No allowance will be made to them when attendance upon court does not require them to leave their stations. Par. 1066, A. R. 1901.

1813. A civilian not in Government employ duly summoned to appear as a witness before a military court will receive one dollar and fifty cents for each day actually and unavoidably consumed in travel or in attendance upon the court under the summons, and five cents a mile for going from his place of residence to the place of trial or hearing and five cents a mile for returning. Civilian witnesses will be paid by the Pay Department.[2] Par. 1067, ibid.

[1] In view of the provision of section 1248, Revised Statutes, investing retiring boards with such powers of courts-martial as may be necessary to enable them to inquire into and determine the facts touching the disability of officers whose cases are referred to them, held that a retiring board might legally cause material witnesses to be summoned to attend its sessions, and that witnesses so summoned would probably be entitled to the fees of witnesses before courts-martial. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 756, par. 25.

Held that parties who appeared and testified before, and at the instance of, an officer charged with the preliminary investigation of a case, but were not required to attend at a subsequent trial, were not legally entitled to witness fees. Ibid., par. 2477.

The compensation allowed by the Secretary of War for witnesses summoned as experts in handwriting before a court-martial (see Smith v. U. S., 24 Ct. Cls., 209), held payable out of the annual appropriation "for compensation of witnesses attending upon courts-martial and courts of inquiry." Ibid., par. 2483.

Held that duly attending by a civilian witness before a duly authorized official to give a deposition, to be used in evidence on a military trial, was to be regarded as practically equivalent to attending a court-martial, and that the deponent was entitled to be paid the usual allowances (i. e., the same as those of witnesses appearing before the court), out of the regular appropriation for the "compensation of witnesses attending before courts-martial," etc. Ibid., par. 2484.

[2] Neither the appropriation "for the compensation of witnesses" attending military courts, nor the appropriation for the contingent expenses of the Army, is applicable to the payment of allowances, as witnesses before civil courts, of officers or soldiers of the Army, or of civil employees of the military establishment. For such allowances they must look to the laws and appropriations fixing and authorizing the payment of witness fees in these courts. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2486. See paragraph 1070, Army Regulations of 1901.

1814. The charges for return journeys of witnesses will be made upon the basis of the actual charges allowed for travel to the court, and the entire account thus completed will be paid upon discharge from attendance, without waiting for completion of return travel.[1] Par. 1068 ibid.

[1] The items of expenditure authorized in paragraphs 1066 and 1067 (Army Regulations) will be set forth in detail and made a part of each voucher for reimbursement. No other items will be allowed. The correctness of the items will be attested by the affidavit of the witness, to be made when practicable before the judge-advocate, and the voucher will be accompanied by the original summons or a duly certified copy thereof. The certificate of the judge-advocate will be evidence of the fact and period of attendance, and will be made upon the voucher. Par. 1069, A. R. 1901.

[2] Oath.—This article prescribes a single specific form of oath to be taken by all witnesses. The Constitution, however (article 1 of amendments), has provided that Congress shall make no law prohibiting the free exercise of religion. Where, therefore, the prescribed form is not in accordance with the religious tenets of a witness, he should be permitted to be sworn according to the ceremonies of his own faith or as he may deem binding on his conscience.

The article does not prescribe by whom the oath shall be administered. By the custom of the service it is administered by the judge-advocate. (And see, now, the provision of the act of July 27, 1892, sec. 4.) When the judge-advocate himself takes the witness stand, he is properly sworn by the president of the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 274.

A witness who has once been sworn and has testified is not required to be resworn on being subsequently recalled to the stand by either party. The reswearing, however, of such a witness will not affect the legal validity of the proceedings or sentence.

A witness who has given his testimony should in general be allowed to modify the same where he desires to do so in a material particular. But where the court has refused to permit a witness to correct his statement as recorded, such refusal need not induce a disapproval of the proceedings unless it appear that the rights of the accused have thus been prejudiced. Ibid., par. 2472.

Witnesses should not in general be admitted to the court room, but should be kept as far as practicable apart, until required to appear and give their testimony. But that a witness or witnesses may have been permitted to remain in the court room and hear the testimony of witnesses previously called can not affect the legality of the proceedings.

A witness can have no authority to discharge or relieve himself from attendance on the ground that the testimony desired of him is immaterial or for any other reason. In the civil practice such an act would be a grave contempt of court. It is for the court to judge as to the materiality or pertinency of the evidence of witnesses, and unless a witness has been determined by the court to be incompetent or his testimony to be inadmissible, he should remain and stand his examination till informed by the court or judge-advocate that his attendance is no longer required in the case. Ibid., par. 2473. See also, in this connection, MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.

COMPETENCY OF WITNESSES.

The rules governing the competency of witnesses before the criminal courts of the United States and the States are, where apposite, generally (though not always necessarily) followed in the practice of courts-martial. Ibid., par. 2460. See also MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, p. 40.

The law by which, in the opinion of this court, the admissibility of testimony in criminal cases must be determined is the law of the State as it was when the courts of the United States were established by the judiciary act of 1789. The courts of the United States have uniformly acted upon this construction of these acts of Congress, and it has thus been sanctioned by a practice of sixty years. U. S. v. Reid, 12 How., 361, 363, 366; Logan v. U. S., 144 U. S., 263, 301.

A wife is not a competent witness for or against a person accused of crime, on his trial. Comment on her absence by the district attorney held to be reversible error. Graves v. U. S., 150 U. S., 118; U. S. v. Jones, 32 Fed. Rep., 569.

It has been uniformly held that the wife of a person on trial before a court-martial could not properly be admitted as a witness for or against him;(a) and the statute authorizing accused parties to testify does not affect this rule. The wife, however, of an officer or soldier may be admitted to testify in his case before a court of inquiry, the proceeding before such a body not being a trial, but an investigation merely. Where a court-martial refused to admit in evidence (as being incompetent) the testimony of the wife of the prosecuting witness, held that its action was entirely erroneous, no legal objection existing to the competency of such a person. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2462. See also MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.

A wife is not a competent witness to prove a charge of failing to support her, for which her husband is on trial. Ibid., par. 1305.

It is no objection to the competency of a witness that he is the officer upon whom will devolve the duty of reviewing authority when the proceedings are terminated. Ibid., par. 2464.

An insane person is no more competent as a witness before a court-martial than at common law. Testimony admitted of a person shown to be insane should be stricken out on motion made.

A person who is insane at the time is incompetent as a witness. An objection, however, to a witness on account of alleged insanity will not properly be allowed, unless sustained by clear proof, a man being always presumed to be sane till prover to be otherwise. Ibid., par. 2466.

A boy of five is not, as a matter of law, absolutely disqualified as a witness; and in this case the disclosures on the voir dire were sufficient to authorize his admission to testify. Wheeler v. U. S., 159 U. S., 523; Brasier's case, 1 Leach Crim. Law, 199; 1 Greenleaf, sec. 367; 1 Wharton, Evidence, secs. 398–400; 1 Best, secs. 155, 156; State v. Juneau, 88 Wisconsin, 180; Ridenhour v. Kansas City Cable Co., 102 Missouri, 270; McGuff v. State, 88 Alabama, 147; State v. Levy, 230 Minnesota, 104; Commonwealth v. Mullins, 2 Allen (Mass.), 295; Peterson v. State, 47 Georgia, 524; State v. Edwards, 79 North Carolina, 48; State v. Jackson, 9 Oregon, 457; Blackwell v. State, 11 Indiana, 196.

It is no objection to the competency of a witness that his name is not on the list of witnesses appended to the charges when served. The prosecution is not obliged to furnish any list of witnesses, nor, where one is furnished, to confine itself to the witnesses thus specified. The fact that material testimony is given by an unexpected witness may indeed constitute ground for an application by the accused (under article 93) for further time for the preparation of his defense. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2465.

The fact that a party is a public enemy of the United States, or has engaged in giving aid to the enemy, does not affect the competency of his testimony as a witness before a court-martial. Where testifying, however, in time of war, either in favor of a person in the enemy's service or an ally of or sympathizer with the enemy, or against a Federal officer or soldier, his statements (like those of an accomplice) are ordinarily to be received with caution unless corroborated. The fact that a party is under a political disability is not one which goes to his competency if offered as a witness. So the fact that a witness has been convicted of desertion may impair his credibility, but can not affect his competency. Ibid., par. 1297.

Desertion is not a felony and does not render a witness incompetent at common law or before a court-martial. Nor does the loss of citizenship upon conviction of desertion, under sections 1996 and 1998, Revised Statutes, have such effect, the competency of a witness not depending upon his citizenship. A pardon of a person thus convicted would not, therefore, add to his competency. But where it was proposed to introduce such a person as a material witness for the prosecution in an important case, advised that it would be desirable to remit the unexecuted portion of his sentence, if any. Ibid., par. 1298.

Where a conviction (of rape) rested mainly on the testimony of the victim, a child of 8 years of age, held that the competency of the witness was doubtful, and that the trial should have been suspended and the child instructed.(a) Where a court-martial received the testimony of a female child of 3½ years without swearing her, held that it had wholly exceeded its authority, unsworn testimony being entirely incompetent in any case. Ibid., par. 1306.

The president or any member of a court-martial, as also the judge-advocate, may legally give testimony before the court. That the court, at the time of a member's testifying, is composed of but five members will not affect the validity of the proceedings, since in so testifying he does not cease to be a member. It is in general, however, most undesirable that the judge-advocate, and still more that a member, should appear in the capacity of a witness, except perhaps where the evidence to be given relates simply to the good character or record of the accused. (b) Ibid., par. 2463.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Courts-martial, in the absence of any specific statutory rules, are in general governed by the rules of evidence of the common law.

Courts-martial should in general follow, so far as opposite to military cases, the rules of evidence observed by the civil courts, and especially the courts of the United States, in criminal cases. (c) They are not bound, however, by any statute in this particular, and it is thus open to them, in the interests of justice, to apply these rules with more indulgence than the civil courts—to allow, for example, more latitude in the introduction of testimony and in the examination and cross-examination of witnesses than is commonly permitted by the latter tribunals. In such particulars, as persons on trial by courts-martial are ordinarily not versed in legal science or practice, a liberal course should in general be pursued, and an overtechnicality be avoided.(d) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1285.

The law by which the admissibility of testimony in criminal cases in the courts of the United States must be determined is the law of the State, as it was when these courts were established by the judiciary act of 1789. They have uniformly acted upon this construction of the judiciary act of 1789 and the crimes act of 1790, and it has thus been sanctioned by a practice of sixty years. U. S. v. Reid, 12 How., 361, 363, 366; Logan v. U. S., 144 U. S., 263, 300; xvii, Opin. Att. Gen., 310.

How applied.—The rules of evidence should be applied by military courts irrespective of the rank of the person to be affected. Thus a witness for the prosecution, whatever be his rank or office, may always be asked, on cross-examination, whether he has not expressed animosity toward the accused, as well as whether he has not on a previous occasion made a statement contradictory to or materially different from that embraced in his testimony. Such questions are admissible by the established law of evidence, and imply no disrespect to the witness, nor can the witness properly decline to answer them on the ground that it is disrespectful to him thus to attempt to discredit him.(a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1286.

Character.—Evidence of the good character, record, and services of the accused as an officer or soldier is admissible in all military cases without distinction—in cases where the sentence is mandatory as well as those where it is discretionary, upon conviction. For, where such evidence can not avail to affect the measure of punishment, it may yet from the basis of a recommendation by the members of the court, or induce favorable action by the reviewing officer whose approval is necessary to the execution of the sentence. Where such evidence is introduced, the prosecution may offer counter testimony, but it is an established rule of evidence that the prosecution can not attack the character of the accused till the latter has introduced evidence to sustain it, and has thus put it in issue. Ibid., par. 1288.

It is in general competent, on trials by court-martial, for the accused to put in evidence any facts going to extenuate the offense and reduce the punishment, as the fact that he has been held in arrest or confinement an unusual period before trial, the fact that he has already been subjected to punishment or special discipline on account of his offense, the fact that his act was in a measure sanctioned by the act or practice of superior authority, etc. Ibid., par. 1301.

On the trial of a person accused of the commission of crime, he may, without offering himself as a witness, call witnesses to show that his character was such as to make it unlikely that he would be guilty of the crime charged, and such evidence is proper for the consideration of the jury in determining whether there is reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. Y., 6; People v. Grabutt, 17 Mich., 29; Wharton, Crim. Law, Vol. I, §636.

Leading questions.—In commencing the examination of a witness it is a leading of the witness, and objectionable, to read to him the charge and specification or specifications, since he is thus instructed as to the particulars in regard to which he is to testify and which he is expected to substantiate.(b) So to read or state to him in substance the charge and ask him "what he knows about it," or in terms to that effect, is loose and objectionable as encouraging irrelevant and hearsay testimony. The witness should simply be asked to state what was said and done on the occasion, etc. A witness should properly also be examined on specific interrogatories and not be called upon to make a general statement in answer to a single general question.(c).

Burden of proof.—In criminal cases the burden of establishing guilt rests on the prosecution from the beginning to the end of the trial; but when a prima facie case has been made out, the necessity of adducing evidence then devolves on the accused. Agnew v. U. S., 165 U. S., 36; Coffin v. U. S., 156 U. S., 664.

Opinion.—Upon a trial where the offense is drunkenness or drunken conduct, charged under article 62, or drunkenness on duty, charged under article 38, it is not essential to confine the testimony to a description of the conduct and demeanor of the accused, but it is admissible to ask a witness directly if the accused "was drunk," or for a witness to state that the accused "was drunk," on the occasion or under the circumstances charged. Such a statement is not viewed by the authorities as of the class of expressions of opinion which are properly ruled out on objection unless given by experts, but as a mere statement of a matter of observation palpable to persons in general, and so proper to be given by any witness as a fact in his knowledge.(d) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1289.

A statement to the effect that a person was intoxicated is not admissible in evidence as being an expression of an opinion. Whether a person is drunk or sober is "a fact patent to the observation of all, requiring no scientific knowledge."(e) Ibid., par. 1290.

Every question is admissible of a military man, where it is founded on local knowledge, or circumstances which are not within the reach of all the members of the court; but where it is merely a question of military science, to affect the officer who is undergoing his trial, it is obvious that the court is met for no other purpose but to try that, and that they may have before them the facts in evidence on which they are to ground their conclusions. Case of Colonel Quentin, Simmons, 387. In cases affecting the conduct of the accused, either as to deportment or language, it is not only proper, but often necessary, to require a witness to declare his opinion, because such opinion may be derived from the impression of a combination of circumstances occurring at the time referred to, difficult, if not impossible, fully to impart to the court; but it would be manifestly improper to draw the attention of a witness to facts, either derived from his own testimony or that of another witness, and to ask his opinion as to their accordance with military discipline or usage, because the court, being in possession of the facts, are the only proper judges of their tendency. Simmons, 386.

Experts.—An officer of the Quartermaster Department was admitted by a court-martial to testify as an "expert" in regard to the proper performance of his duties by a chief quartermaster of a military department. Held that such testimony was inadmissible and should have been ruled out, the subject being one regulated by law and orders, and the witness being in no proper sense an expert. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 400, par. 36.

Refreshing memory.—Where a witness for the prosecution was permitted by a court-martial to temporarily suspend his testimony and leave the court room for the purpose of refreshing his memory as to certain dates, held that such action was irregular and the further testimony of the witness as to such dates inadmissible. By the course pursued the court and accused were prevented from knowing by what means the memory of the witness had been refreshed—whether, for instance, it may not have been refreshed by oral statements of some person or persons. Ibid., par. 1304.

Confessions.—A confession is competent evidence when free and voluntary; otherwise where made through the influence of hope and fear. (b) So where an officer admitted to a superior, in writing, the commission of a military offense and promised not to repeat the same, under the well-founded hope and belief that a charge which had been preferred against him therefor would be withdrawn, held that, in case he were actually brought to trial upon such charge, the admission thus made would not properly be received in evidence against his objection. Confessions made by private soldiers to officers or noncommissioned officers, though not shown to have been made under the influence of promise or threat, should yet, in view of the military relations of the parties, be received with caution. (c) Mere silence on the part of an accused, when questioned as to his supposed offense, is not to be treated as a confession. (d) Ibid., par. 1299.

The true test of the admissibility in evidence of the confession of a person on trial for the commission of a crime is that it was made freely, voluntarily, and without compulsion or inducement, and this rule applies to preliminary examinations before a magistrate of persons accused of crime. Low v. Mitchell, 18 Me., 372; Tillson v. Bowley, 8 Greenl., 163.

Where an accused party waives his constitutional privilege of silence and takes the stand in his own behalf and makes his own statement, the prosecution has a right to cross-examine him upon such statement with the same latitude as would be exercised in the case of an ordinary witness as to the circumstances connecting him with the alleged crime. Fitzpatrick v. U. S., 178 U. S., 304.

Where a witness has voluntarily answered as to material criminating facts, it is held with uniformity that he can not then stop short and refuse further explanation, but must disclose fully what he has attempted to relate. This view is adopted by the text-writers, and is very well explained in several of the authorities, where the principle is laid down and enforced. 1 Starkie Evid. (9th Am. ed.); Roscoe's Crim. The testimony of an accused party is competent only when presented as authorized by the act of March 16, 1878, viz, when the party himself requests to be admitted to testify. But such testimony is not excepted from the ordinary rules governing the admissibility of evidence, nor from the application of the usual tests of cross-examination, rebuttal, etc. (Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1300.) See, also, MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.

It was heretofore an established rule that accused parties could not legally testify as witnesses before military courts. (a) But now, by the act of March 16, 1878, it is expressly provided that at trials, not only before the courts of the United States, but before courts-martial and courts of inquiry, "the person charged shall, at his own request, but not otherwise, be a competent witness." It is added: "And his failure to make such request shall not create any presumption against him." But parties testifying under this act have no exceptional status or privileges; they must take the stand and be subject to cross-examination like other witnesses. The submission by the accused of a sworn written statement is not a legitimate exercise of the authority to testify conferred by the statute, and such a statement should not be admitted in evidence by the court. (b)

CRIMINATING QUESTIONS.

The privilege, recognized by the common law, of a witness to refuse to respond to a question the answer to which may criminate him, is a personal one, which the witness may exercise or waive, as he may see fit. It is not for the judge-advocate or accused to object to the question or to check the witness, or the court to exclude the question or direct the witness not to answer. Where, however, he is ignorant of his right, the court may properly advise him of the same. But where a witness declines to answer a question on the ground that it is of such a character that the answer thereto may criminate him, but the court decides that the question is not one of this nature and that it must be answered, the witness can not properly further refuse to respond, and, if he does so, will render himself liable to charges and trial under article 62. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2474.

It is not sufficient to excuse the witness from testifying that he may, in his own mind, think his answer to the question might, by possibility, lead to a criminal charge against him, or tend to convict him of it if made. The court must be able to perceive that there is reasonable ground to apprehend danger to the witness from his being compelled to answer. U. S. v. McCarty, 18 F. R., 87.

Upon a trial of a cadet of the Military Academy, the court (against the objection of the accused) required another cadet, introduced as a witness for the prosecution, to testify as to facts which would tend to criminate him. Held, that such action was erroneous, the not answering in such cases being a privilege of the witness only, who (whether or not objection were made) could refuse to testify, and who, if ignorant of his rights, should be instructed therein by the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1308.

Section 860, Revised Statutes.—In the case of Tucker v. United States (151 U. S., 164, 168) the Supreme Court of the United States has placed an interpretation upon certain clauses of section 860, Revised Statutes. That section contains the requirement that "no pleading of a party, nor any discovery or evidence obtained from a party or witness by means of a judicial proceeding in this or any foreign country, shall be given in evidence or in any manner used against him or his property or estate, in any court of the United States, in any criminal proceeding, or for the enforcement of any penalty or forfeiture: Provided, That this section shall not exempt any party or witness from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in discovering or testifying as aforesaid." In its decision the court held that "pleadings of parties" are the allegations made by the parties to a civil or criminal case for the purpose of definitely presenting the issue to be tried and determined between them. "Discovery or evidence obtained from a witness by means of a judicial proceeding" includes only facts or papers which the party or witness is compelled by subpœna, interrogatory, or other judicial process to disclose, whether he will or no, and is inapplicable to testimony voluntarily given or to documents voluntarily produced. The clause as to discovery or evidence is conceived in the same spirit as the fifth amendment of the Constitution, declaring that "no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself;" and as the act of March 16, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 30), enacted that a defendant in any criminal case may be a witness at his own request, but not otherwise, and that his failure to make such request shall not create any presumption against him. Tucker v. U. S., 151 U. S., 164, 168; Boyd v. U. S., 116 U. S., 616; Wilson v. U. S., 149 U. S., 60; Lees v. U. S., 150 U. S., 476. No statute which (like section 860, R. S.) leaves the party or witness subject to prosecution, after he answers the criminating question put to him, can have the effect of supplanting the privilege conferred by the Constitution. Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S., 547.

The immediate object of the legislation of February 25, 1868, from which section 860, R. S., is taken, was to protect against certain forfeitures agents of the Confederate States whose testimony in regard to assets of the Confederacy it was desired to obtain abroad. Congressional Globe, 2d sess., 40th Cong., part 2, p. 1334.

A witness can not avoid answering any question by the mere statement that the answer would tend to incriminate him, without regard to whether the statement is reasonable or not. On the contrary, it is for the judge before whom the question arises to decide whether an answer thereto may reasonably have a tendency to criminate the witness, or to furnish proof of an element or link in the chain of evidence necessary to convict him of a crime. Ex parte Irvine, 74 Fed. Rep., 954; ex parte Wagner, ibid. "To entitle a party called as a witness to the privilege of silence, the court must see, from the circumstances of the case and the nature of the evidence which the witness is called upon to give, that there is reasonable ground to apprehend danger to the witness from his being compelled to answer," but that "if the fact of the witness being in danger be once made to appear, great latitude should be allowed to him in judging for himself of the effect of any particular question, there being no doubt * * * that a question which might appear at first sight a very innocent one might, by affording a link in the chain of evidence, become the means of bringing home an offense of the party answering." Ex parte Reynolds, 20 Chancery Div., 294; Regina v. Boyes, 1 Best and S. 329; People v. Mather, 4 Wendell, 229; Wharton, Crim. Evid., sec. 469, note 1.

On the trial of a cadet at the Military Academy, a witness declined to answer certain questions upon the ground that the answers might criminate him. Upon being directed by the court to answer the questions to which the above objection had been made, the witness (a cadet) persisted in his refusal. For this charges were preferred and the cadet was brought to trial, found guilty, and sentenced to dismissal. The Secretary of War in reviewing the case remarked that "it was the province of the court to determine, under all the circumstances of the case, whether the accused should answer the questions propounded to him as a witness. He should have submitted to that decision." G. C. M. O., No. 23, War Dept., 1873.

[1] Public documents.—The muster rolls on file in the War Department are official records, and copies of the same, duly certified, are primary evidence of the facts originally entered therein and not compiled from other sources, (a) subject, of course, to be rebutted by evidence that they are mistaken or incorrect. So, though such rolls are evidence that the soldier was duly enlisted or mustered into the service, and is therefore duly held as a soldier, they may be rebutted in this respect by proof of fraud or illegality in the enlistment or muster (on the part of the representative of the United States or otherwise), properly invalidating the proceeding and entitling the soldier to a discharge. (But that the entries in such rolls are not proof of the commission of an offense, as desertion; for example, see Desertion.) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1293.

General orders issued from the War Department or Headquarters of the Army may ordinarily be proved by printed official copies in the usual form. The court will, in general, properly take judical notice of the printed order as genuine and correct. A court-martial, however, should not, in general, accept in evidence, if objected to, a printed or written special order (which has not been made public to the Army) without some proof of its genuineness and official character. (b) Ibid., par. 1294; see also par. 1312.

The "enlistment paper," the "physical examination paper," and the "outline card" are original writings made by officers in the performance of duty and competent evidence of the facts recited therein. Copies, authenticated under the seal of the War Department, according to section 882, Revised Statutes, are equally admissible with the originals. Ibid., par. 1310.

A descriptive list is but secondary evidence and not admissible to prove the facts recited therein. It is not a record of original entries, made by an officer under a duty imposed upon him by law or the custom of the service, but is simply a compilation of facts taken from other records. Ibid., par. 1314.

The morning report book is an original writing. To properly admit extracts in evidence, the book should be first identified by the proper custodian, and the extracts then not merely read to the court by the witness, but copied, and the copies, properly verified, attached as exhibits to the record of the court. Ibid. par. 1313.

[a] But note in this connection the ruling of the supreme court of Massachusetts in the case of Hanson v. S. Scituate, 115 Mass., 336, that an official certificate from the Adjutant-General's Office to the effect that certain facts appeared of record in that office, but which did not purport to be a transcript from the record itself, and was therefore simply a personal statement, was not competent evidence of such facts.

It has been held by the United States Supreme Court in a recent case, Evanston v. Gunn, 9 Otto, 660, that the record made by a member of the United States Signal Corps of the state of the weather and the direction and velocity of the wind on a certain day was competent evidence of the facts reported, as being in the nature of an official record kept by a public officer in the discharge of a public duty.

1820. When suit is brought in any case of delinquency of a revenue officer, or other person accountable for public money, a transcript from the books and proceedings of the Treasury Department, certified by the Secretary or an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and authenticated under the seal of the Department, or, when the suit involves the accounts of the War or Navy Departments, certified by the Auditors respectively charged with the examination of those accounts, and authenticated under the seal of the Treasury Department, shall be admitted as evidence, and the court trying the cause shall be authorized to grant judgment and award execution accordingly. And all copies of bonds, contracts, or other papers relating to, or connected with, the settlement of any account between the United States and an individual, when certified by such auditor to be true copies of the originals on file, and authenticated under the seal of the Department, may be annexed to such transcripts, and shall have equal validity, and be entitled to the same degree of credit which would be due to the original papers if produced and authenticated in court: Provided, That where suit is brought upon a bond or other sealed instrument, and the defendant pleads "non est factum," or makes his motion to the court, verifying such plea or motion by his oath, the court may take the same into consideration, and, if it appears to be necessary for the attainment of justice, may require the production of the original bond, contract, or other paper specified in such affidavit.[1] *Sec. 17, act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. [1] Except by the consent of the opposite party, the testimony contained in the record of a previous trial of the same or a similar case can not properly be received in evidence on a trial by court-martial; nor can the record of a board of investigation ordered in the same case be—otherwise—so admitted. In all cases (other than that provided for by the one hundred and twenty-first article of war) testimony given upon a previous hearing, if desired to be introduced in evidence upon a trial, must (unless it be otherwise specially stipulated between the parties) be offered de novo and as original matter. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1291.

At the trial, in 1894, of an officer charged with a disorder and breach of discipline which involved the killing by him of another officer, there was offered in evidence, on the part of the accused, to exhibit the character and disposition of the officer killed, a copy of a general court-martial order of 1872, setting forth certain charges alleging dishonest and unbecoming conduct upon which the latter officer was then tried and convicted, and the findings of the court thereon. Held, that such evidence was wholly inadmissible for the purpose designed. Ibid., par. 1317.

Private documents.—To the admission in evidence of a letter written and signed by the accused (of which the introduction is contested) proof of his handwriting is necessary. Evidence of handwriting by comparison is not admissible at common law except where the standard of comparison is an acknowledged or proved genuine writing already in evidence in the case. A writing not in evidence and simply offered to be used as a standard is not admissible. Ibid., par. 1316.

Strictly speaking, a press copy is secondary to the original document from which it is taken. Such a copy is receivable in evidence on proof of the loss of the original. At the best, however, it continues secondary; hence it has been held that a copy can be produced from a press copy of a lost writing without producing the principal copy. Photographs and other reproductions are secondary. 1 Wharton Ev., sec. 93.

DEPOSITIONS.

Depositions. 91 Art of War.

1828. The deposition[1] of witnesses residing beyond the limits of the State, Territory, or district in which any military court may be ordered to sit, if taken on reasonable notice to the opposite party and duly authenticated,[2]

[1] Procedure.—The party, prosecutor or defendant, desiring the deposition, submits to the court a list of interrogatories to be propounded to the absent witness; the opposite party then prepares and submits a list of cross-interrogatories, a reasonable time being allowed for this purpose; redirect and recross-interrogatories are added, if desired; finally the court, having assented to the interrogatories thus submitted, adds such as in its judgment may be necessary to elucidate the whole of the witness's testimony.

The interrogatories having been accepted by the court, the judge-advocate will prepare duplicate subpœnas requiring the witness to appear in person, at a time and place to be fixed by the officer, military or civil, who is to take the deposition. If the name of this officer is not known, the space for it will be left blank.(a)

The judge-advocate will then send the interrogatories and subpœnas to the convening authority, with a request that the deposition be secured.

Depositions may also be taken before the assembling of the court-martial, on interrogatories and cross-interrogatories or reasonable notice, subject to exceptions when read in court.

Judge-advocates of departments and of courts-martial, and the trial officers of summary courts, are authorized to administer oaths and take depesitions. If none of these officers are available, any other army officer may be designated to see that the deposition is properly taken; (b) but the oath in such a case must be administered and the deposition authenticated by a civil officer empowered by law to administer oaths for general purposes.

Upon the return of the interrogatories and deposition they will be submitted to the court by the president or judge-advocate. The papers will then be properly marked, appended to the record, and referred to in the proceedings, where all action upon the subject necessary for the information of the reviewing authority will be recorded.

Upon the receipt of the deposition, the judge-advocate will also prepare and sign the ordinary "accounts for a civilian witness," substituting for the usual statement in regard to attendance before the court a statement that he duly attended as a witness at a certain time and place and duly gave his deposition before a certain official named, and then transmit them to the witness with duplicate copies of the order convening the court. The period of attendance can be ascertained from the deposition. Manual for Courts-Martial, pp. 37 and 38.

[2] The article, in specifying that the deposition, to be admissible in evidence, shall be "duly authenticated," makes it essential that the same shall be sworn to before—i. e., taken under an oath administered by—an official competent to administer oaths for such purpose. A deposition should now be sworn to before one of the military officers specified in section 4 of the act of July 27, 1892, or if such an officer be not accessible, by a civil official competent to administer oaths in general. An official empowered to administer oaths only for a certain special purpose or purposes can not legally qualify a witness whose deposition is sought to be taken under this article.

A deposition, introduced by either party, which is not "duly authenticated," should not be admitted in evidence by the court, although the other party may not object. A deposition held irregular and inadmissible where it failed to show that the officer by whom it was taken was authorized to take it, or that he was qualified to administer the oath to the witness. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 263.

A court-martial has no power to qualify or authorize a commanding officer, or any other officer or person, to take a deposition or administer an oath. Ibid., par. 265.

[a] The judge-advocate, in forwarding the interrogatories for a deposition, should transmit with them a subpœna (in duplicate) requiring the witness to appear at a stated place and date before a certain person who is to take the deposition. Particulars not ascertained may be left blank, to be supplied by the officer or person by whom the subpœna is served. When the deposition has been duly taken and returned, the judge-advocate should transmit to the witness (or to some officer, etc., for him) the usual certificate of attendance (accompanied by a copy of the convening order), the duration of the attendance to be ascertained from the deposition. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1553.

[b] The officer detailed to have a deposition taken, i. e., to see to its being taken, should, before serving the subpœna, complete it, if necessary, by inserting the name and official designation of the notary (or other official having authority to administer the oath) before whom it is to be taken, and the date on which and the place where it is proposed to take it. And when the deposition has been duly taken, he should certify it as so taken, and transmit it in a sealed package to the president of the court. Ibid., par. 269.

may be read in evidence[1] before such court in cases not capital.[2] Ninety-first Article of War.

[1] This article, in any case within its terms and in which its conditions are complied with, entitles either party to have depositions taken and "read in evidence." The court alone has no power to decide that a deposition, where legal and material, shall not be taken. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 262.

Where the judge-advocate offered in evidence, on the part of the prosecution, a deposition which proved to have been given by a person other than the one to whom the interrogatories were addressed, and the accused objected to its introduction, but the objection was overruled by the court, held error; the fact that the intended deponent was but the agent, in the transaction inquired about, of the person who actually furnished the deposition not being sufficient to make such deposition admissible except by consent of parties. (a) Ibid., par. 261.

The party at whose instance a deposition has been taken can not be admitted, against the objection of the other party, to introduce only such parts of the deposition as are favorable to him or as he may elect to use; he must offer the deposition in evidence as a whole or not offer it at all. Ibid., par. 258.

If the party at whose instance a deposition has been taken decides not to put it in, it may be read in evidence by the other party. One party can not withhold a deposition (duly taken and admissible under this article) against the consent of the other. Ibid., par. 259.

[2] A deposition can not be read in evidence in a capital case, as in a case of a violation of article 21, or a case of a spy, or one of desertion in time of war; otherwise in a case of desertion in time of peace. Nor is the deposition admissible of a witness who resides in the State, etc., within which the court is held, except by consent. Ibid., par. 256.

A deposition duly taken, under the article, on the part of the prosecution, is not subject to objection by the accused and can not be rejected by the court merely upon the ground that it is declared in the sixth amendment to the Constitution that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right * * * to be confronted with the witnesses against him." This constitutional provision has no application to courts-martial; the "criminal prosecutions" referred to are prosecutions in the United States civil courts. Ibid., par. 272.

A deposition is not in general satisfactory evidence for purposes of personal identification by description, and should not be resorted to for the identification of an accused where reliable oral testimony can be obtained. Ibid., par. 266.

The depositions of civilian witnesses, while their taking generally involves less expense than would the personal attendance of the parties, are usually quite sufficient as testimony, except when the purpose of the evidence is to personally identify the accused before the court. Ibid., par. 267.

Civilian witnesses who duly give their depositions under this article are entitled to the same fees and allowances as are witnesses who duly attend the court in person. (See Circular No. 9 (H. Q. A.) 1883.) The voucher, to enable such a witness to obtain his dues, should simply set forth the facts as to his service, substituting, for the usual statement in regard to attendance before the court, a statement that he duly attended as a witness at a certain time and place, and duly gave his deposition before a certain official named. Ibid., par. 270.

Held that duly attending by a civilian witness before a duly authorized official to give a deposition to be used in evidence on a military trial was to be regarded as practically equivalent to attending a court-martial, and that the deponent was entitled to be paid the usual allowances (i. e., the same as those of witnesses appearing before the court) out of the regular appropriation for the "compensation of witnesses attending before courts-martial." Ibid., par. 2484.

The so-called depositions ("affidavits or depositions") referred to in paragraph 683, Army Regulations, are entirely distinct from the depositions provided for in article 91, being merely sworn ex parte statements used for the purpose of settling questions of "property accountability." The regulation has no application whatever to depositions proper of the class authorized by this article. (b)

[b] In the case of Private Harnett, tried for desertion in 1873 and convicted, the proceedings were disapproved in part on account of the admission by the court of an ex parte affidavit in support of the case for the prosecution. As the facts which it was proposed to prove by the affidavit had been admitted by the accused, and as no injury resulted to the accused by the error of the court, the findings and sentence were approved. General Court-Martial Orders, No. 33, War Dept., 1873.

THE FINDING.

Order of voting. 95 Art. of War. 1829. Members of a court-martial, in giving their votes, shall begin with the youngest in commission.[1] Ninety-fifth Article of War.

[1] The term "youngest in commission" as used in this article has been uniformly interpreted to mean "junior in rank," and votes are therefore cast in the inverse order of rank, the member junior in rank casting the first vote.

A tie vote upon any proposition submitted to the court is equivalent to a vote in the negative—a majority vote being necessary to a determination in the affirmative—and the proposition is not approved. Where the vote is a tie upon an objection to testimony, the objection is not sustained. Where it is tied upon a certain proposed finding or form of sentence, the same is not adopted.

THE FINDING.

There should be a separate and independent finding upon each charge and specification, and each separate finding should cover the charge or specification as to which it is made; so that if any charge or specification is deemed by the court to be proved only in part, the finding shall show specifically what is found to be proved and what not. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1354.

The finding of the court should be governed by the evidence considered in connection with the plea. Where no evidence is introduced, the general rule is that the finding should conform to the plea. Ibid., par. 1352.

The finding on the charge should be supported by the finding on the specification (or specifications), and the two findings should be consistent with each other. A finding of guilty on the charge would be quite inconsistent with a finding of not guilty, or guilty without attaching criminality, on the specification, So a finding of guilty upon a well-pleaded specification, apposite to the charge, followed by a finding of not guilty either of the offense charged or some lesser offense included in it, would be an incongruous verdict. No matter how many specifications there may be, it requires a finding, of guilty or not guilty, on but one specification (apposite to the charge) to support a similar finding upon the charge. Ibid., par. 1353.

It is not competent for a court-martial to find an accused not guilty of the specification, and yet guilty of the charge, where there is but one specification. By finding him not guilty of the specification, they acquit him of all that goes to constitute the offense described in the charge. Where the court believe that the accused is guilty of the charge, but not precisely as laid in the specification, they should find him guilty of the latter, but with such exceptions or substitutions as may be necessary to present the facts as proved on the trial, and then guilty of the charge. Ibid., par. 1356.

In finding guilty upon a specification—to except from such finding the word or words which express the gravamen of the act as charged and found, is contradictory and irregular. As—from a finding of guilty on a specification to a charge of fraud under Art. 60, to specially except the word "fraudulent" or "fraudulently," while at the same time finding the accused guilty generally upon the charge. Ibid., par. 1358.

Where, upon the finding, the vote on a charge or specification is tied, the accused is, in law, found not guilty thereon; a majority vote being necessary to any conviction. A statement in the record to the effect that the vote upon a specification, etc., was a tie, and that the accused was therefore acquitted, is of course irregular and improper.[a] Ibid., par. 1364.

Exceptions and substitutions.—It is a peculiarity of the finding at military law that a court-martial, where of opinion that any portion of the allegations in a specification is not proved, is authorized to find the accused guilty of a part of a specification only, excepting the remainder; or, in finding him guilty of the whole (or any part), to substitute correct words or allegations in the place of such as are shown by the evidence to have been inserted through error. And provided the exceptions or substitutions

As the affirmative of any proposition can be adopted by a court-martial only by a majority vote, and as all tie votes on the findings inure to the benefit of the accused, a finding of acquittal thereon should have been recorded. leave the specification still appropriate to the charge and legally sufficient thereunder, the court may then properly find the accused guilty of the charge in the usual manner. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1355.

Familiar instances of the exercise of the authority to except and substitute in a finding of guilty occur in cases where, in the specification, the name or rank of the accused, or some other person, is erroneously designated, or there is an erroneous averment of time or place, or a mistaken date, or an incorrect statement as to amount, quantity, quality, or other particular, of funds or other property, etc. Ibid., par. 1357.

In a case where a court-martial made such exceptions and substitutions in its finding upon the specification to a charge of "Forgery to the prejudice of good order and military discipline" as to negative the material allegation of false writing and leave no legal basis for the finding arrived at of guilty of the charge—advised that the findings be disapproved as incongruous and insufficient to sustain the sentence. Ibid., par. 1366.

Finding of a minor included offense.—The practice of making exceptions and substitutions in the findings is well illustrated by the finding—authorized at military law when called for by the evidence(a)—of a lesser kindred offense included as a constituent element in the specific offense charged.(b) Of this form of verdict the most familiar instance is the finding of guilty of absence without leave under a charge of desertion. A full acquittal of desertion includes, of course, an absence without leave involved in it; but where the evidence falls short of establishing a desertion, but shows an unauthorized absenting of himself by the accused, he may and should be convicted of absence without leave as his actual offence. In arriving at this conclusion, the findings on the specification and charge should be consistent, and the finding on the former should be such as to support the latter. In their finding of guilty upon the specification, the court should in terms except from its application such words of the specification as allege or describe desertion exclusively, and substitute words describing the lesser offense; the words "did desert," for example, being excepted, and the words "did absent himself without authority" being substituted. The finding on the charge should regularly be "not guilty, but guilty of absence without leave."(c) Ibid., par. 1359.

But the authority to find guilty of a minor included offense, or otherwise to make exceptions or substitutions in the finding, can not justify the conviction of the accused of an offense entirely separate and distinct in its nature from that charged. Thus held that it was not a finding of a lesser included offense to find the accused guilty merely of absence without leave under a charge of a violation of the forty-second Article of War in abandoning his post before the enemy. And so held of a finding, under a charge of a violation of article 39, of not guilty but guilty of a violation of article 40. So, where a soldier charged with "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," in concealing the fact that a fellow soldier had appropriated to his own use certain public property, was found not guilty of the specification as laid, but guilty of "having stolen the property himself," and guilty of the charge, and was accordingly sentenced to imprisonment—held that such a finding was manifestly unauthorized. Having been found not guilty of the offense set forth in the specification, and which alone he was called upon to answer, he should have been acquitted on both charge and specification; the offense of which he was found guilty was not alleged against him, and not being included in that charged, could not properly form the subject of a finding. The remission of his sentence therefore recommended. Ibid., par. 1360.

It is a further peculiarity of the finding at military law that, where an accused is charged with "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," or with any specific offense made punishable by the Articles of War, and the court is of opinion that while the material allegations in the specification or specifications are substantially made out, they do not fully sustain the charge as laid, but do clearly establish the commission of a neglect of military duty or a disorder in breach of military discipline, as involved in the acts alleged, the accused may properly be found guilty of the specification (or specifications), and not guilty of the charge, but guilty of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline." Such a form of finding is now common in our practice (especially where the charge is laid under article 61), and its legality is no longer questioned. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1361.

The authority thus to find, however, has not been extended beyond the case indicated in the last paragraph; the reverse, for example, of this form of finding has never been sanctioned. A finding of guilty of a certain specific offense, under a charge of another specific offense, or under a charge of "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," or of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," would be wholly irregular and invalid. Thus a finding of guilty of disobedience of orders (or of a violation of article 21), under a charge of mutiny in violation of article 22, or a finding of drunkenness on duty (or of a violation of article 38), under a charge for a drunken disorder laid under article 62 or 61, would be not only unauthorized, but now almost unprecedented, and, if such a finding were made, it could scarcely fail to be formally disapproved. And so of a finding of "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman" under a charge of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline." Ibid., par. 1362.

The general finding of "conduct to the prejudice," etc., in the cases above indicated is sanctioned in order to prevent a failure of justice, not for the purpose of relieving the accused of any of his due share of culpability. It should not therefore be resorted to where the specific offense charged is substantially made out by the testimony. Thus in a case where the facts set forth in the specification to a charge of "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," and clearly established by the evidence, fixed unmistakably upon the accused dishonorable behavior compromising him officially and socially—held that a finding by the court that he was guilty only of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline" should not be accepted, but that the court should be reconvened for the purpose of inducing, if practicable, a finding in accordance with the facts and with justice. Ibid., par. 1363.

It is an important part of the judgment of the court, in a case where the evidence is conflicting, to determine the measure of the credibility to be attached to the several witnesses. In its finding, therefore, the court may, in connection with the testimony, properly take into consideration the appearance and deportment of the witnesses on the stand and their manner of testifying, especially when under cross-examination. Ibid., par. 1365.

[1] All deliberation of the court takes place with closed doors. At other times, except as to those persons who have been summoned as witnesses, a court-martial is open to the public, military or otherwise, subject to the capacity of the room or tent in which it is held, and the convenience of the court and parties before it. The president orders the clearing of the court for deliberation, or any incidental discussion when he may deem it expedient, or at the instance of a member; where it is more convenient to do so the court withdraws for deliberation. In every case, however, in which the court is cleared for any purpose whatever, the judge-advocate, under the operation of the above statute, together with the accused and his counsel, the interpreters, reporters, witnesses, and spectators withdraw, leaving in the court only the officers designated to compose it. Simmons, 454.

[2] Procedure.—The best approved practice of military courts in determining upon their sentences is believed to be as follows: For each member to write a sentence and deposit it with the judge-advocate; and, no sentence having been adopted by a majority of votes, for the court, after all the sentences have been read to it, to proceed to vote upon them in the order of their severity, beginning with the least severe, until some one of those proposed is agreed upon by a majority of votes. It is not essential, indeed, that this form of voting should be pursued—it being open to the court, in its discretion, to adopt a different one. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2308.

That, upon a conviction by a majority vote of the court, all the members of the court, those who voted for an acquittal equally with those who voted for conviction, must vote for some sentence—though formerly doubted—has long been established as a principle in our military law. While a member who voted for an acquittal can not of course be compelled to vote a punishment, yet his persistent refusal to do so would be a neglect of duty, rendering him amenable to a charge under article 62. Ibid., par. 2309.

A sentence, to be valid, must of course rest upon an approved finding of guilty of an offence for which the accused has been tried. Thus a duly approved finding of guilty on one of several charges, a conviction upon which requires or authorizes the sentence adjudged, will give validity and effect to such sentence, although the similar findings on all the other charges are disapproved as not warranted by the testimony. But a finding of guilty of a specification to a charge but not guilty of the charge itself will not support a sentence, unless, indeed, there is added a conviction of some lesser offence included in that charged. Ibid., par. 2312.

A punishment, adjudged upon conviction of the accused on several charges, is valid and operative provided it is a punishment legally imposable on conviction of any one of the charges of which the conviction is duly approved by the reviewing authority. Ibid., par. 2311.

The word "month" or "months," employed in a sentence, is to be construed as meaning calendar month or months; the same significance being given to the term as is now commonly given to it in the construction of American statutes in which the word is employed. The old doctrine that "month," in a sentence of court-martial, meant lunar month, has long since ceased to be accepted in our military law. Ibid., par. 2314.

A legal sentence of court-martial, when once duly approved and executed, can not be reached by a pardon, nor revoked, recalled, modified or replaced by a milder punishment, or other proceeding, either by the Executive or by Congress. (a) The only remedy for a party who has suffered injustice from such a sentence is either a new appointment to the Army by the President or some legislation within the province of Congress relieving or indemnifying him for and on account thereof. Ibid., par. 2323.

[1] A sentence of death imposed by a court-martial, upon a conviction of several distinct offences, will be authorized and legal if any one of such offences is made capitally punishable by the Articles of War, although the other offenses may not be so punishable. Ibid., par. 285.

A court-martial, in imposing a death sentence, should not designate a time or place for its execution, such a designation not being within its province but pertaining to that of the reviewing authority. If it does so designate, this part of the sentence may be disregarded and a different time or place fixed by the commanding general. Ibid., par. 286.

Where a death sentence imposed by a court-martial has been directed by the proper authority to be executed on a particular day, and this day, owing to some exigency of the service, has gone by without the sentence being executed, it is competent for the same authority, or his proper superior, to name another day for the purpose, the time of its execution being an immaterial element of this punishment. (b) Ibid., par. 287.

Article VIII of the amendments to the Constitution prohibits the infliction of

[a] The well-established principles—that mere irregularities in the proceedings will not affect the validity of an executed sentence, and that a legal sentence once duly confirmed and executed is "no longer subject to review by the President"—so pointedly set forth (in 1843) in IV Opins., 274, are further illustrated in XIV Id., 290, 432.

[b] It was held by the Supreme Court, in Coleman v. Tennessee (7 Otto, 519–520), that a soldier who had been convicted of murder and sentenced to death by a general court-martial in May, 1865, but the execution of whose sentence had been meanwhile deferred by reason of his escape and the pendency of civil proceedings in his case, might at the date of the ruling "be delivered up to the military authorities of the United States to be dealt with as required by law."

More recently it has been held in this case by the Attorney-General that the death sentence might legally be executed notwithstanding the fact that the soldier had meanwhile been discharged from the service, such discharge, while formally separating the party from the Army, being viewed as not affecting his legal status as a military convict. But in view of all the circumstances of the case it was recommended that the sentence be commuted to imprisonment for life or a term of years. XVI Opin. Att. Gen., 349.

"cruel and unusual punishments." While this provision does not necessarily govern courts-martial, inasmuch as they are not a part of the judiciary of the United States, (a) it should be observed as a general rule. Thus, where for an offence not peculiarly aggravated a court-martial imposed upon a soldier, in connection with a forfeiture of pay for six months, the further penalty of carrying a loaded knapsack weighing twenty-four pounds every alternate hour from sunrise to sunset of each day (Sundays excepted) during that period, held that this punishment was excessive and exceptional, and, the same having been suffered by the soldier for three months, recommended that its unexpired term be at once remitted. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2313, note 1.

The punishment of ball and chain, though sanctioned by the usage of the service, should, in the opinion of the Judge-Advocate-General, be imposed only in extreme cases. Its remission has, in general, been recommended by him except in cases of old offenders, or aggravated crime, where deemed serviceable as a means of obviating violence or preventing escape. This penalty, like those of shaving the head and drumming out of the service, has become rare in our Army since the further corporal punishment of branding or marking has been expressly prohibited by statute. (b) Ibid., par. 2314.

Military duty is honorable, and to impose it in any form as a punishment must tend to degrade it, to the prejudice of the best interests of the service. Thus, advised that a sentence "to do extra duty" for a certain term would properly be disapproved. So advised of sentences imposing "guard duty" for certain periods. So advised of a sentence imposing, in connection with a term of confinement in charge of the guard, the penalty of "sounding all the bugle calls at the post during the same period." So advised in regard to a sentence which required a deserter—not for the purpose of making good the time lost by his desertion, but as a punishment—to serve for an additional year after the expiration of his term of enlistment. (c) Ibid., par. 2315.

The existing law fixing the term of a soldier's enlistment at three years, a court-martial can have no power to prolong it by adding to such term an additional period by way of punishment. Thus a sentence—"to make good, at the expiration of his term, a period of fifty-seven days during which his services were lost to the United States by being held in hospital on account of pistol wound received by him while in the commission of a disorder in violation of the 62d Article of War"—held unauthorized and properly disapproved. Ibid., par. 2316.

A sentence can not legally extend the time of the service of a soldier beyond the term for which he originally contracted. Ibid.

Discretionary sentences.—In a case where its sentence is discretionary, a court-martial may impose any punishment that is sanctioned by usage (the "custom of the service" referred to in Art. 84), although (in cases of soldiers) the same may not be included in the list of the more usual punishments contained in the manual for courts-martial. Ibid., par. 2313. Such discretion on the part of the court-martial, however, is regulated in its exercise in respect to enlisted men by the orders of the President imposing limits of punishment which will presently be described.

Under the authority conferred by the act of September 27, 1890, three orders have been issued by the President prescribing a system of maximum punishments to be imposed by the several military tribunals upon enlisted men who have been convicted of one or more of the offenses therein set forth. The first of these orders was

[b] The exercise of the power conferred upon the President by the act of September 27, 1890 (26 Stat. A sentence imposing solitary confinement in a dark cell was imposed by a general court-martial in 1873; so much of the sentence as required the confinement to be served in a dark cell was remitted by the Secretary of War as amenable to the objection of being "cruel and unusual punishment." promulgated in General Orders, No. 21, A. G. O., of 1891; a second order on the same subject was embodied in General Orders, No. 16, of 1895; the third, which is now in force, was embodied in Executive Orders of March 30, 1898, and was promulgated to the Army in General Orders, No. 16, A. G. O., of 1898. Under the strict terms of the statute the orders of the President fixing a schedule of maximum punishments are operative only in time of peace, and, although courts-martial may, at their discretion, apply their provisions in determining sentences imposed by them in time of war, they are under no legal obligation to do so. For the maximum-punishment order now in force, see page 1067, post.

Upon the conviction of an officer or soldier under a charge of a crime, such as manslaughter, robbery, larceny, etc., to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, while the statute of the United States or State, providing for its punishment as a civil offence, may well be referred to as indicating the nature and extent of the punishment deemed proper for the same by the civil authorities, the punishment to be imposed by the court-martial should, nevertheless, be measured less by the criminality of the act as a civil offence than by its gravity as a breach of military discipline. Thus, where a soldier, having been brought to trial before a civil court for the homicide of another soldier, and inadequately sentenced, was subsequently tried by a general court-martial for the military offence involved in his act, held that the court would only properly impose upon him a penalty proportioned to the injury done to the good order and discipline of the service, and should not, by an excessive punishment, attempt to compensate for the over-lenient judgment of the civil court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2318.

A sentence of confinement until a certain sum of public money, proved to have been embezzled by an accused, is paid, is proper for the reason "that without this provision in a sentence there is no means, in the case of an officer not bonded, of enforcing such restitution beyond the extent of his pay." G. C. M. O. 27, War Dept., 1872.

Mandatory punishment.—Where the Article of War under which the charge is laid is mandatory as to the punishment (as in the cases of Arts. 6, 8, 13, 14, 15, 18, 26, 37, 38, 50, 57, 59, 61, 65), and the sentence imposes, in connection with the mandatory punishment, a further penalty or penalties, this addition to the sentence does not affect its legality so far as relates to the mandatory punishment; as to this it is valid and operative, though as to the rest it is a nullity. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2310.

Where a sentence in excess of the legal limit is divisible, such part as is legitimate may be approved and executed. Thus where a sentence of an inferior court imposes a fine or forfeiture beyond the limit of the 83d Article of War, the sentence may be approved and executed as to so much as is within the limit. Ibid., par. 2324.

Cumulative punishment.—Where, while an officer or soldier is undergoing a certain sentence, he is again brought to trial for a military offence, and a further sentence is adjudged him, imposing a punishment of the same species as that which is being executed, it is the general rule of the service that the second sentence is to be regarded as cumulative upon the first, and that its execution is to commence when the execution of the first is completed. This, whether or not the court, in the second sentence, may have in terms specified that the second punishment should be additional to the first; such second punishment being made cumulative by operation of law irrespective of any direction (and such direction is, in fact, rarely expressed) in the sentence. Ibid., par. 2317.

[1] Courts-martial are empowered and required to adjudge dismissal upon officers of the Army by the 3d, 6th, 8th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 18th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 38th, 50th, 54th, 59th, 61st and 65th Articles of War, upon conviction of the specific offences therein described. In Articles 8 and 50 the punishment of dismissal is referred to as "cashiering"—a term which has almost passed out of use in our service, and when employed means no more than dismissal. Ibid., par. 1196.

A legal sentence of dismissal of an officer when finally confirmed by the competent authority, according to the 106th or 109th Article of War, takes effect upon the officer on the day on which the confirmation is officially communicated to him, either by the promulgation of the order of confirmation at his station or other form of official notice. Thus the date of the actual confirmation is not necessarily—is not probably in the majority of cases—the date on which the dismissal goes into effect. The declaration is indeed sometimes added in the order of confirmation, that the party "ceases thereupon to be an officer of the Army;" but this declaration is immaterial and surplusage. It not unfrequently happens—especially in time of war, and particularly when the officer has, since his trial, been taken prisoner by the enemy—that a considerable period may elapse before the officer is officially informed of the confirmation of the sentence and thus becomes, in law and fact, dismissed from the service. Dig. Opin. J. A. G. par. 1197.

A sentence of dismissal does not attach any legal disability to the person dismissed. He is not—as is indeed indicated by sec. 1228, Revised Statutes, above cited—disqualified to be newly appointed to the Army, nor is he disqualified to be enlisted as a soldier, or to hold civil office under the United States. Ibid., par. 1201.

[1] Though the injunction of the article, as to the direction to be added in the sentence, should of course regularly be complied with, a failure so to comply will not affect the validity of the punishment of dismissal adjudged by the sentence. (a) The declaration of the article, that after the publication "it shall be scandalous for an officer to associate with" the dismissed officer, though it has in a few cases (b) been incorporated in the sentence, is not intended to be, and should not be, so expressed by the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 302.

The punishment of suspension, as imposed by sentence, is usually in the form of a suspension from rank, or from command, for a stated term, sometimes accompanied by a suspension from pay for the same period. Suspension from rank includes suspension from command. Ibid., par. 2408.

In rare cases the form, "to be suspended from the service," has been employed in the sentence. Such a suspension is equivalent in substance to a suspension from rank.

A still rarer form, "to be suspended from duty," has been deemed to be practically equivalent to a sentence of suspension from command. (c) These forms are now rarely resorted to. Ibid., 732, par. 12.

A sentence, "to be suspended from the Military Academy," in a case of a cadet, practically severs him from the military service as a cadet during the term of the suspension. It is usually added in such a sentence that, at the end of such term, the party is to join the next lower class. Ibid., par. 2416.

Like dismissal, suspension takes effect upon and from notice of the approval of the sentence officially communicated to the officer, either by the promulgation of the same at his station, or—where he is absent therefrom by authority—by the delivery to him of a copy of the order of approval or other form of official personal notification of the fact of the approval. Ibid., par. 2423.

[2] A suspension from rank does not affect the right of the officer to his office. He retains the same as before, and, as an officer, remains subject as before to military control as well as to the jurisdiction of a court-martial for any military offence committed pending the term of suspension. (d) Ibid., par. 2418.

Confinement in a penitentiary. 97 Art. War.

1837. No person in the military service shall, under the sentence of a court-martial, be punished by confinement in a penitentiary unless the offense of which he may be convicted would, by some statute of the United States, or by some statute of the State, Territory, or District in which such offense may be committed, or by the common law, as the same exists in such State, Territory, or District, subject such convict to such punishment.[1] Ninety-seventh Article of War.

[1] This article by necessary implication prohibits the imposition of confinement in a penitentiary as a punishment for offenses of a purely or exclusively military character, such, for example, as desertion, absence without leave, or disobedience of orders. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 288. A sentence of penitentiary confinement in a case of a purely military offense is wholly unauthorized and should be disapproved. Effect can not be given to such a sentence by commuting it to confinement in a military prison or to some other punishment which would be legal for such offense. Nor in case of such an offense can a severer penalty, as death, be commuted to confinement in a penitentiary. Ibid, par. 289. Nor can penitentiary confinement be legalized as a punishment for purely military offenses by designating a penitentiary as a "military prison" and ordering the confinement there of soldiers sentenced to imprisonment on conviction of such offenses. Ibid, par. 290.

The term "penitentiary," as employed in this article, has reference to civil prisons only, as the penitentiary of the United States or District of Columbia at Washington, the public prisons or penitentiaries of the different States, and the penitentiaries "erected by the United States" (see section 1892, Revised Statutes) in most of the Territories. The military prison at Leavenworth is not a penitentiary in the sense of the article. The term State or State's prison in a sentence is equivalent to penitentiary. Ibid, par. 292.

Where a soldier is sentenced to be confined in a penitentiary the proper reviewing authority may legally designate for the execution of the punishment any State or Territorial penitentiary within his command. Where there is no such penitentiary available for the purpose, or desirable to be resorted to, he will properly submit the case to the Secretary of War for the designation of a proper penitentiary.

A military prisoner duly sentenced or committed to a penitentiary becomes subject to the government and rules of the institution. Ibid., par. 293.

An offence charged as "Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," which, however, is in fact a larceny, (b) embezzlement, violent crime, or other offence made punishable with penitentiary confinement by the law of the State, etc., may legally be visited with this punishment. Ibid., par. 291.

Where the act is charged as a crime under article 62, and charge and specification taken together show an offence punishable with confinement in a penitentiary by the law of the locus of the crime, the sentence may legally adjudge such a punishment. So held—in a case where charge and specification together made out an allegation of perjury under section 5392, Revised Statutes. (c) Ibid., par. 297.

LIMITS OF PUNISHMENT.

President to prescribe limit of punishment. Sept. 27, 1890, v. 26, p. 491.

b In a case of larceny the court should inform itself as to whether the value of the property stolen be not too small to permit of penitentiary confinement for the offence under the local law. See G. O. 44, Eighth Army Corps, 1862; G. C. M. O. 63, Dept. of the Platte, 1872.

c Held that penitentiary confinement could not legally be adjudged upon a conviction of a violation of the 21st article, alleged in the specification to have consisted in the lifting up of a weapon (a pistol) against a commanding officer and discharging it at him with intent to kill. By charging the offence under this article the Government elected to treat it as a purely military offence subject only to a military punishment. So, upon a conviction of joining in a mutiny, in violation of article 22, held that a sentence of confinement in a penitentiary would not be legal although the mutiny involved a homicide, set forth in the specification as an incidental aggravating circumstance. To have warranted such a punishment in either of these cases the Government should have treated the act as a "crime," and charged and brought it to trial as such, under article 62. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 296.

court-martial the punishment therefor shall not, in time of peace, be in excess of a limit which the President may prescribe.[1] Act of September 27, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 491).

[1] Under the authority conferred by this statute, four Executive orders have been issued prescribing limits of punishment for offenses to which specific penalties are not attached in the Articles of War. See General Order, No. 42, A. G. O. of 1901, which contains the Executive order of March 12, 1901, which is now in force. For a copy of the Executive order of March 12, 1901, see APPENDIX, page 1067, and MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL (edition of March 16, 1901), pp. 48–57.

Disciplinary punishments.—The several Articles of War, and other statutes of similar character, conferring jurisdiction upon certain military tribunals for the trial and punishment of military offenses, operate to deprive commanding and other officers of the power to inflict punishment upon officers and enlisted men under their command save in accordance with the methods prescribed in the statutes above indicated.

A military punishment can legally be imposed only by sentence of court-martial after a regular trial and conviction. Such a punishment can not be imposed by a mere order.

We have in our military law no system of disciplinary punishments. Except in a few cases, unimportant in themselves or of rare occurrence in practice (see arts. 25, 52, 53, and 54), our code recognizes no punishments other than such as may be adjudged upon trial and conviction by a military court. In the General Orders punishments inflicted merely at the will of military commanders have been repeatedly condemned as illegal and forbidden in practice. [See G. O. 81 (A. G. O.), 1822; do. 53, Hdqrs. of Army, 1842; do. 2, 4, War Dept., 1843; do. 39, Hdqrs. of Army, 1845; do. 645, War Dept., 1865; do. 49, Northern Dept., 1864; do. 22, Dept. of the Platte, 1867; do. 44, id., 1871; do. 63, Dept. of Dakota, 1868; do. 106, id., 1871; do. 40, Dept. of the East, 1868; G. O. 50, Dept. of the Missouri, 1871.] Officers who have resorted to such punishments have been repeatedly brought to trial and sentenced. [See G. O. (A. and I. G. O.), of June 30, 1821; do. 8 (A. G. O.), 1826; do. 28, id., 1829; do. 64, id., 1832; do. 2, 6, 68, War Dept., 1843; do. 39, Hdqrs. of Army, 1845; do. 53, Dept. of Va. and No. Ca., 1864; do. 22, Dept. of the Platte, 1867; do. 9, Mil. Div. of the Atlantic, 1869; do. 14, Dept. of South, 1869; G. C. M. O. 50, Dept. of the Missouri, 1871.] And enlisted men, tried and sentenced for insubordinate conduct, where such conduct has been induced or aggravated by illegal corporal punishments inflicted upon them by superiors, have commonly had their sentences remitted or mitigated, or altogether disapproved. [See G. O. 49, 76, Northern Dept., 1864; do. 40, Dept. of the East, 1868; G. C. M. O. 90, id., 1871; G. O. 63, Dept. of Dakota, 1868; do. 76, id., 1871; G. C. M. O. 45, id., 1880; do. 93, Dept. of the South, 1873.] In proper cases, of course, as where violence is employed, escape attempted, etc., by soldiers who are mutinous or disorderly, or in arrest under charges, force may be used against them according to the necessities of the case. [See also G. O. 53, Hdqrs. of Army, 1842; do. 2, War Dept., 1843; G. C. M. O. 47, Hdqrs. of Army, 1877; G. O. 53, Dept. of Va. and No. Ca., 1864; do. 40, Dept. of the East, 1868; G. C. M. O. 37, Dept. of Texas, 1880.] This, however, is prevention and restraint, not punishment; the authority to use the needful force in such cases will not justify the superior, when the offender is repressed or apprehended, in subjecting him to arbitrary punitory treatment.

Discretion regarding trial by summary court.—Paragraph 7, Circular No. 13, Adjutant-General's Office, December 5, 1891, reads as follows:

"The fact that the number of trials by inferior court-martial has greatly increased since the establishment of the summary court indicates that officers of the Army have the impression that under the present system they must bring every dereliction of duty before a court for trial, and that they are allowed no discretion in the matter. This is a mistake. Their discretion is the same now as it was under the garrison court system, and they are not obliged to bring cases before the summary court which they believe ought to be disposed of with an admonition or the withholding of privileges or indulgences. The extent of the exercise of this discretion, within these limits, is subject to the control of the commanding officer."

In accordance with the spirit of the foregoing, company commanders are authorized, subject to the control of the commanding officer of the post, to dispose of cases of derelictions of duty in their commands which would be within the jurisdiction of Every judge-advocate, or person acting as such, at any general court-martial shall, with as much expedition as the opportunity of time and distance of place may admit, forward the original proceedings and sentence of such court to the Judge-Advocate-General of the Army, in whose office they shall be carefully preserved.[1] Preparation and disposition. 113th Art. inferior courts-martial, by requiring extra tours of fatigue, unless the soldier concerned demands a trial. This right to demand a trial must be made known to him. Circular 5, A. G. O., 1898.

[1] The legal record of a court-martial is that record which is finally approved and adopted by the court as a body and authenticated by its president and judge-advocate. The court as a whole is responsible for the record, and the instrument which it approves as such is its record, however the same may have been made up. It is immaterial to the sufficiency of a record whether the same was kept or written by the judge-advocate or a clerk. So where a clerk or reporter, appointed and sworn to keep the record, did not act, but the record was prepared by the judge-advocate or some other person employed by him to assist him, held that this circumstance did not affect the validity of the record as finally approved by the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2140.

For rules respecting the contents and preparation of the records of general courts-martial see Ibid., paragraphs 2136–2140:

Exhibits and appendixes.—It is not necessary to encumber a record by spreading upon its documents, or other writing or matter, excluded by the court. But it should specify the character of the writing and the grounds upon which it was ruled out.

Papers, books, certified copies of documents authorized by law to be used in evidence, and other instruments of documentary evidence which are submitted to the court and read in evidence during the progress of the trial, are noted in the record as "read to the court and appended, marked A, B, C," etc. When it is proposed to submit documentary evidence, its nature and character are explained to the court by the party in whose behalf it is submitted, and these statements, together with any objections to its admission which may be made by the opposite party, and the decision of the court in respect to its admission, are fully set forth in the record.

Loss or destruction of record.—Where the proceedings of a court-martial have regularly terminated, and the sentence has been confirmed and ordered to be executed by the proper and final reviewing authority, the fact that the record has since been lost does not impair or affect the judgment of the court, and constitutes no legal obstacle to the enforcement of the penalty. But where the record of the trial of a soldier who had pleaded not guilty, and in whose case considerable evidence had been introduced, was, by a casualty of war, lost before any action had been taken upon the sentence by the reviewing officer, held that, unless the court could be reconvened and a new record could be made out from extant original notes, the proceedings, inasmuch as they could not be intelligently reviewed or formally approved, should properly be considered as inoperative and the sentence of no effect. Ibid., par. 2139.

Held that the destruction, by fire or other casualty, of the record of the trial, conviction, and sentence of a deserter, before action could be taken upon the same, was of similar effect in law to an acquittal, and relieved the deserter from the forfeiture of pay due at the date of his desertion. Ibid.

[2] The 104th Article of War contains the requirement that "no sentence of a court-martial shall be carried into execution until the same shall have been approved by each case his decision and orders. Par. 1057, Army Regulations.

REVISION PROCEEDINGS.

Revision proceedings.
Par. 1059, A. R., 1901.

1842. When the record of a court exhibits error in preparation, or seemingly erroneus conclusions, the reviewing authority may reconvene the court for a reconsideration of its action, pointing out defects.[1] Should the court con-

the officer ordering the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being." The record should therefore be forwarded by the judge-advocate to the convening officer, or to his successor in command, who, under the law, is authorized, by his approval of the findings and sentence, to make the latter operative. The proceedings are forwarded through the same channel, even where the sentence imposed is one which can only be made legally operative by the approval of superior authority; and it is the duty of the original reviewing officer to subject such proceedings to the same examination and review as would be applied to cases in which his approval and orders are final and conclusive.

Disposition of record.—Where the court was convened by a military officer—as, in a case of a general court, the general of the army or a department or army commander—it is the duty of the judge-advocate, upon the completion of the record, to transmit the same to such officer (or his successor in his command) for the proper action. Where the court was convened by the President, it is the duty of the judge-advocate to transmit the completed proceedings directly to the Judge-Advocate-General, (a) in order that, as the staff officer of the President, he may exercise the revisory function reposed in him by section 1199, Revised Statutes. (b)

[1] Revision proceedings.—Where the record of a trial, as forwarded to the reviewing authority for his action, is deemed by him to exhibit some error, omission, or other defect in the proceedings capable of being supplied or remedied by the court; as, for example, an inadequate, excessive, illegal, or irregular sentence, or a finding not authorized by the evidence; or an omission of some material matter—as a failure to prefix to the record a copy of the convening order, or to authenticate the proceedings by the signatures of the President or Judge-Advocate, or to enter the proper statement as to the members present, or to recite as to the offering to the accused of an opportunity to object to the same, or as to the qualifying of the court by the prescribed oaths, or to fully record the plea, finding, or sentence; or some mere clerical error in a matter of form—the court may and in general properly will be reconvened by the order of the reviewing officer (the convening authority or his successor in the command), for the purpose of correcting the record in the faulty particular, provided a correction be practicable. In a case of an omission the object of course is that the record may be made to conform with the fact. If the fact is that the proceeding, apparently merely omitted to be recorded, was actually not had, the proposed correction can not of course be made. There is no limit to the number of times that a court may be reconvened for a revision of its proceedings. It is not often, however, reassembled a second time where it declines on the first occasion to make the correction desired. (c) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2249.

The order reassembling the court will properly indicate the particular or particulars as to which a revision or correction is desired, or refer to papers accompanying it in which the supposed omission or other defect is set forth. Whether to make or not the proposed correction will be in the discretion of the court. The reviewing authority can not of course compel and would scarcely be authorized to command the court to make it. Ibid., par. 2250.

A correction can be made only by a legal court. At least five, therefore, of the members of the court who acted upon the trial must be present. That there are fewer members at the reassembling than at the trial is immaterial, provided five are [b] It may here be noted that the One hundred and thirteenth Article of War, the only statute relating to the forwarding, by judge-advocates, of the proceedings of general courts, is incomplete, and not in harmony with the provisions of arts. 104 and 109. The practice on the subject—as determined by par. 1057, Army Regulations, and the supplementary orders indicated in the foregoing note—represents quite accurately the existing law, and is as stated in the text.

present. The judge-advocate should be present. If the court closes, however, he should withdraw. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2251.

It is not in general necessary or desirable that the accused be present at a revision. Where, however, any possible injustice may result from his absence, he should be required or permitted to be present, and with counsel if preferred. Thus where the defect to be corrected consists in an omission properly to set forth a special plea made or objection taken by the accused, it may be desirable that he should be present in order that he may be heard as to the proper form of the proposed correction. Where the error is clerical merely, or, though relating to a material particular, consists in the omission of a formal statement only, the presence of the accused is not in general called for. Ibid., par. 2252.

It is now settled in our law that a court-martial is not empowered at this proceeding to take or receive testimony.(a) Ibid., par. 2253.

The amendment can only be made by the court when duly reconvened for the purpose, and when made must be the act of the court as such. A correction made by the president or other member, or by the judge-advocate independently of the court, and by means of an erasure or interlineation or otherwise, is unauthorized and a grave irregularity. The correction must be wholly made and recorded in and by the formal proceedings upon the revision. The record of the correction as thus made will refer of course to the page or part of the record of the trial in which the omission or defect occurs; but this part of the record must be left precisely as it stands. The court is no more authorized to correct the same by erasure or interlineation on the page, or by the substitution for the defective portion of a rewritten corrected statement, than would be the judge-advocate or a member.(b) Ibid., par. 2254.

Where the court has been dissolved, or, by reason of any casualty or exigency of the service, can not practically be reconvened, there can of course be no correction of its proceedings. Ibid., par. 2257.

The procedure here contemplated is of course quite distinct from the ordinary revision and correction of its proceedings by a court-martial from day to day during a trial and before the record is completed. Ibid., par. 2258.

[a] See G. O. 47, Hdqrs. of Army, 1879.

[b] A record can not legally be corrected by an interlineation by the judge-advocate—as by the words "at hard labor" interlined in the sentence. Nor can it legally be corrected by a statement on the margin of a page, signed by the judge-advocate. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 651, par. 15.

In the case of Private Gundlach, of the Hospital Corps, the sentence was set aside by the order of the President. "The record of the trial failed to show that the members of the court and judge-advocate were sworn, and on being returned for necessary action the court was not reconvened, as contemplated by paragraph 2, page 56, Court-Martial Manual, 1898, but the judge-advocate interlined a statement in the record that the members of the court and the judge-advocate were duly sworn. This action was unauthorized and invalid. A defective record returned for correction can only be amended to conform to the actual facts and by the court itself on revision when duly reconvened for the purpose." S. O., 99, H. Q. A. 1900. In the case of a cadet tried by general court-martial at the Military Academy in 1844 a verdict of acquittal was reached by the full court composed of seven members. On the following day, six members only being present, the acquittal reached at the previous day's session was revoked and a finding of guilty was reached and entered upon the record. In respect to this action on the part of the court it was remarked by the Secretary of War that "however it may be asserted that the usage and laws of courts-martial may sanction the right of the court to annul and entirely change their positive decision at any time before their final adjournment, yet it is a right which should be cautiously exercised, and only on obvious and extraordinary occasions. In the present case a full court acquitted the prisoner, and upon the next day a mutilated court—one member being absent—undertake to rescind the judgment of the previous day, and to pronounce the accused guilty and sentence him to punishment. It is not necessary to go into reasons and examples to show the danger and injustice which might result from a portion of the court upon the occasion of an accidental absence of one or more of its members reversing their judgment and changing innocence to guilt. To justify such a reversal the court should be as full and constituted precisely as it was when the judgment was pronounced. In consequence of this irregularity the proceedings of the court are disapproved and the accused ordered to be released from arrest and restored to duty. G. O. No. 40, War Dept., 1844.

Approval of sentence by officer ordering court.

[1] This term is employed in military parlance to designate the officer whose province and duty it is to take action upon—approve or disapprove, etc.—the proceedings of a court-martial after the same are terminated, and when the record is transmitted to him for such action. This officer is ordinarily the commander who has convened the court. In his absence, however, or where the command has been otherwise changed, his successor in command, or, in the language of articles 104 and 109, "the officer commanding for the time being," is invested (by those articles) with the same authority to pass upon the proceedings and order the execution of the sentence in a case of conviction. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2227.

While approval gives life and operation to proceedings or sentence, disapproval, on the other hand, quite nullifies the same. A disapproval of the proceedings of a court-martial by the legal reviewing authority is not a mere expression of disapprobation, but a final, determinate act, putting an end to such proceedings in the particular case, and rendering them entirely nugatory and inoperative; and the legal effect of a disapproval is the same whether or not the officer disapproving is authorized finally to confirm the sentence. But to be thus operative a disapproval should be express. As frequently remarked in the opinions of the Judge-Advocate General, the mere absence of an approval is not a disapproval, nor can a mere reference of the proceedings to a superior without words of approval operate as a disapproval of the proceedings or sentence. (a) The effect of the disapproval, wholly, of a conviction or sentence is not merely to annul the same as such, but also to prevent the accruing of any disability, forfeiture, etc., which would have been incidental upon an approval. (b) A disapproval of a conviction of a particular offense also operates to nullify the conviction of any lesser included offense, involved in the conviction of the specific offense charged.

Where the original reviewing officer disapproves a sentence, to the execution of which the confirmation of superior authority is made requisite by the code, as where (in time of peace) the department commander who has convened the court, in the case of an officer, disapproves a sentence of dismissal adjudged thereby, the sentence being nullified in law, there remains nothing for the superior authority to act upon, and to transmit the proceedings to him for action will be improper and unauthorized.

A reviewing officer can not disapprove a sentence and then proceed to mitigate or commute the punishment, since upon the disapproval there is nothing left in the case upon which any such action can be based.

It is quite immaterial to the legal effect of a disapproval whether any reasons are given therefor, or whether the reasons given are well founded in fact or sufficient in law. Ibid., par. 2229.

[2] The "officer commanding for the time being," indicated in this article, is an officer who has succeeded to the command of the officer who convened the court, as where the latter has been regularly relieved and another officer assigned to the command, or where the command of the convening officer has been discontinued and merged in a larger or other command, at some time before the proceedings of the court are completed and require to be acted upon. Thus where, under the circumstances, a

[a] See XVI Opin. Att. Gen., 312, where it is remarked that it is not a legal disapproval of a conviction or sentence for the original reviewing officer, in forwarding the proceedings for the action of superior authority, to indorse upon the same an opinion to the effect that the finding is not sustained by the evidence.

[b] A disapproval of a sentence by the proper reviewing authority is "tantamount to an acquittal by the court." XIII Opin. Att. Gen., 460.

1844. separate brigade has ceased to exist as a distinctive organization and been merged in a division, or a division has been similarly merged in an army or department, the commander of the division in the one case, and of the army or department in the other, is "the officer commanding for the time being" in the sense of the article. So where, before the proceedings of a garrison court convened by a post commander were completed, the post command had ceased to exist and the command become distributed in the department, held that the department commander, as the legal successor of the post commander, was the proper authority to approve the sentence under this article. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 326.

Where a department command was discontinued, without being transferred to or included in any other specific command, held that the general in command of the army was "the officer commanding for the time being," and the proper authority to act, under this article and the one hundred and ninth, upon the proceedings and sentence of a court which had been ordered by the department commander, but whose judgment had not been completed at the time of the discontinuance of the command. Ibid., par. 333.

The "officer commanding for the time being" must, to legally act, have the necessary qualifications. Thus, where the sentence is one of a general court-martial, this officer must have the same rank and status as the convening officer must have had under the seventy-second article, i. e., he must be either a general officer commanding the army, division, or department, or a colonel commanding the department. Ibid., par. 335.

In cases, however, of sentences of dismissal and of death, imposed in time of peace, and of some death sentences adjudged in time of war, as also of all sentences, "respecting general officers," while the convening officer (or his successor) is the original reviewing authority, with the same power to approve or disapprove as in other cases, yet inasmuch as it is prescribed by articles 105, 106, 108, and 109 that the sentence shall not be executed without the confirmation of the President, the latter becomes in these cases the final reviewing officer, when, the sentence having been approved by the commander (for, if disapproved by him, there is nothing left to be acted upon by the superior), the record is transmitted to him for his action. A similar division of the reviewing function exists in cases in which sentences are approved, but the execution of the same is suspended, and the question of their execution referred to the President, under article 111. The same function is also shared between inferior and superior commanders, under article 107, in cases in which sentences are imposed by division or separate brigade courts. So, under article 110, in cases of sentences adjudged by field officers' courts in time of war.

Where a general court-martial is convened directly by the President, as commander in chief, he is, of course, both the original and final reviewing authority. Ibid. See, also, in connection with the review of proceedings, the MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.

The reviewing authority should properly authenticate the action taken by him in any case by subscribing in his own hand (adding his rank and command, as indicating his legal authority to act) the official statement of the same as written in or upon the record. Impressing the signature by means of a stamp is not favored. Ibid., par. 2233.

In acting upon the proceedings of a court-martial, the legal reviewing officer acts partly in a judicial and partly in a ministerial capacity. He "decides" and "orders," and the due exercise of his proper functions can not be revised by superior military authority. Thus held that a reviewing officer who had duly acted upon a sentence and promulgated his action in orders could not be required by a higher commander, or by the Secretary of War, to revoke such action. If the sentence be deemed unwarranted or excessive, relief may be extended through the power of pardon or remission. Ibid., par. 2243.

This article is properly to be complied with by an approval of the sentence (where the same is approved in fact) by "the officer ordering the court," etc., although—as in a case of a sentence of dismissal in time of peace—he may not be empowered finally 1845. to confirm and give effect to the sentence. His approval is required as showing that he does not, as he is authorized to do, disapprove. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par 323.

The approval of the sentence indicated by this article should properly be of a formal character. An indorsement, signed by the commander, of the single word "approved"—a form not unfrequently employed during the late war—though strictly sufficient in law, is irregular and objectionable. So, held that a mere statement, written in or upon the proceedings, in transmitting them to the President, that the record was "forwarded" for the action of superior authority, was insufficient as not implying the requisite approval according to the article. And similarly held of a mere recommendation that the proceedings be approved by such authority. Ibid., par. 324.

A military commander can not, of course, delegate to an inferior or other officer his function as reviewing authority of proceedings or sentence of a court-martial, as conferred by the one hundred and fourth or one hundred and ninth article of war or other statute. Nor can he, regularly, authorize a staff or other officer to write and subscribe for him the action, by way of approval, disapproval, etc., which he has decided to take upon such proceedings. An approval purporting to be subscribed by the commander, "by" his staff judge-advocate or assistant adjutant-general, would be open to question and quite irregular, as would also be any action subscribed by such an officer purporting to be taken "in the absence and by the direction of" the commander. Ibid., par. 2234.

Action taken by a reviewing officer upon the proceedings and sentence of a court-martial may be recalled and modified before it is published, and the party to be affected is duly notified of the same. After such notice the action is beyond recall. The power of remission, indeed, may be exercised so long as any part of the punishment imposed remains unexecuted. But when the final approval of the sentence (or other action taken) has been once officially communicated to the accused, the function and authority of the reviewing authority as such over and respecting the same is exhausted and can not be revived. An approval can not then be substituted for a disapproval, or vice versa. Ibid., par. 2235.

A disapproval of a finding by the proper reviewing authority has the same legal effect as an acquittal, and the soldier can not be made to suffer any of the legal consequences of a conviction. Ibid., 675, par. 9.

Held a good ground for the disapproval of a sentence that the court denied the request of the accused to have summoned a clearly material and important witness, whose testimony would not have been merely cumulative. Ibid., par. 2238.

It is beyond the power of the reviewing officer to change, by his own action, a finding. Thus where, in a case of conviction of desertion, the reviewing authority approved "so much only of the finding of guilty of desertion as convicted the accused of absence without leave," held that he thus substituted a finding of his own for that of the court, and that his action was unauthorized. Ibid., par. 2239.

It is within the authority of a department commander, as reviewing officer, in a case in which a soldier of his command has been sentenced to confinement in a penitentiary, to designate a particular penitentiary within such command as the place of confinement. Ibid., par. 2240.

It is an established principle that when the final action of the reviewing officer has been published in orders to the command and notified to the accused, his power of approval and disapproval in the case is exhausted, and his action can not be recalled or modified. Where a department commander applied to the War Department for the return of the proceedings in a case in order that he might modify his action thereon, held that as the same had been formally promulgated in orders and had duly taken effect, the power of the reviewing officer over the case was exhausted, and the application could not legally be complied with. Ibid., par. 2236.

But where, after the reviewing commander had approved a sentence in general orders, and the court had been dissolved, it was discovered that there was a fatal defect in the proceedings in that they did not show that the court or judge-advocate had been sworn in the case, held that the commander would properly issue a supple-

Where the convening commander dissolves a court pending a trial, his power as to that court is exhausted, and he can not revive it as such. He may reconvene the same members as a court-martial, but it will be another and distinct tribunal. Ibid., 676, par. 16.

[1] The article does not require that the confirmation of the sentence shall be signed by the President, nor does it prescribe any form in which the confirmation shall be declared. Held, therefore, that a written approval of a sentence of dismissal authenticated by the signature of the Secretary of War, or expressed to be by his order, was a sufficient confirmation within the article; the case being deemed to be governed by the well-established principle that where, to give effect to an Executive proceeding, the personal signature of the President is not made essential by law, that of the head of the Department to which the subject belongs shall be sufficient for the purpose; the assent of the President to his order or direction being presumed, and his act being deemed in law the act of the President whom he represents. (b) Ibid., par. 337.

The word "approved," employed by the President in passing upon a sentence of dismissal, held to be substantially equivalent to "confirmed," the word used in the a See G. C. M. O., 23, Dept. Dakota, 1888, setting aside void sentences and restoring to duty the prisoners, both of whom were serving confinement, and had been under the terms of the void sentences dishonorably discharged. See also G. C. M. O., 20, Dept. Cal., 1890, where a void sentence was set aside, the dishonorable discharge "canceled" and the prisoner restored to duty.

If, however, the court has not been dissolved it may be reconvened to amend its record to conform to the actual facts; that is, to make it speak the truth. See par. 19, S. O., 99, A. G. O., 1900, in which the following is promulgated: "By direction of the President, the sentence in the case * * * published in paragraph 1, Special Orders, No. 214, Headquarters Separate Brigade, Provost Guard, Manila, Philippine Islands, November 8, 1899, is set aside. The record of the trial failed to show that the members of the court and judge-advocate were sworn, and on being returned [by the War Department] for necessary action the court was not reconvened, as contemplated by paragraph 2, page 56, Court-Martial Manual, 1898, but the judge-advocate interlined a statement in the record that the members of the court and judge-advocate were duly sworn. This action was unauthorized and invalid. A defective record returned for correction can only be amended to conform to the actual facts and by the court itself on revision when duly reconvened for the purpose."

b This view has been sustained by an opinion of the Attorney-General of June 6, 1877 (XV Opins., 290), and by a report of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate of March 3, 1879, Report No. 868, Forty-fifth Congress, third session. From this report, indeed, two members of the committee dissented in a subsequent report of April 7, 1879, Mis. Doc. No. 21, Forty-sixth Congress, first session.

111 Art. War.

1849. Any officer who has authority to carry into execution the sentence of death, or of dismissal of an officer, may suspend the same until the pleasure of the President shall be known; and in such case he shall immediately transmit to the President a copy of the order of suspension, together with a copy of the proceedings of the court.[1] One hundred and eleventh Article of War.

article. In practice the two words are used indifferently in this connection. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 386.

This subject has been more recently considered by the United States Supreme Court in a succession of cases (Runkle v. U. S., 122 U. S., 543; U. S. v. Page, 137 U. S., 673; U. S. v. Fletcher, 148 U. S., 84), the effect of which is that a statement of approval of a sentence of dismissal, authenticated by the Secretary of War, is legally sufficient, provided that it appear by clear presumption therefrom that the proceedings have actually been submitted to the President.

In an opinion of the Attorney-General of April 1, 1879 (XVI Opins., 298), it was held that a confirmation of a sentence of dismissal of an officer, though irregularly and unduly authenticated, would be ratified by an appointment by the President of another officer to fill the supposed vacancy, and that the appointment thus made would be valid and operative.

[1] An officer suspending the execution of a sentence for the action of the President under this article should first formally approve the same. Simply to forward the proceedings, stating that the sentence has been suspended, is incomplete and irregular. If the commander disapproves the sentence, he can not, of course, suspend and transmit under this article, since there remains nothing for the President to act upon. Ibid., par. 339.

Where a case is submitted to the President for his action under this article, he may approve or disapprove the sentence in whole or in part, and, if approving, may exercise the power of remission or mitigation. Ibid., par. 340.

[2] The reviewing authority, in approving the punishment adjudged by the court and ordering its enforcement, is authorized, if he deems it too severe, to graduate it to the proper measure by reducing it in quantity or quality, without changing its species; this is mitigation. Imprisonment, fine, forfeiture of pay, and suspension are punishments capable of mitigation. As an instance of a mitigation both in quantity and quality, held that a sentence of imprisonment for three years in a penitentiary was mitigable to an imprisonment for two years in a military prison.[a] Ibid., par. 345.

Held that a reviewing officer other than the President was not empowered by this article to commute a punishment; that the "pardon" here specified was remission, which, unlike the pardoning power vested in the President, did not include commutation or conditional pardon. So, held that a reviewing commander was not authorized to commute the punishment of dishonorable discharge, and that, as such punishment was not susceptible of mitigation, it could not legally be reduced under this article. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 347.

[a] The power to remit or commute sentences of death and dismissal is reserved by this article for the President. A military commander can not exercise such power, even where, in time of war, he is authorized to approve and execute the sentence. He may then, however, if he thinks that the sentence should be remitted or commuted, suspend its execution for the action of the President (with a recommendation to clemency) under the preceding article. VI Opin. Att. Gen., 124, 125.

See opinion of Judge-Advocate-General published in G. O., 71, War Department, 1875; I Opin. Att. Gen., 327; 4 ibid., 444. (It may be noted that these early opinions of the Attorney-General inaccurately describe the substitution of a lesser punishment for a death sentence as a mitigation, the proceeding being properly commutation.)

The substitution of the punishment of confinement for that of dishonorable discharge, imposed by sentence of court-martial, would not, of course, be authorized by way of mitigation (which can not change the nature of the punishment), but may be affected by a commutation of the sentence by the President, accepted by the soldier. See the action of the President in the case of Private Hayes, Fifth Artillery, in G. C. M. O., 58, of 1888. Ibid., par. 348.

The order prescribing maximum punishments was not intended to and does not affect the established principle that the reviewing authority, in the exercise of his power of mitigation, can not change the kind of punishment. The power of substitution which may be exercised by the court under the order has no relation to the power of the reviewing officer. Thus held that the substitution by the reviewing officer of confinement for forfeiture, though the period of confinement proposed were less than the court could have substituted, would not be legal mitigation. Ibid., par. 357.

Where a prisoner is serving out a sentence of imprisonment at a military prison or place of confinement within the command of the officer who approved the proceedings, such officer (or his successor in the command) may, under this article, remit at any time the unexpired portion of the pending confinement, although the punishment of dishonorable discharge, imposed by the same sentence, may meanwhile have been duly executed. Ibid., par. 349.

A military commander vested with the power of pardon or mitigation under this article is not authorized to delegate the same to an inferior. Thus held that a department commander could not legally authorize a post commander to remit in part, upon good behavior, the punishment of a soldier under sentence at the post of the latter, who had been convicted by a general court, convened, and whose proceedings had been acted upon, by the former. Ibid., par. 342.

A punishment can not be pardoned or mitigated under this article where it has been once duly executed. Where, however, a sentence has been executed only in part, it may be remitted as to the portion remaining unexecuted. Ibid., par. 343.

The pardoning power here given is not limited in its exercise to the moment of the approving of the sentence, but may be employed as long as there remains any material for its exercise. Under this article, as interpreted by the usage of the service, a department (or army) commander may remit at any time, in his discretion, for any cause deemed by him to be sufficient, the unexecuted portion of the sentence of any soldier confined in his command under a sentence imposed by a court-martial convened by him or by a predecessor in the command. Ibid., par. 344.

[1] Held that the Chief of Engineers was authorized to order a court under this article for the trial of soldiers of the engineer battalion; the same, in connection with the engineer officers of the Army, being deemed, in view of sections 1094, 1151, 1154, etc., of the Revised Statutes, to constitute a "corps" in the sense of the article. So held that the Chief of Ordnance was authorized to convene such a court for the trial of the enlisted men authorized by section 1162, Revised Statutes, to be enlisted by him; the same being deemed to constitute, with the ordnance officers, such a separate and distinct branch of the military establishment as to come within the general designation of "corps" employed in the article. So held that the Chief Signal Officer, under the provisions of the acts of July 24, 1876, June 20, 1878, etc., relating to his branch of the service, was authorized to order courts-martial, as commanding a "corps" in the sense of this article. Ibid., par. 212.

[2] The jurisdiction of the regimental court-martial sitting as a criminal tribunal and that of the garrison court-martial also, in respect to persons and cases have been very materially restricted by the act of June 18, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 483), which created the summary court. These courts can now try only noncommissioned officers, who if they object to trial by the summary court are required to be brought before regimental or garrison courts for trial, unless their trial by summary court is directed by the authority "of the officer competent to order their trial by general court-martial," and by the act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 951), which authorizes an enlisted man, in the case therein stated, to appeal to a garrison or regimental court. See paragraph 1854, post.

[1] The authority to summon a regimental court under this article is vested in terms in the regimental commander. A department or other superior commander can not properly exercise such authority, nor will his order add to the validity or effect of the proceeding.

[2] There are two manifest and unqualified limitations to the province of the regimental court under this article, viz: (1) It can not usurp the place of a court of inquiry; (2) it can take no cognizance of matters which it would be beyond the power of the regimental commander to redress. When the matter is beyond the reach of the commander, it is beyond the jurisdiction of this court. If it involve a question of irregular detail, excessive work or duty, wrongful stoppages of pay or the like, a regimental court under this article may be resorted to for the correction of the wrong. Otherwise when the case is one of a wrong such as can be righted only by the punishment of the officer. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 42.

The "regimental court-martial" under the 30th A. W. can not be used as a substitute for a general court-martial or court of inquiry, for it can not try an officer nor make an investigation for the purpose of determining whether he shall be brought to trial. When, if the soldier's complaint should be sustained, the only redress would be a reprimand to the officer, the matter would not be within the jurisdiction of this court. It can only investigate such matters as are susceptible of redress by the doing of justice to the complainant—that is, when in some way he can be set right by putting a stop to the wrongful condition which the officer has caused to exist. Erroneous stoppages of pay, irregularity of detail, the apparent requirement of more labor than from other soldiers and the like might in this way be investigated and the wrongful condition put an end to. The court will in such cases record the evidence and its conclusions of fact and recommend the action to be taken. The members of the court (and the judge-advocate) will be sworn faithfully to perform their duties as members (and judge-advocate) of the court, and the proceedings will be recorded as nearly as practicable in the same manner as the proceedings of ordinary courts-martial. MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.

[3] It is not essential that the "officer commanding" should be of the rank of field officer. A commanding officer, though a captain or lieutenant, may convene a court-martial under this article, provided he has the required command. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 214.

[4] The general term "other place" is deemed to be intended to cover and include any situation or locality whatever—post, station, camp, halting place, etc.—at which there may remain or be, however temporarily, a separate command or detachment in which different corps of the Army are represented, as indicated in the next paragraph. If such a command, so situated, contains three officers, other than the commander, available for service on court-martial, the commander will be competent to exercise the authority conferred by this article. Ibid., par. 216.

[5] Held, in view of the early orders (a) relating to the subject and of the practice thereunder, that the presence on duty with a garrison, detachment, or other separate command, at a fort, arsenal, or other post or place, and as a part of such command, of a single representative, officer or soldier, of a corps, arm, or branch of the service other than that of which the bulk of the command is composed—as an officer of the quartermaster, subsistence, or medical department, a chaplain, an ordnance sergeant or hospital steward, an officer or soldier of artillery where the command consists of infantry or cavalry, or vice versa, etc.—might be deemed sufficient to fix upon the command the character of one "where the troops consist of different corps," in the sense of this article, and to empower the commanding officer to order a court-martial under the same. The presence, however, with the command of a civilian employee of the Army—an acting assistant or contract surgeon—could have no such effect. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 217.

[2] A commanding officer is not authorized to detail himself, with two other officers, as a court under this (or the preceding) article. An "acting assistant surgeon," not being an officer of the Army, can not be detailed on such court. Ibid., par. 215.

[3] Capital offenses (i. e., offenses capitally punishable), not being within the jurisdiction of inferior courts, such courts can not take cognizance of acts specifically made punishable by article 21, however slight be the offenses actually committed.(a)

While inferior courts have, equally with general courts, jurisdiction of all military offenses not capital, committed by enlisted men, yet, in view of the limitations upon their authority to sentence, it is in general inexpedient to resort to them for the trial of the graver offenses, such as larcenies, aggravated acts of drunkenness, protracted absences without leave, etc., a proper and adequate punishment for which would be beyond the power of such tribunals. The more serious offenses should, where practicable, be referred for trial to general courts, which alone are vested with a full dis-

June 18, 1898, v. 30, p. 483.

1855. The commanding officer of each garrison, fort, or other place, regiment or corps, detached battalion or company, or other detachment in the Army, shall have power to appoint for such place or command, or in his discretion for each battalion thereof, a summary court to consist of one officer to be designated by him, before whom enlisted men who are to be tried for offenses, such as were prior to the passage of the act "to promote the administration of justice in the Army," approved October first, eighteen hundred and ninety, cognizable by garrison or regimental courts-martial, and offenses cognizable by field officers detailed to try offenders under the provisions of the eightieth and one hundred and tenth Articles of War,[1] shall be brought to trial within twenty-four hours of the time of the arrest, or as soon thereafter as practicable,[2]

cretion to impose punishment in proportion to the gravity of the offense. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 224.

A sentence forfeiting pecuniary allowances in addition to pay, where the entire forfeiture amounted to a sum greater than one month's pay, held not authorized under this article. Ibid., par. 220.

A sentence, adjudged by a garrison court, of confinement "till the expiration of the term of service" of a soldier, held unauthorized unless the soldier had not more than one month left to serve. Ibid., par. 221.

The limitation of the authority of inferior courts in regard to sentences of imprisonment and fine, held not to preclude the imposition by them of other punishments sanctioned by the usage of the service; such, for example, as reduction to the ranks, either alone or in connection with those or one of those expressly mentioned. Ibid., par. 222.

The limitations imposed by the article have reference, of course, to single sentences. For distinct offenses made the subject of different trials, resulting in separate sentences, a soldier may be placed at one and the same time under several penalties of forfeiture and imprisonment, or of either, exceeding together the limit affixed by the article for a single sentence. (a) Ibid., par. 223.

[1] This court replaces the summary court created by the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 648), which was restricted in its operations to a time of peace. The jurisdiction of the new summary court extends to cases which were formerly tried by regimental and garrison courts, and is exclusive, in respect to the trial of enlisted men charged with minor offenses, except in cases of noncommissioned officers who object to being tried by the summary court. When such objection is made the offender, being a noncommissioned officer, is entitled to be tried by a regimental or garrison court, unless the authority for his trial has been obtained from the authority competent to order the trial of the offender by a general court-martial. The act of June 18, 1898, became operative, in accordance with its terms, on August 17, 1898 (G. O., 80, A. G. O., 1898). Commanding officers of division field hospitals and division ambulance companies, being responsible direct to the division surgeons and division commanders, have authority to appoint summary courts. Par. 2, Circular No. 49, A. G. O., 1898.

[2] The provision of the act that accused soldiers shall be brought before the summary court for trial "within twenty-four hours from the time of their arrest" is not a statute of limitations nor jurisdictional in its character, but directory only—directory upon the officers whose duty it is to bring offenders before the court. The proceedings will thus be legally valid though the accused does not appear for trial except when the accused is to be tried by general court-martial; but such summary court may be appointed and the officer designated by superior authority when by him deemed desirable.[1] Act of June 18, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 483).

1856. The officer holding the summary court shall have power to administer oaths and to hear and determine such cases, and when satisfied of the guilt of the accused adjudge the punishment to be inflicted,[2] which said punishment shall not exceed confinement at hard labor for three months and forfeiture of three months' pay, and, in addition thereto, in the case of a noncommissioned officer, reduction to the ranks; and, in the case of first-class privates, reduction to second-class privates. Ibid.

Record. Ibid.

1857. There shall be a summary court record kept at each military post and in the field at the headquarters of the proper command, in which shall be entered a record of all cases heard and determined and the action had thereon; and no sentence adjudged by said summary court shall be executed until it shall have been approved by the officer appointing the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being.[3] Ibid.

within the period specified. So held, in a case of an accused soldier arrested on Saturday, that the court did not, by not sitting on Sunday, lose jurisdiction; and therefore that it is not necessary that a summary court should ever sit on a Sunday. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2395.

The provision in the act in regard to the trial being had within twenty-four hours of the arrest being directory only, a trial held after that time is entirely valid. Thus, where a soldier, by reason of drunkenness or otherwise, is not in a condition to be tried within that time, his trial may be postponed till he is in such condition. Ibid., par. 2396.

[1] The procedure of the summary court should be similar to that of the older courts-martial. The charges and specifications should be read to the accused, and he be required to plead guilty or not guilty, and the witnesses should be sworn. But the testimony is not set forth in the record. Ibid., par. 2398. For procedure of this court see MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL, pp. 65–69, 121, 122.

Held that the provision of the ninety-fourth Article of War relating to the hours of session of courts-martial was not applicable to summary courts. Ibid., par. 2397.

[2] The act of June 18, 1898, in providing that the trial officer "shall have power to administer oaths," has reference to the oaths of witnesses. The officer himself is not sworn. But the witnesses must be sworn; and, in a case in which it appeared that they were not in fact sworn, held that the proceedings and sentence were invalidated, and that a forfeiture imposed was illegally charged against the accused, who should be credited with the amount of the same on the next muster and pay roll. But the record need not state in terms that the witnesses were sworn; it will be presumed that the law has been complied with unless the contrary appears. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2239.

A summary court is not empowered to issue process of attachment to compel the attendance of a civilian witness. Ibid., par. 2400.

A summary court is not empowered to impose a sentence of dishonorable discharge. Such punishment is not in terms authorized by article 83 to be adjudged by regimental or garrison courts, and it is impliedly restricted to general courts by the fourth Article of War. Ibid., par. 2402.

No one while holding the privileges of a certificate of eligibility to promotion shall be brought before a summary court, and noncommissioned officers shall not, if they object thereto, be brought to trial before summary courts without the authority of the officer competent to order their trial by general court-martial, but shall in such cases be brought to trial before garrison, regimental, or general courts-martial, as the case may be. Ibid.

1862. All persons who, in time of war, or of rebellion against the supreme authority of the United States, shall be found lurking or acting as spies, in or about any of the fortifications, posts, quarters, or encampments of any of the armies of the United States, or elsewhere, shall be triable by a general court-martial, or by a military commission,[1] and shall, on conviction thereof, suffer death.

[1] Where a post commander sits as a summary court no approval of the sentence is required by law, but he should sign the sentence and date his signature. A certification by the post adjutant is unnecessary and irregular and should not be permitted.

[2] By the act of July 28, 1892, "commanding officers authorized to approve the sentences of summary courts" are empowered to "remit or mitigate the same." Held, that where a soldier who had been convicted by a summary court had passed into another command, so that the officer who approved his sentence was no longer his commanding officer, such officer could not legally exercise the power of remission or mitigation of the sentence. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2403.

Discretion respecting trials by summary courts.—Paragraph 7, Circular No. 13, A. G. O., December 5, 1891, reads as follows: "The fact that the number of trials by inferior courts-martial has greatly increased since the establishment of the summary court indicates that officers of the Army have the impression that under the present system they must bring every dereliction of duty before a court for trial, and that they are allowed no discretion in the matter. This is a mistake. Their discretion is the same now as it was under the garrison-court system, and they are not obliged to bring cases before the summary court which they believe ought to be disposed of with an admonition, or the withholding of privileges or indulgences. The extent of the exercise of this discretion within those limits is subject to the control of the commanding officer." In accordance with the spirit of the foregoing, company commanders are authorized, subject to the control of the commanding officer of the post, to dispose of cases of derelictions of duty in their commands which would be within the jurisdiction of inferior courts-martial by requiring extra hours of fatigue, unless the soldier demands a trial. This right to demand a trial must be made known to him. Circular No. 5, A. G. O., 1898.

115 Art. War.

1863. A court of inquiry, to examine into the nature of any transaction of, or accusation or imputation against, any officer or soldier, may be ordered by the President or by any commanding officer; but, as courts of inquiry may be perverted to dishonorable purposes, and may be employed, in the hands of weak and envious commandants, as engines for the destruction of military merit, they shall

[1] Authority and history.—By a practice from 1847, (a) and renewed and firmly established during the late war, (b) military commissions have become adopted as authorized tribunals in this country in time of war. They are simply criminal war courts, resorted to for the reason that the jurisdiction of courts-martial, creatures as they are of statute, is restricted by law, and can not be extended to include certain classes of offenses, which, in war, would go unpunished in the absence of a provisional forum for the trial of the offenders. Their authority is derived from the Law of War, (c) though in some cases their powers have been added to by statute. (d) Their competency has been recognized not only in acts of Congress, (e) but in Executive proclamations, (f) in rulings of the courts, (g) and in opinions of the Attorneys-General. (h) During the rebellion they were employed in several thousand cases; more recently they were resorted to under the "Reconstruction" act of 1867; and still later one of these courts has been convened for the trial of Indians as offenders against the laws of war. ---

[1] This article authorizes the institution of a court of inquiry (a) only in a case of an "officer or soldier," and the word "officer," as employed in the articles, is defined by section 1342, Revised Statutes, to mean commissioned officer. A court of inquiry can not, therefore, be convened on the application or in a case of a person who is not an officer (or soldier) of the Army at the time. Such a court can not be ordered to investigate transactions of, or charges against, a party who, by dismissal, discharge, resignation, etc., has become separated from the military service, although such transactions or charges relate altogether to his acts or conduct while in the Army. A court of inquiry can not be ordered in a case of an "acting assistant surgeon," who is not an officer of the Army, but only a civil employee. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 366.

A court of inquiry should not in general be ordered by an inferior—post or regimental—commander where the charges required to be investigated are not such as an inferior court-martial could legally take cognizance of. Courts of inquiry convened by such commanders are, however, of rare occurrence in our service. Ibid., par. 367.

Though a court of inquiry has sometimes been compared to a grand jury, there is little substantial resemblance between the two bodies. The accused appears and examines witnesses before such a court as freely as before a court-martial (see article 118), and its proceedings are not required to be secret, but may be open at the discretion of the court. Ibid., par. 368.

Although neither article 88 nor other provision of the code specifically authorizes the challenging of the members of a court of inquiry, yet, in the interests of justice and by the usage of the service in this country, this proceeding is permitted in the same manner as before courts-martial. Article 117 requires that members of courts of inquiry shall be sworn "well and truly to examine and inquire, according to the evidence, without partiality, prejudice," etc.; and it is the sense of the service that their competency so to do should be liable to be tried by the same tests as in a case of a court-martial. (b) Ibid., par. 368, note 1.

[2] A court of inquiry has no power to punish as for a contempt. Such power of this nature as is conferred by article 86 is restricted in terms to courts-martial. Moreover, a court of inquiry, not being in a proper sense a court, can not exercise the strictly judicial function of punishing contempts. A loose observation of Hough (Authorities, 10), that "contempts before courts of inquiry are as much punishable as before courts-martial," has been carelessly repeated by several American writers. The recent English writer, Clode, correctly states the law (as to witnesses) in saying (Mil. and Mar. Law, 198) that a court of inquiry "has no power to punish them for contumacy or silence." The act of March 2, 1901 (G. O. 27, A. G. O., 1901), providing for the punishment of civilian witnesses refusing to appear or testify, is limited by its terms to general courts-martial.

[a] A court of inquiry is not a court in the legal sense of the term, but rather a council, commission, or board of investigation. It does not administer justice; no plea or specific issue is presented to it for trial; its proceedings are not a trial of guilt or innocence; it does not come to a verdict or pass a sentence. For purposes of investigation, however, a court of inquiry in this country is clothed with ample powers, and, in an important case, its opinions may be scarcely less significant and even final than that of a military court proper, that is to say, a court-martial. 1 Winthrop's Military Law and Precedents, chapter 24.

[b] See Macomb, sec. 204; O'Brien, 292; De Hart, 278. In the joint resolution of Congress of February 13, 1874, authorizing the President to convene a certain special court of inquiry, it was "provided that the accused may be allowed the same right of challenge as allowed by law in trials by court-martial." It appears, however, to have been regarded in the debate on this resolution (see Congressional Record, vol. 2, Nos. 38, 40) that this provision was unnecessary to entitle the party to the privilege.

the matter now before you, without partiality, favor, affection, prejudice, or hope of reward: so help you God." After which the president of the court shall administer to the recorder the following oath: "You, A B, do swear that you will, according to your best abilities, accurately and impartially record the proceedings of the court and the evidence to be given in the case in hearing: so help you God." One hundred and seventeenth Article of War.

1866. A court of inquiry, and the recorder thereof, shall have the same power to summon and examine witnesses as is given to courts-martial and the judge-advocates thereof. Such witnesses shall take the same oath which is taken by witnesses before courts-martial,[1] and the party accused shall be permitted to examine and cross-examine them, so as fully to investigate the circumstances in question. One hundred and eighteenth Article of War.

[2] An opinion given by a court of inquiry is not in the nature of a sentence or adjudication pronounced upon a trial. The accused, upon a subsequent trial by court-martial, of charges investigated by a court of inquiry, can not plead the proceedings or opinion of the latter as a former trial, acquittal, or conviction. Dig. Opin. J.-A. G., par. 369.

While it is of course desirable that the members of a court of inquiry, directed to express an opinion, should concur in their conclusions, they are not required to do so by law or regulation (a). The majority does not govern the minority, as in the case of a finding or sentence by court-martial. If a member or a minority of members can not conscientiously, and without a weak yielding of independent convictions, agree with the majority, it is better that such member or members should formally disagree and present a separate report or reports accordingly. The very disagreement, indeed, of intelligent minds is a material and important fact in the case, and one of which the reviewing authority is entitled to have the advantage in his consideration of and action upon the same. Ibid., par. 370.

Where, as in the majority of cases, the inquiry is instituted with a view of assisting the determination by the President, or a military commander, of the question whether the party should be brought to trial, the opinion of the court will properly be as to whether further proceedings before a court-martial are called for in the case, with the reasons for the conclusions reached. Where no such view enters into the inquiry, but the court is convened to investigate a question of military right, responsibility, conduct, etc., the opinion will properly confine itself to the special question proposed and its legitimate military relations. A court of inquiry, composed as it is of military men, will rarely find itself called upon to express an opinion upon questions of a purely legal character (b). Ibid., par. 371.

It is not irregular, but authorized, for a court of inquiry, in a proper case, to reflect, in connection with its opinion, upon any improper language or conduct of the accused, prosecuting witness, or other person appearing before it during the investigation (c).

[a] In the case of the court of inquiry (composed of seven general officers) on the Cintra Convention, in 1808, the members who dissented from the majority were required by the convening authority to put on record their opinions, and three dissenting opinions were accordingly given. A further instance, in which two of the five members of the court gave each a separate dissenting opinion, is cited by Hough (Precedents, 642). Mainly upon the authority of the former case, both Hough (Precedents, 642) and Simmons (sec. 339) hold that members nonconcurring with the majority are entitled to have their opinions reported in the record.

[b] In an exceptional case, that of the special court of inquiry authorized by Congress in the joint resolution of February 13, 1874, the court was required to express an opinion not only upon the "moral" but upon the "technical and legal responsibility" of the officer for the "offenses" charged.

[c] Thus the court of inquiry on the conduct of the Seminole war adverted, in its opinion, unfavorably upon certain offensive and reprehensible language employed against each other by the two general officers concerned, the one in his statement to the court and the other in his official communications, which were put in evidence. See G. O. 13, Headquarters of Army, 1837.

1869. The proceedings of a court of inquiry may be admitted as evidence by a court-martial, in cases not capital, nor extending to the dismissal of an officer: Provided, That the circumstances are such that oral testimony can not be obtained.[1] One hundred and twenty-first Article of War.

[1] While the proceedings of a court of inquiry can not be admitted as evidence on the merits upon a trial before a court-martial of an offense for which the sentence of dismissal will be mandatory upon conviction, (a) yet held that upon the trial of such offense, as upon any other, such proceedings, properly authenticated, would be admissible in evidence for the purpose of impeaching the statements of a witness upon the trial who—it was proposed to show—had made quite different statements upon the hearing before the court of inquiry. Sec. 1999, R.S.

1877. Whereas the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and whereas in the recognition of this principle this Government has freely received emigrants from all nations, and invested them with the rights of citizenship; and whereas it is claimed that such American citizens, with their descendants, are subjects of foreign states, owing allegiance to the governments thereof; and whereas it is necessary to the maintenance of public peace that this claim of foreign allegiance should be promptly and finally disavowed: Therefore any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officer of the United States which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation is declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of the Republic.

1878. All naturalized citizens of the United States, while in foreign countries, are entitled to and shall receive from this Government the same protection of persons and property which is accorded to native-born citizens.

Protection to naturalized citizens in foreign states.
July 27, 1868, c. 249, s. 2, v. 15, p. 224.
Sec. 2000, R. S.

1879. Whenever it is made known to the President that any citizen of the United States has been unjustly deprived of his liberty by or under the authority of any foreign government, it shall be the duty of the President forthwith to demand of that government the reasons of such imprisonment; and if it appears to be wrongful and in violation of the rights of American citizenship, the President shall forthwith demand the release of such citizen, and if the release so demanded is unreasonably delayed or refused, the President shall use such means, not amounting to acts of war, as he may think necessary and proper to obtain or effectuate the release; and all the facts and proceedings relative thereto shall as soon as practicable be communicated by the President to Congress.

Release of citizens imprisoned by foreign governments to be demanded.

NATURALIZATION.[1]

1880. An alien may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States in the following manner, and not otherwise:

Naturalization of aliens.
Sec. 2165, R. S.

First. He shall declare on oath, before a circuit or district court of the United States, or a district or supreme court of the Territories, or a court of record of any of the States having common-law jurisdiction, and a seal and clerk, two years, at least, prior to his admission, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which the alien may be at the time a citizen or subject.

Apr. 14, 1802, c. 28, ss. 1, 3, v. 2, pp. 153, 155; May 26, 1824, c. 186, s. 4, v. 4, p. 69; Feb. 1, 1876, c. 5, v. 19, p. 2.

[1] The power of naturalization is exclusively in Congress. Chirac v. Chirac, 2 Wheat., 260. Jurisdiction for that purpose having been conferred by Congress, courts of record in the several States and Territories have the power to extend the privileges of citizenship to aliens by an application of the provisions of the naturalization laws of the United States. Campbell v. Gordon, 6 Cr., 176; Stark v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 7 Cr., 420; Chirac v. Chirac, 2 Wheat., 259; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat., 827; Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet., 393.

For a discussion of the power of the several States to confer the privilege of State citizenship upon aliens, see Collet v. Collet (2 Dall., 294).

Oath to support the Constitution of the United States. Apr. 14, 1802, c. 28, s. 1, v. 2. p. 153.

Second. He shall, at the time of his application to be admitted, declare, on oath, before some one of the courts above specified, that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty; and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject; which proceedings shall be recorded by the clerk of the court.

Residence in United States or States, and good moral character.

Third. It shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting such alien that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the State or Territory where such court is at the time held, one year at least; and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; but the oath of the applicant shall in no case be allowed to prove his residence.[1]

Titles of nobility to be renounced.

Fourth. In case the alien applying to be admitted to citizenship has borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or state from which he came, he shall, in addition to the above requisites, make an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility in the court to which his application is made, and his renunciation shall be recorded in the court.

Persons residing in the United States before Jan. 29, 1795.

Fifth. Any alien who was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States before the twenty-ninth day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, may be admitted to become a citizen, on due proof made to some one of the courts above specified, that he has resided two years, at least, within the jurisdiction of the United States, and one year, at least, immediately preceding his appliction, within the State or Territory where such court is at the time held; and on his declaring on oath that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegience and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whereof he was before a citizen or subject; and, also, on its appearing to the satisfaction of the court, that during such term of two years he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; and where the alien, applying for admission to citizenship, has borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or state from which he came, on his, moreover, making in the court an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility. All of the proceedings, required in this condition to be performed in the court, shall be recorded by the clerk thereof.

[1] By the treaty of cession with Russia subjects of that nation inhabiting the Territory of Alaska at the date of the treaty, and continuing to remain such inhabitants for three years, became thereupon American citizens. But the treaty neither mentions nor refers to British subjects or the subjects of any foreign nation other than Russia. Such persons, therefore, residing in the Territory, can become citizens only in the mode and form prescribed by the United States naturalization laws. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., par. 400.

Persons residing between June 18, 1798, and June 18, 1812.

Mar. 22, 1816, c. 31, s. 2, v. 3, p. 259, May 24, 1828, c. 116, s. 2, v. 4, p. 310.

Sixth. Any alien who was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, between the eighteenth day of June, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and the eighteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and twelve, and who has continued to reside within the same, may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States without having made any previous declaration of his intention to become such; but whenever any person, without a certificate of such declaration of intention, makes application to be admitted a citizen, it must be proved to the satisfaction of the court that the applicant was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States before the eighteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and twelve, and has continued to reside within the same; and the residence of the applicant within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, for at least five years immediately preceding the time of such application, must be proved by the oath of citizens of the United States, which citizens shall be named in the record as witnesses; and such continued residence within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, when satisfactorily proved, and the place where the applicant has resided for at least five years shall be stated and set forth, together with the names of such citizens, in the record of the court admitting the applicant; otherwise the same shall not entitle him to be considered and deemed a citizen of the United States.

Declaration of intention, how made.

Feb. 1, 1876, c. 5, v. 19, p. 2.

Sec. 2165, R.S.

1881. That the declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, required by section two thousand one hundred and sixty-five of the Revised Statutes of the United States, may be made by an alien before the clerk of any of the courts named in said section two thousand one hundred and sixty-five; and all such declarations heretofore made before any such clerk are hereby declared as legal and valid as if made before one of the courts named in said section.

Aliens honorably discharged from military service.
July 17, 1862, c. 200, s. 21, v. 12, p. 597.
Sec. 2166, R.S.

1882. Any alien of the age of twenty-one years and upward, who has enlisted, or may enlist, in the armies of the United States, either the regular or volunteer forces, and has been, or may be hereafter, honorably discharged, shall be admitted to become a citizen of the United States, upon his petition, without any previous declaration of his intention to become such; and he shall not be required to prove more than one year's residence within the United States previous to his application to become such citizen; and the court admitting such alien shall, in addition to such proof of residence and good moral character, as now provided by law, be satisfied by competent proof of such person's having been honorably discharged from the service of the United States.[1]

Aliens honorably discharged from the naval service.
July 26, 1894, v. 28, p. 124.

1883. Any alien of the age of twenty-one years and upward who has enlisted or may enlist in the United States Navy or Marine Corps, and has served or may hereafter serve five consecutive years in the United States Navy or one enlistment in the United States Marine Corps, and has been or may hereafter be honorably discharged, shall be admitted to become a citizen of the United States upon his petition, without any previous declaration of his intention to become such; and the court admitting such alien shall, in addition to proof of good moral character, be satisfied by competent proof of such person's service in and honorable discharge from the United States Navy or Marine Corps. Act of July 26, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 124).

[1] Aliens, honorably discharged after enlisting in our Army, are not, by such discharge alone, made citizens, but they are thereupon entitled (under a provision of the act of July 17, 1862, now section 2166, Revised Statutes) to be admitted to become citizens without previous declaration of intention, upon merely presenting to the proper court (see section 2165, Revised Statutes) a petition for the purpose, accompanied by proof of at least one year's residence within the United States previous to the application, of good moral character, and of the fact of honorable discharge. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 401.

Under the act of July 30, 1892, an enlisted man, to be eligible for promotion as commissioned officer, must be a citizen of the United States. And, in order to be promptly naturalized, under section 2166, Revised Statutes, he must first be honorably discharged. So, advised that such alien, to be qualified for examination and appointment under the act, should be discharged and, after naturalization, be reenlisted. Ibid., par. 403.

The mere enlistment and honorable discharge of an alien as a soldier of our Army do not per se constitute him a citizen of the United States. He must still make formal petition to one of the courts, etc., specified in section 2165, Revised Statutes, and present thereupon the evidence required by section 2166. Ibid., par. 736.

A native-born minor is a citizen of the United States under the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution. Ibid., par. 737.

Minor residents.
May 26, 1824, c. 186, s. 1, v. 4, p. 69.
Sec. 2167, R.S.

1884. Any alien, being under the age of twenty-one years, who has resided in the United States three years next preceding his arriving at that age, and who has continued to reside therein to the time he may make application to be admitted a citizen thereof, may, after he arrives at the age of twenty-one years, and after he has resided five years within the United States, including the three years of his minority, be admitted a citizen of the United States, without having made the declaration required in the first condition of section twenty-one hundred and sixty-five; but such alien shall make the declaration required therein at the time of his admission; and shall further declare, on oath, and prove to the satisfaction of the court, that, for two years next preceding, it has been his bona fide intention to become a citizen of the United States; and he shall in all other respects comply with the laws in regard to naturalization.

Mar. 26, 1804, c. 47, s. 2, v. 2, p. 293.
Sec. 2168, R.S.

1885. When any alien, who has complied with the first condition specified in section twenty-one hundred and sixty-five, dies before he is actually naturalized, the widow and the children of such alien shall be considered as citizens of the United States, and shall be entitled to all rights and privileges as such, upon taking the oaths prescribed[1] by law.

Aliens of African nativity and descent.
July 14, 1870, c. 254, s. 7, v. 16, p. 256; Feb. 18, 1875, c. 80, v. 18, p. 318.
Sec. 2169, R.S.

1886. The provisions of this Title[2] shall apply to aliens [being free white persons, and to aliens] of African nativity and to persons of African descent.

Residence required.
Mar. 3, 1813, c. 42, s. 12, v. 2, p. 811.
Sec. 2170, R.S.

1887. No alien shall be admitted to become a citizen who has not for the continued term of five years next preceding his admission resided within the United States.

Alien enemies not admitted.
Apr. 14, 1802, c. 28, s. 1, v. 2, p. 153; July 30, 1813, c. 36, v. 3, p. 53.
Sec. 2171, R.S.

1888. No alien who is a native citizen or subject, or a denizen of any country, state, or sovereignty with which the United States are at war, at the time of his application, shall be then admitted to become a citizen of the United States; but persons resident within the United States, or the Territories thereof, on the eighteenth day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twelve, who had before that day made a declaration, according to law, of their intention to become citizens of the United States, or who were on that day entitled to become citizens without making such declaration, may be admitted to become citizens thereof, notwithstanding they were alien enemies at the time and in the manner prescribed by the laws heretofore passed on that subject; nor shall anything herein contained be taken or construed to interfere with or prevent the apprehension and removal, agreeably to law, of any alien enemy at any time previous to the actual naturalization of such alien.

[1] Title XXVIII, Revised Statutes.

[2] The term "Indian country" contained in section 1 of the act of June 30, 1834 (4 Stat. L., 79), though not incorporated in the Revised Statutes, and though repealed simultaneously with their enactment, may be referred to in order to determine what is meant by the term when used in statutes; and it applies to all the country to which the Indian title has not been extinguished within the limits of the United States, whether within a reservation or not, and whether acquired before or since the passage of that act. Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S., 556; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S., 204. See also, as to the status of the Indian Territory, Cook v. U. S., 138 U. S., 157.

Held (October, 1877) that the term "Indian country," as employed in the statutes regulating trade and intercourse with the Indians (see, particularly, Ch. IV, Title XXVIII, Rev. Stat.), might properly be defined in general as including the following territory, viz: Indian reservations occupied by Indian tribes; other districts so occupied to which the Indian title has not been extinguished; any districts not in other respects Indian country over which the operation of those statutes may be extended by treaty or act of Congress. Sec. 2131, R.S.

1964. The superintendent of the district shall have power to revoke and cancel any license to trade within the Indian country whenever the person licensed has, in his opinion, transgressed any of the laws or regulations provided for the government of trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, or whenever, in his opinion, it is improper to permit such person to remain in the Indian country. No trade with the tribes shall be carried on within their boundary except at certain suitable and convenient places, to be designated from time to time by the superintendents, agents, and subagents, and to be inserted in the license. The persons granting or revoking such licenses shall forthwith report the same to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for his approval or disapproval.[1]

Prohibition of trade by the President.

Under section 2139, Revised Statutes, and the act of July 23, 1892, chapter 234, amending that section and extending it to beer and other malt liquors, the Secretary of War is without authority to permit the introduction into that country of any spirituous or malt liquors intended for sale. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1500.

Where an enlisted Indian soldier belongs to a tribe which remains "under the charge of any Indian superintendent or agent," it is an offense under section 2139, Revised Statutes, to sell him spirituous liquor. Otherwise if he be attached to no such tribe and is under no such "charge." (a) Ibid., par. 1508.

Held that there was no statute of the United States under which the selling of spirituous liquor to Indian soldiers (not under the charge of an Indian agent) stationed on a United States military reservation, by a civilian making the sales off the reservation, could be punished as an offense. Ibid., par. 1510.

In view of the terms of the act of May 21, 1884, establishing a civil government for Alaska, held that the military authorities could no longer legally issue permits for the introduction of liquors into Alaska under G. O. 57 of 1874; section 14 of said act being deemed impliedly to repeal, as to Alaska, that portion of section 2139, Revised Statutes, which empowered the Secretary of War to authorize such introduction. (b) Ibid., par. 1502.

1983. If any superintendent of Indian affairs, Indian agent, or subagent, or commanding officer of any military post has reason to suspect or is informed that any white person or Indian is about to introduce or has introduced any spirituous liquor or wine into the Indian country in violation of law, such superintendent, agent, subagent, or commanding officer may cause the boats, stores, packages, wagons, sleds, and places of deposit of such person to be searched; and if any such liquor is found therein, the same, together with the boats, teams, wagons, and sleds used in conveying the same, and also the goods, packages, and peltries of such person, shall be seized and delivered to the proper officer, and shall be proceeded against by libel in the proper court, and forfeited, one-half to the informer and the other half to the use of the United States; and if such person be a trader his license shall be revoked and his bond put in suit. It shall, moreover, be the duty of any person in the service of the United States or of any Indian to take and destroy any ardent spirits or wine found in the Indian country, except such as may be introduced therein by the War Department. In all cases arising under this and the preceding section Indians shall be competent witnesses.[2]

[1] The above statute relates to the Indian Territory, and is for that reason not operative elsewhere. The act of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 81, 97), establishing a temporary government for Oklahoma Territory, confers original jurisdiction upon the United States court for the Indian Territory to enforce the provisions of Title XXVIII, chapters three and four of the Revised Statutes, except as to the offenses defined and embraced in sections 2142 and 2143 of the Revised Statutes. Concurrent jurisdiction over the offenses defined in section 2139 was conferred upon this court in connection with the United States courts for the western district of Arkansas and the eastern district of Texas.

[2] The act of July 4, 1884, provides that no part of section twenty-one hundred and thirty-nine or of section twenty-one hundred and forty of the Revised Statutes shall be a bar to the prosecution of any officer, soldier, sutler or storekeeper, attaché, or employee of the Army of the United States who shall barter, donate, or furnish in any manner whatsoever liquors, wines, beer, or any intoxicating beverage whatsoever to any Indian. 23 Stat. L., 94.

In view of the positive terms of section 2140, Revised Statutes, an officer of the Army not only may but should "take and destroy any ardent spirits or wine found in the Indian country except such as may be introduced therein by the War Department." The section imposes this as a "duty" upon "any person in the service of the United States," including, of course, military as well as civil officials. Held, however, that the authority given by the statute to destroy liquor brought into an Indian reservation did not authorize the destruction by the military of a building, the private property of a citizen, in which the liquor was found stored. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1503.

In view of the duty devolved by section 2140, Revised Statutes, upon "any person in the service of the United States," to take and destroy spirituous liquors in the Indian country, held that a post commander in such country who seized and destroyed a quantity of such liquors introduced into such country without the authority of the Secretary of War, but not found within the limits of his military command, had not exceeded his powers. Ibid., par. 1504.

1984. No part of section twenty-one hundred and thirty-nine or of section twenty-one hundred and forty of the Revised Statutes shall be a bar to the prosecution of any officer, soldier, sutler or storekeeper, attaché, or employee of the Army of the United States who shall barter, donate, or furnish in any manner whatsoever liquors, wines, beer, or any intoxicating beverage whatsoever to any Indian.[1] Act of July 4, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 94).

[1] Neither the provisions of the treaty with the Sioux Indians of 1868 (15 Stat. L., 635), nor the provision embodied in the act of February 28, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 256), that they "shall be subject to the laws of the United States," nor any other provision in that agreement or act, operated to repeal the provision of section 2146 of the Revised Statutes, which excepts from the general jurisdiction of the courts of the United States over offenses committed in the Indian country, "crimes committed by one Indian against the person or property of another Indian," and offenses committed in Indian country by an Indian who has been punished by the local law of the tribe; and offenses where by treaty stipulation the exclusive jurisdiction over the same is or may be secured to the Indian tribes, respectively. Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S., 556.

The United States circuit court has jurisdiction, under section 753, Revised Statutes, to inquire upon habeas corpus whether a member of an Indian tribe, in custody of State officers for violation of a State statute, is illegally restrained of his liberty in violation of a treaty with the Indian tribe, by virtue of which such Indian claimed the right to do the act alleged to be a violation of the State statute. In re Race Horse, 70 Fed. Rep., 598.

Indians, while preserving their tribal relations and residing upon a reservation set apart for them by the United States, are wards of the General Government and as such the subject of Federal authority, and the power to legislate for them is exclusively in Congress, and for acts committed within the limits of the reservation they are not subject to the criminal laws of the State. State v. Campbell, 55 N. W. Rep., 553. Independently of any question of title the Federal courts have jurisdiction, for, regarding the Indians as wards of the nation, the United States has full power to pass such laws as may be necessary to their protection and to punish all offenses committed against them within the limits of the reservation. U. S. v. Thomas, 151 U. S., 577.

Unless otherwise provided by treaty stipulations with an Indian tribe or by the act admitting the State into the Union, the criminal laws of the State, except so far as restricted by the authority of Congress, "to regulate commerce with the Indian tribes," extend to all crimes committed on an Indian reservation by persons other than tribal Indians. State v. Campbell, 55 N. W. Rep., 553.

The Territorial laws defining crimes and prescribing punishments therefor have no application to Indian reservations, where Congress has, by special enactment, created the same offenses and made them punishable under the laws of the United States. Goodson v. U. S., 54 Pac. Rep., 423.

[2] The offense of assault with intent to commit rape, committed by an Indian upon an Indian woman, both residing upon an Indian reservation, is not cognizable as a crime by any statute of the United States, and the United States courts have no jurisdiction of such offense. The supreme court of the District of Columbia has jurisdiction of an offense committed by one Indian upon another Indian when committed outside the Indian country. In re Wolf, 27 Fed. Rep., 60. The prohibition against the jurisdiction of the United States courts to try an Indian for an offense committed on another Indian applies only when the offense is committed in the Indian country. When the Indian commits a crime outside the Indian country (although that crime may be on another Indian) he is, like any other person, amenable to the criminal laws of the place where the crime is committed. Pablo v. People, 46 Pac. Rep., 636.

[1] A contract by an Indian to cut and deliver to a purchaser a certain quantity of dead timber from a reservation, "more or less," or "about," and which is approved by the President under the act of February 16, 1889, limits the quantity to which the purchaser can obtain title thereunder to that stated; allowance being made only for immaterial and accidental variation. U. S. v. Pine River Logging Co., 90 Fed. Rep., 907. The timber on Indian reservations belongs to the United States, and, in the absence of legislative authority, the Indians have no authority to cut or dispose of it. Ibid. The act empowering the President to authorize Indians to cut and remove from their reservations "dead timber" includes in that designation trees still living, but vitally injured, so that they will die in a short time, but not living and uninjured trees merely because they stand among trees a large proportion of which are dead. Ibid. It is not unlawful for an Indian having a contract, approved by the President, to cut and deliver a certain quantity of dead timber from a reservation, to permit other Indians to cut and deliver timber thereunder in his name. Ibid.

[2] Under section 2147, Revised Statutes, authorizing the use of the military in the removal from the Indian country of "persons found therein contrary to law," held that the President was authorized to direct that a company of United States troops be stationed in the Indian Territory near the Kansas line to act as a patrol, and to apprehend and return within that line any and all lawless persons, guilty of crimes committed in Kansas, who have escaped from justice into the Indian country. Dig. Opin. J. A. G. par. 1505.

Under the Constitution, the acts of Congress, and the regulations adopted by the Indian department, the power of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the agent acting under him and by his direction in removing any one not a member of an Indian tribe is a matter intrusted to the discretion of the Commissioner, and is not reviewable. Adams v. Freeman, 50 Pac. Rep., 135.

An order from a State court restraining an Indian agent from ousting trespassers from an Indian reservation should be disregarded as without jurisdiction. XX Opin. Att. Gen., 245.

An Indian agent has no authority forcibly to eject persons from land not within an Indian reservation, although it is inclosed in allotments made to Indians in fulfillment of a treaty stipulation, and may be restrained by injunction from so ejecting one who, before such allotment, entered the land as a homestead and made valuable improvements thereon. [1] Under section 2150, Revised Statutes, a military commander may be authorized and directed by the President to arrest by military force and deliver to the proper civil authorities for trial any white persons or Indians who may be in the Indian country engaged in furnishing liquor to Indians in violation of law, as also to prevent by military force the entry into such country of persons designing to introduce liquor therein contrary to law. Held that this authority to prevent was clearly an authority to arrest where arrests were found necessary to restrain persons attempting to introduce liquor or other inhibited property. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1506.

The troops of the United States can not be employed in the Indian Territory for the purpose of assisting in the preservation of the peace and the arrest of bandits and outlaws unless they are trespassing upon Indian country, or absconding offenders within the provisions of section 2152 of the Revised Statutes. XXI Opin. Att. Gen., 72.

Whatever may be the rule in time of war and in the presence of actual hostilities, military officers can no more protect themselves than civilians for actual wrongs committed in time of peace under orders emanating from a source which is itself without authority in the premises. Hence a military officer seizing liquors supposed to be in Indian country when they are not is liable to an action as a trespasser. Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S., 204.

Officers of the Army making arrests under section 23 of the act of June 30, 1834 (4 Stat. L., 732; sec. 2150, Revised Statutes), act as officers of civil law. To justify such arrests there must be strong probable cause. In re Carr, 3 Sawyer, 316.

The troops of the United States can not be employed in the Indian Territory to aid in the preservation of the peace and in the arrest of alleged "outlaws" and "bandits" unless such persons are trespassing, or are absconding offenders within the provisions of section 2152, Revised Statutes. 2006. The superintendents, agents, and subagents shall endeavor to procure the arrest and trial of all Indians accused of committing any crime, offense, or misdemeanor, and of all other persons who may have committed crimes or offenses within any State or Territory, and have fled into the Indian country, either by demanding the same of the chiefs of the proper tribe, or by such other means as the President may authorize. The President may direct the military force of the United States to be employed in the apprehension of such Indians, and also in preventing or terminating hostilities between any of the Indian tribes.[1]

[1] Held that under section 2152, Revised Statutes, the military forces may, by the authority of the President, be employed to assist in making the arrest of Indians concerned in the killing of cattle and committing of depredations on the frontier, provided their offenses were committed in the Indian country or by Indians under the legal charge of an Indian agent. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1507.

Held that in the execution of process of arrest under the act of March 3, 1885 (rendering Indians amenable to the criminal laws of the Territories), the military may, by direction of the President, legally be employed to aid the civil officials in such arrests, such employment being expressly authorized by section 2152, Revised Statutes. Ibid., par. 490.

2010. All officers and agents of the Army and Indian Bureaus are prohibited, except in a case specially directed by the President, from granting permission in writing or otherwise to any Indian or Indians on any reservation to go into the State of Texas under any pretext whatever; and any officer or agent of the Army or Indian Bureau who shall violate this provision shall be dismissed from the public service. And the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed and required to take at once such other reasonable measures as may be necessary in connection with said prohibition to prevent said Indians from entering said State. *Sec. 4, act of May 11, 1880 (21 Stat. 2016. Whenever insurrection, domestic violence, unlawful combinations, or conspiracies in any State so obstructs or hinders the execution of the laws thereof, and of the United States, as to deprive any portion or class of the people of such State of any of the rights, privileges, or immunities, or protection, named in the Constitution and secured by the laws for the protection of such rights, privileges, or immunities, and the constituted authorities of such State are unable to protect, or, from any cause, fail in or refuse protection of the people in such rights, such facts shall be deemed a denial by such State of the equal protection of the laws to which they are entitled under the Constitution of the United States; and in all such cases, or whenever any such insurrection, violence, unlawful combination or conspiracy, opposes or obstructs the laws of the United States, or the due execution thereof, or impedes or obstructs the due course of justice under the same, it shall be lawful for the President, and it shall be his duty, to take such measures, by the employment of the militia or the land and naval forces of the United States, or of either, or by other means, as he may deem necessary, for the suppression of such insurrection, domestic violence, or combinations.[1]

July 29, 1861, c. 25, s. 1, v. 12, p. 281.
Sec. 5298, R.S.

2017. Whenever, by reason of unlawful obstructions, combinations, or assemblages of persons, or rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, it shall become impracticable, in the judgment of the President, to enforce, by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, the laws of the United States within any State or Territory, it shall be lawful for the President to call forth the militia of any or all the States, and to employ such parts of the land and naval forces of the United States as he may deem necessary to enforce the faithful execution of the laws of the United States, or to suppress such rebellion, in whatever State or Territory thereof the laws of the United States may be forcibly opposed, or the execution thereof forcibly obstructed.[2]

[1] The power to enforce its laws and to execute its functions in all places does not derogate from the power of the State to execute its laws at the same time and in the same places. The one does not exclude the other except where both can not be executed at the same time. In that case the words of the Constitution itself show which is to yield; "this Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; * * * shall be the supreme law of the land."

Although no State could establish and maintain a permanent military government, yet it may use its military power to put down an armed insurrection too strong to be controlled by the civil authority. The State must determine for itself what degree of force the crisis demands. Luther v. Borden, 7 How., 1. See also XVI Opin. Att. Gen., 162. See also note to paragraph 2018, post.

[2] The National Government has the right to use physical force in any part of the United States to compel obedience to its laws, and to carry into execution the powers conferred upon it by the Constitution. "We hold it to be an incontrovertible principle that the Government of the United States may, by means of physical force, exercised through its official agents, execute on every foot of American soil the powers and functions that belong to it." Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S., 371, 395; U. S. v. Neagle, 135 U. S., 1, 60; Logan v. U. S., 144, U. S., 263, 294; in re Waite, 81 Fed. Rep., 359; U. S. v. Debs, 164, U. S. 724; U. ries resulting from his military orders or acts; nor could he be required by a civil tribunal to justify or explain them upon any allegation of the injured party that they were not justified by military necessity. He was subject to the laws of war, and amenable only to his own Government. Dorr v. Johnson, 100 U. S., 158; Luther v. Borden, 7 Howard, 1, 46.

As a necessary incident of the power to declare and prosecute war, the Federal Government has a right to transport troops through and over the territory of any State of the Union. Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall., 35. See also XVI Opin. Att. Gen., 162; XVII ibid., 242, 333; XIX ibid., 293, and note to par. 2072, post.

[1] Under article 4, section 4, of the Constitution, the Army may be employed to protect a State from "invasion" or "domestic violence" only by order of the President, made "on application of the legislature, or of the executive when the legislature can not be convened." A military commander, of whatever rank or command, can have no authority, except by the order thus made of the President, to furnish troops to a governor or other functionary of a State, to aid him in making arrests or establishing law and order. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 483.

The proviso of the Constitution, "when the legislature can not be convened," may be said to mean when it is not in session, or can not, by the State law, be assembled forthwith or in time to provide for the emergency. When it is in session, or can legally and at once be called together, it will not be lawful for the President to employ the army on the application merely of the governor. Ibid., par. 484.

Where calls are made upon the President, under section 4, article 4, of the Constitution, by two persons, each claiming to be governor of the same State, to protect the State against domestic violence, it of necessity devolves upon the President to determine, before giving the required aid, which of such persons is the lawful incumbent of the office. XIV Opin. Att. Gen., 391; VII ibid., 8; Prize Cases, 2 Black, 97; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 Howard, 373; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wallace, 129.

A military force employed according to article 4, section 4, of the Constitution, is to remain under the direction and orders of the President as Commander in Chief and his military subordinates; it can not be placed under the direct orders or exclusive disposition of the governor of the State. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 485.

In all cases of civil disorders or domestic violence it is the duty of the Army to preserve an attitude of indifference and inaction till ordered to act by the President, by the authority of the Constitution or of section 2150, 5297, or 5298, Revised Statutes, or other public statute. An officer or soldier may, indeed, interfere to arrest a person in the act of committing a crime, or to prevent a breach of the peace in his presence, but this he does as a citizen and not in his military capacity. Any combined effort by the military, as such, to make arrests or otherwise prevent breaches of the peace or violations of law in civil cases, except by the order of the President or the requirement of a United States official authorized to require their services on a posse comitatus, must necessarily be illegal. In a case of civil disturbance in violation of the laws of a State, a military commander can not volunteer to intervene with his command without incurring a personal responsibility for his acts. In the absence of the requisite orders he may not even march or array his command for the purpose of exerting a moral effect or any effect in terrorem; such a demonstration, indeed, could only compromise the authority of the United States, while insulting the sovereignty of the State. Ibid., par. 488.

See also General Orders, No. 26, Adjutant-General's Office, of 1894 (A. R., 487), for instructions as to the use of the military force in support of the civil authority.

Whenever the United States are invaded, or are in imminent danger of invasion from any foreign nation or Indian tribe, or of rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, it shall be lawful for the President to call forth such number of the militia of the State or States, most convenient to the place of danger, or scene of action, as he may deem necessary to repel such invasion, or to suppress such rebellion, and to issue his orders for that purpose to such officers of the militia as he may think proper.[2]

[1] See XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 333. Section 2 of the act of May 4, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 113), contained the requirement "that no money appropriated in this act is appropriated or shall be paid for the subsistence, equipment, transportation, or compensation of any portion of the Army of the United States to be used as a police force to keep the peace at the polls at any election held within any State: Provided, That nothing in this provision shall be construed to prevent the use of troops to protect against domestic violence in each of the States on application of the legislature thereof or of the executive when the legislature can not be convened."

[2] The act of February 28, 1795 (1 Stat. L., 424), authorizing the President, under certain circumstances, to call out the militia, is constitutional, and the President is the final judge of the emergency justifying such a call. Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat., 19. By this act the power of deciding whether the exigency had arisen upon which the Government of the United States is bound to interfere is given to the President. He is to act upon the application of the legislature, or of the executive, and consequently he must determine what body of men constitute the legislature, and who is the governor before he can act. The fact that both parties claim the right to the government can not alter the case, for both can not be entitled to it. If there is an armed conflict, like the one of which we are speaking, it is a case of domestic violence, and one of the parties must be in insurrection against the lawful government. And the President must, of necessity, decide which is the government, and which party is unlawfully arrayed against it, before he can perform the duty imposed upon him by the act of Congress. Luther v. Borden, 7 How., I, II.

In the case of Houston v. Moore (5 Wheat., 1), it was decided that although a militiaman who refused to obey the orders of the President calling him into the public service was not, in the sense of the act of February 28, 1795, "employed in the service of the United States," so as to be subject to the Rules and Articles of War, yet that he was liable to be tried for the offense under the fifth section of the same act, by court-martial called under the authority of the United States. The great doubt in that case was whether the delinquent was liable to be tried for the offense by a court-martial organized under State authority. Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat., 19, 34.

L., 729), though not incorporated in the Revised Statutes, and though repealed simultaneously with their enactment, may be referred to in order to determine what is meant by the term when used in statutes; and it applies to all the country to which the Indian title has not been extinguished within the limits of the United States, whether within a reservation or not, and whether acquired before or since the passage of the act or not. Sec. 5304, R.S.

2032. The President may, in his discretion, license and permit commercial intercourse with any part of such State or section, the inhabitants of which are so declared in a state of insurrection, so far as may be necessary to authorize supplying the necessities of loyal persons residing in insurrectionary States, within the lines of actual occupation by the military forces of the United States, as indicated by published order of the commanding general of the department or district so occupied; and, also, so far as may be necessary to authorize persons residing within such lines to bring or send to market in the loyal States any products which they shall have produced with their own labor or the labor of freedmen, or others employed and paid by them, pursuant to rules relating thereto, which may be established under proper authority. And no goods, wares, or merchandise shall be taken into a State declared in insurrection, or transported therein, except to and from such places and to such monthly amounts as shall have been previously agreed upon, in writing, by the commanding general of the department in which such places are situated, and an officer designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for that purpose. Such commercial intercourse shall be in such articles and for such time and by such persons as the President, in his discretion, may think most conducive to the public interest; and, so far as by him licensed, shall be conducted and carried on only in pursuance of rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.[1]

Appointment and compensation of officers.

Sec. 5305, R.S.

2033. The Secretary of the Treasury may appoint such officers at places where officers of the customs are not now authorized by law as may be needed to carry into effect such licenses, rules, and regulations. In all cases where officers of the customs, or other salaried officers, are appointed by him to carry into effect such licenses, rules, and regulations, such officer shall be entitled to receive one thousand dollars a year for his services, in addition to his salary or compensation under any other law. But the aggregate compensation of any such officer shall not exceed the sum of five thousand dollars in any one year.

July 2, 1864, c. 225, s. 10, v. 13, p. 377.

2034. Every officer of the United States, civil, military, or naval, and every sutler, soldier, marine, or other person, who takes or causes to be taken into a State declared to be in insurrection, or to any other point to be thence taken into such State, or who transports or sells, or otherwise disposes of therein, any goods, wares, or merchandise whatsoever, except in pursuance of license and authority of the President, as provided in this title, or who makes any false statement or representation upon which license and authority is granted for such transportation, sale, or other disposition, or who, under any license or authority obtained, willfully and knowingly transports, sells, or otherwise disposes of any other goods, wares, or merchandise than such as are in good faith so licensed and authorized, or who willfully and knowingly transports, sells, or disposes of the same, or any portion thereof, in violation of the terms of such license or authority, or of any rule or regulation prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury concerning the same, or who is guilty of any act of embezzlement, of willful misappropriation of public or private money or property, of keeping false accounts, or of willfully making any false returns, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, and imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than three years. Violations of this section shall be cognizable before any court, civil or military, competent to try the same.

Investigations to detect frauds.
Ibid.
Sec. 5307, R.S.

2035. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, from time to time, to institute such investigations as may be necessary to detect and prevent frauds and abuses in any trade or transactions which may be licensed between inhabitants of loyal States and of States in insurrection. And the agents making such investigations shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses, and to make examinations on oath.

Confiscation of property employed in aid of insurrection.
Aug. 6, 1861, c. 60, s. 1, v. 12, p. 319.
Sec. 5308, R.S.

2036. Whenever during any insurrection against the Government of the United States, after the President shall have declared by proclamation that the laws of the United States are opposed, and the execution thereof obstructed, by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, or by the power vested in the marshals by law, any person, or his agent, attorney, or employé, purchases or acquires, sells or gives, any property of whatsoever kind or description, with intent to use or employ the same, or suffers the same to be used or employed in aiding, abetting, or promoting such insurrection or resistance to the laws, or any person engaged therein; or being the owner of any such property, knowingly uses or employs, or consents to such use or employment of the same, all such property shall be lawful subject of prize and capture wherever found; and it shall be the duty of the President to cause the same to be seized, confiscated, and condemned.[1]

Proceedings, where had.

Aug. 6, 1861, c. 60, s. 2, v. 12, p. 319; Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, v. 19, p. 253.

Sec. 5309, R.S.

2037. Such prizes and capture shall be condemned in the district or circuit court of the United States having jurisdiction of the amount, or in admiralty in any district in which the same [may] be seized, or into which they may be taken and proceedings first instituted.

Property taken on inland waters.

July 2, 1864, c. 225, s. 7, v. 13, p. 377.

Sec. 5310, R.S.

2038. No property seized or taken upon any of the inland waters of the United States by the naval forces thereof shall be regarded as maritime prize; but all property so seized or taken shall be promptly delivered to the proper officers of the courts.

How proceedings shall be instituted.

Aug. 6, 1861, c. 68, s. 3, v. 12, p. 319.

Sec. 5311, R.S.

2039. The Attorney-General, or the attorney of the United States for any judicial district in which such property may at the time be, may institute the proceedings of condemnation, and in such case they shall be wholly for the benefit of the United States; or any person may file an information with such attorney, in which case the proceedings shall be for the use of such informer and the United States in equal parts.[2]

Prohibition upon transportation of goods to aid insurrection.

May 20, 1862, c. 81, s. 3, v. 12, p. 404.

Sec. 5312, R.S.

2040. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prohibit and prevent the transportation in any vessel, or upon any railroad, turnpike, or other road or means of transportation within the United States, of any property, whatever may be the ostensible destination of the same, in all cases where there are satisfactory reasons to believe that such property is intended for any place in the possession or under the control of insurgents against the United States, or that there is imminent danger that such property will fall into the possession or under the control of such insurgents; and he is further authorized, in all cases where he deems it expedient so to do, to require reasonable security to be given that property shall not be transported to any place under insurrectionary control, and shall not, in any way, be used to give aid or comfort to such insurgents;

Prohibition upon trade in captured or abandoned property.
July 2, 1864, c. 325, s. 10, v. 13, p. 277.
Sec. 5313, R. S.

2041. All persons in the military or naval service of the United States are prohibited from buying or selling, trading, or in any way dealing in captured or abandoned property, whereby they shall receive or expect any profit, benefit, or advantage to themselves, or any other person, directly or indirectly connected with them; and it shall be the duty of such person whenever such property comes into his possession or custody, or within his control, to give notice thereof to some agent, appointed by virtue of this Title, and to turn the same over to such agent without delay. Any officer of the United States, civil, military, or naval, or any sutler, soldier, or marine, or other person who shall violate any provision of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, and imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than three years. Violations of this section shall be cognizable before any court, civil or military, competent to try the same.

Change of port of entry in case of insurrection.
July 13, 1861, c. 3, s. 1, v. 12, p. 255.
Sec. 5314, R. S.

2042. Whenever the President shall deem it impracticable, by reason of unlawful combinations of persons in opposition to the laws of the United States, to collect the duties on imports in the ordinary way, at any port of entry in any collection district, he may cause such duties to be collected at any port of delivery in the district until such obstruction ceases; in such case the surveyor at such port of delivery shall have the powers and be subject to all the obligations of a collector at a port of entry. The Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, shall also appoint such weighers, gaugers, measurers, inspectors, appraisers, and clerks as he may deem necessary, for the faithful execution of the revenue laws at such port of delivery, and shall establish the limits within which such port of delivery is constituted a port of entry. And all the provisions of law regulating the issue of marine papers, the coasting trade, the warehousing of imports, and the collection of duties, shall apply to the ports of entry thus constituted, in the same manner as they do to ports of entry established by law.

Mar. 3, 1875, c. 136, s. 2, v. 18, p. 469.

2043. Whenever, at any port of entry, the duties on imports can not, in the judgment of the President, be collected in the ordinary way, or by the course provided in the preceding section, by reason of the cause mentioned therein, he may direct that the custom-house for the district be established in any secure place within the district, either on land or on board any vessel in the district, or at sea near the coast; and in such case the collector shall reside at such place, or on shipboard, as the case may be, and there detain all vessels and cargoes arriving within or approaching the district, until the duties imposed by law on such vessels and their cargoes are paid in cash. But if the owner or consignee of the cargo on board any vessel thus detained, or the master of the vessel, desires to enter a port of entry in any other district where no such obstructions to the execution of the laws exist, the master may be permitted so to change the destination of the vessel and cargo in his manifest; whereupon the collector shall deliver him a written permit to proceed to the port so designated. And the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, shall make proper regulations for the enforcement on shipboard of such provisions of the laws regulating the assessment and collection of duties as in his judgment may be necessary and practicable.

Enforcement of preceding sections.
July 12, 1861, c. 3, s. 3, v. 12, p. 256.
Sec. 5316, R.S.

2044. It shall be unlawful to take any vessel or cargo detained under the preceding section from the custody of the proper officers of the customs, unless by process of some court of the United States; and in case of any attempt otherwise to take such vessel or cargo by any force, or combination, or assemblage of persons, too great to be overcome by the officers of the customs, the President, or such person as he shall have empowered for that purpose, may employ such part of the Army or Navy or militia of the United States, or such force of citizen volunteers as may be necessary, to prevent the removal of such vessel or cargo, and to protect the officers of the customs in retaining the custody thereof.

Entire district closed to entry.
Sec. 5317, R.S.

2045. Whenever, in any collection district, the duties on imports can not, in the judgment of the President, be collected in the ordinary way, nor in the manner provided by the three preceding sections, by reason of the cause mentioned in section fifty-three hundred and fourteen [Rev. Stat.],[1] the President may close the port of entry in that district; and shall in such case give notice thereof by proclamation. And thereupon all right of importation, warehousing, and other privileges incident to ports of entry shall cease and be discontinued at such port so closed until it is opened by the order of the President on the cessation of such obstructions. Every vessel from beyond the United States, or having on board any merchandise liable to duty, which attempts to enter any port which has been closed under this section, shall, with her tackle, apparel, furniture, and cargo, be forfeited.

Sec. 7, ibid.

2046. In the execution of laws providing for the collection of duties on imports and tonnage, the President, in addition to the revenue cutters in service, may employ in aid thereof such other suitable vessels as may, in his judgment, be required.

Forfeiture of vessels belonging to citizens of insurrectionary States.
Ibid.
Sec. 5319, R.S.

2047. From and after fifteen days after the issuing of the proclamation, as provided in section fifty-three hundred and one [Rev. Stat.],[1] any vessel belonging in whole or in part to any citizen or inhabitant of such State or part of a State whose inhabitants are so declared in a state of insurrection, found at sea, or in any port of the rest of the United States, shall be forfeited.[2]

Refusal of clearance to vessels laden with suspected merchandise.
May 20, 1862, c. 81, s. 1, v. 12, p. 404.
Sec. 5320, R.S.

2048. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to refuse a clearance to any vessel or other vehicle laden with merchandise, destined for a foreign or domestic port, whenever he shall have satisfactory reason to believe that such merchandise, or any part thereof, whatever may be its ostensible destination, is intended for ports in possession or under control of insurgents against the United States; and if any vessel for which a clearance or permit has been refused by the Secretary of the Treasury, or by his order, shall depart or attempt to depart for a foreign or domestic port without being duly cleared or permitted, such vessel, with her tackle, apparel, furniture, and cargo, shall be forfeited.

Bond upon clearance.
Sec. 5321, R.S.

2049. Whenever a permit or clearance is granted for either a foreign or domestic port, it shall be lawful for the collector of the customs granting the same, if he deems it necessary, under the circumstances of the case, to require a bond to be executed by the master or the owner of the vessel, in a penalty equal to the value of the cargo, and with sureties to the satisfaction of such collector, that the cargo shall be delivered at the destination for which it is cleared or permitted, and that no part thereof shall be used in affording aid or comfort to any person or parties in insurrection against the authority of the United States.

2050. In all cases wherein any vessel, or other property, is condemned in any proceeding by virtue of any laws relating to insurrection or rebellion, the court rendering judgment of condemnation shall, notwithstanding such condemnation, and before awarding such vessel, or other property, or the proceeds thereof, to the United States, or to any informer, first provide for the payment, out of the proceeds of such vessel, or other property, of any bona-fide claims which shall be filed by any loyal citizen of the United States, or of any foreign state or power at peace and amity with the United States, intervening in such proceeding, and which shall be duly established by evidence as a valid claim against such vessel, or other property, under the laws of the United States or any State thereof not declared to be in insurrection. No such claim shall be allowed in any case where the claimant has knowingly participated in the illegal use of such ship, vessel, or other property. This section shall extend to such claims only as might have been enforced specifically against such vessel, or other property, in any State not declared to be in insurrection, wherein such claim arose.[1]

2054. First. If two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire to prevent, by force, intimidation, or threat, any person from accepting or holding any office, trust, or place of confidence under the United States, or from discharging any duties thereof; or to induce by like means any officer of the United States to leave any State, district, or place, where his duties as an officer are required to be performed, or to injure him in his person or property on account of his lawful discharge of the duties of his office, or while engaged in the lawful discharge thereof, or to injure his property so as to molest, interrupt, hinder, or impede him in the discharge of his official duties;

Second. If two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire to deter, by force, intimidation, or threat, any party or witness in any court of the United States from attending such court, or from testifying to any matter pending therein, freely, fully, and truthfully, or to injure such party or witness in his person or property on account of his having so attended or testified, or to influence the verdict, presentment, or indictment of any grand or petit juror in any such court, or to injure such juror in his person or property on account of any verdict, presentment, or indictment lawfully assented to by him, or of his being or having been such juror; or if two or more persons conspire for the purpose of impeding, hindering, obstructing, or defeating, in any manner, the due course of justice in any State or Territory, with intent to deny to any citizen the equal protection of the laws, or to injure him or his property for lawfully enforcing, or attempting to enforce, the right of any person, or class of persons, to the equal protection of the laws;

Third. If two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire, or go in disguise on the highway or on the premises of another, for the purpose of depriving, either directly or indirectly, any person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges and immunities under the laws; or for the purpose of preventing or hindering the constituted authorities of any State or Territory from giving or securing to all persons within such State or Territory the equal protection of the laws; or if two or more persons conspire to prevent by force, intimidation, or threat, any citizen who is lawfully entitled to vote, from giving his support or advocacy in a legal manner, toward or in favor of the election of any lawfully qualified person as an elector for President or Vice-President, or as a member of Congress of the United States; or to injure any citizen in person or property on account of such support or advocacy; in any case of conspiracy set forth in this section, if one or more persons engaged therein do, or cause to be done, any act in furtherance of the object of such conspiracy, whereby another is injured in his person or property, or deprived of having and exercising any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States, the party so injured or deprived may have an action for the recovery of damages, occasioned by such injury or deprivation, against any one or more of the conspirators.

2055. Every person who, having knowledge that any of the wrongs conspired to be done, and mentioned in the preceding section, are about to be committed, and having power to prevent or aid in preventing the commission of the same, neglects or refuses so to do, if such wrongful act be committed, shall be liable to the party injured or his legal representatives, for all damages caused by such wrongful act, which such person by reasonable diligence could have prevented; and such damages may be recovered in an action on the case; and any number of persons guilty of such wrongful neglect or refusal may be joined as defendants in the action; and if the death of any party be caused by any such wrongful act and neglect, the legal representatives of the deceased shall have such action therefor, and may recover not exceeding five thousand dollars damages therein, for the benefit of the widow of the deceased, if there be one, and if there be no widow, then for the benefit of the next of kin of the deceased. But no action under the provisions of this section shall be sustained which is not commenced within one year after the cause of action has accrued.

District attorney, etc., to prosecute.
Apr. 9, 1866, c. 31, s. 4, v. 14, p. 28; May 31, 1870, c. 114, s. 9, v. 16, p. 142.
Sec. 1982, R.S.

2056. The district attorneys, marshals, and deputy marshals, the commissioners appointed by the circuit and territorial courts, with power to arrest, imprison, or bail offenders, and every other officer who is especially empowered by the President, are authorized and required, at the expense of the United States, to institute prosecutions against all persons violating any of the provisions of chapter seven of the Title "CRIMES," and to cause such persons to be arrested, and imprisoned or bailed, for trial before the court of the United States or the Territorial court having cognizance of the offense.

Commissioners.
Apr. 9, 1866, c. 13, s. 4, v. 14, p. 28; May 31, 1870, c. 114, s. 9, v. 16, p. 142.
Sec. 1983, R.S.

2057. The circuit courts of the United States and the district courts of the Territories, from time to time, shall increase the number of commissioners, so as to afford a speedy and convenient means for the arrest and examination of persons charged with the crimes referred to in the preceding section; and such commissioners are authorized and required to exercise all the powers and duties conferred on them herein with regard to such offenses in like manner as they are authorized by law to exercise with regard to other offenses against the laws of the United States.

They may appoint persons to execute warrants, etc.
Apr. 9, 1866, c. 31, s. 5, v. 14, p. 28; May 31, 1870, c. 114, s. 10, v. 16, p. 142.
Sec. 1984, R.S.

2058. The commissioners authorized to be appointed by the preceding section are empowered, within their respective counties, to appoint, in writing, under their hands, one or more suitable persons, from time to time, who shall execute all such warrants or other process as the commissioners may issue in the lawful performance of their duties, and the persons so appointed shall have authority to summon and call to their aid the bystanders or posse comitatus of the proper county, or such portion of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia, as may be necessary to the performance of the duty with which they are charged; and such warrants shall run and be executed anywhere in the State or Territory within which they are issued.

Marshal to obey precepts, etc.
Apr. 9 1866, c. 31, s. 5, v. 14, p. 28; May 31, 1870, c. 114, s. 10, v. 16, p. 142.
Sec. 1985, R.S.

2059. Every marshal and deputy marshal shall obey and execute all warrants or other process, when directed to him, issued under the provisions hereof.

Fees of district attorney, etc.
Apr. 9, 1866, c. 31, s. 7, v. 14, p. 29; May 31, 1871, c. 114, s. 12, v. 16, p. 143.
Sec. 1986, R.S.

2060. The district attorneys, marshals, their deputies, and the clerks of the courts of the United States and Territorial courts shall be paid for their services, in cases under the foregoing provisions, the same fees as are allowed to them for like services in other cases; and where the proceedings are before a commissioner he shall be entitled to a fee of ten dollars for his services in each case, inclusive of all services incident to the arrest and examination.

Of persons appointed to execute process, etc.
Apr. 9, 1866, c. 31, s. 7, v. 14, p. 29; May 31, 1870, c. 114, s. 12, v. 16, p. 143.
Sec. 1987, R. S.

2061. Every person appointed to execute process under section nineteen hundred and eighty-four [Rev. Stat.][1] shall be entitled to a fee of five dollars for each party he may arrest and take before the commissioner, with such other fees as may be deemed reasonable by the commissioner for any additional services necessarily performed by him, such as attending at the examination, keeping the prisoner in custody, and providing him with food and lodging during his detention, and until the final determination of the commissioner; such fees to be made up in conformity with the fees usually charged by the officers of the courts of justice within the proper district or county, as near as may be practicable, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States on the certificate of the judge of the district within which the arrest is made, and to be recoverable from the defendant as part of the judgment in case of conviction.

Speedy trial.
Apr. 9, 1866, c. 31, s. 8, v. 14, p. 29.
Sec. 1988, R. S.

2062. Whenever the President has reason to believe that offenses have been or are likely to be committed against the provisions of chapter seven of the Title CRIMES, within any judicial district, it shall be lawful for him, in his discretion, to direct the judge, marshal, and district attorney of such district to attend at such place within the district, and for such time, as he may designate, for the purpose of the more speedy arrest and trial of persons so charged, and it shall be the duty of every judge or other officer, when any such requisition is received by him, to attend at the place and for the time therein designated.

Aid of the military and naval forces.
Apr. 8, 1866, c. 31, s. 9, v. 14, p. 29; May 31, 1870, c. 114, s. 13, v. 16, p. 143.
Sec. 1989, R. S.

2063. It shall be lawful for the President of the United States, or such person as he may empower for that purpose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia, as may be necessary to aid in the execution of judicial process issued under any of the preceding provisions, or as shall be necessary to prevent the violation and enforce the due execution of the provisions of this Title.[2]

Peonage abolished.
Mar. 2, 1867, c. 187, s. 1, v. 14, p. 546.
Sec. 1990, R. S.

2064. The holding of any person to service or labor under the system known as peonage is abolished and forever prohibited in the Territory of New Mexico, or in any other Territory or State of the United States; and all acts, laws, resolutions, orders, regulations, or usages of the Territory of New Mexico, or of any other Territory or State, which have heretofore established, maintained, or enforced, or by virtue of which any attempt shall hereafter be made to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or indirectly, the voluntary or involuntary service or labor of any persons as peons, in liquidation of any debt or obligation, or otherwise, are declared null and void.

Foregoing section, how enforced.
Mar. 2, 1867, c. 187, s. 2, v. 14, p. 546.
Sec. 1991, R. S.

2065. Every person in the military or civil service in the Territory of New Mexico shall aid in the enforcement of the preceding section.

THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.

Interference with freedom of elections by officers of Army or Navy.
Feb. 25, 1865, c. 52, s. 1, v. 13, p. 437.
Sec. 2003, R. S.

2066. No officer of the Army or Navy of the United States shall prescribe or fix or attempt to prescribe or fix by proclamation, order, or otherwise the qualifications of voters in any State, or in any manner interfere with the freedom of any election in any State or with the exercise of the free right of suffrage in any State.

Race, color, or previous condition not to affect the right to vote.
May 31, 1870, c. 114, s. 1, v. 16, p. 140.
Sec. 2004, R. S.

2067. All citizens of the United States who are otherwise qualified by law to vote at any election by the people in any State, Territory, district, county, city, parish, township, school district, municipality, or other territorial subdivision shall be entitled and allowed to vote at all such elections without distinction of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, any constitution, law, custom, usage, or regulation of any State or Territory or by or under its authority to the contrary notwithstanding.[1]

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Quarantine. State health laws to be observed by United States officers, etc.
Feb. 23, 1799, c. 12, s. 1, v. 1, p. 619.
Sec. 4792, R. S.

2068. The quarantines and other restraints established by the health laws of any State respecting any vessels arriving in or bound to any port or district thereof shall be duly observed by the officers of the customs revenue of the United States, by the masters and crews of the several revenue cutters, and by the military officers commanding in any fort or station upon the seacoast; and all such officers of the United States shall faithfully aid in the execution of such quarantines and health laws according to their respective powers and within their respective precincts, and as they shall be directed from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury. But nothing in this Title shall enable any State to collect a duty of tonnage or impost without the consent of Congress.[1]

THE PUBLIC LANDS.

The public lands, felling timber, unlawful inclosures.
Sec. 2460, R.S.

2069. The President is authorized to employ so much of the land and naval forces of the United States as may be necessary effectually to prevent the felling, cutting down, or other destruction of the timber of the United States in Florida; and to prevent the transportation or carrying away any such timber as may be already felled or cut down; and to take such other and further measures as may be deemed advisable for the preservation of the timber of the United States in Florida.

Inclosure of public lands.
Feb. 25, 1885, s. 5, v. 23, p. 322.

2070. The President is hereby authorized to take such measures as shall be necessary to remove and destroy any unlawful inclosures of any of said [public] lands, and to employ civil or military force as may be necessary for that purpose.[2] Sec. 5, act of February 25, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 322).

Removal of trespassers.
s. 1, Mar. 3, 1807, v. 2, p. 445.

2071. That if any person or persons shall, after the passing of this act, take possession of, or make a settlement on any lands ceded or secured to the United States, by any treaty made with a foreign nation, or by a cession from any State to the United States, which lands shall not have been previously sold, ceded, or leased by the United States, or the claim to which lands, by such person or persons, shall not have been previously recognized and confirmed by the United States; or if any person or persons shall cause such lands to be thus occupied, taken possession of, or settled; or shall survey, or attempt to survey, or cause to be surveyed, any such lands; or designate any boundaries thereon, by marking trees, or otherwise, until thereto duly authorized by law; such offender or offenders, shall forfeit all his or their right, title, and claim, if any he hath, or they have, of whatsoever nature or kind the same shall or may be, to the lands aforesaid, which he or they shall have taken possession of, or settled, or cause to be occupied, taken possession of, or settled, or which he or they shall have surveyed, or attempt to survey, or cause to be surveyed, or the boundaries thereof he or they shall have designated, or cause to be designated, by marking trees or otherwise. And it shall moreover be lawful for the President of the United States, to direct the marshal, or officer acting as marshal, in the manner hereinafter directed, and also to take such other measures, and to employ such military force as he may judge necessary and proper, to remove from lands ceded, or secured to the United States, by treaty, or cession as aforesaid, any person or persons who shall hereafter take possession of the same, or make, or attempt to make, a settlement thereon, until thereunto authorized by law. * * * Sec. 1, act of March 3, 1807 (2 Stat. L., 445).

Jurisdiction of United States circuit courts.

Prosecuting officers.

SEC. 4. The several circuit courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this act; and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney-General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition, and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises.

[1] The neutrality act has been uniformly treated, by the Executive Departments and by judges of the United States courts, as embracing warlike enterprises set on foot in this country against a friendly power at peace with all the world. U. S. v. Sullivan, 9 N. Y. Leg. Obs., 257.

Neutrality, strictly speaking, consists in abstinence from any participation in a public, private, or civil war, and in impartiality of conduct toward both parties; but the maintenance unbroken of peaceful relations between two powers when the domestic peace of one of them is disturbed is not neutrality in the sense in which the word is used when the disturbance has acquired such head as to have demanded the recognition of belligerency; and, as mere matter of municipal administration, no nation can permit unauthorized acts of war within its territory in infraction of its sovereignty, while good faith toward friendly nations requires their prevention. The Three Friends, 166 U. S., 1.

The organization, in one country or State, of combinations to aid or abet rebellion in another, or in any other way to act on its political institutions, is a violation of national amity and comity, and an act of semihostile interference with the affairs of other peoples. * * * But there is no municipal law to forbid and punish such combinations, either in the United States or Great Britain. VIII Opin. Att. Gen., 216.

The policy of this country is, and ever has been, a perfect neutrality and noninterference in the quarrels of other nations. III Opin. Att. Gen., 739.

The act of April 30, 1818, like that of June 5, 1794, was intended to secure, beyond all risk of violation, the neutrality and pacific policy which they consecrate as our fundamental law. Ibid., 741.

In the absence of express authority from Congress, an officer of the Army can not accept remuneration from a foreign power, in return for military or other public service rendered, without a violation of Art. I, sec. 9, par. 7, of the Constitution. (a) Nor can such an officer (in the absence of such authority) properly be granted a leave of absence for the purpose of rendering foreign service, even without compensation, since such a proceeding would be contrary to the spirit and intent of the laws relating to the Army, which clearly contemplate that the services of its officers shall be rendered to the United States. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1375.

[2] The enlistment of seamen or others for marine service on Mexican steamers in New York, they not being Mexicans transiently within the United States, is a clear violation of this section, and the persons enlisted, as well as the officers enlisting them, are liable to the penalties thereby incurred. IV Opin. Att. Gen., 336.

This section applies to foreign consuls raising troops in the United States for the military service of Great Britain. VII ibid., 367. It does not apply to those who go

2081. Every person who, within the limits of the United States, fits out and arms, or attempts to fit out and arm, or procures to be fitted out and armed, or knowingly is concerned in the furnishing, fitting out, or arming, of any vessel, with intent that such vessel shall be employed in the service of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, to cruise or commit hostilities against the subjects, citizens, or property of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, with whom the United States are at peace, or who issues or delivers a commission within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States, for any vessel, to the intent that she may be so employed, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than ten thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than three years. And every such vessel, with her tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all materials, arms, ammunition, and stores which may have been procured for the building and equipment thereof, shall be forfeited; one-half to the use of the informer and the other half to the use of the United States.[2] abroad for foreign enlistment, or to those who transport such persons. U. S. v. Kazinski, 2 Sprague, 7. The enlistment must be made within the territory of the United States, and the section does not apply to one who goes abroad with intent there to enlist. Ibid. The words "soldier" and "enlist" as used in this section are to be understood in their technical sense. Ibid.; U. S. v. O'Brien, 75 Fed. Rep., 900.

[2] To constitute an offense under this section, the vessel must be fitted out and armed with the specific intent. U. S. v. Skinner, 1 Brun. Coll. Cases. It is not necessary that the vessel should be armed or manned for the purpose of committing hostilities, before she leaves the United States, if it is the intention that she shall be so fitted subsequently (The City of Mexico, 28 F. R., 148). or if the separate parts of the expedition are to be united on the high seas. U. S. v. The Mary N. Hogan, 18 Fed. Rep., 529, and 20 ibid., 50; The Carondelet, 37 Fed. Arming vessel to cruise against citizens of the United States.
Sec. 4, ibid.

2082. Every citizen of the United States who, without the limits thereof, fits out and arms, or attempts to fit out and arm, or procures to be fitted out and armed, or knowingly aids or is concerned in furnishing, fitting out, or arming any private vessel of war, or privateer, with intent that such vessel shall be employed to cruise or commit hostilities upon the citizens of the United States or their property, or who takes the command of or enters on board of any such vessel for such intent, or who purchases any interest in any such vessel, with a view to share in the profits thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and fined not more than ten thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than ten years. And the trial for such offense, if committed without the limits of the United States, shall be in the district in which the offender shall be apprehended or first brought.

Augmenting force of foreign vessel of war.

I know of no law or regulation which forbids any person, or government, whether the political designation be real or assumed, from purchasing arms from the citizens of the United States and shipping them at the risk of the purchaser. X Opin. Att. Gen., 452. The sending of munitions of war from a neutral country to a belligerent port for sale, as articles of commerce , is unlawful only as subjecting such property to capture. The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat., 283; The City of Mexico, 24 F. R., 924. It is the right of a belligerent to purchase goods and instruments of war in a neutral nation, but it may be denied by a law passed for such purpose. X Opin. Att. Gen., 61.

The provisions of this section do not apply to a vessel which receives arms and munition of war in this country, as cargo merely, with intent to carry them to a party of insurgents in a foreign country, but not with the intent that they shall constitute any part of the fittings or furnishings of the vessel herself. U. S. v. The Itata, 56 F. R., 608; U. S. v. 2,000 Cases of Rifles, ibid. A vessel is not liable to forfeiture under this section, nor is she liable to condemnation as piratical, on the ground that she is in the employ of an insurgent party which has not been recognized by the United States as having belligerent rights. In the case of the Horsa, Wiborg v. U. S., 163 U. S. 632, decided on appeal in the Supreme Court of the United States on May 25, 1896, it was held "that any combination of men organized to go to Cuba to make war upon its government, provided with arms and ammunition, constitutes a military expedition. It is not necessary that the men shall be drilled, put in uniform, or prepared for efficient service, nor that they shall have been organized as or according to the tactics or rules which relate to what is known as infantry, cavalry, or artillery. It is sufficient that they shall have combined and organized here to go there and make war on a foreign government, and to have provided themselves with the means of doing so. Whether such provision, as by arming, etc., is necessary need not to be decided in this case. Nor is it important that they intended to make war as an independent body or in connection with others. Where men go without such combination and organization to enlist as individuals in a foreign army, they do not constitute such military expedition, and the fact that the vessel carrying them might carry arms as merchandise would not be important." concerned in increasing or augmenting, the force of any ship of war, cruiser, or other armed vessel, which at the time of her arrival within the United States was a ship of war, or cruiser, or armed vessel, in the service of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, or belonging to the subjects or citizens of any such prince or state, colony, district, or people, the same being at war with any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, with whom the United States are at peace, by adding to the number of the guns of such vessel, or by changing those on board of her for guns of a larger caliber, or by adding thereto any equipment solely applicable to war, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars and be imprisoned not more than one year.[1]

Military expeditions against people at peace with the United States. Sec. 6, ibid., p. 449. Sec. 5286, R.S.

2084. Every person who, within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States, begins, or sets on foot, or provides or prepares the means for, any military expedition or enterprise, to be carried on from thence against the territory or dominions of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, with whom the United States are at peace, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and shall be fined not exceeding three thousand dollars, and imprisoned not more than three years.[2]

[1] The repair of Mexican war steamers in the port of New York, together with the augmenting their force by adding to the number of their guns, or by changing those originally on board for those of larger caliber, or by the addition of any equipment solely applicable to war, is a violation of this section. But the repair of their bottoms or copper, etc., does not constitute any increase or augmentation of force within the meaning of the act, and the steamers are not liable to seizure by any judicial process under it. IV Opin. Att. Gen., 336.

The taking on of a crew of American citizens, or of aliens domiciled in the United States would constitute a violation of this section. The Alerta, 9 Cranch, 359.

[2] When a party of insurgents, already organized and carrying on war against the government of a foreign country, send a vessel to procure arms and ammunition in the United States, the act of purchasing such arms and ammunition and placing them aboard the vessel is not within the scope of this section, which prescribes a penalty for every person who, within the limits of the United States, begins or sets on foot, or prepares or provides the means for any military expedition or enterprise "to be carried on from thence." Such expeditions and enterprises must originate within the jurisdiction of the United States, and the terms of the statute do not apply to an expedition originating within the territory of a foreign state. The transportation of goods for commercial purposes only, and the carriage of persons separately, though their individual design may be to enlist in a foreign strife, are not prohibited by our law, if the transportation is without any features of a military character. Indications of a military operation or of a military expedition are concert and unity of action, organization of men to act together, the presence of weapons, and some form of command or leadership. When these exist and are known to the persons engaged in the transportation, all who knowingly aid in such transportation for military purposes are liable under section 5286 of the Revised Statutes. 2085. The district courts shall take cognizance of all complaints, by whomsoever instituted, in cases of captures made within the waters of the United States, or within a marine league of the coasts or shores thereof. In every case in which a vessel is fitted out and armed, or attempted to be fitted out and armed, or in which the force of any vessel of war, cruiser, or other armed vessel is increased or augmented, or in which any military expedition or enterprise is begun or set on foot, contrary to the provisions and prohibitions of this Title; and in every case of the capture of a vessel within the jurisdiction or protection of the United States as before defined; and in every case in which any process issuing out of any court of the United States is disobeyed or resisted by any person having the custody of any vessel of war, cruiser, or other armed vessel of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, or of any subjects or citizens of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, it shall be lawful for the President, or such other person as he shall have empowered for that purpose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia thereof, for the purpose of taking possession of and detaining any such vessel, with her prizes, if any, in order to the execution of the prohibitions and penalties of this Title, and to the restoring of such prizes in the cases in which restoration shall be adjudged; and also for the purpose of preventing the carrying on of any such expedition or enterprise from the territories or jurisdiction of the United States against the territories or dominions of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people, with whom the United States are at peace.

Compelling foreign vessels to depart.
Apr. 20, 1818, c. 88, s. 9. v. 3, p. 449,
Sec. 5288, R.S.

2086. It shall be lawful for the President, or such person as he shall empower for that purpose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia thereof, as shall be necessary to compel any foreign vessel to depart the United States in all cases in which, by the laws of nations or the treaties of the United States, she ought not to remain within the United States.

Armed vessels to give bond on clearance.
Sec. 5289, R.S.

2087. The owners or consignees of every armed vessel sailing out of the ports of the United States, belonging wholly or in part to citizens thereof, shall, before clearing out the same, give bond to the United States, with sufficient sureties, in double the amount of the value of the vessel and cargo on board, including her armament, conditioned that the vessel shall not be employed by such owners to cruise or commit hostilities against the subjects, citizens, or property of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people with whom the United States are at peace.[1]

Detention by collectors of customs.
Apr. 20, 1818, c. 88, s. 11, p. 450.
Sec. 5290, R.S.

2088. The several collectors of the customs shall detain any vessel manifestly built for warlike purposes, and about to depart the United States, the cargo of which principally consists of arms and munitions of war, when the number of men shipped on board, or other circumstances, render it probable that such vessel is intended to be employed by the owners to cruise or commit hostilities upon the subjects, citizens, or property of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district, or people with whom the United States are at peace, until the decision of the President is had thereon, or until the owner gives such bond and security as is required of the owners of armed vessels by the preceding section.

Construction of this Title.

2089. The provisions of this Title shall not be construed to extend to any subject or citizen of any foreign prince, state, colony, district, or people who is transiently within the United States, and enlists or enters himself on board of any vessel of war, letter of marque, or privateer, which at the time of its arrival within the United States was fitted and equipped as such, or hires or retains another subject or citizen of the same foreign prince, state, colony, district, or people, who is transiently within the United States, to enlist or enter himself to serve such foreign prince, state, colony, district, or people, on board such vessel of war, letter of marque, or privateer, if the United States shall then be at peace with such foreign prince, state, colony, district, or people. Nor shall they be construed to prevent the prosecution or punishment of treason, or of any piracy defined by the laws of the United States.

2092. Every person who knowingly and willfully obstructs, resists, or opposes such agent in the execution of his duties, or who rescues or attempts to rescue such prisoner, whether in the custody of the agent or of any officer or person to whom his custody has lawfully been committed, shall be punishable by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment for not more than one year.

Extradition to occupied territory.

2093. Whenever any foreign country or territory, or any part thereof, is occupied by or under the control of the United States, any person who shall violate, or who has violated, the criminal laws in force therein, by the commission of any of the following offenses, namely: Murder and assault with intent to commit murder; counterfeiting or altering money, or uttering or bringing into circulation counterfeit or altered money; counterfeiting certificates or coupons of public indebtedness, bank notes, or other instruments of public credit, and the utterance or circulation of the same; forgery or altering, and uttering what is forged or altered; embezzlement or criminal malversation of the public funds, committed by public officers, employees, or depositaries; larceny or embezzlement of an amount not less than one hundred dollars in value; robbery; burglary, defined to be the breaking and entering by nighttime into the house of another person with intent to commit a felony therein; and the act of breaking and entering the house or building of another, whether in the day or nighttime, with the intent to commit a felony therein; the act of entering, or of breaking and entering the offices of the Government and public authorities, or the offices of banks, banking houses, savings banks, trust companies, insurance or other companies, with the intent to commit a felony therein; perjury or the subornation of perjury; rape; arson; piracy by the law of nations; murder, assault with intent to kill, and manslaughter, committed on the high seas, on board a ship owned by or in control of citizens or residents of such foreign country or territory and not under the flag of the United States, or of some other government; malicious destruction of or attempt to destroy railways, trams, vessels, bridges, dwellings, public edifices or other buildings, when the act endangers human life, and who shall depart or flee, or who has departed or fled, from justice therein to the United States, any Territory thereof, or to the District of Columbia, shall, when found therein, be liable to arrest and detention by the authorities of the United States, and on the written request or requisition of the military governor or other chief executive officer in control of such foreign country or territory shall be returned and surrendered as hereinafter provided to such authorities for trial under the laws in force in the place where such offense was committed. All the provisions of sections fifty-two hundred and seventy to fifty-two hundred and seventy-seven of this Title, so far as applicable, shall govern proceedings authorized by this proviso: Provided further, That such proceedings shall be had before a judge of the courts of the United States only, who shall hold such person on evidence establishing probable cause that he is guilty of the offense charged: And provided further, That no return or surrender shall be made of any person charged with the commission of any offense of a political nature. If so held such person shall be returned and surrendered to the authorities in control of such foreign country or territory on the order of the Secretary of State of the United States, and such authorities shall secure to such a person a fair and impartial trial.[1]—Act of June 6, 1900 (*31 Stat. Claim of United States to islands.
Aug. 18, 1856, c. 164, s. 1, v. 11, p. 119.

2094. Whenever any citizen of the United States discovers a deposit of guano on any island, rock, or key, not within the lawful jurisdiction of any other government, and not occupied by the citizens of any other government, and takes peaceable possession thereof, and occupies the same, such island, rock, or key may, at the discretion of the President, be considered as appertaining to the United States.

Notice of discovery and proofs to be furnished.
Ibid.
Sec. 5571, R.S.

2095. The discoverer shall, as soon as practicable, give notice, verified by affidavit, to the Department of State, of such discovery, occupation, and possession, describing the island, rock, or key, and the latitude and longitude thereof, as near as may be, and showing that such possession was taken in the name of the United States; and shall furnish satisfactory evidence to the State Department that such island, rock, or key was not, at the time of the discovery thereof, or of the taking possession and occupation thereof by the claimants, in the possession or occupation of any other government or of the citizens of any other government, before the same shall be considered as appertaining to the United States.

Completion of proof in case of death of discoverer.
Apr. 2, 1872, c. 81, s. 1, v. 17, p. 48.
Sec. 5572, R.S.

2096. If the discoverer dies before perfecting proof of discovery or fully complying with the provisions of the preceding section, his widow, heir, executor, or administrator shall be entitled to the benefits of such discovery, upon complying with the provisions of this Title; but nothing herein contained shall be held to impair any rights of discovery or any assignment by a discoverer heretofore recognized by the United States.

Exclusive privileges of discoverer.
Aug. 18, 1856, c. 164, s. 2, v. 11, p. 119.
Sec. 5573, R.S.

2098. No guano shall be taken from any such island, rock, or key, except for the use of the citizens of the United States or of persons resident therein. The discoverer, or his widow, heir, executor, administrator, or assigns, shall enter into bond, in such penalty and with such sureties as may be required by the President, to deliver the guano to citizens of the United States, for the purpose of being used therein, and to none others, and at the price prescribed, and to provide all necessary facilities for that purpose within a time to be fixed in the bond; * * * This section shall, however, be suspended in relation to all persons who have complied with the provisions of this Title, for five years from and after the fourteenth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-two.[1]

2100. All acts done, and offenses or crimes committed, on any such island, rock, or key, by persons who may land thereon, or in the waters adjacent thereto, shall be deemed committed on the high seas, on board a merchant ship or vessel belonging to the United States; and shall be punished according to the laws of the United States relating to such ships or vessels and offenses on the high seas, which laws for the purpose aforesaid are extended over such islands, rocks, and keys.

Criminal jurisdiction.
Sec. 6, ibid.
Sec. 5576, R.S.

2101. The President is authorized, at his discretion, to employ the land and naval forces of the United States to protect the rights of the discoverer or his widow, heir, executor, administrator, or assigns.

Employment of land and naval forces.
Sec. 5, ibid.
Sec. 5577, R.S.

RESTRICTION UPON THE USE OF MILITARY FORCE.

2103. From and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful to employ any part of the Army of the United States, as a posse comitatus, or otherwise, for the purpose of executing the laws, except in such cases and under such circumstances as such employment of said force may be expressly authorized by the Constitution or by act of Congress; and no money appropriated by this act shall be used to pay any of the expenses incurred in the employment of any troops in violation of this section.[1] Sec. 15, act of June 18, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 152).

[1] It is provided in section 15 of the act of June 18, 1878, chapter 263, that "From and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful to employ any part of the Army of the United States, as a posse comitatus, or otherwise, for the purpose of executing the laws, except in such cases and under such circumstances as such employment of said force may be expressly authorized by the Constitution or by act of Congress. In view of this legislation, held as follows:

That inasmuch as it was not expressly authorized by any act of Congress that United States marshals should be empowered to summon the military to serve on a posse comitatus (but this was authorized only indirectly and impliedly by the provision of the act of September 24, 1789, incorporated in section 787 of the Revised Statutes), (a) the Army could not, under the existing law, legally act on the posse comitatus of a marshal or deputy marshal of the United States. (b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 162, par. 6. See also Ibid., ed. 1901, par. 487.

That in the absence of such an "unlawful combination" as is contemplated by section 5298, Revised Statutes, the President would not be authorized to employ a military force to assist inspectors of customs in seizing smuggled property or arresting persons concerned in violations of the revenue laws, such an employment not being expressly authorized by any statute.

That whenever a marshal or deputy marshal was prevented from making due service of judicial process, for the arrest of persons or otherwise, by the forcible resistance or opposition of an unlawful combination or assemblage of persons, the President was expressly authorized by section 5298, Revised Statutes, to employ such part of the Army as he might deem necessary to secure the due service of such process and execute the laws; first, however, in any such case (as in any case arising under sections 5297 and 5299) making proclamation as required by section 5300.

That, notwithstanding the legislation of June 18, 1878, the President was authorized to employ the military to arrest and prevent persons engaging in introducing liquor into the Indian country contrary to law, as also to arrest persons being otherwise in the Indian country in violation of law, (c) or to make the arrest therein of Indians charged with the commission of crime, such employment being expressly authorized by sections 2150 and 2152, Revised Statutes.

That the President was authorized by section 2150, Revised Statutes, to remove by military force, after a reasonable notice to quit certain persons commorant upon an Indian reservation contrary to the terms of a treaty between the United States and the tribe occupying the reservation, and who therefore were there "in violation of law" in the sense of that section. (d)

That the provision of June 18, 1878, was not to be construed as interfering with the authority and duty of the President to employ a necessary military force for the removal of trespassers from a military reservation, such employment not being, properly speaking, "for the purpose of executing the laws," but a mere protecting, by the executive department, of public property in its military charge. (e) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 162, par. 6.

In the absence of any express provision contained in the acts authorizing the President to make reservations of forest lands (acts of September 25 and October 1, 1890, and March 3, 1891, s. 24) by which he is expressly empowered to use the Army

[1] The law of war.—The law of war is, in brief, the law of military government and authority as exercised in time of war, foreign or civil. Its usual field is the territory of a conquered country in the occupation of a hostile army; it is sometimes extended, however, though generally in a milder form, to localities under "martial law." It is properly a part of the law of nations, though its application may be materially varied by the circumstances of the country or the people brought under its sway. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1567.

Rule of nonintercourse.—It is a fundamental principle of the law of war that during a state of war all commercial intercourse between the belligerents is interdicted and made illegal except when and where it may be expressly authorized by the Government. During the late civil war, which, as respects the application in general of the laws and usages of war, was assimilated to a foreign war, (a) all trade and intercourse with the enemy, except so far as permitted by the President under authority from Congress (or in rare cases by a commanding general in the field representing the President), was necessarily suspended. (b)

As to the principal forms of violation of the law of nonintercourse and other violations of the laws of war, made the subject of trial by military commission during the late war, see the title "Military Commissions" in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

Held (January, 1865) that a system of correspondence which had been concerted and maintained between Northern and Southern newspapers by means of an interchange of published communications entitled "Personals," was an evasion of the rule interdicting intercourse with the enemy in time of war, and, not being within the regulations established for correspondence by letter between the lines by flag of truce, should not, however innocent might be many or most of the communications, be sanctioned by the Government, but that the proprietors of the Northern newspapers concerned should be notified that unless ths practice was discontinued they would be liable to be proceeded against for promoting correspondence with the enemy in violation of the laws of war or of the special act of February 25, 1863. (c)—(12 Stat. L., 696.) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1574.

Offenses against the law of nonintercourse between the belligerents in time of war are no less such when committed by foreigners than when committed by citizens. Thus where certain persons made their way early in the late war from Scotland to South Carolina, engaged for a considerable period in the manufacture of treasury notes for the Confederate authorities, and at the end of their employment came secretly and without authority into our lines with the design of returning to their homes, held that, though British subjects, they had identified themselves with the cause of the enemy, and were properly amenable to trial for the offense of penetrating our military lines in violation of the laws of war. (d) Ibid., par. 1570.

Newspapers.—There can be no doubt as to the authority of the commander of an

Besides the suspension incident to the state of war, a suspension of commercial intercourse with the enemy was specially directed by act of Congress of July 13, 1861, and proclaimed by the President on August 16, 1861. By authority conferred by the same statute general regulations, concerning commercial intercourse with and in the States declared in insurrection, were approved by the President, January 26, 1864, and published in G. O., 53, Department of the Gulf, of April 29, 1864.

[c] See General Orders, No. 10, Department of the East, 1865.

[d] Where a party arrested in attempting without authority to cross the Potomac for the purpose of holding communication with persons in the enemy's country was ordered by the department commander—his offense having been committed in a district in military occupation—to be placed under military surveillance and to furnish a bond with sufficient sureties, obliging him not to attempt again during the war to join or hold intercourse with the enemy, held that such proceeding was warranted by the laws and customs of war. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1571.

Two soldiers of the United States Army having been seized and delivered across the lines to the enemy, by a party of civilians, in a portion of one of the insurrectionary States in the occupation of the Federal forces, an equal number of the citizens of the district were ordered by the commanding general to be arrested and held till the offenders, who meanwhile had taken refuge with the enemy, should be surrendered for trial. Held that such an act of retaliation was warranted by the laws and usages of war. Ibid., par. 1572.

Treaty with Spain Dec. 10, 1898, v. 30. 1754. United States will, so long as such occupation shall last, assume and discharge the obligations that may, under international law, result from the fact of its occupation for the army, in occupation and government of the enemy's country, to suppress a newspaper or other publication deemed by him to be injurious to the public interests in exciting opposition to the dominant authority or encouraging the support of the enemy's cause on the part of the inhabitants. A newspaper may be a powerful agent for such a purpose, and when it is so it may, under the laws of war, as legally be silenced as may a fort or battery of the enemy in the field. Ibid., par. 1573.

Contributions.—Contributions of money exacted from the enemy by competent military authority, being justified by the law of war and conquest, (a) held that a tax of five dollars per bale, levied (in 1864) by the military commander at New Orleans, General Canby, upon cotton brought into that city and applied to hospital, sanitary, and charitable purposes, was authorized under the discretionary power with which such a commander was properly invested in time of war. (b) Ibid., par. 1575.

Military occupation.—It is a principle of the law of war that the municipal laws of a conquered country continue in force during the military occupation by the conqueror, except in so far as the same may necessarily be suspended or their operation be affected by his acts. (c) So where a testator had executed in Vicksburg, Miss., after its capture and during its occupation by our forces, a will devising real estate, but such will, in not being attested by the required number of witnesses, was invalid under the State law held, that, as this law was in no respect modified upon the capture, the devisee under the will, however loyal, could not properly be invested by military authority with the legal title to such estate against the heirs at law. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1576.

Courts in occupied territory.—It is authorized by the laws of war for a military officer commanding in time of war in a region in military occupation, and where the ordinary courts are closed by the exigencies of the war, to appoint a special court or judge for the determination of cases not properly cognizable by the ordinary military tribunals. In the civil war such courts were not unfrequently constituted and were commonly designated provost courts. Such courts had no jurisdiction of purely military offenses (i. e., offenses which the Articles of War make cognizable by court-martial), and were therefore not properly authorized to impose forfeitures of pay or other strictly military punishments upon officers or soldiers of the Army. These courts were in general resorted to as substitutes for the ordinary police courts of cities, and their jurisdiction was in general confined to cases of breaches of the peace and of violation of such civil ordinances or military regulations as might be in force for the government of the locality. Some of these courts, however, took cognizance, in the course of their existence, of cases of very considerable importance, civil as well as criminal. (d) Ibid., par. 1577.

[b] See Hamilton v. Dillin, 21 Wallace, 73. The taking possession, by the order of the commander of the military department at New Orleans, for the use of the military service in the prosecution of the war, of moneys belonging to the enemies on deposit in the banks of that city, while occupied (in 1863) by our Army, held an act justified by the strict law of war. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1575. See New Orleans v. Steamboat Co., 20 Wallace, 394; Witherspoon v. Farmers' Bk., 2 Duvall, 497. But in Planters' Bk. v. Union Bk., 16 Wallace, 483, this particular order was held to have been an exceeding of authority, not because unauthorized by the law of war, but for the reason that a previous commander—General Butler—by his proclamation on first occupying the city, of May 1, 1862, had pledged the Government to the holding inviolate of all rights of property. And see The Venice, 2 Wallace, 258.

[c] "By the well-recognized principles of international law the mere military occupation of a country by a belligerent power or a conqueror does not ipso facto displace the municipal laws. Such conqueror or belligerent occupier may suspend or supersede them for the time being, but in the absence of orders to that effect they remain in force." Wingfield v. Crosby, 5 Cold., 246. "Supreme military authority in a city is not incompatible with the existence and authority of courts of civil jurisdiction and procedure." Pepin v. Lachenmeyer, 45 N. Y., 27. And see Kimball v. Taylor, 2 Woods, 37; Rutledge v. Fogg, 3 Cold., 554; Hefferman v. Porter, 6 ibid., 391; Murrell v. Jones, 40 Miss., 566; Dow v. Johnson, post. But where the courts of a hostile country are left open by the conqueror it is only the citizens of such country that are subject to their jurisdiction; the officers and soldiers of the occupying army are in no manner amenable to the same. This principle has recently been illustrated by the Supreme Court in the cases of Coleman v. Tennessee, 7 Otto, 509; Dow v. Johnson, 10 Otto, 158, 166.

[d] While the majority of these special tribunals were confined to the exercise of such functions as are commonly devolved upon police or justices' courts, their authority, when empowered for the purpose by a competent military commander, to take cognizance of important civil actions has been affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Mechs. and Traders' Bk. v. Union Bk., 22 Wallace, 276, in which a "provost court," established at New Orleans by an order of the department commander, of May 1, 1862, was held to be a lawful tribunal, and a judgment rendered by it in action for the recovery of $130,000, money borrowed by one bank from another, was recognized protection of life and property. Article I, Treaty with Spain of December 10, 1898 (30 Stat. L. 1754).

as legal. [See this case also in 25 La. An., 387.] [For orders establishing such tribunals, see Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1577, note 1.]

So, the authority of the "provisional court of Louisiana" (which succeeded the "provost court" last indicated and was established by the President in an Executive order of Oct. 20, 1862) to determine a cause in admiralty was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court in The Grapeshot, 9 Wallace, 129, and later its jurisdiction in a civil action on a mortgage debt was recognized by that tribunal in Burke v. Miltenberger, 19 Wallace, 519. [And see the same case, as Burke v. Tregree, in 22 La. An., 629.] The authority of the same court to take cognizance of a case of murder and one of arson (as also of civil controversies) was maintained in an elaborate opinion of its judge, Hon. C. A. Peabody (in 1865), in the cases of the United States v. Reiter & Louis, reported in 13 Am. Law Reg., 534.

The civil jurisdiction of a similar war court—the "commission" established by the department commander in Memphis, in 1863—was similarly recognized in Hefferman v. Porter, 6 Cold., 391. And as to the full authority of this tribunal as a substitute for the ordinary civil courts of the locality, see also State v. Stillman, 7 Cold., 341. [But see, contra, Walsh v. Porter, 12 Heisk., 401.]

In the cases thus sustaining the action of special tribunals during the late war the courts in general refer to the earlier and leading case of Leitensdorfer v. Webb, 20 Howard, 176, in which was affirmed the authority of the courts established in 1846 in New Mexico as a part of the system of civil government instituted by General Kearney, the military commandant. [With this case consult also United States v. Rice, 4 Wheaton, 254; Cross v. Harrison, 16 Howard, 164.]

The reasoning upon which the above-cited later rulings is based is: That the authority to create courts with a civil as well as a criminal jurisdiction in a conquered country in military occupation attaches to the dominant power by the law of war and of nations as an incident to the power to establish a military government; that it is not only the right, but the duty, of the conqueror to institute such courts "for the security of persons and property and for the administration of justice;" and that, when during the late war such courts were created by commanding generals—such as the commanders of separate departments or armies—the order of the commander was to be presumed to be the order and act of the President.

[1] The act of March 3, 1883, 23 Stat. L., 362, contains the requirements that "all applicants for pension shall be presumed to have had no disability at the time of enlistment, but such presumption may be rebutted."

Corps, whether regularly mustered or not, disabled by reason of any wound or injury received, or disease contracted, while in the service of the United States and in the line of duty.

Master, etc., serving on gunboat, etc.

Second. Any master serving on a gunboat, or any pilot, engineer, sailor, or other person not regularly mustered, serving upon any gunboat or war vessel of the United States, disabled by any wound or injury received, or otherwise incapacitated while in the line of duty, for procuring his subsistence by manual labor.

Volunteers, not enlisted, etc.

Third. Any person not an enlisted soldier in the Army, serving for the time being as a member of the militia of any State, under orders of an officer of the United States, or who volunteered for the time being to serve with any regularly organized military or naval force of the United States, or who otherwise volunteered and rendered service in any engagement with rebels or Indians, disabled in consequence of wounds or injury received in the line of duty in such temporary service. But no claim of a State militiaman, or nonenlisted person, on account of disability from wounds, or injury received in battle with rebels or Indians, while temporarily rendering service, shall be valid unless prosecuted to a successful issue prior to the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-four.

Acting assistant surgeon, etc.

Fourth. Any acting assistant or contract surgeon disabled by any wound or injury received or disease contracted in the line of duty while actually performing the duties of assistant surgeon or acting assistant surgeon with any military force in the field, or in transitu, or in hospital.

Provost-marshal, etc.

Fifth. Any provost-marshal, deputy provost-marshal, or enrolling officer disabled, by reason of any wound or injury received in the discharge of his duty, to procure a subsistence by manual labor.

Pension for wounds received or diseases contracted only in line of duty, etc.

2121. For the period commencing July fourth eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and ending June third, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, those persons entitled to a less pension than hereinafter mentioned, who shall have lost both feet in the military or naval service and in the line of duty, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty dollars per month; for the same period those persons who, under like circumstances, shall have lost both hands[1] or the sight of both eyes, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty-five dollars per month; and for the period commencing March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and ending June third, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, those persons who under like circumstances shall have lost one hand and one foot, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty dollars per month; and for the period commencing June sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and ending June third, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, those persons who under like circumstances shall have lost one hand or one foot, shall be entitled to a pension of fifteen dollars per month; and for the period commencing June sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and ending June third, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, those persons entitled to a less pension than hereinafter mentioned, who by reason of injury received or disease contracted in the military or naval service of the United States and in the line of duty, shall have been permanently and totally disabled in both hands, or who shall have lost the sight of one eye, the other having been previously lost, or who shall have been otherwise so totally and permanently disabled as to render them utterly helpless, or so nearly so as to require regular personal aid and attendance of another person, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty-five dollars per month; and for the same period those who under like circumstances shall have been totally and permanently disabled in both feet, or in one hand and one foot, or otherwise so disabled as to be incapacitated for the performance of any manual labor, but not so much as to require regular personal aid and attention, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty dollars per month; and for the same period all persons who under like circumstances shall have been totally and permanently disabled in one hand, or one foot, or otherwise so disabled as to render their inability to perform manual labor equivalent to the loss of a hand or foot, shall be entitled to a pension of fifteen dollars per month.

Pensions for permanent specific disabilities after June 4, 1872.
Mar. 3, 1873, c. 234, s. 4, v. 17, p. 569; June 18, 1874, c. 298, v. 18, p. 78; June 18, 1874, c. 299, v. 18, p. 78.
Sec. 4698, R.S.

2122. From and after June fourth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, all persons entitled by law to a less pension than hereinafter specified, who, while in the military or naval service of the United States, and in line of duty, shall have lost the sight of both eyes, or shall have lost the sight of one eye, the sight of the other having been previously lost, or shall have lost both hands, or shall have lost both feet, or been permanently and totally disabled in the same, or otherwise so permanently and totally disabled as to render them utterly helpless, or so nearly so as to require the regular personal aid and attendance of another person, shall be entitled to a pension of thirty-one dollars and twenty-five cents per month;[1] and all persons who, under like circumstances, shall have lost one hand and one foot, or been totally and permanently disabled in the same, or otherwise so disabled as to be incapacitated for performing any manual labor, but not so much as to require regular personal aid and attendance, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty-four dollars per month; and all persons who, under like circumstances, shall have lost one hand, or one foot, or been totally and permanently disabled in the same, or otherwise so disabled as to render their incapacity to perform manual labor equivalent to the loss of a hand or foot, shall be entitled to a pension of eighteen dollars per month:[2] Provided, That all persons who, under like circumstances, have lost a leg above the knee, and in consequence thereof are so disabled that they can not use artificial limbs, shall be rated in the second class and receive twenty-four dollars per month from and after June fourth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two; and all persons who, under like circumstances, shall have lost the hearing of both ears, shall be entitled to a pension of thirteen dollars per month from the same date:[3] Provided, That the pension for a disability therein mentioned to be proportionately divided for any degree of disability established for which section forty-six hundred and ninety-five makes no provision. Act of August 4, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 220).

[1] Increased to fifty dollars by the act of June 18, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 78), and to seventy-two dollars by the act of June 17, 1878 (20 ibid., 144), and June 16, 1880 (21 ibid., 281), and to one hundred dollars in certain cases (loss of both hands) by the act of February 12, 1889 (25 ibid., 659), paragraphs 2123, 2125, and 2127, post.

[2] Increased by the act of February 28, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 264), and to twenty-four and thirty dollars per month by the act of March 3, 1883 (22 ibid., 453), and to thirty-six and forty-five dollars per month by the act of August 4, 1886 (24 ibid., 220), paragraphs 2124, 2130, and 2131, post.

Increase of rate.
June 18, 1874, v. 18, p. 78.

2123. That section 4, of the act approved March 3, 1873, be so amended that all persons who, while in the military service of the United States and in the line of duty, shall have been so permanently and totally disabled as to require the regular personal aid and attendance of another person by the loss of the sight of both eyes, or by the loss of the sight of one eye, the sight of the other having been previously lost, or by the loss of both hands, or by the loss of both feet, or by an injury resulting in total and permanent helplessness, shall be entitled to a pension of $50[1] per month; and this shall be in lieu of a pension of $31.25 per month granted to such person by said section. Act of June 18, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 78).

Restriction.
June 18, 1874, v. 18, p. 78.

The increase of pension shall not be granted by reason of any injuries herein specified unless the same have resulted in permanent helplessness requiring the regular personal aid and attendance of another person. Ibid.

Pensions for loss of one hand and one foot.
Feb. 28, 1877, v. 19, p. 264.

2124. All persons who, while in the military or naval service of the United States, and in the line of duty, shall have lost one hand and one foot, or been totally and permanently disabled in both, shall be entitled to a pension for each of such disabilities, and at such a rate as is provided for by the provisions of the existing laws for each disability: Provided, That this act shall not be so construed as to reduce pensions in any case. Act of February 28, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 264).

Pensions for loss of both hands, feet, or eyes.
June 17, 1878, v. 20, p. 144.

2125. On and after the passage of this act, all soldiers and sailors who have lost either both their hands or both their feet or the sight of both eyes in the service of the United States, shall receive, in lieu of all pensions now paid them by the Government of the United States, and there shall be paid to them, in the same manner as pensions are now paid to such persons, the sum of seventy-two dollars per month. Act of June 17, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 144).

For total blindness.
Mar. 3, 1879, v. 20, p. 484.

2126. That the act of June seventeenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, entitled "An act to increase the pensions of certain soldiers and sailors who have lost both their hands or both their feet, or the sight of both eyes, in the service of the country," be so construed as to include all soldiers and sailors who have become totally blind from causes occurring in the service of the United States. Act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 484).

[1] Increased to seventy-two dollars per month by the act of June 16, 1880 (31 Stat. L., 281). This act became operative on June 4, 1874. Sec. 2, act of June 18, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 78).

June 16, 1880, v. 21, p. 281.

2127. All soldiers and sailors who are now receiving a pension of fifty dollars per month, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to increase the pension of soldiers and sailors who have been totally disabled," approved June eighteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, shall receive, in lieu of all pensions now paid them by the Government of the United States, and there shall be paid them in the same manner as pensions are now paid to such persons, the sum of seventy-two dollars per month.[1] Act of June 16, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 281).

Rate for loss of leg at hip joint.
Mar. 3, 1879, v. 20, p. 483.

2128. All pensioners now on the pension rolls, or who may hereafter be placed thereon, for amputation of either leg at the hip joint, shall receive a pension at the rate of thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents per month from the date of the approval of this act. Act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 483).

Loss of arm at shoulder joint.
Mar. 3, 1885, v. 23, p. 437.

2129. All soldiers and sailors of the United States who have had an arm taken off at the shoulder joint, caused by injuries received in the service of their country while in the line of duty, and who are now receiving pensions, shall have their pensions increased to the same amount that the law now gives to soldiers and sailors who have lost a leg at the hip joint; and this act shall apply to all who shall be hereafter placed on the pension roll. Act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 437).

Increase of pension of soldiers and sailors who have lost an arm or leg in service.
Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 453.

Loss of arm above elbow or leg above the knee.

2130. From and after the passage of this act all persons on the pension roll, and all persons hereafter granted a pension, who, while in the military or naval service of the United States, and in the line of duty, shall have lost one hand or one foot, or been totally or permanently disabled in the same, or otherwise so disabled as to render their incapacity to perform manual labor equivalent to the loss of a hand or a foot, shall receive a pension of twenty-four dollars per month; that all persons now on the pension roll, and all persons hereafter granted a pension, who in like manner shall have lost either an arm at or above the elbow, or a leg at or above the knee, or shall have been otherwise so disabled as to be incapacitated for performing any manual labor, but not so much as to require regular personal aid and attendance, shall receive a pension of thirty dollars per month: Provided, That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to repeal section forty-six hundred and ninety-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States, or to change the rate of eighteen dollars per month therein mentioned to be proportionately divided for any degree of disability established for which section forty-six hundred and ninety-five makes no provision.[1] Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 453).

[1] Section 2 of the act of June 16, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 281), contained the requirement that persons therein entitled to increase of pension should be paid the difference between the sums above mentioned from June 17, 1878, to June 16, 1880.

Widows and children.
Aug. 7, 1882, v. 22, p. 345.
Sec. 4702, R.S.

2137. If any person embraced within the provisions of sections forty-six hundred and ninety-two[1] and forty-six hundred and ninety-three[1] has died since the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or hereafter dies, by reason of any wound, injury, or disease which under the conditions and limitations of such sections would have entitled him to an invalid pension had he been disabled, his widow, or if there be no widow, or in case of her death without payment to her of any part of the pension hereinafter mentioned, his child or children under sixteen years of age, shall be entitled to receive the same pension as the husband or father would have been entitled to had he been totally disabled, to commence from the death of the husband or father, to continue to the widow during her widowhood, and to his child or children until they severally attain the age of sixteen years, and no longer; and if the widow remarry, the child or children shall be entitled from the date of remarriage, except when such widow has continued to draw the pension money after her remarriage, in contravention of law, and such child or children have resided with and been supported by her, their pension will commence at the date to which the widow was last paid.[2] Act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 345).

Increased pensions to widows, etc.

2138. The pensions of widows shall be increased from and after the twenty-fifth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, at the rate of two dollars per month for each child under the age of sixteen years of the husband on account of whose death the claim has been, or shall be, granted. And in every case in which the deceased husband has left, or shall leave, no widow, or where his widow has died or married again, or where she has been deprived of her pension under the provisions of the pension law, the pension granted to such child or children shall be increased to the same amount per month that would be allowed under the foregoing provisions to the widow if living and entitled to a pension: Provided, That the additional pension herein granted to the widow on account of the child or children of the husband by a former wife shall be paid to her only for such period of her widowhood as she has been, or shall be, charged with the maintenance of such child or children; for any period during which she has not been, or she shall not be, so charged it shall be granted and paid to the guardian of such child or children: Provided further, That a widow or guardian to whom increase of pension has been, or shall hereafter be, granted on account of minor children shall not be deprived thereof by reason of their being maintained in whole or in part at the expense of a State or the public in any educational institution or in any institution organized for the care of soldiers' orphans.

Widows of colored and Indian soldiers, etc.

2142. The widows of colored and Indian soldiers and sailors who have died, or shall hereafter die, by reason of wounds or injuries received, or casualty received, or disease contracted, in the military or naval service of the United States, and in the line of duty, shall be entitled to receive the pension provided by law without other evidence of marriage than satisfactory proof that the parties were joined in marriage by some ceremony deemed by them obligatory, or habitually recognized each other as man and wife, and were so recognized by their neighbors, and lived together as such up to the date of enlistment, when such soldier or sailor died in the service, or, if otherwise, to date of death; and the children born of any marriage so proved shall be deemed and held to be lawful children of such soldier or sailor, but this section shall not be applicable to any claims on account of persons who enlist after the third day of March, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three.

Marriages to be proven legal marriages under laws, etc.
Sec. 2, Aug. 7, 1882, v. 22, p. 345.

2143. Marriages, except such as are mentioned in section forty-seven hundred and five of the Revised Statutes, shall be proven in pension cases to be legal marriages according to the law of the place where the parties resided at the time of marriage or at the time when the right to pension accrued; and the open and notorious adulterous cohabitation of a widow who is a pensioner shall operate to terminate her pension from the commencement of such cohabitation. Sec. 2, act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 345).

Abandonment, etc., by widow.

2144. If any person has died, or shall hereafter die, leaving a widow entitled to a pension by reason of his death, and a child or children under sixteen years of age by such widow, and it shall be duly certified under seal by any court having probate jurisdiction, that satisfactory evidence has been produced before such court, upon due notice to the widow, that she has abandoned the care of such child or children, or that she is an unsuitable person, by reason of immoral conduct, to have the custody of the same, on presentation of satisfactory evidence thereof to the Commissioner of Pensions, no pension shall be allowed to such widow until such child or children shall have attained the age of sixteen years, any provisions of law to the contrary notwithstanding; and the said child or children shall be pensioned in the same manner, and from the same date, as if no widow had survived such person, and such pension shall be paid to the guardian of such child or children; but if in any case payment of pension shall have been made to the widow, the pension to the child or children shall commence from the date to which her pension has been paid.

2145. If any officer or enlisted man who served ninety days or more in the Army or Navy of the United States during the late war of the rebellion, and who was honorably discharged, has died, or shall hereafter die, leaving a widow without other means of support than her daily labor, and an actual net income not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars per year, or minor children under the age of sixteen years, such widow shall, upon due proof of her husband's death, without proving his death to be the result of his army service, be placed on the pension roll from the date of the application therefor under this act, at the rate of eight dollars per month during her widowhood, and shall also be paid two dollars per month for each child of such officer or enlisted man under sixteen years of age, and in case of the death or remarriage of the widow, leaving a child or children of such officer or enlisted man under the age of sixteen years, such pension shall be paid such child or children until the age of sixteen: Provided, That in case a minor child is insane, idiotic, or otherwise permanently helpless, the pension shall continue during the life of said child, or during the period of such disability, and this proviso shall apply to all pensions heretofore granted or hereafter to be granted under this or any former statute, and such pensions shall commence from the date of application therefor, after the passage of this act: And provided further, That said widow shall have married said soldier prior to the passage of the said act of June 27, 1890.[1] *Sec. 3, act of May 9, 1900 (31 Stat. Remarriage of widow.
Mar. 3, 1901, v. 31, p. 1445.

2149. The remarriage of any widow, dependent mother, or dependent sister entitled to pension shall not bar her right to such pension to the date of her remarriage, whether an application therefor was filed before or after such marriage; but on the remarriage of any widow, dependent mother, or dependent sister having a pension, such pension shall cease: Provided, however, That any widow who was the lawful wife of any officer or enlisted man in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States, during the period of his service in any war, and whose name was placed or shall hereafter be placed on the pension roll because of her husband's death as the result of wound or injury received or disease contracted in such military or naval service, and whose name has been or shall hereafter be dropped from said pension roll by reason of her marriage to another person who has since died or shall hereafter die, or from whom she has been heretofore or shall be hereafter divorced, upon her own application and without fault on her part, and if she is without means of support other than her daily labor as defined by the acts of June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety, and May ninth, nineteen hundred, shall be entitled to have her name again placed on the pension roll at the rate now provided for widows by the acts of July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, and March nineteenth, eighteen hundred and eigthy-six, such pension to commence from the date of the filing of her application in the Pension Bureau after the approval of this act: And provided further, That where such widow is already in receipt of a pension from the United States she shall not be entitled to restoration under this act: And provided further, That where the pension of said widow on her second or subsequent marriage has accrued to a helpless or idiotic child, or a child or children under the age of sixteen years, she shall not be entitled to restoration under this act unless said helpless or idiotic child, or child or children under sixteen years of age, be then a member or members of her family and cared for by her, and upon the restoration of said widow the payment of pension to said child or children shall cease. Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 1445).

No claim agent or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services in making application for pension under this act. Section 2, ibid.

All pensions which have been granted under the general laws regulating pensions, or may hereafter be granted, in consequence of death from a cause which originated in the United States service during the continuance of the late war of the rebellion or in consequence of wounds, injuries, or disease received or contracted in said service during said war of the rebellion, shall commence from the date of the death or discharge from said service of the person on whose account the claim has been or shall hereafter be granted, or from the termination of the right of the party having prior title to such pension: Provided, The rate of pension for the intervening time for which arrears of pension are hereby granted shall be the same per month for which the pension was originally granted.[1] Sec. 1, act of January 25, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 265).

Rate.

Mar. 3, 1879, v. 20, p. 470.

2179. Section one of the act of January twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, granting arrears of pensions shall be construed to extend to and include pensions on account of soldiers who were enlisted or drafted for the service in the war of the rebellion, but died or incurred disability from a cause originating after the cessation of hostilities and before being mustered out: Provided, That in no case shall arrears of pensions be allowed and paid from a time prior to the date of actual disability. Act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 470).

[1] Section 2 of the act of January 25, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 265), authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to "adopt such rules and regulations for the payment of the arrears of pensions hereby granted as will be necessary to cause to be paid to such pensioners, or, if the pensioners shall have died, to the person or persons entitled to the same; all such arrears of pension as the pensioner may be, or would have been, entitled to under this act."

Rate of arrears. Mar. 3, 1879, v. 20, p. 470.

2180. The rate at which the arrears of invalid pensions shall be allowed and computed in the cases which have been or shall hereafter be allowed shall be graded according to the degree of the pensioner's disability from time to time and the provisions of the pension laws in force over the period for which the arrears shall be computed. Act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 470).

Date of commencement. Sec. 2, ibid.

2181. All pensions which have been or which may hereafter be granted in consequence of death occurring from a cause which originated in the service since the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or in consequence of wounds or injuries received or disease contracted since that date, shall commence from the death or discharge of the person on whose account the claim has been or is hereafter granted if the disability occurred prior to discharge, and if such disability occurred after the discharge then from the date of actual disability or from the termination of the right of party having prior title to such pension: Provided, The application for such pension has been or is hereafter filed with the Commissioner of Pensions prior to the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, otherwise the pension shall commence from the date of filing the application; but the limitation herein prescribed shall not apply to claims by or in behalf of insane persons and children under sixteen years of age. Sec. 2, ibid.

When pension deemed to have accrued. Mar. 3, 1873, s. 16, v. 17, p. 569. Sec. 4710, R. S.

2182. In construing the preceding section,[1] the right of persons entitled to pensions shall be recognized as accruing at the date therein stated for the commencement of such pension, and the right of a dependent father or dependent brother to pension shall not in any case be held to have accrued prior to the sixth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six; and the right of all other classes of claimants, if applying on account of the death of a person who was regularly mustered into the service or regularly employed in the Navy or upon the gunboats or war vessels of the United States, shall not be held to have accrued prior to the fourteenth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-two; if applying on account of a chaplain of the Army, their right shall not be held to have accrued prior to the ninth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-four; if applying on account of an enlisted soldier who was not mustered, or a nonenlisted man in temporary service, their right shall not be held to have accrued prior to the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-four; if applying on account of an acting assistant or contract surgeon, their right shall not be held to have accrued prior to the third day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five; if applying on account of persons enlisted as teamsters, wagoners, artificers, hospital stewards, or farriers, their right shall not be held to have accrued prior to the sixth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six; and the right of all classes of claimants applying on account of a provost marshal, deputy provost marshal, or enrolling officer shall not be held to have accrued prior to the twenty-fifth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six. But the right of a widow or dependent mother who married prior and did not apply till subsequent to the twenty-seventh day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, shall not be held to have accrued prior to that date.

Arrears of pension.

2183. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Pensions, upon any application by letter or otherwise by or on behalf of any pensioner entitled to arrears of pension under section forty-seven hundred and nine,[1] or if any such pensioner has died, upon a similar application by or on behalf of any person entitled to receive the accrued pension due such pensioner at his death, to pay or cause to be paid to such pensioner, or other person, all such arrears of pension as the pensioner may be entitled to, or, if dead, would have been entitled to under the provisions of that section had he survived; and no claim agent or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services in making application for arrears of pension.

No fees in arrears of pension cases.
July 4, 1884, s. 4, v. 23, p. 99.

2184. No fee shall be demanded, received, or allowed in any claim for arrears of pension, or arrears of increase of pension allowed by any act of Congress passed subsequent to the date of the allowance of the original claims in which such arrears of pension or of increase of pension may be allowed.[1] Sec. 4, act of July 4, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 99).

Commencement of pensions for prior wars.
Sec. 4713, R. S.

2185. In all cases in which the cause of disability or death originated in the service prior to the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, and an application for pension shall not have been filed within three years from the discharge or death of the person on whose account the claim is made, or within three years of the termination of a pension previously granted on account of the service and death of the same person, the pension shall commence from the date of filing by the party prosecuting the claim the last paper requisite to establish the same. But no claim allowed prior to the sixth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be affected by anything herein contained.

INCREASE OF PENSIONS.

[2] Section 4717 of the Revised Statutes, which established a period of limitation in the prosecution of claims for pension, was expressly repealed by the act of January 25, 1889 (20 Stat. L., 265), paragraph 2202, post. There is now no limitation, in point of time, in the prosecution of pension claims.

Proof of death. Mar. 13, 1896, v. 29, p. 57.

2195. In considering claims filed under the pension laws, the death of an enlisted man or officer shall be considered as sufficiently proved if satisfactory evidence is produced establishing the fact of the continued and unexplained absence of such enlisted man or officer from his home and family for a period of seven years, during which period no intelligence of his existence shall have been received. And any pension granted under this act shall cease upon proof that such officer or enlisted man is still living. Act of March 13, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 57).

Presumption as to disability at enlistment. Mar. 3, 1885, v. 23, p. 361.

Absentees. Sec. 6, ibid. Sec. 4700, R.S.

2197. Officers absent on sick leave, and enlisted men absent on sick furlough, or on veteran furlough with the organization to which they belong, shall be regarded in the administration of the pension laws in the same manner as if they were in the field or hospital.

Period of service how construed. Sec. 7, ibid. Sec. 4701, R.S.

Proof of marriage. Aug. 7, 1882, v. 22, p. 345.

What children deemed legitimate. Sec. 4704, R. S.

2200. In the administration of the pension laws, children born before the marriage of their parents, if acknowledged by the father before or after the marriage, shall be deemed legitimate.

Certain soldiers and sailors not to be deemed deserters, etc. July 19, 1867, c. 28, v. 15, p. 14. Sec. 4749, R. S.

2201. No soldier or sailor shall be taken or held to be a deserter from the Army or Navy who faithfully served according to his enlistment until the nineteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and who, without proper authority or leave first obtained, quit his command or refused to serve after that date; but nothing herein contained shall operate as a remission of any forfeiture incurred by any such soldier or sailor of his pension; but this section shall be construed solely as a removal of any disability such soldier or sailor may have incurred by the loss of his citizenship in consequence of his desertion.

REMOVAL OF LIMITATION.

Limitation to prosecution of pension claims removed.

S. 3, Jan. 25, 1879, v. 20, p. 265.

2202. That section forty-seven hundred and seventeen of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which provides that "no claim for pension not prosecuted to a successful issue within five years from the date of filing the same shall be admitted without record evidence from the War or Navy Department of the injury or the disease which resulted in the disability or death of the person on whose account the claim is made: Provided, That in any case in which the limitation prescribed by this section bars the further prosecution of the claim, the claimant may present, through the Pension Office, to the Adjutant-General of the Army or the Surgeon-General of the Navy, evidence that the disease or injury which resulted in the disability or death of the person on whose account the claim is made originated in the service and in the line of duty, and if such evidence is deemed satisfactory by the officer to whom it may be submitted, he shall cause a record of the fact so proved to be made, and a copy of the same to be transmitted to the Commissioner of Pensions, and the bar to the prosecution of the claim shall thereby be removed," be, and the same is hereby, repealed.[1] Sec. 3, act of January 25, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 265).

Fee for bounty land, etc.
No fee allowed for arrears of pension, etc.

2204. The agent or attorney of record in the prosecution of the case may cause to be filed with the Commissioner of Pensions, duplicate articles of agreement, without additional cost to the claimant, setting forth the fee agreed upon by the parties, which agreement shall be executed in the presence of and certified by some officer competent to administer oaths. In all cases where application is made for pension or bounty land, and no agreement is filed with the Commissioner as herein provided, the fee shall be ten dollars and no more. And such articles of agreement as may hereafter be filed with the Commissioner of Pensions are not authorized, nor will they be recognized except in claims for original pensions, claims for increase of pension on account of a new disability, in claims for restoration where a pensioner's name has been or may hereafter be dropped from the pension rolls on testimony taken by a special examiner, showing that the disability or cause of death, on account of which the pension was allowed, did not originate in the line of duty, and in cases of dependent relatives whose names have been or may hereafter be, dropped from the rolls on like testimony, upon the ground of nondependence, and in such other cases of difficulty and trouble as the Commissioner of Pensions may see fit to recognize them: Provided, That no greater fee than ten dollars shall be demanded, received, or allowed in any claim for pension or bounty land granted by special act of Congress, nor in any claim for increase of pension on account of the increase of the disability for which the pension had been allowed: And provided further, That no fee shall be demanded, received, or allowed in any claim for arrears of pension or arrears of increase of pension allowed by any act of Congress passed subsequent to the date of the allowance of the original claims in which such arrears of pension, or of increase of pension, may be allowed.[1] Sec. 4, act of July 4, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 99).

The articles of agreement herein provided for shall be in substance as follows, to wit:

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

Form of articles of agreement.

Whereas I, ——— ———, late a ——— in company ———, of the ——— regiment of ——— volunteers, war of eighteen hundred and sixty-one (or, if the service be different, here state the same), having made application for pension under the laws of the United States:

Sec. 25, Mar. 3, 1873, v. 17, p. 574.

2232. If any pensioner has died or shall hereafter die; or if any person entitled to a pension, having an application therefor pending, has died or shall hereafter die, his widow, or if there is no widow, the child or children of such person, under the age of sixteen years, shall be entitled to receive the accrued pension to the date of the death of such person. Such accrued pension shall not be considered as a part of the assets of the estate of deceased, nor liable to be applied to the payment of the debts of said estate in any case whatever, but shall inure to the sole and exclusive benefit of the widow or children; and if no widow or child survive, no payment whatsoever of the accrued pension shall be made or allowed, except so much as may be necessary to reimburse the person who bore the expenses of the last sickness and burial of the decedent, in cases where he did not leave sufficient assets to meet such expenses.[2]

Payment of accrued pension to death of pensioner.

Distribution.
Mar. 2, 1895, v. 28, p. 964.

2233. From and after the twenty-eighth day of September, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, the accrued pension to the date of the death of any pensioner, or of any person entitled to a pension having an application therefor pending, and whether a certificate therefor shall issue prior or subsequent to the death of such person, shall, in the case of a person pensioned, or applying for pension, on account of his disabilities or service, be paid, first, to his widow; second, if there is no widow, to his child or children under the age of sixteen years at his death; third, in case of a widow, to her minor children under the age of sixteen years at her death. Such accrued pension shall not be considered a part of the assets of the estate of such deceased person, nor be liable for the payment of the debts of said estate in any case whatsoever, but shall inure to the sole and exclusive benefit of the widow or children. And if no widow or child survive such pensioner, and in the case of his last surviving child who was such minor at his death, and in case of a dependent mother, father, sister, or brother, no payment whatsoever of their accrued pension shall be made or allowed except so much as may be necessary to reimburse the person who bore the expense of their last sickness and burial, if they did not leave sufficient assets to meet such expense. And the mailing of a pension check, drawn by a pension agent in payment of a pension due, to the address of a pensioner, shall constitute payment in the event of the death of a pensioner subsequent to the execution of the voucher therefor. And all prior laws relating to the payment of accrued pension are hereby repealed. Act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 964).

[1] This section replaces, in part, section 4775, Revised Statutes, which authorized the appointment of boards of examining surgeons and prescribed their fees.

Claimant may inspect report.
July 18, 1894, v. 28, p. 113.

2241. The report of such examining surgeons when filed in the Pension Office shall be open to the examination and inspection of the claimant or his attorney, under such reasonable rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may provide. Act of July 18, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 113).

Medical referee and examining surgeon.
Ibid., s. 38, p. 577.
Sec. 4776, R.S.

2242. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to appoint a duly qualified surgeon as medical referee who, under the control and direction of the Commissioner of Pensions, shall have charge of the examination and revision of the reports of examining surgeons, and such other duties touching medical and surgical questions in the Pension Office as the interests of the service may demand; and his salary shall be two thousand five hundred dollars per annum. And the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized to appoint such qualified surgeons (not exceeding four) as the exigencies of the service may require, who may perform the duties of examining surgeons when so required, and who shall be borne upon the rolls as clerks of the fourth class; but such appointments shall not increase the clerical force of said Bureau.

Appointment of civil examining surgeons.
Ibid., s. 35, p. 576.
Sec. 4777, R.S.

2243. The Commissioner of Pensions is empowered to appoint, at his discretion, civil surgeons to make the periodical examinations of pensioners which are or may be required by law, and to examine applicants for pension, where he deems an examination by a surgeon appointed by him necessary; and the fee for such examinations, and the requisite certificates thereof in duplicate, including postage on such as are transmitted to pension agents, shall be two dollars, which shall be paid by the agent for paying pensions in the district within which the pensioner or claimant resides, out of any money appropriated for the payment of pensions, under such regulations as the Commissioner of Pensions may prescribe.

Expert surgeons to make examinations.
July 25, 1882, v. 22, p. 176.

2244. The Commissioner may, when in his judgment the degree of disability can not be determined truthfully or satisfactorily excepting by expert examination, employ an expert, not a regularly appointed surgeon, to make the examination; and the fee for such examination shall be five dollars:

Proviso.
Fees.

Provided, That the fee for an expert examination shall not be paid to any regularly appointed examining surgeon. Act of July 25, 1892 (22 Stat. L., 176).

Nonresident claimants.
July 25, 1882, v. 22, p. 176.

2245. The fee for the examination of claimants who reside out of the United States shall not exceed ten dollars, which shall be paid, upon the presentation of satisfactory vouchers, out of the appropriation for the payment of the examining surgeons, and through the United States consulate nearest to the claimant's place of residence. Act of July 25, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 176).

Commissioner of Pensions may order special examinations.
Sec. 3. June 21, 1879, v. 21, p. 30.

2246. The Commissioner of Pensions shall have the same power as heretofore to order special examinations whenever, in his judgment, the same may be necessary, and to increase or reduce the pension according to right and justice; but in no case shall a pension be withdrawn or reduced except upon notice to the pensioner and a hearing upon sworn testimony, except as to the certificate of the examining surgeon.[1] Sec. 3, act of June 21, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 30).

Inspection of agencies.
Aug. 8, 1882, v. 22, p. 373.

2247. The Commissioner of Pensions may, when in his judgment it shall be deemed necessary or proper, visit in person, for the purpose of examination and inspection, or may send any one or more of the officers of his bureau for that purpose, any one of the pension agencies or medical examining boards or surgeons; and the necessary and actual expenses of such visits shall be paid by the Secretary of the Interior, upon properly executed vouchers, out of the contingent fund of said bureau. Act of August 8, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 373).

SUSPENSION OF PENSIONS—PENSION A VESTED RIGHT.

Suspension of pension, notice, etc., to pensioner.
Act of Dec. 21, 1893, v. 28, p. 18.

Pensions to be deemed vested rights.

2248. Any pension heretofore or that may hereafter be granted to any applicant therefor under any law of the United States authorizing the granting and payment of pensions, on application made and adjudicated upon, shall be deemed and held by all officers of the United States to be a vested right in the grantee to that extent that payment thereof shall not be withheld or suspended until, after due notice to the grantee of not less than thirty days, the Commissioner of Pensions, after hearing all the evidence, shall decide to annul, vacate, modify, or set aside the decision upon which such pension was granted. Such notice to grantee must contain a full and true statement of any charges or allegations upon which such decision granting such pension shall be sought to be in any manner disturbed or modified. Act of December 21, 1893 (28 Stat. L., 18).

Investigation of attempts at fraud.
Mar. 3, 1873, c. 234, s. 30, v. 17, p. 575.
Sec. 474, R. S.

2249. The Commissioner of Pensions is authorized to detail, from time to time, any of the clerks in his office to investigate any suspected attempts to defraud the United States, in or affecting the administration of any law relative to pensions, and to aid in prosecuting any person implicated, with such additional compensation as is customary in cases of special service. Any person so detailed shall have the power to administer oaths in the course of any such investigation.

Special service in investigating suspected attempts at fraud.
Mar. 3, 1873, c. 234, s. 30, v. 17, p. 575. Sec. 2, July 25, 1882, v. 22, p. 175.
Sec. 4744, R.S.

2250. The Commissioner of Pensions is authorized to detail, from time to time, clerks or persons employed in his office to make special examinations into the merits of such pension or bounty land claims, whether pending or adjudicated, as he may deem proper, and to aid in the prosecution of any party appearing on such examinations to be guilty of fraud, either in the presentation or in procuring the allowance of such claims; and any person so detailed shall have power to administer oaths and take affidavits and depositions in the course of such examinations, and to orally examine witnesses, and may employ a stenographer, when deemed necessary by the Commissioner of Pensions, in important cases, such stenographer to be paid by such clerk or person, and the amount so paid to be allowed in his accounts. Sec. 2, act of July 25, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 175).

Investigating officers may administer oaths, etc.
Sec. 3, Mar. 3, 1891, v. 26, p. 1083.

2251. The same power to administer oaths and take affidavits, which by virtue of section forty-seven hundred and forty-four of the Revised Statutes is conferred upon clerks detailed by the Commissioner of Pensions from his office to investigate suspected attempts at fraud on the Government through and by virtue of the pension laws, and to aid in prosecuting any person so offending, shall be, and is hereby, extended to all special examiners or additional special examiners employed under authority of Congress to aid in the same purpose. Sec. 3, act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 1083).

Subpœnas to witnesses.
Sec. 3, July 25, 1882, v. 22, p. 175.

2252. In addition to the authority conferred by section one hundred and eighty-four, title four of the Revised Statutes, any judge or clerk of any court of the United States in any State, District, or Territory shall have power, upon the application of the Commissioner of Pensions, to issue a subpœna for a witness, being within the jurisdiction of such court, to appear, at a time and place in the subpœna stated, before any officer authorized to take depositions to be used in the courts of the United States, or before any officer, clerk, or person from the Pension Bureau designated or detailed to investigate or examine into the merits of any pension claim and authorized by law to administer oaths and take affidavits in such investigation or examination, there to give full and true answers to such written interrogatories and cross interrogatories as may be propounded, or to be orally examined and cross-examined upon the subject of such claim; and witnesses subpœnaed pursuant to this and the preceding section shall be allowed the same compensation as is allowed witnesses in the courts of the United States, and paid in the same manner. Sec. 3, act of July 25, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 175).

2280–2282. Pensions to inmates.
2283–2286. Miscellaneous requirements.

BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS.

Board of commissioners of the Soldiers' Home. Mar. 3, 1851, c. 25, s. 2, v. 9, p. 595; Mar. 3, 1859, c. 83, s. 4, v. 11, p. 434; Mar. 3, 1883, s. 10, v. 22, p. 565. Sec. 4815, R.S.

2263. The Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home shall hereafter consist of the General in Chief commanding the Army, the Surgeon-General, the Commissary-General, the Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General, the Judge-Advocate-General and the Governor of the Home, and the General in Chief shall be President of the Board, and any four of them shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; whose duty it shall be to examine and audit the accounts of the treasurer quarter-yearly, and to visit and inspect the Soldiers' Home at least once in every month. The majority shall also have power to establish, from time to time, regulations for the general and internal direction of the institution, to be submitted to the Secretary of War for approval; and may do any other acts necessary for the government and interests of the same, as authorized by this chapter.[1] Sec. 10, act of March 3, 1883, (22 Stat. L., 565).

Sites and buildings.
Sec. 8, ibid., p. 597.
Sec. 4817, R.S.

2264. The commissioners of the Soldiers' Home, by and with the approval of the President, shall procure for immediate use, at a suitable place or places, a site or sites for the Soldiers' Home, and if the necessary buildings can not be procured with the sites, to have the same erected, having due regard to the health of the locations, facility of access, and economy, and giving preference to such places as, with the most convenience and least cost, will accommodate the persons entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' Home.

Board of commissioners to make annual report, etc.
Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 565.

2265. The board of commissioners of the Soldiers' Home shall every year report in writing to the Secretary of War, giving a full statement of all receipts and disbursements of money, of the manner in which the funds are invested of any changes in the investments and the reasons therefor, of all admissions and discharges, and generally of all facts that may be necessary to a full understanding of the condition and management of the Home. The Secretary of War shall have power to call for and require any omitted facts which in his judgment should be stated to be added.

Secretary of War to transmit report, etc., to Congress.

This annual report shall be, by the Secretary of War, together with the report of the inspecting officer hereinafter provided for, transmitted to Congress at the first session thereafter, and he shall also cause the same to be published in orders to the Army, a copy thereof to be deposited in each garrison and post library. Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 565).

Sec. 7, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 564.

[1] The commissioners of the Soldiers' Home may permit the governor, deputy governor, and treasurer of the Home, who are retired officers of the Army and who reside at the Home, to make use of ordinary supplies of fuel, light, forage, etc., produced at the Home or purchased for it, and they may pay the treasurer, out of the funds of the Home, a salary for his services. XX Opin. Att. Gen., 350.

The funds for the support of the Soldiers' Home are not of the class of public moneys annually appropriated for a specific object, as for the pay of the Army, but a special trust fund committed to and administered by the board of commissioners for the benefit of the institution. From an early period in the history of the Home it has been the usage for the commissioners to permit the officers of the Home (retired officers of the Army residing at the Home) gratuitously to receive and use a reasonable portion of the ordinary supplies of fuel, light, forage, milk, ice, and vegetables, either produced at the Home or obtained for its consumption. Held, that such allowance was not in contravention of law; that the articles thus issued are not of the class of military pay and emoluments, and therefore unauthorized because not allowed by law to retired officers, but are a reasonaple share of the supplies for the use and benefit of the Home, the disposition of which is properly within the discretion of the commissioners as trustees of the funds of the Home and as charged by law with the "government and interests of the same." And similarly held in regard to the amount of $1,000, allowed annually out of such funds to the treasurer of the Home as a compensation for his special services and in consideration of his pecuniary responsibility as a bonded officer. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2331.

Held, that a medical officer of the Army, occupying quarters at the Soldiers' Home, was not thereby precluded from receiving commutation of quarters at New York on being ordered to duty there as a member of a medical examining board. The quarters occupied by him at the Home are not "public quarters" in the sense of par. 1480, A. R.; he does not occupy them at the expense of the United States, and by allowing him the commutation the Government is not put to a double expense for his quarters. Ibid., par. 2332.

[2] The board of commissioners of the Soldiers' Home can not delegate to the governor of the Home discretionary police authority for the preservation of good order within its limits. XX Opin. Att. Gen., 514. They can not empower him to arrest, 2270. Hereafter the adjustment of the accounts of the Soldiers' Home under section 4818 of the Revised Statutes in the offices of the Second Comptroller and Second Auditor shall be limited to those originating subsequent to March 3, 1881. Act of July 16, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 183).

Deduction from pay.
Mar. 3, 1851, c. 25, s. 7, v. 9, p. 596; Mar. 3, 1859, c. 83, s. 7, v. 11, p. 434.
Sec. 4819, R. S.

2271. There shall be deducted from the pay of every noncommissioned officer, musician, artificer, and private of the Army of the United States the sum of twelve and a half cents per month, which sum so deducted shall by the Pay Department of the Army be passed to the credit of the commissioners of the Soldiers' Home. The commissioners are also authorized to receive all donations of money or property made by any person for the benefit of the institution and hold the same for its sole and excludetain, or deliver over to the court authorities nonmilitary persons committing crimes less than capital, except in the cases where any person may make an arrest without warrant or precept. Ibid.

[1] Section 4818, Revised Statutes, appropriates as one of the funds for the support of the Soldiers' Home "all forfeitures on account of desertion." Held, that this appropriation included the retained pay of soldiers as forfeited by desertion under the provisions of sections 1281 and 1282, Revised Statutes, and of the act of June 16, 1890, chapter 426, section 1. The retained pay is merely a fraction of the monthly pay of the soldier earned with the rest of his monthly pay as a part of the entire consideration for service rendered, but of which the payment—the right to receive—is deferred. The theory that it is not to be regarded as earned till the soldier's service is concluded and he receives an honorable discharge is rebutted by the statutory provisions above cited, and especially by the provision of the act of 1890, which treats the retained pay as pay constantly accruing and as a continuing deposit for the use of the soldier drawing interest from the end of each year in which it accrues. The ruling of the Supreme Court in United States v. Landers (92 U. S., 77) is not opposed to this view, but as construed by the same court in United States v. Kingsley (138 U. S., 87), shows that the "forfeiture" referred to in sections 1281 and 1282, Revised Statutes, was regarded by the court as meaning a loss of an acquired right, and the act of 1890, passed since this ruling, has confirmed this interpretation. Thus a soldier in deserting forfeits with the main portion of his pay the portion which has been retained, his right to this lesser portion being as much acquired and perfected as his right to the greater portion. Both forfeitures rest upon the same basis, and the aggregate forfeiture of both is appropriated by the statute to the support of the Soldiers' Home. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2333.

sive use. But the deduction of twelve and a half cents per month from the pay of noncommissioned officers, musicians, artificers, and privates of regiments of volunteers or other corps or regiments raised for a limited period or for a temporary purpose or purposes shall only be made with their consent.[1]

Funds, etc., of the Home to be deposited in the Treasury, United States as a permanent fund.

Sec. 8, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 565.

Interest.

Principal sum to be used only by resolution of board, etc.

2272. That all funds of the Home not needed for current use, and which are not now invested in United States registered bonds, shall, as soon as received, or as soon as present investments can be converted into money without loss, be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Home as a permanent fund, and shall draw interest at the rate of three per centum per annum, which shall be paid quarterly to the treasurer of the Home; and the proceeds of such registered bonds, as they are paid, shall be deposited in like manner. No part of the principal sum so deposited shall be withdrawn for use except upon a resolution of the board of commissioners stating the necessity and approved by the Secretary of War. Sec. 8, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 565).

United States Treasurer to be custodian of funds, etc., of.

Jan. 16, 1891, v. 26, p. 718.

Transfer of funds to assistant treasurer in New York.

2273. That the Treasurer of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to receive and keep on deposit, subject to the checks or drafts of the treasurer of the Soldiers' Home in the District of Columbia, all funds which may now be under the control of the said treasurer of the Soldiers' Home, or may hereafter be furnished him or in any manner come into his possession for use in defraying the current expenses of maintaining the said Soldiers' Home, and, upon the request of said treasurer of the Soldiers' Home, there shall be transferred, from funds to his credit with the United States Treasurer, and placed to his credit with the assistant treasurer of the United States in New York City, New York, such sums as he may require monthly or quarterly for payments on account of "outdoor relief" to members of the said Soldiers' Home residing at a distance therefrom. Act of January 16, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 718).

Borrowing money on credit of Home prohibited.

Sec. 9, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 565.

2274. No officers of the Home shall borrow any money on the credit of the Home for any purpose, nor shall any pledge of any of its property or securities for any purpose be valid. Sec. 9, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 565).

[1] The act of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 60), contained the requirement that no pay should thereafter be retained from enlisted men, but excepted therefrom the deductions authorized to be made on account of the Soldiers' Home.

ADMISSION AND DISCHARGE OF INMATES.

Who may become members of the Soldiers' Home.
Mar. 3, 1851, c. 25, s. 1, v. 9, p. 595; Mar. 3, 1859, c. 83, ss. 5, 7, v. 11, p. 434.
Sec. 4814, R. S.

2275. All soldiers of the Army of the United States, and all soldiers who have been, or may hereafter be, of the Army of the United States, and who have contributed, or may hereafter contribute, according to section forty-eight hundred and nineteen, to the support of the Soldiers' Home hereby created, and the invalid and disabled soldiers, whether regulars or volunteers, of the war of eighteen hundred and twelve and of all subsequent wars, shall, under the restrictions and provisions which follow, be members of the Soldiers' Home, with all the rights annexed thereto.[1]

What persons are entitled to benefits of Soldiers' Home.
Mar. 3, 1851, c. 25, s. 4, v. 9, p. 596, Mar. 3, 1859, c. 83, s. 5, v. 11, p. 434.
Sec. 4821, R. S.

2276. The following persons, members of the Soldiers' Home, according to section forty-eight hundred and fourteen, shall be entitled to the rights and benefits herein conferred, and no others:

First. Every soldier of the Army of the United States who has served, or may serve, honestly and faithfully twenty years in the same.

Second. Every soldier and every discharged soldier, whether regular or volunteer, who has suffered, or may suffer, by reason of disease or wounds incurred in the service and in the line of his duty, rendering him incapable of further military service, if such disability was not occasioned by his own misconduct.

Third. The invalid and disabled soldiers, whether regular or volunteers, of the wars of eighteen hundred and twelve and of all subsequent wars.[2]

Who are excluded.
Mar. 3, 1851, c. 25, s. 6, v. 9, p. 596.
Sec. 4822, R. S.

2277. The benefits of the Soldiers' Home shall not be extended to any soldier in the regular or volunteer service convicted of felony or other disgraceful or infamous crimes of a civil nature after his admission into the service of the United States; nor shall any one who has been a deserter, mutineer, or habitual drunkard be received without such evidence of subsequent service, good conduct, and reformation of character as is satisfactory to the commissioners.

[1] This section and 4815 recognize two classes of beneficiaries: 1. Soldiers who, while in the service, contributed voluntarily to the support of the Home. 2. Soldiers who did not contribute. Those who contributed have a right to membership without surrendering their pensions to the Home. Under section 4820 of the Revised Statutes, those who did not contribute may become members by making such surrender. Bowen v. U. S., 100 U. S., 508; ibid., 14 Ct. Cls., 162.

[2] Held that under section 4821, Revised Statutes, invalid and disabled soldiers of the war of the rebellion and of Indian wars were entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' Home, although the disability may not have grown out of their military service, provided it be not the result of their own misconduct as indicated in section 4822, Revised Statutes. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 705, par. 1.

Discharge.
Sec. 5, ibid.
Sec. 4823, R.S.

2278. Any soldier admitted into the Soldiers' Home for disability who recovers his health, so as to become fit again for military service, if under fifty years of age, shall be discharged.[1]

OUTDOOR RELIEF.

Aid to persons, etc., by outdoor relief.
Sec. 6, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 565.

2279. That the board of commissioners are authorized to aid persons who are entitled to admission to the Home, by outdoor relief, in such manner and to such an extent as they may deem proper; but such relief shall not exceed the average cost of maintaining an inmate of the Home. Sec. 6, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 565).

PENSIONS TO INMATES.

Rights of pensioners and surrender of pensions.
Mar. 3. 1851, c. 25, s. 5, v. 9, p. 596; Mar. 3, 1859, c. 83, s. 6, v. 11, p. 434.
Sec. 4820, R.S.

2280. The fact that one to whom a pension has been granted for wounds or disability received in the military service has not contributed to the funds of the Soldiers' Home shall not preclude him from admission thereto. But all such pensioners shall surrender their pensions to the Soldiers' Home during the time they remain therein and voluntarily receive its benefits.[2]

Pension inmates of Home can allot portion of pension, etc.

Pensions, etc., to be paid to treasurer.
Sec. 4, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 564.

2281. Any inmate of the Home who is receiving a pension from the Government, and who has a child, wife, or parent living, shall be entitled, by filing with the pension agent from whom he receives his money a written direction to that effect, to have his pension, or any part of it, paid to such child, wife, or parent. The pensions of all who now are or shall hereafter become inmates of the Home, except such as shall be assigned as aforesaid, shall be paid to the treasurer of the Home. The money thus derived shall not become a part of the funds of the Home, but shall be held by the treasurer in trust for the pen-

[1] An inmate is not required to remain at the Home if he wishes to leave it. The privileges of the institution may be renounced by any act showing an intention to renounce them—such as direct notice of such intention, or by an absenting with the evident purpose of not returning. In February, 1864, a certain inmate was transferred from the Home to the Government Insane Hospital, and was discharged thence as sane in June, 1864. He did not return to the Home and was not again heard of till March, 1886, when it was ascertained that he was at the State Insane Hospital of Pennsylvania. As he was sane when he left the Government Hospital and did not return to the Home within a reasonable time, but remained absent nearly twenty-two years, held that he must be deemed, in the absence of contrary evidence, to have intended to permanently separate himself from the institution, and that he therefore was not now an inmate or member of the same. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2329.

[2] Section 4820, Revised Statutes, admits of no other reasonable construction than that only invalid pensioners who had not contributed to the funds of the Soldiers' Home were bound to surrender to it their pensions while receiving its benefits. U. S. v. Bowen, 100 U. S., 508; but see paragraph 2281, post.

Death of pensioner; money due, etc., paid to legal heirs.

sioner to whom it would otherwise have been paid, and such part of it as shall not sooner have been paid to him shall be paid to him on his discharge from the institution. The board of commissioners may from time to time pay over to any inmate such part of his pension money as they think best for his interest and consistent with the discipline and good order of the Home, but such pensioner shall not be entitled to demand or have the same so long as he remains an inmate of the Home. In case of the death of any pensioner, any pension money due him remaining in the hands of the treasurer shall be paid to his legal heirs, if demand is made within three years; otherwise the same shall escheat to the Home. Sec. 4, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 564).

Payment of one-half of pension to wife, etc., Mar. 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1379

2282. If any such pensioner is or shall become an inmate of a National Soldiers' Home, one-half of the pension drawn in his behalf, or to which he may become entitled during his residence therein, shall be paid by the treasurer of that institution to such pensioner's wife, she being in necessitous circumstances and a woman of good moral character, or, if there be no wife, to the legal guardian of the minor child or children, or the permanently dependent and helpless child or children of such pensioner, on the order of the Commissioner of Pensions.[1] Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1379).

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Inmates subject to Articles of War.
Mar. 3, 1859, c. 83, s. 7, v. 11, p. 434.
Sec. 4824, R. S.

2283. All persons admitted into the Soldiers' Home shall be subject to the Rules and Articles of War in the same manner as soldiers in the Army.[2]

Uniform to be furnished inmates free of cost.
Sec. 5, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 565.

2284. A suitable uniform shall be furnished to every inmate of the Home, without cost to him.[3] Sec. 5, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 565).

Expenditures limited, etc., except on approval of board.

2285. No new buildings shall be erected or new grounds purchased, nor shall any expenditure of more than five thousand dollars be made, until the action of the board thereon shall be approved by the Secretary of War. All supplies that can be purchased upon contract shall be so purchased, after due notice by advertisement, of the lowest responsible bidder. Such bidder shall give bond, with proper security, for the performance of his contract.[1] Sec. 3, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 565).

[2] Section 4824, Revised Statutes, subjecting the inmates of the Soldiers' Home to the Rules and Articles of War, is unconstitutional and a dead letter. These inmates are no part of the Army, nor are they supported by the United States. They are civilians occupying dwellings and sustained by funds held in trust for them. The territory of the Home being within the District of Columbia, and not having been exempted by Congress from the operation of the criminal laws of the District, the inmates are subject to those laws like any other residents. [Compare opinion of Attorney-General in XX Opins., 514.] Dig. Opin., J. A. G., par. 2328.

[3] The inmates of the Soldiers' Home wear the uniform of soldiers of the Army. They are therefore within the operation of section 1181 of the Revised Statutes relating to the District of Columbia, which makes penal the selling of liquor to persons wearing the uniform of soldiers. Ibid., p. 705, par. 3.

Sec. 3, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 565.

2286. On and after the passage of this act no license for the sale of intoxicating liquor at any place within one mile of the Soldiers' Home property in the District of Columbia shall be granted. Act of February 28, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 797).

Liquor licenses prohibited within 1 mile of Soldiers' Home, D. C.
Feb. 28, 1891, v. 26, p. 797.

[1] Contracts for the Home should be entered into, not by the "Soldiers' Home," which is not an incorporated institution, but by the board of commissioners, who, as trustees for the Home, may make contracts which will bind the United States. Dig. Opin., J. A. G., par. 2330.

Section 11 of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., p. 565), contains the provision "that all laws and parts of laws relating to the Soldiers' Home now in force and not inconsistent with this act are continued in force, and such as are inconsistent herewith are to that extent repealed." Section 12 of the same act contained the requirement that "the sum of ten thousand dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury in the employment of additional clerical force to be used in adjusting the accounts in the Treasury Department of those funds which under the law belong to the Soldiers' Home."

2287. The President, Secretary of War, Chief Justice, and such other persons as have been or from time to time may be associated with them, shall constitute a board of managers of an establishment for the care and relief of the disabled volunteers of the United States Army, to be known by the name and style of "The National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers," and have perpetual succession, with powers to take, hold, and convey real and personal property, establish a common seal, and to sue and be sued in courts of law and equity; and to make by-laws, rules, and regulations, not inconsistent with law, for carrying on the business and government of the Home, and to affix penalties thereto.

Election of citizen managers.
Mar. 21, 1866, c. 21, s. 3. v. 14, p. 10; Mar. 12, 1867, c. 1. v. 15, p. 1; Jan. 23, 1873, c. 51, s. 1, v. 17, p. 417.
Sec. 4826, R.S.

2288. Eleven managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteers shall be elected from time to time, as vacancies occur, by joint resolution of Congress. They shall all be citizens of the United States, and all residents of States which furnished organized bodies of soldiers to aid in suppressing the rebellion commenced in eighteen hundred and sixty-one; and no two of them shall be residents of the same State, and no person who gave aid or countenance to the rebellion shall ever be eligible. The term of office of these managers shall be for six years, and until a successor is elected.[1]

Election of officers of the Board of Managers.
Mar. 21, 1866, c. 21, s. 2, v. 14, p. 10; Jan. 23, 1873, c. 51, s. 1, v. 17, p. 417.
Sec. 4827, R. S.

2289. The fourteen managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers shall elect from their own number a president, who shall be the chief executive officer of the board, two vice-presidents, and a secretary. Seven of the board, of whom the president or one of the vice-presidents shall be one, shall form a quorum for the transaction of business at any meeting of the board.[2]

Expenses of Board of Managers.
Aug. 18, 1894, v. 28, p. 412.
Sec. 4828, R. S.

2290. Hereafter no member of the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers shall receive any compensation or pay for any services or duties connected with the Home; but the traveling and other actual expenses of a member, incurred while upon the business of the Home, may be reimbursable to such member. Act of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 412).

Officers who may receive salaries.

2291. The president and secretary of the Board of Managers may receive a reasonable compensation for their services as such officers, not exceeding four thouand dollars and two thousand dollars, respectively, per annum. Ibid.

Bond of general treasurer.
Aug. 18, 1894, v. 28, p. 412.

2292. The general treasurer[3] shall give good and sufficient bond to the United States in a sum not less than one hundred thousand dollars, as the Secretary of War may direct, and to be approved by him, faithfully to account for all public moneys and property which he may receive.

Assistant to general treasurer, bond.
June 6, 1900, v. 31, p. 636.

2293. The assistant general treasurer and assistant inspector-general shall hereafter, in the necessary absence or inability of the general treasurer, from any cause whatever, perform his duties and give bond to the general treasurer for the faithful performance of such duties, but

[1] The number of managers to be elected by joint resolution of Congress was fixed at ten by section 3 of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 444), and at eleven by joint resolution No. 21, of March 3, 1891 (26 ibid., 1117).

President of the Board of Managers	$4,000
Secretary of Board of Managers	2,000
General treasurer	4,000
Inspector-general	2,500
Assistant to general treasurer and assistant inspector-general	2,000
Assistant inspectors-general, each	2,000

[3] The act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 636), and prior acts of appropriation have contained the requirement that the general treasurer shall not be a member of the Board of Managers.

the general treasurer shall in every respect be responsible on his bond to the United States for any default on the part of such assistant general treasurer and assistant inspector-general.[1] Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 636).

Bonds of depositories. July 9, 1896, s. 2, v. 29, p. 129.

2294. From and after the passage of this act it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to require from the president and cashier of all banks used as depositories by the treasurer of the Home a deposit of bonds sufficient in amount to fully secure all moneys pertaining to said Home left on deposit with any such bank. Sec. 2, act of July 9, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 129).

INSPECTIONS.

Inspections. Aug. 18, 1894, v. 28, p. 412.

2295. Hereafter, once in each fiscal year, the Secretary of War shall cause a thorough inspection to be made of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, its records, disbursements, management, discipline, and condition, such inspection to be made by an officer of the Inspector-General's Department, who shall report thereon in writing, and said report shall be transmitted to Congress at the first session thereafter.[2] Act of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 412).

Duties of Board of Managers. Mar. 21, 1866, c. 21, s. 5, v. 14, p. 11. Jan. 23, 1873, c. 32, s. 1, v. 17, p. 417. Sec. 4834, R. S.

2296. The Board of Managers shall make an annual report of the condition of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers to Congress on the first Monday of every January; and the board shall examine and audit the accounts of the treasurer and visit the Home quarterly.

Estimates to show salaries, etc. Aug. 5, 1892, v. 27, p. 384.

2297. Hereafter the statement of expenses of the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers shall each year be submitted in the annual Book of Estimates and shall be made to show the amount of salary or compensation paid to each of the officers and employees of said board, and there shall also be submitted therewith a statement showing the number of officers appointed at each of the Branch Homes under section four thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine of the Revised Statutes, the amount of salary or compensation paid to each, and the amount of allowance to each, if any, for contingent or other expenses.[3] Act of August 5, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 384).

[1] ACCOUNTS AND DISBURSEMENTS.

The accounts of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers in their audit, examination, and settlement are subject to the general laws governing the disbursement of public moneys. A class of accounts of the Homes involving receipts or sales of property, such as flowers, provisions to officers and others connected with the Homes, and transportation of members of the Homes, should, however, be exempt from the operation of these laws. These amounts may be charged, when properly taken up day by day, on the books of the treasurer and credited on his account current without vouchers. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., par. 846.

It is not practicable, in all cases, to apply the same rules in the settlement of accounts for moneys received from "sales of certain things" at the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers as are applied in th settlement of accounts for expenditures, including the expenses of the Board of Managers. When it is impracticable to obtain vouchers, or a statement of items of receipts from sales, the certificate of the president of the board that the abstracts of receipts are correct may be accepted. Ibid., 848.

[2] Under this provision the expenses of inspecting goods purchased for the Home are properly chargeable as an incident of the cost of such goods, and payable out of the appropriation for their purchase, in the absence of a specific appropriation for inspection. 2 Compt. Dec., 522.

Mar. 3, 1901, v. 31, p. 1178.

2317. The accounts relating to the expenditure of all public moneys appropriated for the support and maintenance of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers shall be audited by the Board of Managers of said Home in the same manner as is provided for the accounts of the various Departments of the United States Government, and thereupon immediately transmitted directly to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department for final audit and settlement.[1] Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 1178).

Balances of appropriations, disposal of.
Oct. 2, 1888, v. 25, p. 543.

2318. Hereafter the provisions of section thirty-six hundred and ninety and thirty-six hundred and ninety-one of the Revised Statutes of the United States shall apply to all appropriations made for the maintenance of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. Act of October 2, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 543).

ESTABLISHMENT OF BRANCH HOMES.

Sites for homes may be purchased, and buildings erected.
Mar. 21, 1866, c. 21, s. 4, v. 14, p. 10; Jan. 23, 1873, c. 51, s. 1, v. 17, p. 417.
Sec. 4830, R. S.

2319. The Board of Managers shall have authority to procure from time to time, at suitable places, sites for military homes for all persons serving in the Army of the United States at any time in the war of the rebellion, not otherwise provided for, who have been or may be disqualified for procuring their own support by reason of wounds received or sickness contracted while in the line of their duty during the rebellion; and to have the necessary buildings erected, having due regard to the health of location, facility of access, and capacity to accommodate the persons entitled to the benefits thereof.[2]

[1] This enactment repeals and replaces so much of the acts of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 359), March 3, 1891 (26 ibid., 984), and March 3, 1893 (27 ibid., 646), as requires the Board of Managers to render accounts of disbursements for the several Branches of the Home to the Secretary of War, and vests in the latter a supervision of the accounts connected therewith.

[2] Under authority conferred by separate statutes Branch Homes have been established at the following places:

The Central Branch, at Dayton, Ohio.
The Northwestern Branch, at Milwaukee, Wis.
The Eastern Branch, at Togus, Me.
The Southern Branch, at Hampton, Va.
The Western Branch, at Leavenworth, Kans.
The Pacific Branch, at Santa Monica, Cal.

STATE AND TERRITORIAL HOMES.

2321. That all States or Territories which have established, or which shall hereafter establish, State homes for disabled soldiers and sailors of the United States who served in the war of the rebellion, or in any previous war, who are disabled by age, disease, or otherwise, and by reason of such disability are incapable of earning a living, provided such disability was not incurred in service against the United States, shall be paid for every such disabled soldier or sailor who may be admitted and cared for in such home at the rate of one hundred dollars per annum. The number of such persons for whose care any State or Territory shall receive the said payment under this act shall be ascertained by the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, under such regulations as it may prescribe, but the said State or Territorial homes shall be exclusively under the control of the respective State or Territorial authorities, and the Board of Managers shall not have nor assume any management or control of said State or Territorial homes. The Board of Managers of the National Home shall, however, have power to have the said State or Territorial homes inspected at such times as it may consider necessary, and shall report the result of such inspections to Congress in its annual report. Act of August 27, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 450).

Pension.
Mar. 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1379.

2323. When a soldier or sailor enters into a State home for soldiers or sailors as an inmate thereof, one-half of his pension accruing during his residence therein shall be paid to his wife, she being a woman of good moral character and in necessitous circumstances, or if there be no wife, then to his child or children under sixteen years of age, or his permanently helpless and dependent child, if any, unless such wife and children shall also be inmates of the same institution or of some home provided for the wives and children of soldiers and sailors.[1] Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1379).

Sec. 4832, R. S.

2325. Hereafter the following persons only shall be entitled to the benefits of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and may be admitted thereto upon the order of a member of the Board of Managers, namely: All honorably discharged officers, soldiers, and sailors who served in the regular or volunteer forces of the United States in any war in which the country has been engaged, who are disabled by disease, wounds, or otherwise, and who have no adequate means of support, and by reason of such disability are incapable of earning their living.[3] Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 217).

[1] The act of March 3, 1899, contains the requirement that "in all cases the questions of desertion, entrance into a home, necessitous circumstances, and of good moral character shall be ascertained and determined by the Commissioner of Pensions under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe, and the treasurers or governors of the several soldiers' and sailors' homes shall be advised of such action from time to time."

[2] Subsequent acts of appropriation contain the requirement "that one-half of any sum or sums retained by State homes on account of pensions received from inmates shall be deducted from the aid herein provided for."

[3] This enactment replaces section 5 of the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 121), section 2 of the act of March 2, 1887 (24 ibid., 444), and section 5 of the act of July 23, 1888 (25 ibid., 341).

The Government is under no legal obligation to provide burial places for destitute soldiers at a Volunteer Home. Section 4878, Revised Statutes, in providing that the soldiers, etc., there designated "may be buried in any national cemetery free of cost" does not require the establishment of a national cemetery specially for the purpose of interments at such a Home. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1770.

The act of January 28, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 745), contained the requirement that "all honorably discharged soldiers and sailors who served in the war of the rebellion and the Spanish-American war, and the provisional army and the volunteer soldiers and sailors of the war of eighteen hundred and twelve and of the Mexican war, who are disabled by age, disease, or otherwise, and by reason of such disability are incapable of earning a living, shall be admitted into the Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers."

TRANSFER OF INMATES.

Transfers of inmates.
Aug. 23, 1894, v. 28, p. 492.

2326. In the event that buildings at any Branch of the Home shall be destroyed by fire, or rendered unfit for habitation because of pestilence or by the elements, then and in that event the Board of Managers shall have authority to remove the members of said Branch so afflicted or destroyed to any other Branch not so affected; and to do this they may use any funds appropriated for the Home, notwithstanding they may have been specifically appropriated for other purposes, to the extent that such funds shall be necessary to effect such a transfer and the maintenance and support thereafter of said members so transferred, and shall report their doings therein to the Congress and their expenditures as in other cases of expenditures.

Aug. 23, 1894, v. 28, p. 492.

2327. The managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers are authorized to aid persons who are entitled to its benefits by outdoor relief in such manner and to such extent as they may deem proper, but such relief shall not exceed the average cost of maintaining an inmate of the Home. Act of August 23, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 492).

PENSIONS TO INMATES.

Pensioners, inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, how paid.
Sec. 2, Feb. 26, 1881, v. 21, p. 350.

2328. All pensions payable or to be paid under this act, to pensioners who are inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, shall be paid to the treasurer or treasurers of said Home, upon security given to the satisfaction of the managers, to be disbursed for the benefit of the pensioners without deduction for fines or penalties under regulations to be established by the managers of the Home; said payment to be made by the pension agent upon a certificate of the proper officer of the Home that the pensioner is an inmate thereof and is still living. Any balance of the pension which may remain at the date of the pensioner's discharge shall be paid over to him; and in case of his death at the Home, the same shall be paid to the widow or children, or in default of either to his legal representatives.[1] Sec. 2, act of February 26, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 350).

Pensions, etc., due inmates of National Home to be paid to treasurers, etc.
Aug. 7, 1882, v. 22, p. 322.

2329. All pensions and arrears of pensions payable or to be paid to pensioners who are or may become inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers shall be paid to the treasurers of said Home, to be applied by such treasurers as provided by law, under the rules and regulations of said Home. Said payments shall be made by the pension agent upon a certificate of the proper officer of the Home that the pensioner is an inmate thereof on the day to which said pension is drawn. The treasurers of said Home, respectively, shall give security, to the satisfaction of the managers of said Home, for the payment and application by them of all arrears of pension and pension moneys they may receive under the aforesaid provision. And section two of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and for deficiencies, and for other purposes," approved February twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, is hereby revived and continued in force.[1] Act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat L., 322).

Payment of one-half of pension to wife, etc.
Mar. 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1379.
Sec. 4766, R.S.

2330. If any such pensioner is or shall become an inmate of a National Soldiers' Home, one-half of the pension drawn in his behalf, or to which he may become entitled during his residence therein, shall be paid by the treasurer of that institution to such pensioner's wife, she being in necessitous circumstances and a woman of good moral character, or, if there be no wife, to the legal guardian of the minor child or children, or the permanently dependent and helpless child or children of such pensioner, on the order of the Commissioner of Pensions.[2] Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1379).

INSANE PATIENTS.

Insane persons from National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers to be admitted, etc.
Aug. 7, 1882, v. 22, p. 330.

2331. In addition to the persons now entitled to admission to said hospital, any inmate of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers who is now or may hereafter become insane shall, upon an order of the president of the Board of Managers of the said National Home, be admitted to said hospital and treated therein; and if any inmate so admitted from said National Home is or thereafter becomes a pensioner, and has neither wife, minor child, nor parent dependent on him, in whole or part, for support, his arrears of pension and his pension money accruing during the period he shall remain in said hospital shall be applied to his support in said hospital, and be paid over to the proper officer of said institution for the general uses thereof. Act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 330).

ESTABLISHMENT AND SUPERVISION.

Mar. 3, 1855, c. 199, s. 1, v. 10, p. 682.
Sec. 4838, R.S.

2340. There shall be in the District of Columbia a Government Hospital for the Insane, and its objects shall be the most humane care and enlightened curative treatment of the insane of the Army and Navy of the United States and of the District of Columbia.

Supervision.
Mar. 3, 1881, v. 21, p. 458.

2341. The supervision heretofore exercised by the Secretary of the Interior over the Government Hospital for the Insane shall be continued, and the officers of said hospital shall report to him as heretofore, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding. Act of March 3, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 458).

SUPERINTENDENT.

The superintendent.
Sec. 3, ibid.
Mar. 3, 1881, v. 21, p. 414.
Sec. 4839, R.S.

2342. The chief executive officer of the Hospital for the Insane shall be a superintendent, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, and shall be entitled to a salary of four thousand dollars a year, and shall give bond for the faithful performance of his duties, in such sum and with such securities as may be required by the Secretary of the Interior. The superintendent shall be a well-educated physician, possessing competent experience in the care and treatment of the insane; he shall reside on the premises, and devote his whole time to the welfare of the institution; he shall, subject to the approval of the visitors, engage and discharge all needful and useful employees in the care of the insane, and all laborers on the farm, and determine their wages and duties; he shall be the responsible disbursing agent of the institution, and shall be ex-officio secretary of the board of visitors.

Funds of inmates.
July 1, 1898, v. 30, p. 623.

2343. The superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane shall deposit in the Treasury of the United States, in his name as agent, all funds now in his hands or which may hereafter be intrusted to him by or for the use of patients, which shall be kept as a separate account; and he is hereby authorized to draw therefrom on his order, from time to time, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, for the use of such patients, but not to exceed for any one patient the amount intrusted to the superintendent on account of such patient; and he shall give a separate bond, satisfactory to the said Secretary, for the faithful performance of his duties in respect to these funds as herein provided. Act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 623).

ADMISSIONS.

Admission of insane persons of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, etc.
June 15, 1860, c. 66, s. 1, v. 12, p. 23; July 13, 1866, c. 179, ss. 1, 2, v. 14, pp. 93, 94; Mar. 3, 1875, c. 156, s. 5, v. 18, p. 486.
Sec. 4843, R.S.

2344. The superintendent, upon the order of the Secretary of War, of the Secretary of the Navy, and of the Secretary of the Treasury, respectively, shall receive, and keep in custody until they are cured, or removed by the same authority which ordered their reception, insane persons of the following descriptions:

First. Insane persons belonging to the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Revenue-Cutter Service.

Second. Civilians employed in the Quartermaster's, Pay, and Subsistence Departments of the Army who may be, or may hereafter become, insane while in such employment. Act of February 9, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 7).

Third. Men who, while in the service of the United States, in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, have been admitted to the hospital, and have been thereafter discharged from it on the supposition that they have recovered their reason, and have, within three years after such discharge, become again insane from causes existing at the time of such discharge, and have no adequate means of support.

Fourth. Indigent insane persons who have been in either of the said services and been discharged therefrom on account of disability arising from such insanity.

Fifth. Indigent insane persons who have become insane within three years after their discharge from such service, from causes which arose during and were produced by said service.[1]

Discharge of patients upon bond.
Sec. 9, ibid.
Sec. 4856, R.S.

2345. If any person will give bond with sufficient security, to be approved by the supreme court of the District of Columbia, or by any judge thereof in vacation payable to the United States, with condition to restrain and take care of any independent or indigent insane person not charged with a breach of the peace, whether in the hospital or not, until the insane person is restored to sanity, such court or judge thereof may deliver such insane person to the party giving such bond.

Disbursement of appropriations for the insane.
Mar. 3, 1855, c. 199, s. 7, v. 10, p. 683.
Sec. 4858, R.S.

2346. All appropriations of money by Congress for the support of the Hospital for the Insane shall be drawn from the Treasury on the requisition of the Secretary of the Interior, and shall be disbursed and accounted for in all respects according to the laws regulating ordinary disbursements of public money.[2]

Payment of pensions to inmates.
Aug. 7, 1882, v. 22, p. 330.

2347. If any inmate of the Government Hospital for the Insane so admitted[3] from said National Home is or thereafter becomes a pensioner, and has neither wife, minor child, nor parent dependent on him, in whole or in part, for support, his arrears of pension and his pension money accruing during the period he shall remain in said hospital shall be applied to his support in said hospital and be paid over to the proper officer of said institution for the general uses thereof. Act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 330).

Treatment of insane of the Army in California.
Mar. 3, 1901, v. 31, p. 1163.

2348. The Secretary of War may, in his discretion, contract for the care, maintenance, and treatment of the insane of the Army, and inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers on the Pacific coast at any State asylum in California, in all cases which he is now authorized by law to cause to be sent to the Government Hospital for the Insane in the District of Columbia. Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 1163).

[1] The right to admission to the asylum has been extended by statute to include the following classes of cases:

(1) To insane convicts serving sentences of confinement imposed by United States courts. Act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 251).

(2) To persons in custody charged with crime against the United States. Act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 202).

(3) To inmates of the several branches of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers who may become insane. Act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 302).

(4) To inmates of the Soldiers' Home who may become insane. Act of July 7, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 194). The expense of maintenance to be paid from the Soldiers' Home fund.

[2] The act of March 3, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 458), vests the supervision of the asylum and the control over its management in the Secretary of the Interior.

Use of national military parks for maneuvers. May 15, 1896, v. 29, p. 120.

2349. In order to obtain practical benefits of great value to the country from the establishment of national military parks, said parks and their approaches are hereby declared to be national fields for military maneuvers for the Regular Army of the United States and the National Guard or Militia of the States: Provided, That the said parks shall be opened for such purposes only in the discretion of the Secretary of War, and under such regulations as he may prescribe.[1] Act of May 15, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 120).

[1] Section 35 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 757), contained a provision that "the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause preliminary examinations and surveys to be made for the purpose of selecting four sites with a view to the establishment of permanent camp grounds for instruction of troops of the Regular Army and National Guard, with estimates of the cost of the sites and their equipment with all modern appliances, and for this purpose is authorized to detail such officers of the Army as may be necessary to carry on the preliminary work; and the sum of ten thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the necessary expense of such work, to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of War: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall report to Congress the result of such examination and surveys; and no contract for said sites shall be made nor any obligations incurred until Congress shall approve such selections and appropriate the money therefor."

Secretary of War to designate forces to be instructed. Sec. 2, ibid.

2350. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized, within the limits of appropriations which may from time to time be available for such purpose, to assemble, at his discretion, in camp at such season of the year and for such period as he may designate, at such field of military maneuvers, such portions of the military forces of the United States as he may think best, to receive military instruction there. Sec. 2, ibid.

Secretary of War to make regulations. Sec. 2, ibid.

2351. The Secretary of War is further authorized to make and publish regulations governing the assembling of the National Guard or Militia of the several States upon the maneuvering grounds, and he may detail instructors from the Regular Army for such forces during their exercises. Sec. 2, ibid.

PROTECTION OF MILITARY PARKS.

Injuries to monuments, trees, etc. Mar. 3, 1897, v. 29, p. 621.

2352. Every person who willfully destroys, mutilates, defaces, injures, or removes any monument, statue, marker, guidepost, or other structure, or who willfully destroys, cuts, breaks, injures, or removes any tree, shrub, or plant within the limits of any National Parks, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than one thousand dollars for each monument, statue, marker, guidepost, or other structure, tree, shrub, or plant destroyed, defaced, injured, cut, or removed, or by imprisonment for not less than fifteen days and not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment. Act of March 3, 1897 (29 Stat. L., 621.)

Trespassing, hunting, shooting, etc. Sec. 2, ibid.

2353. Every person who shall trespass upon any National Parks for the purpose of hunting or shooting, or who shall hunt any kind of game thereon with gun or dog, or shall set trap or net or other device whatsoever thereon for the purpose of hunting or catching game of any kind, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for not less than five days or more than thirty days, or by both fine and imprisonment. Sec. 2, ibid.

Superintendents may make arrests. Sec. 3, ibid.

for the purpose of holding him to answer for such misdemeanor, and then and there shall make complaint in due form.[1] Sec. 3, ibid.

the Attorney-General of the United States that the title to the lands thus ceded is perfect, the following described highways in those States are hereby declared to be approaches to and parts of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park as established by the second section of this act, to wit: First. The Missionary Ridge Crest road from Sherman Heights at the north end of Missionary Ridge, in Tennessee, where the said road enters upon the ground occupied by the Army of the Tennessee under Major-General William T. Sherman, in the military operations of November twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three; thence along said road through the positions occupied by the army of General Braxton Bragg on November twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and which were assaulted by the Army of the Cumberland under Major-General George H. Thomas on that date, to where the said road crosses the southern boundary of the State of Tennessee, near Rossville Gap, Georgia, upon the ground occupied by the troops of Major-General Joseph Hooker, from the Army of the Potomac, and thence in the State of Georgia to the junction of said road with the Chattanooga and Lafayette or State road at Rossville Gap; second, the Lafayette or State road from Rossville, Georgia, to Lee and Gordon's Mills, Georgia; third, the road from Lee and Gordon's Mills, Georgia, to Crawfish Springs, Georgia; fourth, the road from Crawfish Springs, Georgia, to the crossing of the Chickamauga at Glass' Mills, Georgia; fifth, the Dry Valley road from Rossville, Georgia, to the southern limits of McFarland's Gap in Missionary Ridge; sixth, the Dry Valley and Crawfish Springs road from McFarland's Gap to the intersection of the road from Crawfish Springs to Lee and Gordon's Mills; seventh, the road from Ringold, Georgia, to Reed's Bridge on the Chickamauga River; eighth, the roads from the crossing of Lookout Creek across the northern slope of Lookout Mountain and thence to the old Summertown Road and to the valley on the east slope of the said mountain, and thence by the route of General Joseph Hooker's troops to Rossville, Georgia, and each and all of these herein described roads shall, after the passage of this act, remain open as free public highways, and all rights of way now existing through the grounds of the said park and its approaches shall be continued. Act of August 19, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 333).

Rights of way.

2357. Upon the ceding of jurisdiction by the legislature of the State of Georgia, and the report of the Attorney-General of the United States that a perfect title has been secured under the provisions of the act approved August first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, entitled "An act to authorize condemnation of land for sites for public buildings, and for other purposes," the lands and roads embraced in the area bounded as herein described, together with the roads described in section one of this act, are hereby declared to be a national park, to be known as the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Park; that is to say, the area inclosed by a line beginning on the Lafayette or State road, in Georgia, at a point where the bottom of the ravine next north of the house known on the field of Chickamauga as the Cloud House, and being about six hundred yards north of said house, due east to the Chickamauga River and due west to the intersection of the Dry Valley road at McFarland's Gap; thence along the west side of the Dry Valley and Crawfish Springs roads to the south side of the road from Crawfish Springs to Lee and Gordon's Mills; thence along the south side of the last-named road to Lee and Gordon's Mills; thence along the channel of the Chickamauga River to the line forming the northern boundary of the park as hereinbefore described, containing seven thousand six hundred acres, more or less. Sec. 2, ibid.

Condemnation of lands and roads.

Name, etc.

2358. The said Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Park, and the approaches thereto, shall be under the control of the Secretary of War, and it shall be his duty, immediately after the passage of this act, to notify the Attorney-General of the purpose of the United States to acquire title to the roads and lands described in the previous sections of this act under the provisions of the act of August first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight; and the said Secretary, upon receiving notice from the Attorney-General of the United States that perfect titles have been secured to the said lands and roads, shall at once proceed to establish and substantially mark the boundaries of the said park. Sec. 3, ibid.

Park and approaches to be under control of Secretary of War.

Proceedings in condemnation.
Sec. 3, ibid.

2359. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to enter into agreements, upon such nominal terms as he may prescribe, with such present owners of the land as may desire to remain upon it, to occupy and cultivate their present holdings, upon condition that they will preserve the present buildings and roads, and the present

Gettysburg National Park.
Acceptance of land from Battlefield Memorial Association.
Feb. 11, 1895, v. 28, p. 651.

2379. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to receive from the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association, a corporation chartered by the State of Pennsylvania, a deed of conveyance to the United States of all the lands belonging to said association, embracing about eight hundred acres, more or less, and being a considerable part of the battlefield of Gettysburg, together with all rights of way over avenues through said lands acquired by said association, and all improvements made by it in and upon the same. Upon the due execution and delivery to the Secretary of War of such deed of conveyance the Secretary of War is authorized to pay to the said Battlefield Memorial Association the sum of two thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary to discharge the debts of said association, the amount of such debts to be verified by the officers thereof, and the sum of two thousand dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to meet and defray such charges. Act of February 11, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 651).

Designation. Sec. 2, ibid.

2380. As soon as the lands aforesaid shall be conveyed to the United States the Secretary of War shall take possession of the same, and such other lands on the battlefield as the United States have acquired, or shall hereafter acquire, by purchase or condemnation proceedings; and the lands aforesaid shall be designated and known as the "Gettysburg National Park."[1] Sec. 2, ibid.

COMMISSIONERS.

Commissioners. Sec. 3, ibid.

Compensation.

Duty.

2381. The Gettysburg national park shall, subject to the supervision and direction of the Secretary of War, be in charge of the commissioners heretofore appointed by the Secretary of War for the location and acquisition of lands at Gettysburg, and their successors; the said commissioners shall have their office at Gettysburg, and while on duty shall be paid such compensation out of the appropriation provided in this act as the Secretary of War shall deem reasonable and just. And it shall be the duty of the said commissioners, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to superintend the opening of such additional roads as may be necessary for the purposes of the park and for the improvement of the avenues heretofore laid out therein, and to properly mark the boundaries of the said park, and to ascertain and definitely mark the lines of battle of all troops engaged in the battle of Gettysburg, so far as the same shall fall within the limits of the park.[2] Sec. 3, ibid.

Acquiring additional land, etc. Sec. 4, ibid.

2382. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to acquire, at such times and in such manner as he may deem best calculated to serve the public interest, such lands in the vicinity of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, not exceeding in area the parcels shown on the map prepared by Major-General Daniel E. Sickles, United States Army, and now on file in the office of the Secretary of War, which were occupied by the infantry, cavalry, and artillery on the first, second, and third days of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and such other adjacent lands as he may deem necessary to preserve the important topographical features of the battlefield: Provided, That nothing contained in this act shall be deemed and held to prejudice the rights acquired by any State or by any military organization to the ground on which its monuments or markers are placed, nor the right of way to the same. Sec. 4, ibid.

Commissioners to acquire lands designated. Sec. 5, ibid.

2383. For the purpose of acquiring the lands designated and described in the foregoing section not already acquired and owned by the United States, and such other adjacent land as may be deemed necessary by the Secretary of War for the preservation and marking of the lines of battle of the Union and Confederate armies at Gettysburg, the Secretary of War is authorized to employ the services of the commissioners heretofore appointed by him for the location, who shall proceed, in conformity with his instructions and subject in all things to his approval, to acquire such lands by purchase, or by condemnation proceedings, to be taken by the Attorney-General in behalf of the United States, in any case in which it shall be ascertained that the same can not be purchased at prices deemed reasonable and just by the said commissioners and approved by the Secretary of War. And such condemnation proceedings may be taken pursuant to the act of Congress approved August first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, regulating the condemnation of land for public uses, or the joint resolution authorizing the purchase or condemnation of land in the vicinity of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, approved June fifth, eight hundred and ninety-four. Sec. 5, ibid.

park, which said address was in the following words, to wit:

Inscription. "Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

"Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

"But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate, we can not consecrate, we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here; but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

And the sum of five thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay the cost of said tablet and medallion and pedestal. Sec. 8, act of February 11, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 651).

Chickamauga, may have the history of one of their memorable battles preserved on the ground where they fought, the battlefield of Shiloh, in the State of Tennessee, is hereby declared to be a national military park, whenever title to the same shall have been acquired by the United States and the usual jurisdiction over the lands and roads of the same shall have been granted to the United States by the State of Tennessee; that is to say, the area inclosed by the following lines, or so much thereof as the commissioners of the park may deem necessary, to wit: Beginning at low-water mark on the north bank of Snake Creek where it empties into the Tennessee River; thence westwardly in a straight line to the point where the river road to Crumps Landing, Tennessee, crosses Snake Creek; thence along the channel of Snake Creek to Owl Creek; thence along the channel of Owl Creek to the crossing of the road to Purdy, Tennessee; thence southwardly in a straight line to the intersection of an east and west line drawn from the point where the road to Hamburg, Tennessee, crosses Lick Creek, near the mouth of the latter; thence eastward along the said east and west line to the point where the Hamburg road crosses Lick Creek; thence along the channel of Lick Creek to the Tennessee River; thence along low-water mark of the Tennessee River to the point of beginning, containing three thousand acres, more or less, and the area thus inclosed shall be known as the Shiloh National Military Park: Provided, That the boundaries of the land authorized to be acquired may be changed by the said commissioners. Sec. 1, act of December 27, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 597).

Secretary of War to acquire land, etc.

2397. The establishment of the Shiloh National Military Park shall be carried forward under the control and direction of the Secretary of War, who, upon the passage of this act, shall proceed to acquire title to the same either under the act approved August first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, entitled "An act to authorize the condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes," or under the act approved February twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, entitled "An act to establish and protect national cemeteries," as he may select, and as title is procured to any portion of the lands and roads within the legal boundaries of the park he may proceed with the establishment of the park upon such portions as may thus be acquired. Sec. 2, ibid.

COMMISSIONERS.

2398. The affairs of the Shiloh National Military Park shall, subject to the supervision and direction of the Secretary of War, be in charge of three commissioners, to be appointed by the Secretary of War, each of whom shall have served at the time of the battle in one of the armies engaged therein, one of whom shall have served in the Army of the Tennessee, commanded by General U. S. Grant, who shall be chairman of the commission; one in the Army of the Ohio, commanded by General D. C. Buell; and one in the Army of the Mississippi, commanded by General A. S. Johnston. The said commissioners shall have an office in the War Department building, and while on actual duty shall be paid such compensation out of the appropriations provided by this act as the Secretary of War shall deem reasonable and just; and, for the purpose of assisting them in their duties and in ascertaining the lines of battle of all troops engaged and the history of their movements in the battle, the Secretary of War shall have authority to employ, at such compensation as he may deem reasonable, to be paid out of the appropriations made by this act, some person recognized as well informed concerning the history of the several armies engaged at Shiloh, and who shall also act as secretary of the commission. Sec. 4, ibid.

Compensation etc.

2399. It shall be the duty of the commission named in the preceding section, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to open or repair such roads as may be necessary to the purposes of the park, and to ascertain and mark with historical tablets or otherwise, as the Secretary of War may determine, all lines of battle of the troops engaged in the battle of Shiloh and other historical points of interest pertaining to the battle within the park or its vicinity, and the said commission in establishing this military park shall also have authority, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to employ such labor and services and to obtain such supplies and material as may be necessary to the establishment of the said park under such regulations as he may consider best for the interest of the Government, and the Secretary of War shall make and enforce all needed regulations for the care of the park. Sec. 5, ibid.

Location of office; limitation on purchases of land.

2400. The commissioners appointed under the act of Congress approved December twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, to have charge, under the Secretary of War, of the affairs of the Shiloh National Military Park, shall have their office at Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, or at such other point convenient to the battlefield of Shiloh, Tennessee, as the Secretary of War may direct; and the limit of cost of all the lands to be embraced in the said park is hereby fixed at not to exceed fifty thousand dollars.[1] Act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 945).

MARKING LINES OF BATTLE, MONUMENTS, ETC.

Marking lines of battle, etc. Dec. 27, 1894, s. 6, v. 28, p. 597.

2401. It shall be lawful for any State that had troops engaged in the battle of Shiloh to enter upon the lands of the Shiloh National Military Park for the purpose of ascertaining and marking the lines of battle of its troops engaged therein· Provided, That before any such lines are permanently designated the position of the lines and the proposed methods of marking them by monuments, tablets, or otherwise shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War, and all such lines, designs, and inscriptions for the same shall receive the written approval of the Secretary, which approval shall be based upon formal written reports, which must be made to him in each case by the commissioners of the park: Provided, That no discrimination shall be made against any State as to the manner of designating lines, but any grant made to any State by the Secretary of War may be used by any other State. Sec. 6, act of December 27, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 597).

Discriminations forbidden.

INJURIES TO MONUMENTS, TABLETS, ETC.

Penalty for destroying monuments, etc. Sec. 7, ibid.

2402. If any person shall, except by permission of the Secretary of War, destroy, mutilate, deface, injure, or remove any monument, column, statues, memorial structures, or work of art that shall be erected or placed upon the grounds of the park by lawful authority, or shall destroy or remove any fence, railing, inclosure, or other work for the protection or ornament of said park, or any portion thereof, or shall destroy, cut, hack, bark, break down, or otherwise injure any tree, bush, or shrubbery that may be growing upon said park, or shall cut down or fell or remove any timber, battle relic, tree or trees growing or being upon said park, or hunt within the limits of the park, or shall remove or destroy any breastworks, earthworks, walls, or other defenses or shelter on any part thereof constructed by the armies formerly engaged in the battles on the lands or approaches to the park, any person so offending and found guilty thereof, before any justice of the peace of the county in which the offense may be committed, or any court of competent jurisdiction, shall for each and every such offense forfeit and pay a fine, in the discretion of the justice, according to the aggravation of the offense, of not less than five nor more than fifty dollars, one-half for the use of the park and the other half to the informer, to be enforced and recovered before such justice in like manner as debts of like nature are now by law recoverable in the several counties where the offense may be committed.[1] Sec. 7, ibid.

[1] The act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. L., 43), contained the requirement that "the limit of cost of all the lands to be embraced in the said park is hereby increased to not to exceed fifty thousand dollars."

LEASES.

Leases, etc., authorized.
Sec. 3, ibid.

2403. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to enter into agreements whereby he may lease, upon such terms as he may prescribe, with such present owners or tenants of the lands as may desire to remain upon it, to occupy and cultivate their present holdings upon condition that they will preserve the present buildings and roads and the present outlines of field and forest, and that they only will cut trees or underbrush under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, and that they will assist in caring for and protecting all tablets, monuments, or such other artificial works as may from time to time be erected by proper authority. Sec. 3, ibid.

MISCELLANEOUS REQUIREMENTS.

Appropriation for expenses.
Sec. 8, ibid.

2404. To enable the Secretary of War to begin to carry out the purpose of this act, including the condemnation or purchase of the necessary land, marking the boundaries of the park, opening or repairing necessary roads, restoring the field to its condition at the time of the battle, maps and surveys, and the pay and expenses of the commissioners and their assistant, the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars, or such portion thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and disbursements under this act shall require the approval of the Secretary of War, and he shall make annual report of the same to Congress. Sec. 8, ibid.

Disbursements.

Boundaries of park. Feb. 21, 1899, v. 30, p. 841.

2407. In order to commemorate the campaign and siege and defense of Vicksburg, and to preserve the history of the battles and operations of the siege and defense on the ground where they were fought and were carried on, the battlefield of Vicksburg, in the State of Mississippi, is hereby declared to be a national military park whenever the title to the same shall have been acquired by the United States and the usual jurisdiction over the lands and roads of the same shall have been granted to the United States by the State of Mississippi; that is to say, the area inclosed by the following lines, or so much thereof as the commissioners of the park may deem necessary, to wit: Beginning near the point where the graveyard road, now known as the City Cemetery road, crosses the line of the Confederate earthworks; thence north about eighty rods; thence in an easterly direction about one hundred and twenty rods; thence in a southerly direction, and keeping as far from the line of the Confederate earthworks as the purposes of the park may require and as the park commission, to be hereinafter named, may determine, but not distant from the nearest point on said line of Confederate earthworks more than one hundred and sixty rods at any part, to a point about forty rods south and from eighty to one hundred and sixty rods east of Fort Garrott, also known as the "Square Fort;" thence in a westerly direction to a point in the rear of said Fort Garrott; thence in a northerly direction across the line of the Confederate earthworks and to a point about two hundred feet in the rear of the said line of Confederate earthworks; thence in a general northerly direction, and at an approximate distance of about two hundred feet in the rear of the line of Confederate earthworks as the conformation of the ground may require, to the place of beginning. This to constitute the main body of the park. In addition thereto a strip of land about two hundred and sixty-four feet in width, along and including the remaining parts of the Confederate earthworks, namely, from the north part of said main body of the park to and including Fort Hill or Fort Nogales on the high hill overlooking the national cemetery, and from the south part of said main body of the park to the edge of the bluff at the river below the city of Vicksburg; and also in addition thereto a strip of land about two hundred and sixty-four feet in width, as near as may be, along and including the Federal lines opposed to the Confederate lines herein and above named and not included in the main body of the park; and in further addition thereto such points of interest as the commission may deem necessary for the purposes of the park and the Secretary of War may approve; the whole containing about one thousand two hundred acres, and costing not to exceed forty thousand dollars.[1] Act of February 21, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 841).

Acquisition of lands.

2408. The establishment of the Vicksburg national military park shall be carried forward under the control and direction of the Secretary of War; and the Secretary of War shall, upon the passage of this act, proceed to acquire title to the same by voluntary conveyance or under the act approved August first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, entitled "An act to authorize the condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes," or under act approved February twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, entitled "An act to establish and protect national cemeteries," as he may elect or deem practicable; and when title is procured to all of the lands and roads within the boundaries of the proposed park, as described in section one of this act, he may proceed with the establishment of the park, and he shall detail an officer of the Engineer Corps of the Army to assist the commissioners in establishing the park. Sec. 2, ibid.

[1] The act of February 9, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 12), contains the requirement that "the sum of five thousand dollars, or so much of said amount as may be necessary, may be expended, with the approval of the Secretary of War, in addition to the amount authorized by section one of the act approved February twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, in the purchase of lands to be used as a part of the site of said park." This clause operates to increase the limit of expenditure for land from $40,000 to $45,000. By the act of June 6, 1900 (31 ibid., 625), the additional amount of $6,000 was appropriated for the purchase of lands.

Leases. Sec. 3, ibid.

2409. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to enter into agreements of leasing, upon such terms as he may prescribe, with such occupants or tenants of the lands as may desire to remain upon it, to occupy and cultivate their present holdings upon condition that they will preserve the present buildings and roads and the present outlines of field and forest, and that they will only cut trees or underbrush under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and that they will assist in caring for and protecting all tablets, monuments, or such other artificial works as may from time to time be erected by proper authority: Provided, That the United States shall at all times have and retain full right, power, and authority to take possession of any and all parts or portions of said premises and to remove and expel therefrom any such occupant, tenant, or other person or persons found thereon whenever the Secretary of War or the commissioners shall deem it proper or necessary; and such right, power, and authority shall be reserved in express terms in all leases and agreements giving or granting such occupant or tenant the right to remain in possession as herein contemplated; and thereupon said occupant or tenant or other persons who may be required to vacate said premises shall each and all at once surrender and deliver up the possession thereof. Sec. 3, ibid.

Commissioners' office; salary. Sec. 4, ibid.

2410. The affairs of the Vicksburg national military park shall, subject to the supervision and direction of the Secretary of War, be in charge of three commissioners, to be appointed by the Secretary of War, each of whom shall have served at the time of the siege and defense in one of the armies engaged therein, two of whom shall have served in the army commanded by General Grant and one in the army commanded by General Pemberton. The commissioners shall elect one of their number chairman; they shall also elect, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, a secretary, who shall also be historian, and who shall possess the requisite qualifications of a commissioner, and they and the secretary shall have an office in the city of Vicksburg, Mississippi, or on the grounds of the park, and be paid such compensation as the Secretary of War shall deem reasonable and just. Sec. 4, ibid.

Duties. Sec. 5, ibid.

2411. It shall be the duty of the commissioners named in the preceding section, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to restore the forts and the lines of fortification, the parallels and the approaches of the two armies, or so much thereof as may be necessary to the purposes of this park; to open and construct and to repair such roads as may be necessary to said purposes, and to ascertain and mark with historical tablets, or otherwise, as the Secretary of War may determine, the lines of battle of the troops engaged in the assaults, and the lines held by the troops during the siege and defense of Vicksburg, the headquarters of General Grant and of General Pemberton, and other historical points of interest pertaining to the siege and defense of Vicksburg within the park or its vicinity; and the said commissioners in establishing this military park shall also have authority under the direction of the Secretary of War to do all things necessary to the purposes of the park, and for its establishment under such regulations as he may consider best for the interest of the Government, and the Secretary of War shall make and enforce all needful regulations for the care of the park.[1] Sec. 5, ibid.

State monuments, erection. Sec. 6, ibid.

2412. It shall be lawful for any State that had troops engaged in the siege and defense of Vicksburg to enter upon the lands of the Vicksburg National Military Park for the purpose of ascertaining and marking the lines of battle of its troops engaged therein: Provided, That before any such lines are permanently designated the position of the lines and the proposed methods of marking them by monuments, tablets, or otherwise shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War, and all such lines, designs, and inscriptions for the same shall first receive the written approval of the Secretary of War, which approval shall be based upon formal written reports which must be made to him in each case by the commissioners of the park; and no monument, tablet, or other designating indication shall be erected or placed within said park or vicinity without such written authority of the Secretary of War: Provided, That no discrimination shall be made against any State as to the manner of designating lines, but any grant made to any State by the Secretary of War may be used by any other State. The provisions of this section shall also apply to organizations and persons; and as the Vicksburg National Cemetery is on ground partly occupied by Federal lines during the siege of Vicksburg, the provisions of this section, as far as may be practicable, shall apply to monuments or tablets designating such lines within the limits of that cemetery. Sec. 6, ibid.

[1] The employment of persons to aid the Vicksburg Military Park Commission in preparing abstracts of title to and conveyances of lands to be purchased for park purposes is not the employment of "attorneys or counsel," within the meaning of section 189, Revised Statutes, which provides that "no head of a department shall employ attorneys or counsel." The employment of such persons is authorized, and compensation for such services may be made from the appropriation made in section 8 of the act of February 21, 1899, 30 Stat. L., 841. 6 Comp. Dec., 133.

Injury to monuments, etc.

2413. If any person shall, except by permission of the Secretary of War, destroy, mutilate, deface, injure, or remove any monument, column, statue, memorial structure, tablet, or work of art that shall be erected or placed upon the grounds of the park by lawful authority, or shall destroy or remove any fence, railing, inclosure, or other work intended for the protection or ornamentation of said park, or any portion thereof, or shall destroy, cut, hack, bark, break down, or otherwise injure any tree, bush, or shrub that may be growing upon said park, or shall cut down or fell or remove any timber, battle relic, tree, or trees growing or being upon said park, or hunt within the limits of the park, or shall remove or destroy any breastworks, earthworks, walls, or other defenses or shelter on any part thereof constructed by the armies formerly engaged in the battles, on the lands or approaches to the park, any person so offending and found guilty thereof, before any United States commissioner or court, justice of the peace of the county in which the offense may be committed, or any court of competent jurisdiction, shall for each and every such offense forfeit and pay a fine in the discretion of the said commissioner or court of the United States or justice of the peace, according to the aggravation of the offense, of not less than five nor more than five hundred dollars, one-half for the use of the park and the other half to the informant, to be enforced and recovered before such United States commissioner or court or justice of the peace or other court in like manner as debts of like nature are now by law recoverable in the several counties where the offense may be committed. Sec. 7, ibid.

2414. To enable the Secretary of War to begin to carry out the purpose of this act, including the condemnation or purchase of the necessary land, marking the boundaries of the park, opening or repairing necessary roads, restoring the field to its condition at the time of the battle, maps and surveys, material, labor, clerical and all other necessary assistants, and the pay and expenses of the commissioners and their secretary and assistants, the sum of sixty-five thousand dollars, or such portion thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and disbursements under this act shall require the approval of the Secretary of War, and he shall make annual report of the same to Congress. Sec. 8, ibid.

Sole jurisdiction of United States.
May 7, 1894, v. 28, p. 73.

2426. The Yellowstone National Park, as its boundaries now are defined, or as they may be hereafter defined or extended, shall be under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States; and that all the laws applicable to places under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States shall have force and effect in said park:[1] Provided, however, That nothing in this act shall be construed to forbid the service in the park of any civil or criminal process of any court having jurisdiction in the States of Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming. All fugitives from justice taking refuge in said park shall be subject to the same laws as refugees from justice found in the State of Wyoming. Sec. 1, act of May 7, 1894 (28 Stat L., 73).

[1] The boundaries of the Yellowstone Park are described in the act of March 1, 1872 (17 Stat. L., 32), above cited. Under the authority conferred by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 1095); the President on March 30, 1891, set apart as a forest reservation a tract of land adjoining the Yellowstone Park, the limits of which are described in proclamation No. 17 (26 Stat. L., 1565). On September 10, 1891, by proclamation No. 6 (27 Stat. L., 11), a second tract of land was similarly reserved.

[2] See, also, section 4, act of May 7, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 73), par. 2437, post.

State process.

Jurisdiction of Wyoming judicial district. Sec. 2, ibid.

2427. Said park, for all the purposes of this act, shall constitute a part of the United States judicial district of Wyoming, and the district and circuit courts of the United States in and for said district shall have jurisdiction of all offenses committed within said park. Sec. 2, ibid.

Punishment of offenses under Wyoming laws. Sec. 3, ibid.

2428. If any offense shall be committed in said Yellowstone National Park, which offense is not prohibited or the punishment is not specially provided for by any law of the United States or by any regulation of the Secretary of the Interior, the offender shall be subject to the same punishment as the laws of the State of Wyoming in force at the time of the commission of the offense may provide for a like offense in the said State; and no subsequent repeal of any such law of the State of Wyoming shall affect any prosecution for said offense committed within said park. Sec. 3, ibid.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER.

Commissioner, May 7, 1895, s. 5, v. 28, p. 73.

2429. The United States circuit court in said district shall appoint a commissioner, who shall reside in the park, who shall have jurisdiction to hear and act upon all complaints made, of any and all violations of the law, or of the rules and regulations made by the Secretary of the Interior for the government of the park, and for the protection of the animals, birds, and fish and objects of interest

[1] Section 2 of the act of July 10, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 222), by which the State of Wyoming was admitted to the Union, contained the following clause: "That nothing in this act contained shall repeal or affect any act of Congress relating to the Yellowstone National Park, or the reservation of the park as now defined, or as may be hereafter defined or extended, or the power of the United States over it; and nothing contained in this act shall interfere with the right and ownership of the United States in said park and reservation as it now is or may hereafter be defined or extended by law; but exclusive legislation, in all cases whatsoever, shall be exercised by the United States, which shall have exclusive control and jurisdiction over the same; but nothing in this proviso contained shall be construed to prevent the service within said park of civil and criminal process lawfully issued by the authority of said State; and the said State shall not be entitled to select indemnity school lands for the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections that may be in said park reservation as the same is now defined or may be hereafter defined."

This statute operated to reserve to the United States exclusive jurisdiction and control over the park as then defined or as it might be thereafter defined or extended by enactment of Congress. By the act of May 7, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 73), paragraph 2427, post, Congress assumed the jurisdiction authorized by the act of July 10, 1890.

Duties. therein, and for other purposes authorized by this act. Such commissioner shall have power, upon sworn information, to issue process in the name of the United States for the arrest of any person charged with the commission of any misdemeanor, or charged with the violation of the rules and regulations, or with the violation of any provision of this act prescribed for the government of said park, and for the protection of the animals, birds, and fish in the said park, and to try the person so charged, and, if found guilty, to impose the punishment and adjudge the forfeiture prescribed. Section 5, act of May 7, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 73). Trials.

Appeals. Sec. 5, ibid. 2430. In all cases of conviction an appeal shall lie from the judgment of said commissioner to the United States district court for the district of Wyoming, said appeal to be governed by the laws of the State of Wyoming providing for appeals in cases of misdemeanor from justices of the peace to the district court of said State; but the United States circuit court in said district may prescribe rules of procedure and practice for said commissioner in the trial of cases and for appeal to said United States district court. Ibid.

Process in felony cases. Ibid. 2431. Said commissioner shall also have power to issue process as hereinbefore provided for the arrest of any person charged with the commission of any felony within the park, and to summarily hear the evidence introduced, and, if he shall determine that probable cause is shown for holding the person so charged for trial, shall cause such person to be safely conveyed to a secure place for confinement, within the jurisdiction of the United States district court in said State of Wyoming, and shall certify a transcript of the record of his proceedings and the testimony in the case to the said court, which court shall have jurisdiction of the case: Provided, That the said commissioner shall grant bail in all cases bailable under the laws of the United States or of said State. All process issued by the commissioner shall be directed to the marshal of the United States for the district of Wyoming; but nothing herein contained shall be construed as preventing the arrest by any officer of the Government or employee of the United States in the park without process of any person taken in the act of violating the law or any regulation of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the said commissioner shall only exercise such authority and powers as are conferred by this act. Ibid. Bail, etc. Summary arrests. Limit of authority.

Fees, etc.

2432. That the commissioner provided for in this act shall, in addition to the fees allowed by law to commissioners of the circuit courts of the United States, be paid an annual salary of one thousand dollars,[1] payable quarterly, and the marshal of the United States and his deputies, and the attorney of the United States and his assistants in said district, shall be paid the same compensation and fees as are now provided by law for like services in said district. Sec. 7, ibid.

Deputy marshals.

2433. The marshal of the United States for the district of Wyoming may appoint one or more deputy marshals for said park, who shall reside in said park, and the said United States district and circuit courts shall hold one session of said courts annually at the town of Sheridan, in the State of Wyoming, and may also hold other sessions at any other place in said State of Wyoming or in said national park at such dates as the said courts may order. Sec. 6, ibid.

Terms of court.

Jail.

2434. The Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be erected in the park a suitable building to be used as a jail, and also having in said building an office for the use of the commissioner, the cost of such building not to exceed five thousand dollars, to be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated upon the certificate of the Secretary as a voucher therefor. Sec. 9, ibid.

Costs, etc.

2435. All costs and expenses arising in cases under this act, and properly chargeable to the United States, shall be certified, approved, and paid as like costs and expenses in the courts of the United States are certified, approved, and paid under the laws of the United States. Sec. 8, ibid.

Existing laws.

2436. This act shall not be construed to repeal existing laws conferring upon the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of War certain powers with reference to the protection, improvement, and control of the said Yellowstone National Park. Sec. 10, ibid.

PROTECTION OF BIRDS AND ANIMALS.

Par.
2437. Prohibition of hunting and fishing.
2438. Evidence of violation.
2439. Unlawful transportation of game.
Par.
2440. Forfeiture of guns, traps, etc.
2441. Regulations.

Prohibition of hunting, fishing, etc.
May 7, 1894, s. 4, v. 28, p. 73.

2437. All hunting, or the killing, wounding, or capturing at any time of any bird or wild animal, except dangerous animals, when it is necessary to prevent them from destroying human life or inflicting an injury, is prohibited within the limits of said park; nor shall any fish be taken out of the waters of the park by means of seines, nets, traps, or by the use of drugs or any explosive substances or compounds, or in any other way than by hook and line, and then only at such seasons and in such times and manner as may be directed by the Secretary of the Interior. Sec. 4, act of May 7, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 73).

[1] The act of February 19, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 578), and subsequent acts of appropriation contain the requirement that section 21, of the act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 184), shall not be construed "as impairing the right of said commissioner to receive said salary as herein provided."

Evidence of violation. Sec. 4, ibid.

2438. Possession within the said park of the dead bodies, or any part thereof, of any wild bird or animal shall be prima facie evidence that the person or persons having the same are guilty of violating this act. Ibid.

Penalty for unlawful transportation, etc. Ibid.

2439. Any person or persons, or stage or express company or railway company, receiving for transportation any of the said animals, birds, or fish so killed, taken, or caught shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined for every such offense not exceeding three hundred dollars. Any person found guilty of violating any of the provisions of this act or any rule or regulation that may be promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior with reference to the management and care of the park, or for the protection of the property therein, for the preservation from injury or spoliation of timber, mineral deposits, natural curiosities or wonderful objects within said park, or for the protection of the animals, birds, and fish in the said park, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be subjected to a fine of not more than one thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both, and be adjudged to pay all costs of the proceedings. Ibid.

Forfeiture of guns, traps, etc. Ibid.

2440. All guns, traps, teams, horses, or means of transportation of every nature or description used by any person or persons within said park limits when engaged in killing, trapping, ensnaring, or capturing such wild beasts, birds, or wild animals shall be forfeited to the United States, and may be seized by the officers in said park and held pending the prosecution of any person or persons arrested under charge of violating the provisions of this act, and upon conviction under this act of such person or persons using said guns, traps, teams, horses, or other means of transportation such forfeiture shall be adjudicated as a penalty in addition to the other punishment provided in this act. Such forfeited property shall be disposed of and accounted for by and under the authority of the Secretary of the Interior. Ibid.

2441. The Secretary of the Interior shall make and publish such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary and proper for the management and care of the park and for the protection of the property therein, especially for the preservation from injury or spoliation of all timber, mineral deposits, natural curiosities, or wonderful objects within said park, and for the protection of the animals and birds in the park from capture or destruction, or to prevent their being frightened or driven from the park; and he shall make rules and regulations governing the taking of fish from the streams or lakes in the park. Ibid.

LEASES.

Lease of grounds; conditions. Aug. 3, 1894, v. 28, p. 222.

2442. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to lease to any person, corporation, or company, for a period not exceeding ten years, at such annual rental as the Secretary of the Interior may determine, parcels of land in the Yellowstone National Park, of not more than ten acres in extent for each tract and not in excess of twenty acres in all to any one person, corporation, or company on which may be erected hotels and necessary outbuildings: Provided, That such lease or leases shall not include any of the geysers or other objects of curiosity or interest in said park, or exclude the public from free and convenient approach thereto or include any ground within one-eighth of a mile of any of the geysers or the Yellowstone Falls, the Grand Canyon, or the Yellowstone River, Mammoth Hot Springs, or any object of curiosity in the park.[1] Act of August 3, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 222).

The same subject. Aug. 3, 1894, v. 28, p. 222.

2443. Such leases shall not convey, either expressively or by implication, any exclusive privilege within the park except upon the premises held thereunder and for the time therein granted. Every lease hereafter made for any property in said park shall require the lessee to observe and obey each and every provision in any act of Congress, and every rule, order, or regulation made, or which may hereafter be made, and published by the Secretary of the Interior concerning the use, care, management, or government of the park, or any object or property therein, under penalty of forfeiture of such lease, and every such lease shall be subject to the right of revocation and forfeiture, which shall therein be reserved by the Secretary of the Interior: And provided further, That persons or corporations now holding leases of ground in the park may, upon the surrender thereof, be granted new leases hereunder, and upon the terms and stipulations contained in their present leases, with such modifications, restrictions, and reservations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

[1] Section 2474, Revised Statutes, had contained the following requirement: "The Secretary may, in his discretion, grant leases for building purposes, for terms not exceeding ten years, of small parcels of ground, at such places in the park as may require the erection of buildings for the accommodation of visitors; all of the proceeds of such leases, and all other revenues that may be derived from any source connected with the park, to be expended under his direction in the management of the same, and the construction of roads and bridle paths therein." The act of March 3, 1883 (26 Stat. L., 620), had contained the following: "The Secretary of the Interior may lease small portions of ground in the park, not exceeding ten acres in extent for each tract, on which may be erected hotels and the necessary outbuildings, and for a period not exceeding ten years; but such lease shall not include any of the geysers or other objects of curiosity or interest in said park, or exclude the public from the free and convenient approach thereto; or include any ground within one quarter of a mile of any of the geysers or the Yellowstone Falls, nor shall there be leased more than ten acres to any one person or corporation; nor shall any hotel or other buildings be erected within the park, until such lease shall be executed by the Secretary of the Interior, and all contracts, agreements, or exclusive privileges heretofore made or given in regard to said park, or any part thereof, are hereby declared to be invalid; nor shall the Secretary of the Interior, in any lease which he may make and execute, grant any exclusive privileges within said park, except upon the ground leased."

This act, however, is not to be construed as mandatory upon the Secretary of the Interior, but the authority herein given is to be exercised in his sound discretion. Ibid.

EMPLOYEES.

Employees. Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 626; July 7, 1884, v. 23, p. 499.

2444. For every purpose and object necessary for the protection, preservation, and improvement of the Yellowstone National Park, including conpensation of superintendent and employees, forty thousand dollars, two thousand dollars of said amount to be paid annually to a superintendent of said park, and not exceeding nine hundred dollars annually to each of ten assistants, all of whom shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, and reside continuously in the park, and whose duty it shall be to protect the game, timber, and objects of interest therein; the balance of the sum appropriated to be expended in the construction and improvement of suitable roads and bridges within said park, under the supervision and direction of an engineer officer detailed by the Secretary of War for that purpose.[1] Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 626).

DETAILS OF TROOPS.

Detail of troops, etc., for protection of park. Mar. 3. 1883, v. 22, p. 626.

2445. The Secretary of War, upon the request of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized and directed to make the necessary details of troops to prevent trespassers or intruders from entering the park for the purpose of destroying the game or objects of curiosity therein, or for any other purpose prohibited by law, and to remove such persons from the park if found therein. Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 626).

[1] The acts of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 329), and March 3, 1883 (ibid., 626), made provision for the appointment of a superintendent of the park at a salary of $2,000 per annum, and for the employment of ten assistants at $900 each. These employees were to reside continually in the park, and it was made their duty to protect the game, timber, and objects of interest in the park. This provision was repeated in the acts of July 7, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 211), and March 3, 1885 (ibid., 499).

IMPROVEMENTS.

Improvements to be under Chief of Engineers.
June 6, 1900, v. 31, p. 625.

2446. Road extensions and improvements shall hereafter be made in said park under and in harmony with a general plan of roads and improvements to be approved by the Chief of Engineers of the Army.[1] Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 625).

EMPLOYMENT OF TROOPS.

Employment of troops.
June 6, 1900, v. 31, p. 618.

2447. The Secretary of War, upon the request of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereafter authorized and directed to make the necessary detail of troops to prevent trespassers or intruders from entering the Sequoia National Park, the Yosemite National Park, and the General Grant National Park, respectively, in California, for the purpose of destroying the game or objects of curiosity therein, or for any other purpose prohibited by law or regulation for the government of said reservations, and to remove such persons from said parks if found therein. Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 618).

[1] Successive acts of appropriation since that of August 4, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 210), have made provision for the construction of roads, bridges, and other works of improvement; all of them have contained the requirement that the work so authorized shall be carried on under the direction of the Secretary of War.

CHAPTER XLV.

NATIONAL CEMETERIES.

Par.
2448. Maintenance of national cemeteries.
2449. Acquisition of lands.
2450. Appraisement.
2451. Payment.
2452–2454. Superintendents.
2455–2457. Inclosures, headstones, and registers.
Par.
2458–2460. Interments.
2461, 2462. Jurisdiction, criminal offenses.
2463, 2464. The United States cemetery near the City of Mexico.
2465. Encroachments by railroads.

Maintenance of national cemeteries.
R. S., 4876, p. 951.
July 14, 1876, v. 19, p. 99.

2448. The Secretary of War shall provide for the care and maintenance of the national military cemeteries, and for this purpose shall submit an estimate with his annual estimates to Congress, and section four thousand eight hundred and seventy-six of the Revised Statutes is hereby repealed. Act of July 24, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 99).

Acquisition of lands.
Feb. 22, 1867, c. 61, s. 4, v. 14, p. 400; July 24, 1876, c. 226, v. 19, p. 99; Mar. 2, 1877, c. 83, v. 19, p. 269.
Sec. 4870, R. S.

2449. The Secretary of War shall purchase from the owners thereof, at such price as may be mutually agreed upon between the Secretary and such owners, such real estate as in his judgment is suitable and necessary for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions for national cemeteries, and obtain from such owners the title in fee simple for the same. And in case the Secretary of War is not able to agree with any owner upon the price to be paid for any real estate needed for such purpose, or to obtain from such owner title in fee simple for the same, the Secretary is hereby authorized to enter upon and appropriate any real estate which, in his judgment, is suitable and necessary for such purposes.

Appraisement.
Feb. 22, 1867, c. 61, s. 5, v. 14, p. 400.
Sec. 4871, R. S.

2450. The Secretary of War, or the owners of any real estate thus entered upon and appropriated, are authorized to make application for an appraisement of real estate thus entered upon and appropriated to any circuit or district court within any State or district where such real estate is situated; and such courts shall, upon such application, and in such mode and under such rules and regulations as it may adopt, make a just and equitable appraisement of the cash value of the several interests of each and every owner of such real estate and improvements thereon.

Payment.
Sec. 6, ibid.
Mar. 2, 1877, c. 83, v. 19, p. 269.
Sec. 4872, R.S.

2451. When appraisement of the real estate thus entered upon and appropriated has been made under the order and direction of the court, the fee simple thereof shall, upon payment to the owner of the appraised value, or in case such owner refuses or neglects for thirty days after the appraisement of the cash value of the real estate or improvements as aforesaid to demand the same from the Secretary of War upon depositing the appraised value in the court making such appraisement to the credit of such owner, be vested in the United States, and its jurisdiction over such real estate shall be exclusive and the same as its jurisdiction over real estate purchased, ceded, or appropriated for the purposes of navy-yards, forts, and arsenals. The Secretary of War is authorized and required to pay to the several owner or owners, respectively, the appraised value of the several pieces or parcels of real estate, as specified in the appraisement of any of such courts, or to pay into any of such courts by deposit, as hereinbefore provided, the appraised value; and the sum necessary for such purpose may be taken from any moneys appropriated for the purposes of national cemeteries.[1]

[1] To authorize payment for land appropriated for the purpose of a national cemetery under the act of February 22, 1867 (14 Stat. L., 400; sec. 4870, Rev. Stat.), the consent of the legislature of the State in which the land lies is not necessary; nor in such case is the opinion of the Attorney-General as to the validity of the title required; though as a prudential measure for the security of the Government it would seem to be highly expedient to obtain his opinion. XIII Opin. Att. Gen., 131; XIV; ibid., 271; ibid., 559.

The appraisement of land for a national cemetery, as duly made by a United States court under sections 4871 and 4872, Revised Statutes, is conclusive upon the Secretary of War, who must thereupon pay the appraised value as indicated in the latter section. If indeed there has been fraud in the valuation by which the court has been deceived in its decree, or its original appraisement is deemed excessive, it may properly be moved for a new appraisement on the part of the United States. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 1763. See XIII Opin. Att. Gen., 27.

To authorize the acquisition by the exercise of the right of eminent domain, of private land for a national cemetery under sections 4870 and 4871, Revised Statutes, there must be (1) an existing appropriation (in conformity with the rule of section 3736, Revised Statutes) authorizing the acquisition; and (2) the private owner must be unwilling to give title, or the Secretary of War be unable to agree with him as to price. Ibid., par. 1769.

Held that, notwithstanding the provision in section 4872, Revised Statutes, that the jurisdiction of the United States over land taken for a national cemetery by the right of eminent domain "shall be exclusive," such a jurisdiction, where the land is within a State, can not legally be vested in the United States except by the cession of the State legislature. In the absence of such cession on the part of the State sovereignty an act of Congress must be powerless to confer such an authority. (a) Ibid.

An appropriation for the inclosure and improvement of a cemetery must be regarded as a ratification of the taking and of the intent to occupy permanently. Johnson v. U. S., 31 Ct. Cls., 262.

SUPERINTENDENTS.

Superintendents of cemeteries.
Feb. 22, 1867, c. 61, s. 2, v. 14, p. 400; July 24, 1876, c. 226, v. 19, p. 99.
Sec. 4873, R S.

2452. The Secretary of War shall cause to be erected at the principal entrance of each national cemetery a suitable building to be occupied as a porter's lodge; and shall appoint a meritorious and trustworthy superintendent to reside therein, for the purpose of guarding and protecting the cemetery and giving information to parties visiting the same.

Who may be selected as superintendents.
May 18, 1872, c. 173, s. 1, v. 17, p. 135.
Sec. 4874, R.S.

2453. The superintendents of the national cemeteries shall be selected from meritorious and trustworthy soldiers, either commissioned officers or enlisted men of the Volunteer or Regular Army, who have been honorably mustered out or discharged from the service of the United States, and who may have been disabled for active field service in the line of duty.

Salary of superintendents.

2454. The superintendents of the national cemeteries shall receive for their compensation from sixty dollars to seventy-five dollars a month each, according to the extent and importance of the cemeteries to which they may be respectively assigned, to be determined by the Secretary of War; and they shall also be furnished with quarters and fuel at the several cemeteries.[1]

INCLOSURES, HEADSTONES, AND REGISTERS.

Inclosures, headstones, and registers.
Sec. 1, ibid.
June 8, 1872, c. 368, v. 17, p. 345; Mar. 3, 1873, c. 229, v. 17, p. 545.
Sec. 4877, R.S.

2455. In the arrangement of the national cemeteries established for the burial of deceased soldiers and sailors, the Secretary of War is hereby directed to have the same inclosed with a good and substantial stone or iron fence; and to cause each grave to be marked with a small headstone or block, which shall be of durable stone, and of such design and weight as shall keep it in place when set, and shall bear the name of the soldier and the name of his State inscribed thereon, when the same are known, and also with the number of the grave inscribed thereon, corresponding with the number opposite to the name of the party in a register of burials to be kept at each cemetery and at the office of the Quartermaster-General, which shall set forth the name, rank, company, regiment, and date of death of the officer or soldier; or if these are unknown, it shall be so recorded.

[1] The superintendent of a national cemetery over which the State has ceded jurisdiction to the United States, and within the limits of which he resides, is exempt from the duty devolved by the State upon all male persons between certain ages to work upon the public roads. Otherwise if the State has not ceded jurisdiction, or if the superintendent resides elsewhere within its jurisdiction. XVI Opin. Att. Gen., 468.

Superintendents of national cemeteries are no part of the Army, but civilians, being required indeed by section 4874, Revised Statutes, to be selected from persons who have been honorably discharged from the military service. They are therefore, of course, not subject to the Articles of War or to trial by court-martial, and for any serious misconduct on the part of a superintendent a removal from office would be the only adequate remedy. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 1767.

Headstones for soldiers' graves in private cemeteries.
Feb. 3, 1879, v. 20, p. 281.

2456. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to erect headstones over the graves of soldiers who served in the Regular or Volunteer Army of the United States during the war for the Union, and who have been buried in private village or city cemeteries, in the same manner as provided by the law of March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, for those interred in national military cemeteries; and for this purpose, and for the expenses incident to such work, so much of the appropriation of one million dollars, made in the act above mentioned, as has not been expended, and as may be necessary, is hereby made available. Act of February 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 281).

Records.

2457. The Secretary of War shall cause to be preserved in the records of his Department the names and places of burial of all soldiers for whom such headstones shall have been erected by authority of this or former acts.[1] Ibid.

INTERMENTS.

Who may be buried in national cemeteries.
July 17, 1862, c. 200, s. 18, v. 12, p. 596; June 1, 1872, c. 257, v. 17, p. 202; Mar. 3, 1873, c. 276, v. 17, p. 605.
Sec. 4878, R. S.

2458. All soldiers, sailors, or marines, dying in the service of the United States, or dying in a destitute condition, after having been honorably discharged from the service, or who served during the late war, either in the regular or volunteer forces, may be buried in any national cemetery free of cost. The production of the honorable discharge of a deceased man shall be sufficient authority for the superintendent of any cemetery to permit the interment.

Army nurses.
Mar. 3, 1897, v. 29, p. 625.

2459. Army nurses, honorably discharged from their service as such, may be buried in any national cemetery, and, if in a destitute condition, free of cost. The Secretary of War is authorized to issue certificates to those army nurses entitled to such burial. Act of March 3, 1897 (29 Stat. L., 625).

Burial of indigent soldiers.
Mar. 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1108.

2460. For expenses of burying in the Arlington National Cemetery or in the cemeteries of the District of Columbia, indigent ex-Union soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late civil war who die in the District of Columbia, to be disbursed by the Secretary of War, at a cost not exceeding forty dollars for such burial expenses in each case, exclusive of cost of grave, three thousand dollars.[1] Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1108).

[1] Provision for carrying this statute into effect has been made in the acts of appropriation of August 4, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 249), March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 534), October 2, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 539), March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 969), August 30, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 400), March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 973), August 5, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 377), March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 599), August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 405), March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 949), June 11, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 443), and subsequent acts of appropriation.

Limitation.

JURISDICTION, CRIMINAL OFFENSES.

Jurisdiction of United States over national cemeteries.
July 1, 1870, c. 20, s. 1, v. 16, p. 188.
Sec. 4882, R.S.

2461. From the time any State legislature shall have given, or shall hereafter give, the consent of such State to the purchase by the United States of any national cemetery, the jurisdiction and power of legislation of the United States over such cemetery shall in all courts and places be held to be the same as is granted by section eight, article one, of the Constitution of the United States; and all provisions relating to national cemeteries shall be applicable to the same.

Penalty for defacing national cemeteries.
Feb. 22, 1867, c. 61, s. 3, v. 14, p. 400.
Sec. 4881, R.S.

2462. Every person who willfully destroys, mutilates, defaces, injures, or removes any monuments, gravestone, or other structure, or who willfully destroys, cuts, breaks, injures, or removes any tree, shrub, or plant within the limits of any national cemetery, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, and not more than one hundred, or by imprisonment for not less than fifteen days and not more than sixty. The superintendent in charge of any national cemetery is authorized to arrest forthwith any person engaged in committing any misdemeanor herein prohibited, and to bring such person before any United States commissioner or judge of any district or circuit court of the United States within any State or district where any of the cemeteries are situated, for the purpose of holding such person to answer for such misdemeanor, and then and there shall make complaint in due form.[2]

UNITED STATES CEMETERY NEAR THE CITY OF MEXICO.

Cemetery near the City of Mexico.
Mar. 3, 1873, c. 267, v. 17, p. 602.
Sec. 4879, R.S.

2463. The President is authorized to provide, out of the ordinary annual appropriations, for establishing and maintaining United States military cemeteries, for the proper care and preservation and maintenance of the cemetery or burial ground near the City of Mexico, in which are interred the remains of officers and soldiers of the United States, and of citizens of the United States, who fell in battle or died in and around said city.

[1] A similar provision occurs in the annual acts of appropriation since that of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 409).

[2] By section 4881, Revised Statutes, the superintendent of a national cemetery is authorized to arrest persons who injure, etc., gravestones, trees, shrubs, etc., within the cemetery. Held that he could not, under this authority, legally arrest a person who fired a gun into or across the cemetery without causing any such injury as is specified in the statute, but, for the arrest and punishment of such a tresspasser, must have recourse to the local authorities. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1766.

To be subject to what regulations. Ibid. Sec. 4880, R.S.

2464. The cemetery in Mexico shall be subject to the rules and regulations affecting United States national military cemeteries within the limits of the United States, so far as they may, in the opinion of the President, be applicable thereto.

ENCROACHMENT BY RAILROADS, ETC.

Encroachments by railroads forbidden. Mar. 2, 1891, v. 28, p. 949.

2465. That no railroad shall be permitted upon the right of way which may have been acquired by the United States to a national cemetery, or to encroach upon any roads or walks constructed thereon and maintained by the United States. Act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 949).[1]

L., 687), at Alexandria, Va.; July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 634), at Mound City, Ill.; July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 634), at Natchez, Miss.

Held that the title and possession of the United States to and of land situate at El Paso, Texas, duly purchased for cemetery purposes, would properly be protected against a continuous trespass on the part of the municipality in cutting a street through the land, by an injunction sued out in the proper court, the remedy by suit for damages being inadequate.[a] Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2115.

[1] HISTORICAL NOTE.

In the early periods of English history military law existed only in time of actual war. When war broke out troops were raised as occasion required, and ordinances for their government, or, as they were afterwards called, Articles of War, were issued by the Crown, with the advice of the constable or of the peers or other experienced persons, or were enacted by the commander in chief in pursuance of an authority for that purpose given in his commission from the Crown. (a)

These ordinances or articles, however, remained in force only during the service of the troops for whose government they were issued, and ceased to operate on the conclusion of peace. Military law in time of peace did not come into existence until the passing of the first mutiny act in 1689.

The system of governing troops in active service by articles of war, issued under the prerogative power of the Crown, whether issued by the King himself, or by the commanders in chief, or by other officers holding commissions from the Crown, continued from the time of the Conquest till long after the passing of the annual mutiny acts, (b) and did not actually cease till the prerogative power of issuing such articles was superseded in 1803 by a corresponding statutory power. (c)

The earlier articles were of excessive severity, inflicting death or loss of limb for almost every crime. Gradually, however, they assumed something of the shape which they bear in modern times, and the ordinances or articles of war issued by Charles I in 1672 formed the groundwork of the Articles of War of 1878, which were consolidated with the mutiny act in the army discipline and regulation act of 1879, which was replaced by the army act of 1881. The army act of 1881, which now constitutes the military code of the British army, has of itself no force, but requires to be brought into operation annually by another act of Parliament, thus securing the constitutional principle of the control of the Parliament over the discipline requisite for the government of the army. (a)

The Rules and Articles of War were derived originally from the English mutiny act and articles of war under the following circumstances: In May, 1775, the Continental Congress met in Philadelphia and at once proceeded to levy and organize an army. A system of rules for its government was, of course, indispensable. The members of this Congress were naturally familiar with the English military code. The local troops serving with the English forces sent to this country in 1754 had been brought under the mutiny act, while the armies of Gage and Burgoyne were governed by the English code at the time the first "Continental troops" were raised. It was but natural, therefore, that this body should turn to the mutiny act as a model, and on June 30, 1775, the Congress promulgated articles, 69 in number, for the government of the Continental troops. These articles were adopted from the English, in the same form as our present articles, modified, however, to meet the milder views which were entertained by a people who entertained an objection to a standing army. Additions were made in November of this year, but were repealed by the act of September 30, 1776, and new articles adopted. These articles, 102 in number, were modeled upon the British form and were arranged in 18 sections. With some modifications they remained in force until 1806.

In September, 1789, they were formally recognized and adapted to the new Constitution by the First Congress of the United States. In 1806 the articles, 101 in number, were rearranged and promulgated by Congress; (b) the divisions into sections were dropped and the old model substituted. These, with five or six modifications, remained in force for nearly seventy years, and were the governing code of the Army until the passage of the act of June 22, 1874 (c) (18 Stat. L., 113). These articles are embodied in the Revised Statutes as sections 1342 and 1343 of that work.

Apr. 10, 1806, c. 20, v. 2, p. 359; 27 Sept., 1890, v. 26, p. 491.

SECTION 1342. The armies of the United States shall be governed by the following rules and articles. The word officer, as used therein, shall be understood to designate commissioned officers; the word soldier shall be understood to include noncommissioned officers, musicians, artificers, and privates, and other enlisted men, and the convictions mentioned therein shall be understood to be convictions by court-martial.[1] Sec. 1342, R. S.

That whenever by any of the Articles of War for the government of the Army the punishment on conviction of any military offense is left to the discretion of the court-martial, the punishment therefor shall not, in time of peace, be in excess of a limit which the President may prescribe.[2] Act of September 27, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 491).

1 Art. War.

Article 1. Every officer now in the Army of the United States shall within six months from the passing of this act, and every officer hereafter appointed shall before he enters upon the duties of his office, subscribe these rules and articles.

Articles to be read to recruits.
2 Art. War.
Jan. 29, 1813, c. 16, s. 13, v. 2, p. 796; Aug. 3, 1861, c. 42, s. 11, v. 12, p. 289.
3 Art. War.

Art. 2. These rules and articles shall be read to every enlisted man at the time of or within six days after his enlistment, and he shall thereupon take an oath or affirmation in the following form: "I, A. B., do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America; that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsover, and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the rules and articles of war." This oath may be taken before any commissioned officer of the Army.[3]

[1] The Army and Navy of the United States are engaged in the performance of public, not private, duties. Service in the army or navy of one's country, according to the terms of the enlistment, never implies slavery or involuntary servitude, even where the soldier or sailor is required against his will to respect the terms upon which he voluntarily engaged to serve the public. Involuntary service rendered for the public, pursuant as well to the requirements of a statute as to a previous voluntary engagement, is not, in any legal sense, either slavery or involuntary servitude. (Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S., 275, 299.) (Dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan.)

[2] Under the authority conferred by this statute two executive orders have been issued prescribing limits of punishment for offenses to which specific penalties are not attached in the Articles of War. See G. O. No. 21, A. G. O. of 1891, as modified by the executive order of March 20, 1895 (Manual for Courts-Martial, pp. 59–63).

[3] The taking of the oath prescribed by this article is not an essential to the validity of an enlistment. It is, however, an almost invariable part of a regular formal enlistment, and in the absence of any provision in our law defining in what an enlistment shall consist, it is important that it should not be omitted for the reason that the oath as taken and subscribed by the party constitutes the regular and in some cases the only legal written evidence that the personal act of enlisting has been completed by him. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1251. But see Grimley's case (137 U. S., 147), in which it was held that the oath of allegiance was the pivotal fact which changed the status from that of civilian to soldier. Section 11 of the act of August 3, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 289), conferred authority to administer the oath of allegiance upon any commissioned officer of the Army.

The statement in regard to age, incorporated in the printed blank which contains the form of oath prescribed by this article, is no part whatever of the legal oath. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 19.

By direction of the Secretary of War, such of the Articles of War as relate specially to the duties and rights of enlisted men and the penalties for military crimes will be plainly read, and so far as necessary, explained to each recruit just before administering to him the oath of enlistment. ART. 3. Every officer who knowingly enlists or musters into the military service any minor over the age of sixteen years without the written consent of his parents or guardians, or any minor under the age of sixteen years, or any insane or intoxicated persons, or any deserter from the military or naval service of the United States, or any person who has been convicted of any infamous criminal offense shall, upon conviction, be dismissed from the service or suffer such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.[1]

Fraudulent enlistment.
July 27, 1892, s. 3, v. 27, p. 277.

Fraudulent enlistment, and the receipt of any pay or allowance thereunder, is hereby declared a military offense and made punishable, by a court-martial, under the sixty-second Article of War.[2] Sec. 3, act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 277).

Discharges.
4 Art. War.

ART. 4. No enlisted man, duly sworn, shall be discharged from the service without a discharge in writing, signed by a field officer of the regiment to which he belongs, or by the commanding officer, when no field officer is present:

[1] Neither this article nor the directory provision in pari materia of sections 1117–1118, Revised Statutes, renders void enlistments of the classes of persons whose enlistment or muster-in is made punishable and interdicted. Except, of course, in the case of an enlistment of a person clearly non compos mentis, and whose contract is a nullity in law independently of any statute, these enlistments are voidable only; the United States may hold the party to service or may discharge him forthwith in the manner authorized by the fourth article. Ibid., 20, par. 1.

It is not essential to a conviction under this article that the officer shall be shown to have had positive and absolute knowledge that the person enlisted by him belonged to one of the classes of persons whose enlistment is made an offense. If he had such knowledge or information as to place the fact beyond a reasonable doubt he may properly be deemed to have acted "knowingly." Ibid., par. 2.

The enlistment of a party who was evidently so much under the influence of liquor as to make it doubtful whether he comprehended the legal effect of his acts, held an enlistment of an "intoxicated person" and an offense under this article. Ibid., par. 3.

[2] This offense (constituted and made punishable as a violation of article 62, by section 3 of the act of July 27, 1892, c. 272) is defined in Circular No. 13 (A. G. O.), 1892. The misrepresentation or concealment characterizing it must have induced the enlistment of the soldier, and must have related to a fact which, if known, would have caused his rejection. Where the offense consisted in his having concealed the fact that he had been discharged with a questionable character—viz, "very good except when intoxicated, then bad"—held that such offense was chargeable as "fraudulent enlistment," provided the knowledge of this fact on the part of the recruiting officer would have prevented the enlistment. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1412.

A fraudulently enlisting soldier may be disposed of in either of two ways, viz, he may be brought to trial for his offense under the statute or he may be discharged "without honor." If brought to trial and convicted, and his sentence does not include dishonorable discharge (as it need not do under the order prescribing a maximum punishment for this offense), held that the Government could not properly also summarily discharge him. While it might have resorted to either course, it would scarcely be just to subject the offender to both. Ibid., par. 1413.

A fraudulent contract of enlistment is not void, but voidable only at the option of the Government. The Government, on becoming cognizant of the fraud, may avoid the contract, or waive the objection and allow it to stand—in which latter case the accepted service is as legal as that of any other soldier. Where the fraudulent character of an enlistment contract did not become known until after a part of it had been executed, held that while the same as to its unexecuted portion might legally then be avoided and terminated, yet as to the part executed it was a valid contract, and the soldier could not lawfully be required to refund money paid for that part. Ibid., par. 1414.

and no discharge shall be given to an enlisted man before his term of service has expired, except by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or by sentence of a general court-martial.[1]

[1] While no soldier can assume to discharge himself from the military service, he is yet, at the expiration of his contract of enlistment, entitled in general to be at once formally discharged by the proper authority. (a) In view, however, of the terms of the first clause of this article, held that a discharge of a soldier actually takes effect, like a deed, only upon the delivery, actual or constructive, of the written certificate of discharge. Thus, where a soldier's discharge was not received by him at his station—a hospital in the field—till at the end of three months after its date, held that it did not take effect till its receipt, and that the soldier was entitled to pay up to that time. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 20, par. 1.

A formal discharge, given to a soldier in accordance with this article, is legal evidence of the fact of discharge, as well as of the circumstances—when the same are stated—under which the soldier was separated from the service. (b) Ibid., 21, par. 2.

Where an honorable discharge has once duly taken effect by the delivery of the formal certificate (see art. 4, sec. 1), it is final and can not be revoked unless obtained by fraud. (c) But in such a case the revocation should be made within a reasonable time, otherwise the Government will be deemed to have waived the defect. A mere order for a discharge may, of course, be recalled or suspended at any time before it is executed by the delivery of the discharge ordered. Where an officer of volunteers had been duly mustered out of service—a form of honorable discharge—and was thus a civilian, held that a revocation in orders of his muster out, and a substitution therefor of a dishonorable discharge, would—in the absence of any fraud in the case—be wholly unauthorized and illegal. Ibid, 355, par. 1.

Where a soldier, by making an alteration in his "descriptive list," so as to cause it to appear that his term of enlistment, which was in fact five years, was three years only, induced the regimental commander to give him an honorable discharge at the end of three years' service, held, upon the fraud being presently discovered, that the discharge might legally be revoked and the soldier be brought to trial by court-martial under the ninety-ninth (now sixty-second) article of war. But where, by competent authority, according to the present fourth article, an honorable discharge was given to a soldier who was at the time in arrest under charges, held that such discharge—no fraud being imputable to the soldier—was final, and could not legally be revoked. Ibid, par. 1142.

The fact that a soldier has been a deserter does not affix an irreparable taint upon his status or service when returned from desertion, or preclude his receiving an honorable discharge, if either he be restored to duty without trial, or having been tried and sentenced, he yet, by reason of his imprisonment being fully executed or being remitted before the end of his term, is returned to duty and is in the performance of faithful service when his term is completed. A discharge in the usual form then given to him, is an authoritative declaration by it that he leaves the military service in a status of honor. Thus honorably discharged, he can not, by reason of his having formerly deserted, be deprived of any rights to pay, allowances, or bounty usually incident upon honorable discharge. (d) Ibid, 356, par. 4.

This article, in its second clause, specifies two kinds of discharge as authorized to be given to soldiers before their terms of enlistment have expired, and which are quite distinct in their nature. The one is given by Executive order and the other by sentence; the one is a rescinding of the contract of the soldier, authorized to be resorted to whenever deemed desirable, at the discretion of the Secretary of War, etc., and is, in law, an honorable discharge or a discharge without honor, as the case may be; the other is a punishment, and therefore a dishonorable discharge. One of the officials named can, of his own authority, no more order a soldier to be, in terms technically, dishonorably discharged than can a court-martial adjudge a soldier to be honorably discharged. A discharge can not legally be given a soldier before the expiration of his term of service except as authorized in this article; and no officer, other than the three designated, can exercise the authority, expressly devolved upon them, of discharging by order. (e) Ibid., 21, par. 3.

Mustering persons not soldiers.
5 Art. War.

ART. 5. Any officer who knowingly musters as a soldier a person who is not a soldier shall be deemed guilty of knowingly making a false muster, and punished accordingly.

Taking money on mustering.
6 Art. War.

ART. 6. Any officer who takes money, or other thing, by way of gratification, on mustering any regiment, troop, battery, or company, or on signing muster-rolls, shall be dismissed from the service, and shall thereby be disabled to hold any office or employment in the service of the United States.

Returns of regiments, etc.
7 Art. War.

ART. 7. Every officer commanding a regiment, an independent troop, battery, or company, or a garrison, shall, in the beginning of every month, transmit through the proper channels, to the Department of War, an exact return of the same, specifying the names of the officers then absent from their posts, with the reasons for and the time of their absence. And any officer who, through neglect or design, omits to send such returns, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished as a court-martial may direct.

False returns.
8 Art. War.

ART. 8. Every officer who knowingly makes a false return to the Department of War, or to any of his superior officers authorized to call for such returns, of the state of the regiment, troop, or company, or garrison under his command; or of the arms, ammunition, clothing, or other stores thereunto belonging, shall, on conviction thereof before a court-martial, be cashiered.[1]

Captured stores secured for public service.
9 Art. War.

ART. 9. All public stores taken from the enemy shall be secured for the service of the United States; and for neglect thereof the commanding officer shall be answerable.[2]

[1] This article refers only to returns made by certain commanders as such. It is only as commander of a regiment, company, or garrison that an officer can be made amenable to a charge under the article. An officer not exercising one of these commands is not within its terms. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., par. 1.

In 1872 an officer of the line of the Army, on duty as post quartermaster at Paducah, Ky., was tried for a violation of this article in making false returns of the property for which he was responsible, and was convicted. As the article applies exclusively to officers exercising the specific commands named in the statute, and as the officer in this exercised no one of the commands so specified, the findings under the eighth article were disapproved by the reviewing authority. Gen. Court-Martial Orders, No. 12, War Dept., 1872. See, also, G. C. M. O., No. 19, War Dept., 1872.

An officer "knowingly makes a false return" under this article who makes a return which he knows to be untrue in any material particular. Ibid, 22, par. 2.

The "returns" indicated in the article can scarcely be said to include returns of funds, what is contemplated being mainly returns of the personnel or materiel of the command. A false return of a company fund would more properly be charged under another article, as the sixty-first or sixty-second. Ibid, par. 2.

[2] The title to property captured from an enemy in war vests, at the instant of capture, in the captor's Government, which may make such disposition of it as it may deem expedient. The policy and practice of the United States, as to the property captured on land, has been to retain it for governmental uses or to sell it and convert

Accountability for arms, etc.
10 Art. War.

Art. 10. Every officer commanding a troop, battery, or company, is charged with the arms, accouterments, ammunition, clothing, or other military stores belonging to his command, and is accountable to his colonel in case of their being lost, spoiled, or damaged otherwise than by unavoidable accident, or on actual service.

Furloughs.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 75, s. 32, v. 12, p. 736.
11 Art. War.

Art. 11. Every officer commanding a regiment or an independent troop, battery, or company, not in the field, may, when actually quartered with such command, grant furloughs to the enlisted men, in such numbers and for such time as he shall deem consistent with the good of the service. Every officer commanding a regiment, or an independent troop, battery, or company, in the field, may grant furloughs not exceeding thirty days at one time, to five per centum of the enlisted men, for good conduct in the line of duty, but subject to the approval of the commander of the forces of which said enlisted men form a part. Every company officer of a regiment, commanding any troop, battery, or company not in the field, or commanding in any garrison, fort, post, or barrack, may, in the absence of his field officer, grant furloughs to the enlisted men, for a time not exceeding twenty days in six months, and not to more than two persons to be absent at the same time.

Musters.
12 Art. War.

Art. 12. At every muster of a regiment, troop, battery, or company, the commanding officer thereof shall give to the mustering officer certificates, signed by himself, stating how long absent officers have been absent and the reasons of their absence. And the commanding officer of every troop, battery, or company shall give like certificates, stating how long absent noncommissioned officers and private

This provision is in accordance with the principle of the law of nations and of war, that enemy's property duly captured in war becomes the property of the government or power by whose forces it is taken, and not that of the individuals who take it.(a) "Private persons can not capture for their own benefit."(b) Military stores taken from the enemy, becoming upon capture the property of the United States, Congress, which by the Constitution(c) is exclusively vested with the power to dispose of the public property, as well as to make rules concerning captures on land and water, can alone authorize the sale or transfer of the same. An officer or soldier of the Army who assumes of his own authority to appropriate such articles renders himself chargeable with a military offense.(d) Ibid, par. 3.

[1] Held that the mere signing by an officer of a voucher for his pay before the last day of the month for which it was due did not constitute an offense of the class intended to be made punishable by this article. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., par. 4.

[2] For a case in which an officer was convicted of false muster (although the offense was erroneously charged under the sixty-first article) see G. O., 183, A. G. O., 1863.

[3] This article is quite independent of the regulations contained in article 60, Army Regulations, relating to boards of survey. The latter pass upon questions of pecuniary responsibility for the loss, etc., of public property. The court-martial, under this article, simply imposes punishment. (b) Ibid., par. 5.

The description, "his clothing," refers to articles which are regularly issued to the soldier for his use in the service and with the safe-keeping of which he is charged. His property in them is qualified by the trust that he can not dispose of them while he is in the military service, and can only use them for military purposes. Ibid., par 6.

Improper dispositions of property in the charge and use of soldiers, other than the dispositions indicated in this article, will in general properly be charged under article 62. Likewise the selling, through neglect losing, etc., by soldiers, of property issued to them, but not mentioned in article 17, should be charged under article 62. Thus held that a selling or losing of the following articles was not punishable under article 17, but under article 62, viz, sheets, pillows, pillowcases, mattress covers, shelter tent, barrack bag, greatcoat strap, tin cup, spoon, knife, fork, meat-ration can, cartridges. Ibid., par. 8.

Only three offenses are made punishable by this article—selling, through neglect losing, and through neglect spoiling the property named therein. Any other form of wrongful disposition should be made the subject of a charge under article 60 or article 62. Ibid., par. 7.

"Unlawfully disposing of" (or "otherwise unlawfully disposing of") clothing, arms, etc., is not a proper form for the charge under this article. A charge under this article should not be expressed in the alternative—as that the accused "sold" or "through neglect lost." The selling, through neglect losing, and through neglect spoiling, are distinct offenses and are to be so charged. Ibid., par. 9, 10.

Clothing issued and charged to a soldier is not now (as it was formerly) regarded as remaining the property of the United States. It is now considered as becoming, upon issue, the property of the soldier, although his use of it is, for purposes of discipline, qualified and restricted. Thus, he commits a military offense by disposing of it as specified in this article, though the United States may suffer no loss. Ibid., par. 11.

The present seventeenth article (as amended by the act of July 27, 1892) does not authorize a stoppage or forfeiture of pay to reimburse the United States. The stoppage which was enjoined by the old form of the article is dropped entirely from the present statute. This provides for punishment only—does not provide any means of reimbursing the appropriation out of which the lost, etc., property was paid for, or of repairing the loss or damage as such. So held (April, 1893) that a sentence, upon a conviction under this article, which adjudged a stoppage of pay "to reimburse the United States for the value of the clothing alienated" was unauthorized and inoperative. Ibid., par. 12.

[1] When a trial of an officer or soldier has been resorted to under this article, it has usually been on account of the use of "contemptuous or disrespectful words against the President," or the Government mainly as represented by the President. The deliberate employment of denunciatory or contumelious language in regard to the President, whether spoken in public, or published, or conveyed in a communication designed to be made public, has, in repeated cases, been made the subject of charges and trial under this article; (a) and, where taking the form of a hostile arraignment, by an officer, of the President or his Administration, for the measures adopted in carrying on the late war—a juncture when a peculiar obedience and deference were due, on the part of the subordinate, to the President as Executive and Commander in Chief—was in general punished by a sentence of dismissal. On the other hand, it was held that adverse criticisms of the acts of the President, occurring in political discussions, and which, though characterized by intemperate language, were not apparently intended to be disrespectful to the President personally or to his office, or to excite animosity against him, were not in general to be regarded as properly exposing officers or soldiers to trial under this article. To seek, indeed, for ground of offense in such discussions would ordinarily be inquisitorial and beneath the dignity of the Government. Dig. Opin., J. A. G., par. 13.

Disrespect toward commanding officer. 20 Art. War.

ART. 20. Any officer or soldier who behaves himself with disrespect toward his commanding officer shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.[1]

Striking a superior officer. 21 Art. War.

ART. 21. Any officer or soldier who, on any pretense whatsoever, strikes his superior officer, or draws or lifts up any weapon, or offers any violence against him, being in the execution of his office, or disobeys any lawful command of his superior officer, shall suffer death, or such other punsishment as a court-martial may direct.[2]

[1] The disrespect here indicated may consist in acts or words; (a) and the particular acts or words relied upon as constituting the offense should properly be set forth in substance in the specification. (b) It must be shown in evidence under the charge that the officer offended against was the "commanding officer" of the accused. (c) The commanding officer of an officer or soldier in the sense of this article is properly the superior who is authorized to require obedience to his orders from such officer or soldier, at least for the time being. Thus where a battalion was temporarily detached from a regiment and placed under the orders of the commander of a portion of the Army distinct from that in which the main part of the regiment was included, held that it was the commander of this portion who was the commanding officer of the detachment, and that the use by an officer of such detachment of disrespectful language in reference to the regimental commander (who had remained with and in command of the main body of the regiment) was properly chargeable not under this article, but rather under the sixty-second. Ibid., par. 14.

Held that disrespectful language used in regard to his captain by a soldier when detached from his company and serving at a hospital, to the surgeon in charge of which he has been ordered to report for duty, was an offense cognizable by court-martial not under this article, but under article 62. Ibid., par. 15.

[2] To justify a conviction of the capital offense of offering violence against a superior officer, it should be made to appear in evidence that the accused knew or believed that the person assaulted was in fact an officer in the Army and was his "superior" in rank. (d) Ibid., par. 17.

Under a charge of a violation of this article in offering violence to a superior officer, it should be alleged and proved that the officer assaulted was at the time "in the execution of his office." Ibid., par. 18.

In charging a striking or doing of violence to a superior officer under this article, in a case where the assault was fatal, it was allowable to add in the specification, "thereby causing his death," as indicating the measure of violence employed. Ibid., par. 19.

The "superior officer" in the sense of this article need not necessarily have been the commanding officer of the accused at the time of the offense. The article is thus broader than article 20, which relates only to an offense against a commanding officer. Ibid., par. 20.

"The first duty of a soldier is obedience, and without this there can be neither discipline nor efficiency in an army." McCall v. McDowell, 15 Fed. Cas., 1235.

"To insure efficiency an army must be, to a certain extent, a despotism. Each officer * * * is invested with an arbitrary power over those beneath him, and the soldier who enlists in the army waives, in some particulars, his rights as a civilian, surrenders his personal liberty during the term of his enlistment, and consents to come and go at the will of his superior officers. He agrees to become amenable to the military courts, to be disciplined for offenses unknown to the civil law, to relinquish his right of trial by jury, and to receive punishments which, to the civilian, seem out of all proportion to the magnitude of the offense." U. S. v. Clarke, 3 Fed. Rep., 713—Brown, J.

"An army is not a deliberative body. It is the executive arm. Its law is that of obedience. No question can be left open as to the right to command in the officer, or the duty of obedience in the soldier. Vigor and efficiency on the part of the officer and confidence among the soldiers in one another are impaired if any question be left open as to their attitude to each other." In re Grimley, 137 U. S., 153.

The offense of disobedience of orders contemplated by this article consists in a refusal or neglect to comply with a specific order to do or not to do a particular thing. A mere failure to perform a routine duty is properly charged under article 62.[a] Where an officer neglected fully to perform his duty under general instructions given him in regard to the conduct of an expedition against Indians, held that his offense was properly chargeable not under the twenty-first, but under the sixty-second article. Dig. Opin., J. A. G., par. 25.

The fact that any stated duty is enjoined in regulations or orders does not in itself render a nonperformance of such duty a disobedience of orders in violation of the twenty-first article; but to support this charge it is essential that there should be shown an intentional disregard of authority as is evinced by a willful refusal or omission to comply with the specific command of a superior officer. G. C. M. O. 26, War Dept., 1872.

A noncompliance by a soldier with an order emanating from a noncommissioned officer, or offering violence to the latter is not an offense under this article, but one to be charged, in general, under the sixty-second.[b] Dig. Opin., J. A. G. par. 21.

Under a charge of a disobedience of the order of a superior officer in violation of this article, it should be alleged, and should appear from the evidence introduced, that the order or "command" was "lawful." An officer or soldier is not punishable under this article for disobeying an unlawful order. But the order of a proper superior is to be presumed to be lawful, and should be obeyed, where it is not clearly and obviously in contravention of law. Unless the illegality is unquestionable, he should obey first and seek redress, if entitled to any, afterwards. A military inferior in refusing or failing to comply with the order of a superior on the ground that the same is, in his opinion, unlawful does so, of course, on his own personal responsibility and at his own risk. Ibid., par. 22.

To justify, from a military point of view, a military inferior in disobeying the order of a superior, the order must be one requiring something to be done which is palpably a breach of law and a crime or an injury to a third person, or is of a serious character (not involving unimportant consequences only) and if done would not be susceptible of being righted. An order requiring the performance of a military duty or act can not be disobeyed with impunity unless it has one of these characters. If not triable under the twenty-first article, such disobedience may be tried under the sixty-second. In the Cedarquist case it was held by the Judge-Advocate-General that "there could be no more dangerous principle in the government of the Army than that each soldier should determine for himself whether an order requiring a military duty to be performed is necessary or in accordance with orders, regulations, decision circulars, or custom, and may disobey the order if, in his judgment (taking, of course, all risks in case his judgment should be erroneous), it should not be necessary or should be at variance with orders, regulations, decision circulars, or custom. It is his duty to obey such order first, and if he should be aggrieved thereby, he can seek redress afterwards." Ibid., par. 23.

The civil responsibility is another matter. Civil courts have sometimes made allowance for the requirements of military discipline, but if they should not, the military obligation would remain unimpaired. The soldier, in entering the service, has voluntarily submitted himself to this double and possibly conflicting liability. The evil of an undisciplined soldiery would be far greater than the injustice (apparent, rather than actual) of this principle. Ibid., note 1.

An order given by a military officer to his private should be obeyed by the private, and will be his full protection in a criminal prosecution, unless the illegality of the order is so clearly shown on its face that a man of ordinary sense and understanding would know when he heard it read or given that the order was illegal. In re Fair et al., 100 Fed. Whatever may be the rule in time of war and in the presence of actual hostilities, military officers can no more protect themselves than civilians for actual wrongs, committed in time of peace, under orders emanating from a source which is itself without authority in the premises. Hence, a military officer seizing liquors supposed to be in Indian country, when they are not, is liable to an action as a trespasser. Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S., 204.

An officer or soldier on leave of absence can not in general be made liable to a charge of disobedience of orders, except, indeed, where required by a positive order, issued on account of a public emergency, to return before his leave has expired, and failing to comply with such requirement. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 29, par. 10.

An illiterate soldier, unable to sign his name, was furnished with a written exhibit of it, and ordered by his commanding officer to continue to copy the same till he could properly sign his name to papers. He refused. Held that such order, while not in fact a legal one, was not one palpably illegal, and that the soldier should have obeyed it and complained afterwards. Disobedience of an order, however, where its illegality is merely doubtful, should be charged under the sixty-second rather than under this article. Ibid., par. 26.

Where an officer respectfully declined to comply with the direction of his superior to sign the certificate to a report of target firing, on the ground that the facts set forth in such certificate were not within his knowledge, he having been stationed at the butt, where he was not in a position to be informed as to such facts, held that he was not amenable to a charge of disobedience of orders under this article. Ibid., par. 29.

The term officer ("superior officer"), in this as in other articles of war, means commissioned officer. (Sec. 1342, Revised Statutes.) So held that the disobedience by a cadet private of the Military Academy of an order of a cadet lieutenant of his company was not chargeable under this article, but was an offense under article 62. Ibid., par. 30.

[1] Mutiny at military law may be defined to be an unlawful opposing or resisting of lawful military authority, with intent to subvert the same, or to nullify or neutralize it for the time.(a) It is this intent which distinguishes mutiny from other offenses, and especially from those with which, to the embarrassment of the student, it has frequently been confused, viz, those punishable by the twenty-first article, as also those which, under the name of "mutinous conduct," are merely forms of violation of article 62. The offenses made punishable by this article are not necessarily "aggregate" or joint offenses;(b) among them is the beginning or causing of a mutiny, which may be committed by a single person. In general, however, the offense here charged will be a concerted proceeding, the concert itself going far to establish the intent necessary to the legal crime. Ibid., par. 31.

To charge as a capital offense under this article a mere act of insubordination or disorderly conduct on the part of an individual soldier or officer, unaccompanied by the intent above indicated, is irregular and improper.(c) Such an act should in general be charged under article 20, 21, or 62. Ibid., par. 31.

Soldiers can not properly be charged with the offense of joining in a mutiny under this article where their act consists in refusing, in combination, to comply with an unlawful order. Thus, where a detachment of volunteer soldiers who, under and by virtue of acts of Congress specially authorizing the enlistment of volunteers for the purpose of the suppression of the rebellion, and with the full understanding on their part and that of the officers by whom they were mustered into the service that they were to be employed solely for this purpose, entered into enlistments expressed in terms to be for the war, and after doing faithful service during the war, and just before the legal end of the war, but when it was practically terminated, and when the volunteer organizations were being mustered out as no longer required for the prosecution of the war, were ordered to march to the Plains, and to a region far distant from the theater of the late war, and engage in fighting Indians, wholly unconnected as allies or otherwise with the recent enemy, and thereupon refused together to comply with such orders, held that they were not chargeable with mutiny. While by the strict letter of their contracts they were subject to be employed upon any military service up to the last day of their terms of enlistment, the public acts and history of the time made it perfectly clear that this enlistment was entered into for the particular purpose and in contemplation of the particular service above indicated, and to treat the parties as bound to another and distinct service, and liable to capital punishment if they refused to perform it, was technical, unjust, and in substance illegal. Ibid., par. 32.

ART. 23. Any officer or soldier who, being present at any mutiny or sedition, does not use his utmost endeavor to suppress the same, or having knowledge of any intended mutiny or sedition, does not, without delay, give information thereof to his commanding officer, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

23 Art. War.

ART. 24. All officers, of what condition soever, have power to part and quell all quarrels, frays, and disorders, whether among persons belonging to his own or to another corps, regiment, troop, battery, or company, and to order officers into arrest, and noncommissioned officers and soldiers into confinement, who take part in the same, until their proper superior officer is acquainted therewith. And whosoever, being so ordered, refuses to obey such officer or noncommissioned officer, or draws a weapon upon him, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.[1]

In a case where a brief mutiny among certain soldiers of a colored regiment was clearly provoked by inexcusable violence on the part of their officer, the outbreak not having been premeditated, and the men having been prior thereto subordinate and well conducted, advised that a sentence of death imposed by a court-martial upon one of the alleged mutineers should be mitigated and the officer himself brought to trial. Similarly advised in the cases of sentences of long terms of imprisonment imposed on sundry colored soldiers who, without previous purpose of revolt, had been provoked into momentary mutinous conduct by the recklessness of their officer in firing upon them and wounding several, in order to suppress certain insubordination which might apparently have been quelled by ordinary methods.(a) Ibid., par. 33.

[1] It is a principle of the common law that any bystander may and should arrest an affrayer. 1 Hawkins, P. C., c. 63, s. 11; Timothy v. Simpson, 1 C. M. & R., 762, 765; Phillips v. Trull, 11 Johns, 487. And that an officer or soldier, by entering the military service, does not cease to be a citizen, and as a citizen is authorized and bound to put a stop to a breach of the peace committed in his presence, has been specifically held by the authorities. Burdett v. Abbott, 4 Taunt., 449; Bowyer, Com. on Const. L. of Eng., 499; Simmons, secs. 1096–1100. This article is thus an application of an established common-law doctrine to the relations of the military service. See its application illustrated in the following general orders: G. O. 4, War Department, 1843; G. O. 63, Department of the Tennessee, 1863; G. O. 104, Department of the Missouri, 1863; G. O. 52, Department of the South, 1871; G. O. 92, ibid., 1872. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., note 2, page 16.

Force used.—The force to be used in quelling an affray or maintaining the peace is that only which is necessary to secure or subdue the offenders. It does not consist of repeated blows, inflicted by way of punishment for past deeds, but must be such force as is preventive in character, and must not exceed the strict necessity of the case requiring such acts of prevention. No officer has authority to inflict punishment for past offenses of any kind. This authority is possessed by courts only. G. O., No. 4, A. G. O., 1843; see also, G. O., par. 7, of G. O. 53, A. G. O., of 1842.

In suppressing disorders, etc., means should be proportioned to ends to be gained; violent measures, clearly unnecessary, will not be justified. U. S. v. Carr, 1 Woods, 480.

For a case in which it became incumbent upon a junior officer to "part and quell" an affray, and, in the performance of his duty under this article, to give orders to a military superior, who was a participant in the disturbance, see General Court-Martial Orders, No. 20, War Department, of 1880.

Reproachful or provoking speeches.
25 Art. War.

ART. 25. No officer or soldier shall use any reproachful or provoking speeches or gestures to another. Any officer who so offends shall be put in arrest. Any soldier who so offends shall be confined, and required to ask pardon of the party offended, in the presence of his commanding officer.[1]

Challenges to fight duels.
Feb. 27, 1877, v 19, p. 244.
26 Art. War.

ART. 26. No officer or soldier shall send a challenge to another officer or soldier to fight a duel, or accept a challenge so sent. Any officer who so offends shall be dismissed from the service. Any soldier who so offends shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial may direct.[2]

Allowing persons to go out and fight; seconds and promoters.
27 Art. War.

ART. 27. Any officer or noncommissioned officer, commanding a guard, who, knowingly and willingly, suffers any person to go forth to fight a duel, shall be punished as a challenger; and all seconds or promoters of duels, and carriers of challenges to fight duels, shall be deemed principals, and punished accordingly. It shall be the duty of any officer commanding an army, regiment, troop, battery, company, post, or detachment, who knows or has reason to believe that a challenge has been given or accepted by any officer or enlisted man under his command, immediately to arrest the offender and bring him to trial.[3]

[1] This article confers no jurisdiction or power to punish on courts-martial, but merely authorizes the taking of certain measures of prevention and restraint by commanding officers—i. e., measures preventive of serious disorders such as are indicated in the two following articles relating to duels. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 34.

[2] To establish that a challenge was sent, there must appear to have been communicated by one party to the other a deliberate invitation in terms or in substance to engage in a personal combat with deadly weapons, with a view of obtaining satisfaction for wounded honor. (b) The expression merely of a willingness to fight, or the use simply of language of hostility or defiance, will not amount to a challenge. On the other hand, though the language employed be couched in ambiguous terms, with a view to the evasion of the legal consequences, yet if the intention to invite to a duel is reasonably to be implied—and ordinarily, notwithstanding the stilted and obscure verbiage employed, this intent is quite transparent—a challenge will be deemed to have been given. And the intention of the message, where doubtful upon its face, may be illustrated in evidence by proof of the circumstances under which it was sent, and especially of the previous relations of the parties, the contents of other communications between them on the same subject, etc. (c) And technical words in an alleged challenge may be explained by a reference to the so-called duelling code. (d) (Ibid., par. 35.)

It may be noted that our Articles of War, unlike the British, fail to make punishable, as a specific military offense, the engaging in a duel. Such an act, therefore, would, as such, be in general chargeable only under article 62. Ibid., note 4.

[3] On the general subject of challenges, and the question what constitutes a challenge, see the principal cases of the sending of challenges in our service, as published in G. O. 64, A. G. Upraiding another for refusing challenge. 28 Art. War.

ART. 28. Any officer or soldier who upraids another officer or soldier for refusing a challenge shall himself be punished as a challenger; and all officers and soldiers are hereby discharged from any disgrace or opinion of disadvantage which might arise from their having refused to accept challenges, as they will only have acted in obedience to the law, and have done their duty as good soldiers, who subject themselves to discipline.

Wrongs to officers; redress of. 29 Art. War.

ART. 29. Any officer who thinks himself wronged by the commanding officer of his regiment, and, upon due application to such commander, is refused redress, may complain to the general commanding in the State or Territory where such regiment is stationed. The general shall examine into said complaint and take proper measures for redressing the wrong complained of; and he shall, as soon as possible, transmit to the Department of War a true statement of such complaint, with the proceedings had thereon.[1]

Wrongs to soldiers; redress of. 30 Art. War.

ART. 30. Any soldier who thinks himself wronged by any officer may complain to the commanding officer of his regiment, who shall summon a regimental court-martial for the doing of justice to the complainant. Either party may appeal from such regimental court-martial to a general court-martial; but if, upon such second hearing, the appeal appears to be groundless and vexatious, the party appealing shall be punished at the discretion of said general court-martial.[2]

[1] This article is expressly confined to cases of alleged wrongs on the part of regimental commanders. It can not be extended to apply to a complaint of wrong done by a post commander who is not also the commanding officer of the regiment of the complainant. (Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 36.)

The right in charges and appeals is not to be exercised in any mode or style the subordinate pleases, but with some reasonable circumspection, and in good faith, and in subjection to the controlling law of discipline. which, to sustain military authority, requires obedience and forbids disobedience to commanding officers. These rights, and the mode of exercising them, have been well and carefully defined in the General Order from the War Department of No. 16 of 1851. Under color of charges or appeals, a subordinate has no right to avail himself of the opportunity to behave with contempt to his commanding officer. Where such a case is alleged in the specifications, a court-martial will entertain and try the charge. (G. O. No. 1, A. G. O., 1856.)

[2] See the title "Regimental Courts-Martial" in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

This article is not inconsistent with article 83, which prohibits regimentel courts from trying commissioned officers. It does not contemplate or provide for a trial of an officer as an accused, but simply an investigation and adjustment of some matter in dispute—as, for example, a question of accountability for public property, of right to pay or to an allowance, of relief from a stoppage, etc. The regimental court does not really act as a court, but as a board, and the "appeal" authorized is practically from one board to another. But though the regimental court has no power to find "guilty" or "not guilty," or to sentence, it should come to some definite opinion or conclusion—one sufficiently specific to allow of its being intelligently reviewed by the general court, if desired. (Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 37; see also ibid., paragraphs 38–42.)

The "regimental court-martial" under the thirtieth article of war can not be used as a substitute for a general court-martial or court of inquiry, for it can not try an officer nor make an investigation for the purpose of determining whether he shall be brought to trial. When, if the soldier's complaint should be sustained, the only redress would be a reprimand to the officer, the matter would not be within the jurisdiction of this court. It can only investigate such matters as are susceptible of redress by the doing of justice to the complainant—that is, when in some way he can be set right by putting a stop to the wrongful condition which the officer has caused to exist. Erroneous stoppages of pay, irregularity of detail, the apparent requirement of more labor than from other soldiers and the like might in this way be investigated and the wrongful condition put an end to. The court will in such cases record the evidence and its conclusions of fact and recommend the action to be taken. The members of the court (and the judge-advocate) will be sworn faithfully to perform their duties as members (and judge-advocate) of the court, and the proceedings will be recorded as nearly as practicable in the same manner as the proceedings of ordinary courts-martial. Manual for Courts-Martial (1901), p. 99, note. (Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 42, note 1.)

In the case of Brevet-Major Henshaw, tried by court-martial in 1856 for disrespect to his commanding officer, Major Andrews, Seventh Infantry, the conduct of Major Andrews was thus remarked on by the Secretary of War: "An experienced officer who had served with him (Major A.) admits his treatment of his men to be harsh and violent and his conduct very reprehensible in this respect. This was the considerate testimony of a friendly witness, and is such evidence of the fact as calls for a decided expression of the opinion of the President. A commanding officer has no right to be insulting, harsh, or abusive to those in his command. Both officers and enlisted men are equally entitled to be protected from ill-treatment by him. An officer who commits such offenses is wanting in some of the essential qualifications for command, and it is to be regretted that a thorough investigation of this matter was not made by putting Major Andrews on trial. (G. O. No. 1, A. G. O., 1851.)

[1] An unauthorized absence from the quarters only, as from 11 p. m. inspection, held not properly chargeable under the 32d Article. This article contemplates an absence from the soldier's "troop, battery, company, or detachment"—an absence from the post or command. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 374.

Where an officer or soldier on his return from an unauthorized absence is, in consequence of his report of the facts and circumstances of such absence, not proceeded against by his proper commander for the military offense involved, but is by the latter placed upon full duty, such action, under the general custom of the service, may be pleaded as a good defence, if the officer or soldier be subsequently brought to trial for the unauthorized absence. Ibid., par. 377.

An enlisted man forfeits his pay and allowances during the period of an absence without leave, as provided in par. 144 A. R. During such absence he renders no service and therefore earns neither pay nor allowances. The forfeiture is thus by operation of law and accrues independently of the result of a trial for the military offence involved in the unauthorized absence. One of the purposes of the muster and pay rolls is to show what service the soldier renders, and if they show that he has rendered none during a particular period by reason of an absence without leave, he is not entitled to pay and allowances during such period. For an absence without leave of less than a day the soldier may of course be tried by court-martial and sentenced to suffer a forfeiture, but such absence should not be noted on the muster and pay rolls. Ibid., par. 378.

Failing to retire at retreat.

36 Art. War.

ART. 36. No soldier belonging to any regiment, troop, battery, or company shall hire another to do his duty for him, or be excused from duty, except in cases of sickness, disability, or leave of absence. Every such soldier found guilty of hiring his duty, and the person so hired to do another's duty, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

Conniving at hiring duty.
37 Art. War.

ART. 37. Every noncommissioned officer who connives at such hiring of duty shall be reduced. Every officer who knows and allows such practices shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

Drunk on duty.
38 Art. War.
Feb. 18, 1875, c. 80, v. 18, p. 318; Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, v. 19, p. 244.

ART. 38. Any officer who is found drunk on his guard, party, or other duty, shall be dismissed from the service. Any soldier who so offends shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial may direct. No court-martial shall sentence any soldier to be branded, marked, or tattooed.[1]

[1] Held that a soldier found drunk when on duty was properly convicted under this article, though his drunkenness actually commenced before he went on the duty, his condition not being perceived till some time after he had entered upon the same. While it is in itself an offense knowingly to allow a soldier to go on duty when under the influence of intoxicating liquor, yet if a soldier is placed on duty while partially under this influence, but without the fact being detected, and his drunkenness continues and is discovered while he remains upon the duty, he is strictly amenable under this article, which prescribes not that the party shall become drunk, but that he shall be "found drunk" on duty.(a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 43.

A charge of drunkenness on duty (drill) held not sustained where the party was found drunk, not at or during the drill, but at the hour appointed for the drill, which however, by reason of his drunkenness, he did not enter upon or attend. The charge should properly have been laid under article 62. Ibid., par. 44.

An officer reporting in person drunk, upon his arrival at a post, to the commander of which he had been ordered to report, held chargeable under this article. And so held of an officer reporting, when drunk, to the post commander for orders as officer of the day, after having been duly detailed as such. Ibid., par. 45.

But where an officer, after being specially ordered to remain with his company, absented himself from it and from his duty, and while thus absent became and was found drunk, held that he was not strictly chargeable with drunkenness on duty under this article, but was properly chargeable with drunkenness in violation of the Sixty-second article, disobedience of orders, and unauthorized absence. Ibid., par. 46.

A post commander, while present and exercising command as such, is deemed to be at all times on duty in the sense of this article, and thus liable to a charge under the same if found drunk at the post. (a) Ibid., par. 47.

A medical officer of a post, where there are constantly sick persons under his charge who may at any moment require his attendance, may, generally speaking, be deemed to be "on duty," in the sense of the article, during the whole day, and not merely during the hours regularly occupied by sick call, visiting the sick, or attending hospital. If found drunk at any other hour he may, in general, be charged with an offense under this article. Ibid., par. 48.

The drunkenness need not be such as totally to incapacitate the party for the duty. It is sufficient if it be such as to materially impair the full and free use of his mental or physical abilities. (b) It is not a sufficient defense to a charge of drunkenness on duty to show that the accused, though under the influence of liquor, contrived to get through and somehow perform the duty. Ibid., par. 49. See also ibid., par. 50.

It is immaterial whether the drunkenness be voluntarily induced by spirituous liquor or by opium or other intoxicating drug. In either case the offense may be equally complete. (c) Ibid., par. 51.

Drunkenness not on duty, or when off duty, when amounting to a "disorder," should be charged under article 62, unless (in a case of an officer) committed under such circumstances as to constitute an offense under article 61. Ibid., par. 52.

No punishment except dismissal can legally be imposed upon an officer on a conviction of the offense made punishable by this article. A sentence imposing, with dismissal, any further punishment, as imprisonment or forfeiture of pay, is, as to such additional penalty, unauthorized and inoperative, and should so far be disapproved. Ibid., par. 53.

[1] It is no defense to a charge of "sleeping on post" that the accused had been previously overtasked by excessive guard duty; (d) or that an imperfect discipline prevailed in the command and similar offenses had been allowed to pass without notice; (e) or that the accused was irregularly or informally posted as a sentinel. (f) Evidence of such circumstances, however, may in general be received in extenuation of the offense, or, after sentence, may form the basis for a mitigation or partial remission of the punishment. (g) An officer who places or continues a soldier on duty as a sentinel when, from excessive fatigue, infirmity, or other disability, he is incompetent to perform the important duties of such a position will ordinarily render himself liable to charges. (h) Ibid., par. 55.

(a) That the article is not limited in its application to mere duties of detail, but embraces all descriptions and occasions of duty, see the interpretation of the same as declared in G. O. 7, War Department, 1856, and affirmed in G. O. 5, ibid., 1857. The case in the latter order, indeed, was a case of drunkenness while on duty as a post commander. Misbehavior before the enemy, cowardice, etc.
42 Art. War.

ART. 42. Any officer or soldier who misbehaves himself before the enemy, runs away, or shamefully abandons any fort, post, or guard, which he is commanded to defend, or speaks words inducing others to do the like, or casts away his arms or ammunition, or quits his post or colors to plunder or pillage, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.[1]

Compelling a surrender.
43 Art. War.

ART. 43. If any commander of any garrison, fortress, or post is compelled, by the officers and soldiers under his command, to give up to the enemy or to abandon it, the officers or soldiers so offending shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

Disclosing watchword.
44 Art. War.

ART. 44. Any person belonging to the armies of the United States who makes known the watchword to any person not entitled to receive it, according to the rules and discipline of war, or presumes to give a parole or watchword different from that which he received, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

Relieving the enemy.
45 Art. War.

ART. 45. Whosoever relieves the enemy with money, victuals, or ammunition, or knowingly harbors or protects an enemy, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.[2]

[1] Misbehavior before the enemy may be exhibited in the form of cowardice, or it may consist in a willful violation of orders, gross negligence, or inefficiency, an act of treason or treachery, etc.(a) It need not be committed in the actual sight of the enemy, but the enemy must be in the neighborhood, and the act of offense have relation to some movement or service directed against the enemy or growing out of a movement or operation on his part. It may be committed in an Indian war equally as in a foreign or civil war.(b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 56.

The term "his arms or ammunition" does not refer to arms, etc., which are the personal property of the soldier, but means such as have been furnished to him by the proper officer for use in the service.(c) The term is to be construed in connection with the further similar expression "his post or colors." Ibid., par. 57.

[2] In view of the general term of description in this and the succeeding article, "whosoever," it was held, during the late war, by the Judge-Advocate-General and by the Secretary of War, (d) and has been held later by the Attorney-General, (e) that civilians, equally with military persons, were amenable to trial and punishment by court-martial under either article. (f) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 58. But the sounder construction would seem to be that as the Articles of War are a code enacted for the government of the military establishment, they relate only to persons belonging to that establishment unless a different intent should be expressed or [f] Admitting this construction to be warranted so far as relates to acts committed on the theater of war or within a district under martial law, it is to be noted that it is the effect of the leading adjudged cases to preclude the exercise of the military jurisdiction over this class of offenses when committed by civilians in places not under military government or martial law. Desertion.

47 Art. War.

ART. 47. Any officer or soldier who, having received pay, or having been duly enlisted in the service of the United States, deserts the same, shall, in time of war, suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct; and in time of peace, any punishment, excepting death, which a court-martial may direct.[2] otherwise made manifest. No such intent is so expressed or made manifest. Persons not belonging to the military establishment may be proceeded against for the acts mentioned in the article, but it is by virtue of the power of another jurisdiction, namely, martial law; and martial law does not owe its existence to legislation, but to necessity. The scope of these articles under the legislation of 1776, apparently extending their application to civilians, seems to have become modified on the adoption of the Constitution. Ibid., par. 58, note 5.

During the late war all inhabitants of insurrectionary States were prima facie enemies in the sense of this and the succeeding article. (a) A citizen of an insurgent State who entered the United States military service became of course no longer an enemy. So held of a lieutenant of the First East Tennessee Cavalry. Ibid., par. 59. For a case in which a citizen of Maryland was convicted of relieving the enemy in violation of this article, see G. O. 76, A. G. O., of 1863.

It is no less a relieving an enemy under this article that the money, etc., furnished is exchanged for some commodity, as cotton, valuable to the other party. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 60.

The act of "releiving the enemy" contemplated by this article is distinguished from that of trading with the enemy in violation of the laws of war, the former being restricted to certain particular forms of relief, while the latter includes every kind of commercial intercourse not expressly authorized by the Government. Ibid., par. 61.

[1] Held that the offense of holding correspondence with the enemy was completed by writing and putting in progress a letter to an inhabitant of an insurrectionary State during the late war, it not being deemed essential to this offense that the letter should reach its destination. (b) Ibid., par. 62.

It is essential, however, to the offense of giving intelligence to the enemy that material information should actually be communicated to him; the communication may be verbal, in writing, or by signals. Ibid., par. 63.

[2] Desertion is an unauthorized absenting of himself from the military service, by an officer or soldier, with the intention of not returning. In other words, it is the violation of military discipline familiarly known as absence without leave (whether consisting in an original absenting without authority, or in an overstaying of a defined leave of absence) accompanied by an animus manendi, or non revertendi; this animus constituting the gist of the offense. In order to establish the commission of the specific offense, both these elements—the fact of the unauthorized voluntary withdrawal, and the intent permanently to abandon the service—must be proved. The intent may be inferred, not indeed from the fact of absenting alone, but from the circumstances attending this fact, and here the duration of the absence is especially material. Thus the circumstance that the absence has been exceptionally protracted and quite unexplained will, in general, furnish a presumption of the existence of the necessary intent. An unauthorized absence, however, of a few hours, terminated by a forcible apprehension, may, under certain situations, be sufficient evidence of such intent and thus proof of a desertion; while an absence for a considerable interval, unattended by circumstances indicating a purpose to separate permanently from the service, or to dissolve the pending engagement of the soldier, may be proof simply of the minor included offense. In order to determine whether or not the officer or soldier absented himself with the intent not to return, i. e., whether his offense was desertion or absence without leave, all the circumstances connected with his leaving, absence, and return (whether compulsory or voluntary) must be considered together. Each case must be governed by its own peculiar facts, and no general rule on the subject can be laid down. Ibid., par. 1053.

[a] See the opinion of the United States Supreme Court (frequently since reiterated in substance) as given by Grier, J., in the "Prize Cases," 2 Black, 666 (1862); and by Chase, C. J., in the cases of Mrs. Alexander's Cotton and The Venice, 2 Wallace, 274, 418 (1864). In the latter case the Chief Justice observes: "The rule which declares that war makes all the citizens or subjects of one belligerent enemies of the Government and of all the citizens or subjects of the other, applies equally to civil and to international wars." That an insurrectionary State was no less "enemy's country," though in the military occupation of the United States, with a military governor appointed by the President, see opinion by Field, J., in Coleman v. Tennessee, 7 Otto, 516, 517.

[b] Compare Hensey's Case, 1 Burrow, 642; Stone's Case, 6 Term, 527; Samuel, 580.

That a soldier has been charged with a desertion is no evidence that he has committed the offense. Thus, held that the mere fact that a soldier, absent without authority, had been arrested and returned to his regiment as a deserter, was no proof whatever of the offense charged. So, held that a mere entry on a morning report book, descriptive roll, or other official statement or return that a soldier deserted on a certain day was not legal evidence of a desertion by him, but was evidence only that he had been charged with desertion. (a) So, a report from the Adjutant-General's Office containing extracts from the muster rolls of a regiment on which a soldier of the same was noted as having deserted on a certain date, held incompetent evidence of the fact of desertion upon the trial of the soldier for that offense. (b) Similarly held that the mere statement of a first sergeant, given as testimony on the trial of a soldier of his company charged with desertion, that the accused "deserted" at a certain time and place, was insufficient as proof of the offense charged, being, indeed, but an assertion of a conclusion of law. In such cases it is for the witness simply to state the facts and circumstances, so far as known to him, attending the act charged, it being the province of the court alone to arrive at the conclusion that the offense has been committed. To convict a deserter upon an accusation merely, however formally and officially the same may be made, would be as unwarranted in law as it would be unjust in fact. Ibid., par. 1056.

The nature of the offense of desertion is well illustrated in cases of escape. The mere fact that a soldier while awaiting trial or sentence, or while under sentence (and not discharged from the service), escapes from his confinement is not proof of a desertion on his part, since he may have had in view some minor object, such as the procuring of liquor, etc. (c) But an escape, followed by a considerable absence, especially if the soldier is obliged to be forcibly apprehended, is strong presumptive evidence of the existence of the intent necessary to constitute the crime. So, though the absence involved may be comparatively brief, the circumstances accompanying the escape or attending the apprehension may be such as to justify an equally strong presumption. An escape, with intent not only to evade confinement, but to quit the service, while the party is held awaiting proceedings for desertion, is of course a second or additional desertion.

As to the nature of the offense which may be involved, there is properly no substantial distinction between an escape while awaiting trial or sentence and an escape while in confinement under sentence. An escape, indeed, from an imprisonment imposed by sentence would probably be more likely to be characterized by an animus non revertendi than an escape from a merely preliminary confinement in arrest. So an escape from confinement while awaiting trial upon a grave charge, which must entail, upon conviction, a severe punishment, would naturally be more generally so characterized than an escape from an arrest upon a charge of inferior consequence.

Undoubtedly, in the great majority of cases, escape is desertion; the precedents, however, show that it is not necessarily so, and upon the mere fact alone that a soldier has liberated himself from military custody it is not just to convict him of having designed to dissolve his contract and permanently abandon the military service. Of course, an escape from legal military custody is always an offense, and the soldier who has escaped may (where his act does not amount to a desertion) be brought to trial for such offense as "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline."

It need hardly be added that an escape from imprisonment under sentence, effected by a party who has been dishonorably discharged under the same sentence, can not constitute a desertion or other offense, the party at the time of escape being no longer in the military service. Ibid., par. 1057.

Held to be no defense to a charge of desertion that the accused, at the time of the a Compare G. C. M. O., 33, Department of the Missouri, 1875.

b Compare Hanson v. S. Scituate, 115 Mass., 336.

c See a case of this nature (an escaping in order to obtain liquor) in G. O., 32, Department of the South, 1873; and compare the case in G. O., 87, Department of the South, 1872, in which a conviction of desertion is disapproved on the ground that the evidence showed "merely an escape from the guardhouse, without intention to leave the service or the vicinity of the post." And see in this connection Samuel, 324, where to be "discovered," after a short absence, "in the pursuit of some accidental temporary object, though perhaps otherwise illicit," is instanced as not indicating an intent, by the offender, "to sever himself from the service."

enlistment which he is charged with having abandoned, was an unapprehended deserter from the Army, an enlistment of a deserter being not void but voidable only. Ibid., par. 1058.

It is no defense to a charge of desertion that the soldier was induced to abandon the service by reason of ill treatment, want of proper food, etc.; such circumstances can only palliate, not excuse, the offense committed. So, in a case of a Swiss, who, having enlisted in our Army, deserted after two years of service, held that it was no defense (though, under the circumstances, matter of extenuation) that his act had been induced by an intense nostalgia or maladie du pays. So, held, in a case of a desertion by a German, that the fact that he had received a notification from the military authorities of the North German Empire to report at home for military duty under the penalty of being considered as a deserter from the German army constituted no defense to a desertion committed by him from our service. (a) Ibid., par. 1059.

It is, however, a complete answer to a charge of desertion before a court-martial that the accused has previously been "restored to duty without trial," as sanctioned by paragraph 143, Army Regulations of 1901, provided he has been so restored by competent authority, i. e., the commander who would have been authorized to convene a general court for his trial; otherwise, however, when so restored by a superior not duly authorized. Ibid., par. 1060.

REWARDS.

The reward of $30 made payable by paragraph 135, Army Regulations, is not due merely on the apprehension of a deserter; he must also be delivered "to the proper military authority at a military station, or at some convenient point as near thereto as can be agreed upon." (b) The fact of the offer of a reward for the arrest of a deserter does not authorize a breach of the peace or commission of an illegal act in making the arrest. (c) Ibid., par. 1071.

The amount of the reward—to cite from G. O., 325, of 1863—is in full "for all expenses incurred in apprehending, securing, and delivering a deserter." Disbursements made by a civilian, where no arrest is effected, are at his own risk, and can not legally be reimbursed by the military authorities. Ibid., par. 1072.

The legal liability imposed upon the soldier by paragraph 137, Army Regulations, to have the amount of the award stopped against his pay, is quite independent of the punishment which may be imposed upon him by sentence of court-martial on conviction of the desertion. Such stoppage is incident upon the conviction (d) and need not be directed in the sentence; courts-martial, indeed, have sometimes assumed to impose it, like an ordinary forfeiture of pay, but its insertion in the sentence adds nothing to its legal effect. Ibid., par. 1073.

Where a soldier, charged with desertion, is acquitted, or where, if convicted, his conviction is disapproved by the competent reviewing authority, he can not legally be made liable for the amount of a reward paid or payable for his arrest as a deserter, since in such cases he is not a deserter in law. Ibid., par. 1074.

Where a soldier for whose apprehension as a supposed deserter the legal reward has been paid is subsequently brought to trial upon a charge of desertion and is found guilty not of desertion, but only of the lesser and distinct offense of absence without leave, he clearly can not legally be held liable for the reward by a stoppage of the amount against his pay. In such a case the instrumentality resorted to by the United States for determining the nature of his offense—the court-martial—having pronounced that it was not desertion, the Government is bound by the result, and to visit upon him a penalty to which a deserter only can be subject would be grossly arbitrary and wholly unauthorized. Moreover, such action would be directly at variance with the terms of paragraph 124 of the Army Regulations, which fixes such liability upon the soldier tried in the event only of his conviction of desertion,(a) unless, indeed, the sentence of the court expressly forfeits the amount.(b) Ibid., par. 1075.

[b] The actual payment of the compensation in such cases is authorized by the annual Army appropriation acts, which, in appropriating for the incidental expenses of the Quartermaster's Department, include as an item "for the apprehension, securing, and delivering of deserters, and the expenses incident to their pursuit."

[c] See, in this connection, Clay v. United States, Devereux, 25, in which an officer who, under the orders of a superior, had, without previously procuring proper authority to enter and search from a civil magistrate, broke into a dwelling house for the purpose of securing the arrest of certain deserters, was held to have committed an unjustifiable trespass, and his claim to be reimbursed by the United States for the amount of a judgment recovered against him on account of his illegal act was disallowed by the Court of Claims. Held by the Attorney-General October 12, 1894 (confirming the views of the Judge-Advocate-General), "that the right to forcibly enter into private houses, as asserted by Adjutant-General's circular No. 6, of 1885, does not exist." And see par. 2 of Circ. No. 12, H. Q. A., 1894, revoking Circ. No. 6, of 1885.

[d] See, to a similar effect, the recent opinion of the Attorney-General referred to in the next note.

Where a civil official, having made an arrest of a deserter, concealed him from the military authorities and afterwards permitted or connived at his escape, recommended that the Attorney-General be requested to instruct the proper United States district attorney to initiate proceedings under section 5455, Revised Statutes. Ibid., 1092.

To entitle a person (under paragraph 135, Army Regulations of 1901) to the reward for the arrest of a deserter (c) the party arrested must be still a soldier. Though at the time of the arrest the period of his term of enlistment may have expired, or he may be under sentence of dishonorable discharge, yet if he has not been discharged in fact, the official duly making the arrest, etc., on account of a desertion committed before the end of his term becomes entitled to the payment of the reward specified in the regulations. Similarly held, where the soldier, arrested when at large as a deserter, had been sentenced to confinement (without discharge) and had escaped therefrom. Ibid., par. 1076.

The soldier arrested must be a deserter and legally liable as such. If he has been judicially determined to be not a deserter, as where he has been convicted of absence without leave only, or if, in view of the limitation of the one hundred and third article, he has a legal defense to a prosecution for desertion, the reward is not payable for his apprehension. Ibid., par. 1077.

Where the soldier when arrested had been absent but three days, and was still in uniform, and had not been reported or dropped as a deserter, and his company commander had not the "conclusive evidence" of his "intention not to return," referred to in paragraph 132, Army Regulations of 1889 (p. 133 of 1895, 144 of 1901), held that there was not sufficient evidence that he was a deserter to justify the payment of the reward for his arrest and delivery. Ibid., par. 1078.

The arrest made must be a legal one. Thus held that the reward was not payable for an arrest made on the soil of Mexico, involving a violation of the territorial rights of that sovereignty. An act done in violation of law can not be the basis of a legal claim. Ibid., par. 1080.

Where the deserter was not arrested by, but surrendered himself to, the civil official, who in good faith took him into custody and securely held and duly delivered him, advised that there had been a substantial apprehension (for the purpose of reward) and that the reward was properly payable. Ibid., par. 1081.

The delivery should be personal and manual on the part of the civil official. Where a soldier who had deserted was sentenced to a penitentiary as a horse thief, and at the end of his term of imprisonment a United States marshal caused information that he was a deserter to be conveyed to the commander of a neighboring military post, who thereupon had him arrested and brought to the post, held that the marshal was not entitled to claim the reward. Ibid., par. 1082.

So, where a civil official merely informed a captain of artillery that two soldiers serving in his battery were deserters from the battalion of engineers, held that, though such information was correct, the official was not entitled to the reward; and that the amount of the same, which had been erroneously paid him on the certificate of the captain, should be charged against the latter under paragraph 736, Army Regulations of 1901. Ibid., par. 1083.

The reward should be withheld where there is evidence of collusion between the alleged deserter and the civil official. Advised that a suspicion of such collusion was properly entertained in a case where the soldier, after an absence of but a few days, voluntarily surrendered himself, at or near the post of delivery, to a policeman, who turned him over, without expense or difficulty, to the military authorities, who did not treat him as a deserter, but caused him to be charged, tried, and convicted as an absentee without leave only. Ibid., par. 1086.

An officer of the customs, empowered by law to make arrests of persons violating the revenue laws, but having no such general authority as is ordinarily possessed by peace officers "to arrest offenders" (according to the terms of the act of October 1, 1890, authorizing certain civil officials to arrest deserters), held not entitled to be paid the regulation reward for the apprehension, etc., of a deserter from the Army. Ibid., par. 1087.

Held that a justice of the peace of Idaho was not, by the laws of that State, a peace a This conclusion was concurred in by the Attorney-General in XVI Opins., 474.

b See G. O., 38, of 1890.

c The Army Regulations, so far as it fixes the amount of the "reward," has been superseded by the provision of the recent Army appropriation acts of August 6, 1894, and February 12, 1895, to the effect that the sum paid shall not be "greater than ten dollars."

Deserter shall serve full term. Jan. 11, 1812, c. 14, s. 16, v. 2, p. 673; Jan. 29, 1812, c. 16, s. 127, v. 2, p. 796. 48 Art. War.

officer or authorized to arrest offenders, and was therefore not within the terms of the act of October 1, 1890, or legally entitled to be paid the reward for the arrest, etc., of a deserter. Such justice may by his warrant authorize and thus cause arrests, but actual arrests pertains, under the laws of the State, to another class—sheriffs, constables, city mashals, and policemen. Similarly held in regard to an Indian who brought in a deserter to a military post in North Dakota, he having no authority under the laws of that State to make arrests. But held that a member of the Indian police, established under the regulations of the Indian Office, was a civil officer having authority to arrest offenders, and was entitled to the reward for the arrest of a deserter. [See Circular No. 12 (H. A.), 1894.] Ibid., par. 1088.

Circular No. 11 (H. A.), 1883, declares that the reward shall not be paid where the deserter, at the time of arrest, "is serving in some other branch of the Army," etc. Thus held that the reward was not payable for the arrest of a deserter from the cavalry who, subsequently to his desertion, had enlisted in an infantry regiment, in which he was serving at the date of the arrest. Ibid., par. 1091.

A deserter is not chargeable, under paragraph 137, Army Regulations of 1901, with the expenses of transportation therein specified, if his conviction has been duly disapproved, such disapproval being tantamount to an acquittal. Ibid., par. 1065.

The expense of the transportation of a convicted deserter, incurred in the course of the execution of his sentence, is not chargeable against the deserter under paragraph 137, Army Regulations of 1901, but must be borne by the United States. Ibid., par. 1068.

Every desertion includes an absence without leave. Upon a trial for desertion the accused is tried also for the absence without leave involved in the offense charged.[a] If acquitted, without reservation, of the desertion, he is acquitted also of the lesser offense. If convicted, as he may be (see FINDING, section 8), of the lesser offense only, under a charge of the greater, he is acquitted in law of the latter. Ibid., par. 1093.

The right of the United States to arrest and bring to trial a deserter is paramount to any right of control over him by a parent on the ground of his minority.[b] Ibid., par. 1094.

Enlisting in the enemy's army by prisoner of war is desertion, unless submitted to as a last resort to save life or escape extreme suffering, or to obtain freedom. Thus, held in a case of a United States soldier who entered the service of the enemy from Andersonville, Ga., in the late war, that the burden of proof was on him to establish that he resorted to such enlistment with design of effecting his escape and rejoining his own army; and that his abandoning such enlistment and coming within our lines at the first opportunity was material evidence of such a design. Ibid., par. 1095.

A soldier who had been extradited from Mexico solely on a charge of theft, held not liable to trial as a deserter; the principle that a person extradited on account of a certain alleged offense is exempt from trial on any other criminal offense[c] being deemed applicable where the other offense is a military one. A deserter from our Army can not, in the absence of any international convention allowing it, legally be arrested as such in Mexico and brought thence into Texas. Ibid., par. 1096.

The amenability to trial of a deserter from an enlistment in the Army is not affected by the fact that when he enlisted he was a deserter from the Marine Corps. Ibid., par. 1097.

Held that a deserter from a volunteer regiment was, after the disbandment of the Volunteer Army, no longer amenable to the military jurisdiction, having become thereupon a civilian. Ibid., par. 1098.

A civil employee of the Quartermaster Department does not become liable as a deserter by abandoning his employment. Ibid., par. 1099.

The fact that a soldier has been dropped from the rolls as a deserter is not legal evidence to prove the fact of desertion on a trial for that offense. Ibid., par. 1056.

[1] The liability to make good to the United States the time lost by desertion, enjoined by the first clause of this article, is independent of any punishment which may be imposed by a court-martial, on conviction of the offense, it need not, therefore, be adjudged or mentioned in terms in a sentence. (a) If the conviction is disapproved, the legal status of the accused is the same as if he had been acquitted, and the obligation of additional service is of course not incurred. Ibid., par. 64.

Where a deserter was sentenced to imprisonment for the "balance of his term," held that he was not absolved from the obligation to make good time lost; these works referring to the balance of the term of his original enlistment. Ibid., par. 65.

The time passed by a deserter in confinement under sentence can not be computed as a part of the period required by the article to be made good to the United States, such time not being a time of military service, but of punishment. Nor can the period of confinement be credited where the sentence is remitted before it is fully executed. So time passed by the deserter in arrest or confinement (or in hospital), while waiting trial or action upon his sentence, can not be computed. Ibid., par. 66.

The enforcement of the liability, where enforced at all, is generally postponed till after the execution of the punishment (if any) imposed upon the deserter by his sentence. A deserter may still be required to make good the time included in his unauthorized absence from the service, although his term of enlistment has expired pending a term of confinement adjudged him by court-martial on conviction of his offense, provided he has not been discharged. Ibid., par. 67.

The United States may waive the liability imposed by the first clause of the article. It is, in fact, waived where the deserter, without being required to perform the service, is discharged by one of the officials authorized by article 4 to discharge soldiers. So it is waived where the soldier is adjudged to be dishonorably discharged by sentence of court-martial and this punishment is duly approved and thereupon executed. Ibid., par. 68.

The liability to trial and punishment imposed by the second clause of the article is subject to the limitation of prosecutions prescribed by article 103. Ibid., par. 69.

The contract of enlistment is for military service for a term of years, and when interrupted by the soldier's desertion remains incomplete and subject to specific performance. While some authorities hold that the obligation to make good time lost by desertion attaches only upon conviction, the weight of authority and the practice are to the effect that the punishment for desertion and the obligation to complete the contract of enlistment are separate and distinct, and that the restoration of a deserter to duty without trial does not relieve him from the obligation to complete his contract. This obligation continues, though the statute of limitation has taken effect in his case or has been successfully pleaded in bar on a trial by court-martial. Ibid., par. 70.

[2] This article, in its first clause, does not create a specific offense, or particular kind of desertion, or an offense distinct from the desertion made punishable in the forty-seventh article, but declares in effect that a soldier who abandons his regiment shall be deemed none the less a deserter although he may forthwith reenlist in a new regiany officer shall knowingly receive and entertain such non-commissioned officer or soldier, or shall not, after his being discovered to be a deserter, immediately confine him and give notice thereof to the corps in which he last served, the said officer shall, by a court-martial, be cashiered.

Advising to desert. 51 Art. War. May 29, 1830, c. 183, v. 4, p. 418.

ART. 51. Any officer or soldier who advises or persuades any other officer or soldier to desert the service of the United States, shall, in time of war, suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct; and in time of peace, any punishment excepting death which a court-martial may direct.[1]

Misconduct at divine service. 52 Art. War.

ART. 52. It is earnestly recommended to all officers and soldiers diligently to attend divine service. Any officer who behaves indecently or irreverently at any place of divine worship shall be brought before a general court-martial, there to be publicly and severely reprimanded by the president thereof. Any soldier who so offends shall, for his first offense, forfeit one-sixth of a dollar; for each further offense he shall forfeit a like sum, and shall be confined twenty-four hours. The money so forfeited shall be deducted from his next pay, and shall be applied, by the ment. It does not render the act of reenlistment a desertion, but simply makes the reenlistment, under the circumstances indicated, prima facie evidence of a desertion from the previous enlistment from which the soldier has not been discharged, or, more accurately, evidence of an intent not to return to the same.[a] The object of the provision, as it originally appears in the British code, apparently was to preclude the notion, that might otherwise have been entertained, that a soldier would be excused from repudiating or departing from his original contract of enlistment provided he presently renewed his obligation in a different portion of the military force.[b] Ibid., par. 73.

Held, that an enlisted marine, who abandoned the Marine Corps without a discharge and enlisted in the Army, could not be "reputed a deserter" according to the terms of this article; but advised that he be turned over to the commandant of that corps for the proper disposition and action. Ibid., par. 74.

Where a soldier enlisted in a certain regiment, after being officially notified that he was duly discharged from a previous enlistment, but without having received the written certificate and evidence of his discharge, which, by mistake or accident, had not been delivered to him as required by article 4, held, that he could not properly be "reputed" or charged as a deserter. Ibid., par. 75.

An enlistment in violation of this article is not void but voidable at the option of the United States only. Until so avoided service under it is valid service. On a trial for an offense committed during such enlistment, a plea by the accused, in bar of trial, that this enlistment, being fraudulent on his part, is void, should not be sustained. Ibid., par. 76.

[1] A declaration, made by one soldier to another, of a willingness to desert with him in case he should decide to desert, held not properly an advising to desert, in the sense of this article. To constitute the offense of advising to desert, it is not essential that there should have been an actual desertion by the party advised. But held otherwise as to the offense of persuading to desert; to complete this offense the persuasion should have induced the act.[c] Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 77.

Profane oaths. 53 Art. War.

ART. 53. Any officer who uses any profane oath or execration shall, for each offense, forfeit and pay one dollar. Any soldier who so offends shall incur the penalties provided in the preceding article; and all moneys forfeited for such offenses shall be applied as therein provided.

Officers to keep good order in their commands. 54 Art. War.

ART. 54. Every officer commanding in quarters, garrison, or on the march shall keep good order, and, to the utmost of his power, redress all abuses or disorders which may be committed by any officer or soldier under his command; and if, upon complaint made to him of officers or soldiers beating or otherwise illtreating any person, disturbing fairs or markets, or committing any kind of riot, to the disquieting of the citizens of the United States, he refuses or omits to see justice done to the offender and reparation made to the party injured, so far as part of the offender's pay shall go toward such reparation, he shall be dismissed from the service, or otherwise punished, as a court-martial may direct.[1]

[1] While this article would certainly appear to contemplate the making of reparation for injuries done to the persons of citizens rather than for injuries done to their property, yet advised, in view of the precedents, that it might properly be regarded as within the equity of the article to indemnify a citizen for wanton injury done to his property by a soldier or soldiers, by means of a stoppage against his or their pay, summarily ordered upon investigation by the commanding officer. (a) In a few cases a stoppage of the pay of an entire regiment, for damage to private property committed by its members, has been sanctioned as authorized under the general remedial provisions of this article. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 78.

The stoppage contemplated is quite distinct from a punishment by fine, and it can not affect the question of the summary reparation authorized by the article, that the offender or offenders may have already been tried for the offense and sentenced to forfeiture of pay. In such a case, indeed, the forfeiture, as to its execution, would properly take precedence of the stoppage. On the other hand, where the stoppage is first duly ordered under the article, it has precedence over a forfeiture subsequently adjudged for the offense. Ibid., par. 79.

It does not affect the question of reparation under the article that the offender or offenders may be criminally liable for the injury committed or may have been punished therefor by the civil authorities. Ibid., 47, par. 80.

Held that the remedial provision of this article could not be enforced in favor of military persons, or in favor of the United States, or to indemnify parties for property stolen or embezzled. Ibid., par. 81.

The pay of the offender or offenders can be resorted to only for the purpose of the "reparation." A military commander can have no authority to add a further amount of stoppage by way of punishment. Ibid., par. 82.

Held that, as an agency for assessing the amount of the damage, a court-martial could not properly be substituted for the board directed by General Orders 35, Headquarters of the Army, 1868, to be convened for such purpose. Ibid., par. 83.

The procedure under this article, and pursuant to General Orders 35 of 1868, is as [a] See G. O. 35, Headquarters of Army, 1868, construing this article, and prescribing the proceeding under it, reparation for injury to property as well as person being authorized. The article, however, is antiquated in form and indefinite and incomplete in its provisions, and calls for repeal or amendment. For some of the principal cases in which it has been applied in our practice, the student is referred to G. O. 4, Department of the Ohio, 1863; G. O. 123, Department of the Gulf, 1864; G. follows: The citizen aggrieved tenders a "complaint" under oath charging the injury against a particular soldier or soldiers, described by name (if known), regiment, etc., and accompanied by evidence of the injury, and of the instrumentality of the person or persons accused. If such evidence be satisfactory, the commanding officer has the damages assessed by a board, and makes orders for such stoppage of pay as will be sufficient for the "reparation" enjoined by the article. The commander must have a proper case presented to him; he can not legally proceed sua sponte. Ibid., par. 84.

Where proof was duly made under this article of injury done by some persons of a command, but the active perpetrators could not upon investigation be determined, and it appeared that the entire command was present and implicated, held that the stoppage might legally be made against all the individuals present. Ibid., par. 85.

It would not be a sound construction of the article to extend the specified measure of redress to other than the specified cases. Its strict construction would indeed limit the specific redress to acts of violence against the person, but the weight of American authority extends it to acts of violence against property also. Further than this the authorities do not go, holding, for example, that it is not applicable to cases of larceny and embezzlement. Therefore held that to make a stoppage of pay against enlisted men to reimburse the keeper of a restaurant for food ordered by them and not paid for would be wholly unauthorized by the terms, scope, or intent of the article. Ibid., par. 86.

Territory, or district in which such offense may have been committed.[1]

ART. 59. When any officer or soldier is accused of a capital crime, or of any offense against the person or property of any citizen of any of the United States, which is punishable by the laws of the land, the commanding officer, and the officers of the regiment, troop, battery, company, or detachment, to which the person so accused belongs, are required, except in time of war, upon application duly made by or in behalf of the party injured, to use their utmost endeavors to deliver him over to the civil magistrate, and to aid the officers of justice in apprehending and securing him, in order to bring him to trial. If, upon such application, any officer refuses or willfully neglects, except in time of war, to deliver over such accused person to the civil magistrates, or to aid the officers of justice in apprehending him, he shall be dismissed from the service.[2]

Delivery of offenders in military service to civil magistrate. 59 Art. of War.

[1] The jurisdiction conferred by this article upon military courts has been held by the highest judicial authority to be not exclusive, but concurrent merely with that of the civil tribunals. (a) The word "shall" in the term "shall be punishable" is construed as equivalent to "may." (b) (Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 87.)

In framing a charge under this article it will not in general be essential to allege in connection with the date of the offense or to show by evidence that the act was committed at a time of war, etc., this being a fact of which a court will ordinarily properly take judicial notice. (c) Ibid., par. 88.

Held (November, 1865) that military courts were still empowered to exercise the jurisdiction conferred by this article, the status belli not having yet been declared to be terminated, either by the Executive or Congress. A court-martial, of course, could have no authority whatever to decide whether the war was ended. (Ibid., par. 89.)

When a sentence adjudged by a court convened by the authority of this article imposed a punishment of less severity than that provided for the same offense by the law of the State in which the offense was committed (as imprisonment where the law of the State required the death penalty), held that such a sentence was unauthorized and inoperative. But though the punishment must not be "less," it may legally be of greater severity than that provided by the local statute. Held that the court, in imposing punishment, should be governed by the local law (so far as required by the article), although the offense was committed in a State whose ordinary relations to the General Government had been suspended by a state of war or insurrection. (d) Ibid., par. 90. See also paragraphs 91–93, ibid.

[2] This article is a recognition of the general principle of the subordination of the military to the civil power, (e) and its main purpose evidently is to facilitate, in cases of offenders against the local civil statutes who happen to be connected with the Army, the execution of those statutes, where, as citizens, such persons remain legally amenable to arrest and trial thereunder. Protection of military persons from civil arrest is not the object of this article. (Ibid., par. 94.)

The commanding officer, before surrendering the party, is entitled to require that the "application" shall be so specific as to identify the accused and to show that he is charged with a particular crime or offense which is within the class described in the article. Where it is doubtful whether the application is made in good faith and in the interests of law and justice, the commander may demand that the application be especially explicit and be sworn to; and in general the preferable and, indeed, only satisfactory course will be to require the production, if practicable, of a due and formal warrant or writ for the arrest of the party. (a) The application required by the article should be made in a case where the crime was committed by the party before he entered the military service equally as where it was committed by him while in the service. (b) In the former case a more exact identification may perhaps reasonably be required. Ibid., par. 95.

The provisions of this article are applicable only when the officer or soldier is accused of a crime or offense "which is punishable by the laws of the land;" i. e., by the public law—statutes or constitution—of the particular State. (c) Ibid., par. 96.

The article is not applicable to a case of an offense committed against the laws of the United States, as, for instance, the statutes prohibiting the introduction of liquor into the Indian country. Nor is it applicable to a case of an offense committed in a place over and within which the jurisdiction of the United States is exclusive. (d) Ibid., par. 97.

The party should be surrendered upon proper application, though the offense be one of which a military court has jurisdiction concurrently with the civil courts, unless, indeed, the military jurisdiction has already duly attached (by means of arrest or service of charges with a view to trial), in which case the prisoner may be surrendered or not as the proper authority may determine. A soldier under a sentence of confinement imposed by court-martial can not, in general, properly be surrendered under this article. In such a case the civil authorities should regularly defer their application till the military punishment has been executed or remitted. (e) Where a soldier, duly surrendered under this article and allowed to go on bail, was thereupon returned to duty, held that it was within the spirit of the article for the department commander to instruct the commanding officer of such soldier to cause him to appear for trial at the proper time. Ibid., par. 98.

An officer or soldier accused as indicated by the article, though he may be willing and may desire to surrender himself to the civil authorities, or to appear before the civil court, should not in general be permitted to do so, but should be required to await the formal application. Ibid., par. 100.

In view of the obligation devolved by this article upon officers of the Army, a post commander would properly be required to apprehend and hold for surrender to the civil authorities a soldier who, having been once surrendered under the article, had escaped and returned to the post. (f) Ibid. 53, par. 8.

The term "any of the United States," employed in this article, held properly to include any and all of the political members of our governmental system, and to embrace an organized Territory equally as a State. Ibid., par. 101.

The article is directory, not jurisdictional. It does not limit the action to be taken by the military authorities to cases where the application is made by the party; it may be made in his behalf. It does not place a soldier who has committed a crime and been indicted therefor beyond the reach of the civil power if the person injured does not apply for his surrender. In a case—one of murder, for example—where there can be no personal application, the State properly takes the place of the individual. And so in all other cases where an indictment has been found or a warrant of arrest has been issued, the State, with which resides the jurisdiction and the power to prosecute, may make the demand, and upon its demand it is the duty of the commanding officer to surrender the party charged. Ibid., par. 102.

The article contemplates only cases in which an "officer or soldier is accused," etc. So, held that it did not apply to a case of a civilian (Chinese) laundryman employed and residing at a military post accused of a civil crime. While it would be equally desirable that the surrender should be made in such a case, such surrender would be a matter of comity, not of official duty under the article. Ibid., par. 103.

[b] See G. O. 29, Department of the Northwest, 1864, where it is remarked that there is an especial obligation to surrender the soldier where the crime was committed by him before entering the military service.

[c] As to the meaning of the term "laws of the land," especially with reference to municipal ordinances, see Vanzant v. Waddell, 2 Yerger, 270; State Bk. v. Cooper, ibid., 605; Horn v. People, 26 Mich., 228. In XXI Opin. Att. Gen., 88 (published in circular 15, A. G. O., 1894), it was held that a municipal ordinance is within the expression "laws of the land," as used in the fifty-ninth article of war, and that a soldier violating such an ordinance and escaping to a military reservation should be delivered to the civil authorities for trial on demand.

[d] It is further held, in Ex parte McRoberts, 16 Iowa, 603, that the provisions of the article apply only to officers and soldiers while within the immediate control and jurisdiction of the military authorities, and therefore do not apply to a case of a soldier absent on furlough; but that such a soldier, pending his furlough, may be arrested in the same manner as any civilian.

This article does not apply to the service by a sheriff on an officer or soldier of a subpœna to appear as a witness before a civil court. In such a case, indeed, the civil official should, as a matter of comity, apply first to the post commander, whether or not the post be within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. It will then be for the commander, in comity, to facilitate the service and to issue the necessary permit or order to enable and cause the officer or soldier to attend the court. Ibid., par. 104.

This article does not apply to a charge of introducing liquor into the Indian country or to a reservation, exclusive jurisdiction over which has been ceded to the United States. (Ibid., par. 97.) Its application in time of war is discretionary with the military authorities. Ibid., par. 105.

[1] The offense known as the duplicating of pay rolls, where it involves, as it generally does, a presenting or a causing to be presented of a false or fraudulent claim against the United States, is properly chargeable under this article. Ibid., par. 107.

When an officer who had been sentenced to forfeit all pay due, but whose sentence had not yet been approved or published, presented pay accounts to the paymaster for his pay and received the amount of the same, held that he was not triable for the offense of presenting a fraudulent claim under this article. Ibid., par. 108.

Where a soldier, in order to procure his discharge from the service and the payment thereupon of a considerable amount not in fact due him, forged the name of his commanding officer on a discharge paper and a "final statement" paper, and presented the same to a paymaster, held that he was chargeable with offenses defined in the second, fourth, and sixth paragraphs of this article. Ibid., par. 109.

Where a disbursing officer, having caused a creditor of the United States to sign a receipt in blank, paid him a less sum than was due him, and afterwards inserted the true amount due in the receipt, so as to obtain credit with the United States for the greater sum, held that he was chargeable with the offense defined in the seventh paragraph of this article. Ibid. 56, par. 5.

Where an officer, by collusion with a contractor, who had contracted for the delivery of military supplies, received for a pecuniary consideration from the latter a less amount of supplies than the United States was entitled to under the contract, while at the same time giving him a voucher certifying on its face the delivery of the whole amount, held that such officer was chargeable with an offense of the class defined in the eighth paragraph of this article. Ibid., par. 110.

The offense of stealing, indicated in the 9th paragraph of this article, consists in a larceny of "property of the United States furnished or intended for the military service." Except in time of war larceny of other property can be charged as a military offense only when cognizable under Article 62, as prejudicing good order and military discipline. Ibid., par. 113.

Section 5494, Revised Statutes, provides that the refusal of any person charged with the disbursement of public moneys promptly to transfer or disburse the funds in his hands "upon the legal requirement of an authorized officer, shall be deemed, upon the trial of any indictment against such person for embezzlement, as prima facie evidence of such embezzlement." Applying this rule to a military case, it is clear that, in the event of such a refusal by a disbursing officer of the Army, the burden of proof would be upon him to show that his proceeding was justified, and that it would not be for the prosecution to show what had become of the funds. So, where an acting commissary of subsistence on being relieved failed to turn over the public moneys in his hands to his successor or to his post commander when ordered to do so, or to produce such moneys, exhibit vouchers for the same, or otherwise account for their use, when so required by his department commander; held that he was properly charged with and convicted of an intent to defraud the United States. It is the act of the misappropriation described itself which constitutes the offense, irrespective of the purpose or motive of such act. Ibid., par. 114.

Where an officer of the quartermaster department used teams, tools, and other public property, in his possession as such officer, in erecting buildings, etc., for the benefit of an association, composed mainly of civilians, of which he was a member; held that he was properly chargeable with a misappropriation of property of the United States. And similarly held of a loaning by such an officer of public property (corn) to a contractor, for the purpose of enabling him to fill a contract made with the United States through another officer. (a) The fact that a practice exists in a post or other command of making a use (not authorized by regulation or order) of government property for private purposes, or of loaning it in the prospect of a prompt return, can constitute no defense to a charge for such act as an offense under this article. Such practice, however, if sanctioned, though improperly, by superior authority, may be shown in evidence in mitigation of sentence. Ibid., par. 112.

A charge of embezzlement under this article would not lie where the money or property embezzled was not public money, but belonged to the post, company, or exchange funds; such money not being public money within the scope of article 60. G. C. M. O. 27, War Dept., 1872; see, also, G. C. M. O. 4, ibid., 1873.

Under the grant of jurisdiction to a court-martial conferred by the 60th Article of War, providing that any person in the military service who misappropriates any money of the United States, "furnished or intended for the military service thereof," shall be punished, etc., such a court has no power to convict an officer of the Army for misappropriating money appropriated by Congress for the improvement of rivers and harbors. In re Carter, 97 Fed. Rep., 496. Such a conviction, however, may be had where the misappropriation of such funds is charged as a violation of article 62. Ibid.

Who steals, embezzles, knowingly and willfully misappropriates, applies to his own use or benefit, or wrongfully or knowingly sells or disposes of any ordnance, arms, equipments, ammunition, clothing, subsistence stores, money, or other property of the United States, furnished or intended for the military service thereof; or[1]

[1] Where a quartermaster used temporarily with his private carriage a pair of Government horses in his charge, held that he was not properly chargeable with embezzlement, but with the offense, under this article, of "knowingly applying to his own use and benefit property of the United States, furnished for the military service." Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 115.

The misappropriation specified in the article need not be an appropriation for the personal profit of the accused. The words "to his own use or benefit" qualify only the term "applies." Ibid., par. 116.

In charging a stealing, embezzlement, misappropriation, etc., under this article, it is not necessary to allege that the funds or property were "furnished or intended for the military service;" it is sufficient if this fact appears from the evidence, and in most cases it will be inferable from the very nature of the property itself—as where, for example, the same consists of "quartermaster stores," "subsistence stores," "ordnance stores," etc. (a) Ibid., par. 119.

In charging embezzlement under this article, it is not necessary, if the fact sufficiently appears from other allegations, to aver in terms in the specification that the money or property was "furnished or intended for the military service of the United States." Ibid., 58 par. 14.

Repeated false statements of the accused relative to the public moneys for which he was accountable are competent evidence going to sustain a charge of embezzlement under this article. Ibid., par. 120.

The application or operation of this article is in no manner affected by the enactment of March 3, 1875, chapter 144, constituting embezzlement of public property a felony and making it triable by a United States court, such act being a purely civil statue. Ibid., par. 121.

Where an officer, for the purpose of obtaining the allowance of a fraudulent claim against the United States, willfully induced another to make to the United States a lease of premises for public use, containing a false and fraudulent statement, held that he was chargeable with an offense of the class specified in the fourth paragraph of this article. Ibid., par. 122.

[a] Whether this provision in subjecting officers and soldiers discharged, mustered out, etc., and become civilians, to trial by court-martial in the same manner as if they were a part of the Army is constitutional is a question which is believed not to have been judicially passed upon. Probably originally inserted in the act of March 2, 1863 (from which the article is repeated) as in the nature of a war measure, it was in fact relied upon as giving jurisdiction in but a small number of cases even during the war, and since that period no case is known in which the exceptional jurisdiction conferred has been taken advantage of.

other person who is a part of or employed in said forces or service, any ordnance, arms, equipments, ammunition, clothing, subsistence stores, or other property of the United States, such soldier, officer, or other person not having lawful right to sell or pledge the same, Shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by fine or imprisonment, or by such other punishment as a court-martial may adjudge, or by any or all of said penalties. And if any person, being guilty of any of the offenses aforesaid, while in the military service of the United States, receives his discharge, or is dismissed from the service, he shall continue to be liable to be arrested and held for trial and sentence by a court-martial, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had not received such discharge nor been dismissed. Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 951).

Conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman. 61 Art. of War.

ART. 61. Any officer who is convicted of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman shall be dismissed from the service.[1]

[1] To constitute an offense under this article the conduct need not be "scandalous and infamous." These words, contained in the original article of 1775, were dropped in the form adopted in 1806. Nor is it essential that the act should compromise the honor of the officer. (a) It is only necessary that the conduct should be such as is at once disgraceful or disreputable and manifestly unbefitting both an officer of the Army and a gentleman. (b) An act, however, which is only slightly discreditable is not, in practice, made the subject of a charge under this article. The article, in making the punishment of dismissal imperative in all cases, evidently contemplates that the conduct, while unfitting the party for the society of men of a scrupulous sense of decency and honor, shall exhibit him as unworthy to hold a commission in the Army. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 123.

Knowingly making to a superior a false official report held chargeable under this article. So of a deliberately false official certificate as to the truth or correctness of an official voucher, roll, return, etc. So of any deliberately false official statement, written or verbal, of a material character. So where an officer caused the sergeant of the guard to enter in the guard book a false official report that he (the officer) had duly visited the guard at certain hours as officer of the day, when he had in fact been guilty of a neglect of duty in this particular, and thereupon himself signed such report and submitted it to his post commander, held that his conduct was chargeable as an offense under this article. Ibid., par. 124.

The following acts, committed in a particular case, held to be offenses within this article: Preferring false accusations against an officer; attempting to induce an officer to join in a fraud upon the United States; attempt at subornation of perjury. Ibid., par. 125. For other acts chargeable under this article see paragraphs 126–131, Ibid.

To justify a charge under this article it is not necessary that the act or conduct of the officer should be immediately connected with or should directly affect the military service. It is sufficient that it is morally wrong and of such a nature that, while dishonoring or disgracing him as a gentlemen, it compromises his character and position as an officer of the Army. Ibid., par. 132.

Thus, though a mere neglect on the part of an officer to satisfy his private pecuniary obligations will not ordinarily furnish sufficient grounds for charges against him, yet where the debt has been dishonorably incurred—as where money has been borrowed under false promises or representations as to payment or security, or where the nonpayment has been accompanied by such circumstances of fraud, deceit, evasion, denial of indebtedness, etc., as to amount to dishonorable conduct—the continued nonpayment, in connection with the facts or circumstances rendering it dishonorable, may properly be deemed to constitute an offense chargeable under this article. (a) Ibid., par. 133.

Where an officer, in payment of a debt, gave his check upon a bank, representing at the same time that he had funds there, when in fact, as he was well aware, he had none, held that he was amenable to a charge under this article. Ibid., par. 134.

Neglect or refusal to pay honest debts may constitute an offense under this article where so repeated or persistent as to furnish reasonable ground for inferring that the officer designs or desires to avoid or indefinitely defer a settlement. This especially where the debts are due to soldiers for money borrowed from or held in trust for them. Ibid., par. 135. See also par. 138, ibid.

An indifference on the part of an officer to his pecuniary obligations, of so marked and inexcusable a character as to induce repeated just complaints to his military commander or the Secretary of War by his creditors, and to bring discredit and scandal upon the military service, held to constitute an offense within the purview of this article. (b) Ibid., par. 136.

Where certain officers of a colored regiment made a practice of loaning to men of the regiment small amounts of money, for which they charged and received in payment at the rate of two dollars for one at the next pay day, held that they were properly convicted of a violation of this article. Ibid., par. 137.

Where an officer stationed in Utah was married there by a Mormon official to a female, with whom he lived as his wife, although having at the same time a legal wife residing in the States, held that he might properly be brought to trial by general court-martial for a violation of this article. So held of an officer who committed bigamy by publicly contracting marriage in the United States while having a legal wife living in Scotland whom he had abandoned. Ibid., par. 139.

Abusing and assaulting his wife by an officer at a military post, held chargeable as an offense under this article. Ibid., par. 140.

The institution by an officer of fraudulent proceedings against his wife for divorce, and the manufacture of false testimony to be used against her in the suit, in connection with an abandonment of her and neglect to provide for her support, held to constitute "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman" in the sense of this article. Ibid., par. 141.

According to the accepted principle of interpretation, by which articles of war enjoining a specific punishment or punishments are held to be in this particular both mandatory and exclusive, no sentence other than one of simple dismissal can legally be adjudged upon a conviction under this article. A sentence which adds to dismissal any other penalty or penalties, as disqualification for office, forfeiture of pay, imprisonment, etc., is valid and operative only as to the dismissal, and as to the rest should be formally disapproved as being unauthorized and of no effect. Ibid., par. 142.

The use of abusive language toward a commanding officer may constitute an offense under this article. But, both as a matter of correct pleading and because the twentieth article authorizes a punishment less than dismissal, the language should be so particularized as to show that it constituted an offense more grave than the mere disrespect which is the subject of the latter article. A specification not thus setting forth and characterizing the epithets or words employed will be subject to a motion to make definite or strike out. Ibid., par. 143.

The mere acceptance by an officer of compensation from private parties (civilians) whom, by permission of his superior, he assists in a private undertaking, though it may be an indelicate act, is not an offense under this article. Of the propriety of such conduct an officer must judge for himself. Ibid., par. 144.

See, as to the duplication of pay accounts, ibid., pars. 145, 146.

Held that a continued neglect, without adequate excuse, to satisfy a pecuniary obligation long overdue, after specific assurance given of speedy payment, was a dishonorable act, constituting an offense under this article. Ibid., par. 138.

[a] Cases of officers made amenable to trial by court-martial, under this article, for the nonfulfillment of pecuniary obligations to other officers, enlisted men, post traders, and civilians, are found in the following general orders of the War Department and Headquarters of the Army: No. 87, of 1866; Nos. 3, 55, 64, of 1869; No. 15, of 1870; No. 17, of 1871; Nos. 22, 46, of 1872; No. 10, of 1873; Nos. 25, 50, 68, 82, of 1874; No. 25, of 1875; No. 100, of 1876; No. 46, of 1877.

[b] See, on the subject of these complaints, the circular issued originally from the War Department (A. G. O.) on February 8, 1872, in which the Secretary of War "declares his intention to bring to trial by court-martial," under the sixty-first article of war, "any officer who, after due notice, shall fail to quiet such claims against him."

Crimes and disorders to prejudice of military discipline.
62 Art. War.

ART. 62. All crimes not capital, and all disorders and neglects, which officers and soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, though not mentioned in the foregoing articles of war, are to be taken cognizance of by a general, or a regimental, garrison, or field officers' court-martial, according to the nature and degree of the offense, and punishable at the discretion of such court.[1]

[1] The word "crimes" in this article, distinguished as it is from "neglects" and "disorders," means military offenses of a more serious character than these, including such as are also civil crimes, as homicide, robbery, arson, larceny, etc. "Capital" crimes (i. e., crimes capitally punishable), including murder, or any grade of murder made capital by statute, can not be taken cognizance of by courts-martial under this article. (As to the jurisdiction of courts-martial in cases of murder, etc., in time of war, see art. 58, supra, note.) A crime which is in fact murder, and capital by statute of the United States or of the State in which committed, can not be brought within the jurisdiction of a court-martial under this article by charging it as "manslaughter, to the prejudice," etc., or simply as "conduct to the prejudice," etc. If the specification or the proof shows that the crime was murder and a capital offense, the court should refuse to take jurisdiction, or to find or sentence. If it assume to do so, the proceedings should be disapproved as unauthorized and void. Ibid., par. 148.

The term "to the prejudice of good order and military discipline" qualifies, according to the accepted interpretation, the word "crimes" as well as the words "disorders and neglects." Thus, the crime of larceny (sometimes charged as "theft" or "stealing") is held chargeable under this article when it clearly affects the order and discipline of the military service. Stealing, for example, from a fellow-soldier or from an officer (or stealing of public money or other public property where the offense is not more properly a violation of article 60), is generally so chargeable. And so of any other crime (not capital) the commission of which has prejudiced military discipline, as, for example, manslaughter (or homicide not amounting to murder) of a soldier; assault with intent to kill a fellow-soldier; forgery of the name of a disbursing or other military officer to a Government check or draft, or forgery of an officer's name to a check on a bank (and this whether or not anything was in fact lost by the Government or the bank or officer); forgery in signing the name of a fellow-soldier to a certificate of indebtedness to a sutler, or to an order on a paymaster; embezzlement or misappropriation of the property of an officer or soldier.[a] Ibid., par. 149.

Where an offense is specifically provided for in any of the Articles of War prior to the sixty-second, the grant of jurisdiction to a court-martial to try and punish such offense is conferred by the particular article which mentions it, and not by the general language of the sixty-second article, providing for the trial and punishment of offenses not capital, and all disorders, etc., though not mentioned in the preceding articles. In re Carter, 97 Fed. Rep., 496.

A crime, disorder, or neglect, cognizable under this article, may be charged either by its name simply, as "larceny," "drunkenness," "neglect of duty," etc.; or by its name with the addition of the words, "to the prejudice of good order and military discipline;" or simply as "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline;" or as "violation of the sixty-second article of war." It is immaterial in which form the charge is expressed, provided the specification sets forth facts constituting an act prejudicial to good order and military discipline. Whenever the charge and specification taken together make out a statement of an act clearly thus prejudicial, etc., the pleading will be regarded as substantially sufficient under this general article. Ibid., par. 151.

A charge of "conduct to the prejudice," etc., with a specification setting forth merely trials and convictions of the accused for previous offenses, is not a pleading of an offense under this article, or of any military offense. So of a charge of "habitual drunkenness, to the prejudice," etc., with a specification setting forth instances in which the accused has been sentenced for acts of drunkenness. Such charges, indeed, are in contravention of the principle that a party shall not be twiec tried for the same offense. So, a specification under the charge of "conduct to the prejudice," etc., which sets forth not a distinct offense, but simply the result of an aggregation of similar offenses, is insufficient in law. Where the specifications to such a charge, in a case of an officer, set forth that the accused was "frequently" drunk, "frequently" absented himself without authority from his command, etc., held that these specifications were properly struck out by the court on the motion of the accused. In such a case the only correct pleading is a general charge under this article, with specifications setting forth—each separately—some particular and specific instance of offense. Ibid., par. 152.

Whether acts committed against civilians are offenses within this article is a question to be determined by the circumstances of each case, and in regard to which no general rule can be laid down. If the offense be committed on a military reservation, or other premises occupied by the Army, or in its neighborhood, so as to be—so to speak—in the constructive presence of the Army; or if committed by an officer or soldier while on duty, particularly if the injury is done to a member of the community whom the offender is specially required to protect; or if committed in the presence of other soldiers, or while the offender is in uniform; or if the offender use his military position or that of another for the purpose of intimidation or other unlawful influence or object—the offense will, in general, properly be regarded as an act prejudicial to good order and military discipline, and cognizable by a court-martial under this article. The judgment on the subject of a court of military officers, experts as to such cases, confirmed by the proper reviewing commander, should be reluctantly disturbed. As to a charge of embezzlement of public funds charged under this article, see Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 154, with notes thereon. See also G. C. M. O. 34, H. Q. Army, 1866; Carter v. McLaughry, 105 Fed. Rep., 614; S. O. 172, A. G. O., 1899; In re Carter, 97 Fed. Rep., 496.

[1] To determine when an army is "in the field" is to decide the question raised. These words imply military operations with a view to an enemy. Hostilities with Indians seem to be as much within their meaning as any other kind of warfare. To enable the officers of an army to preserve good order and discipline is the object of this article, and these may be as necessary in the face of hostile savages as in the front of any other enemy. When an army is engaged in offensive or defensive operations, I think it is safe to say that it is an army "in the field."

To decide exactly where the boundary line runs between civil and military jurisdiction, as to the civilians attached to an army, is difficult; but it is quite evident that they are within military jurisdiction, as provided for in said article, when their treachery, defection, or insubordination might endanger or embarrass the army to which they belong in its operations against what is known in military phrase as "an enemy." Possibly the fact that troops found in a region of country chiefly inhabited by Indians, and remote from the exercise of civil authority, may enter into the description of "an army in the field." Persons who attach themselves to an expedition against hostile Indians may be understood as agreeing that they will submit themselves, for the time being, to military control. XIV Opin. Att. Gen. 22, G. O. 17, A. G. O., 1872.

The accepted interpretation of this article is that it subjects (in time of war) the classes of persons specified not only to military discipline and government in general, but also to the jurisdiction of courts-martial (upon the theory, probably, that they are thus made, for the time being, a part of the Army). Individuals, however, of the class termed "retainers to the camp," or officers' servants and the like, as well as camp followers generally, have rarely been subjected to trial in our service. For breaches of discipline committed by them the punishment has generally been expulsion from the limits of the camp and dismissal from employment. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 161.

The discipline authorized by the article has mainly been applied to the description of "persons serving with the armies of the United States in the field"—that is to say, civilians serving in a quasi-military capacity in connection with troops, in time of war and on its theater. Thus, during the late war, civilians of the following classes were, in repeated cases, held amenable, under this article, to the military jurisdiction, and subjected to trial and punishment by courts-martial: Teamsters employed with wagon trains, watchmen, laborers, and other employees of the quartermaster, subsistence, engineer, ordnance, provost-marshal, etc., departments; ambulance drivers; telegraph operators; interpreters; guides; paymasters' clerks; veterinary surgeons; "contract" surgeons, nurses, and hospital attendants; conductors and engineers of railroad trains operated upon the theater of war for military purposes; officers and men employed on Government transports, etc. But the mere fact of employment by the Government pending a general war does not render the civil employee so amenable. The employment must be in connection with the army in the field and on the theater of hostilities. Ibid., par. 162.

Held (June, 1863) that the force employed in the "ram fleet" on Western waters was properly a contingent of the Army rather than of the Navy, and accordingly that civilian commanders, pilots, and engineers employed upon such fleet during the war and before the enemy were persons serving with the armies in the field in the sense of this article, and therefore amenable to trial by court-martial. Ibid., par. 163.

Civil employees of the United States serving with the army in the field during active warfare with hostile Indian tribes held amenable to trial by court-martial under this article. A civilian who acted as guide to a command operating in a hostile movement during an Indian war held so triable. Ibid., par. 164.

The jurisdiction authorized by this article can not be extended to civilians employed in connection with the Army in time of peace, nor to civilians employed in such connection during the period of an Indian war but not on the theater of such war. In view of the limited theater of Indian wars, this exceptional jurisdiction is to be extended to civilians, on account of offenses committed during such wars, with even greater caution than in a general war. Ibid., par. 165.

Civilians can not legally be subjected to military jurisdiction by the authority of this article after the war (whether general or against Indians), pending which their offenses were committed, has terminated. The jurisdiction, to be lawfully exercised, must be exercised during the status belli. Ibid., par. 166.

A civil employee of the United States in time of peace is most clearly not made amenable to the military jurisdiction and trial by court-martial by the fact that he is employed in an office connected with the administration of the military branch of the Government. Such employment does not make him a part of the military establishment, nor is his offense, however nearly it may affect the military service, "a case arising in the land forces" in the sense of article 5 of the amendments to the Constitution. So held (June, 1877) that a civilian clerk employed in time of peace in the office of the chief quartermaster at San Francisco was manifestly not amenable, under this article or otherwise, to trial by court-martial for the embezzlement or misapplication of Government funds appropriated for the Quartermaster Department.(a) And remarked that if this official could be made liable to such juristion, all the male and female clerks employed in the War Department might upon the same principle be held thus amenable for offenses against the Government committed in connection with their duties. And so held in the case of a civilian clerk employed at Camp Robinson, Nebraska, charged with conspiring with contractors to defraud the United States, the post not being within the theater of any Indian war or hostilities pending at the period of the offense.(b) Ibid., par. 167.

Held (April, 1877) that superintendents of national cemeteries, being no part of the Army, but civilians (see section 4874, Revised Statutes), were clearly not amenable to military jurisdiction or trial under this article or otherwise.(c) Ibid., par. 168.

[1] It is a general principle, confirmed by this article, that military offenses are not territorial (see Manual for Courts-Martial, p. 14). So held that an officer who exhibited himself in an intoxicated condition at a public ball in Mexico, though not present in any military capacity, was amenable for his offense to the jurisdiction of a court-martial in Texas. Ibid., par. 169; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wh., 20.

[1] The term "crime" is here employed in a general sense, referring to offenses of a military character as well as to those of a civil character which are cognizable by court-martial.(a) An offense in violation of this article is only committed when an officer confined in "close arrest" to his quarters leaves the same without authority. A breach of a mere formal arrest or of any arrest not accompanied by confinement to quarters would be an offense not within this article, but under article 62. Ibid., par. 170.

Simply disobeying an order to proceed and report in arrest to a certain commander held not an offense chargeable under this article. Ibid., par. 171.

[2] Where an officer in close arrest was permitted by his commanding officer to leave temporarily his confinement, held that his delaying his return for a brief period beyond the time fixed therefor did not properly constitute an offense under this article. Ibid., par. 172.

Though any unauthorized leaving of his confinement by an officer in close arrest is, strictly, a violation of the article, it would seem in view of the severe mandatory punishment prescribed that an officer should not in general be brought to trial under the same unless his act was of a reckless or deliberately insubordinate character. Ibid., par. 173.

It is no defense to a charge of breach of arrest in violation of this article that the accused is innocent of the offense for which he was arrested.(b) It is a defense, however, that subsequently to the original confinement the accused has been put on duty or allowed to go on duty, provided that before the breach assigned he has not been duly rearrested and reconfined.(c) Ibid., 78, par. 5.

The requirement of this article that an offender "shall be dismissed" is held to be exclusive of any other punishment. A sentence of dismissal with forfeiture of pay is unauthorized and inoperative as to the forfeiture, and as to this should be disapproved. Ibid., par. 174. See 61st article. See also the title "Arrest and confinement" in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS. For a case arising under this article in which breach of arrest was charged see G. O., No. 198, A. G. O. of 1863.

[3] Soldiers held in military arrest, while they may be subjected to such restraint as may be necessary to prevent their escaping or committing violence, can not legally be subjected to any punishment. The imposition of punishment upon soldiers while thus detained has been on several occasions emphatically denounced by department commanders.(d) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 175.

The word "crimes" as used in this article is construed to mean serious military offenses. So that a soldier will not properly be "confined" where not charged with one of the more serious of the military offenses—in other words, where charged only with an offense of a minor character. Ibid., par. 176. See the title "Arrest and confinement" in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

[1] In the English case of Wolton v. Gavin (16 Ad. and El., 70) it was decided that "a commanding officer receiving a soldier charged with desertion by a noncommissioned officer, who delivered a written signed charge of the same, is justified under this article in detaining such soldier. He is bound to receive the prisoner under the article of war and he is not liable to an action for so doing. It makes no difference whether the crime be civil or military. The fact that a man is prima facie a soldier, and enlisted, is sufficient to bring him under the article of war. The duty of receiving arises eo instanti—as soon as he is presented.

If such imprisonment proves illegal, the committing officer becomes responsible, the duty of the officer commanding the guard being ministerial merely. See, in this connection, the case of McCall v. McDowell, 1 Abbott, 212.

[2] General Order 42 of 1901, fixing the maximum punishments, appoints different limits of punishment for willfully and for negligently allowing an escape as separate offenses. A charge for suffering an escape under this article should therefore indicate, in the specification, whether the act is alleged to be willful or negligent only. Ibid., 79, par. 1.

[3] Detaining soldiers in arrest for long and unreasonable periods, when it is practicable to bring them to trial, is arbitrary and oppressive, and in contravention both of the letter and spirit of this article. Whether the delay in any case is to be regarded as so far unreasonable as properly to subject the commander responsible therefor to military charges or a civil action must depend upon the circumstances of the situation and the exigencies of the service at the time. (a) Ibid., par. 177 See the title "Arrest and confinement," in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

whenever the exigencies of the service shall permit, within twelve months after such release from arrest.[1]

Who may appoint general courts-martial. May 29, 1830, v. 4, p. 417; July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 121. 72 Art. War.

ART. 72. Any general officer commanding an army, a territorial division, or a department, or colonel commanding a separate department, may appoint general courts-martial whenever necessary. But when any such commander is the accuser or prosecutor of any officer under his command, the court shall be appointed by the President, and its proceedings and sentence shall be sent directly to the Secretary of War, by whom they shall be laid before the President for his approval or orders in the case.[2] Act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 121).

[1] Though an officer, in whose case the provisions of this article in regard to service of charges and trial have not been complied with, is entitled to be released from arrest, he is not authorized to release himself therefrom. If he be not released in accordance with the article, he should apply for his discharge from arrest, through the proper channels to the authority by whose order the arrest was imposed, or other proper superior. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 178.

The term "within ten days thereafter" held to mean after his arrest. Ibid., par. 179.

The fact that cases of officers put in arrest "at remote military posts or stations" are excepted from the application of the article does not authorize an abuse of the power of arrest in these cases. And where, in such a case, an arrest, considering the facilities of communication with the department headquarters and other circumstances, was in fact unreasonably protracted without trial, held that the officer was entitled to be released from arrest upon a proper application submitted for the purpose. Ibid., par. 181.

[2] See the title "Constitution and composition of general courts-martial," in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS. See also Mullan v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 34.

Prior to the amendment of this article by the act of July 5, 1884, a colonel commanding a department was not authorized, as such, to convene a general court; otherwise, however, of a colonel assigned by the President to the command of a department according to his brevet rank of brigadier or major-general. Dig. Opin. J. A. G. 82, par. 4.

The objection that the convening commander was the "accuser" or "prosecutor" of the accused, being one going to the legal constitution of the court, may be raised before the court at any stage of its proceedings. (Or it may be taken to the reviewing officer with a view to his disapproving the proceedings, or may be made to the President, after the approval and execution of the sentence, with a view to having the same declared invalid, or to the obtaining of other appropriate relief.) Regularly, however, the objection, if known or believed to exist, should be taken at or before the arraignment. If the objection is not admitted by the prosecution to exist, the accused is entitled to prove it like any other issue. Ibid. 84, par. 8.

The provision of this article (and of article 73) that when the convening commander is "accuser or prosecutor" the court shall be convened by the President or "next higher commander," being expressly restricted to general courts, has, of course, no application to regimental or garrison courts. (But see Summary court.) The same principle, however, will properly be applied to proceedings before these courts if it can be done without serious embarrassment to the service. Ibid., par. 189.

A general court-martial, convened by the division commander (a major-general) duly acting as department commander in the absence of the regular department commander, is legally convened by a general officer commanding a department in the sense of this article. Ibid., par. 190.

The mere fact that a general court-martial is convened by a department commander does not make such commander an "accuser or prosecutor" in the sense of this article. (a) A department commander is not an "accuser or prosecutor" when, upon information of misconduct duly laid before him, he orders the acting judge-advocate of the department or the colonel commanding the regiment to proceed to bring the offender to trial, this being a part of his due and regular supervision and command. Ibid. 84, par. 11.

[3] Where, in the course of a trial, the number of the members of a general court-martial is reduced by reason of absence, challenge, or the relieving of members, the court may legally proceed with its business so long as five members, the minimum quorum, remain; otherwise where the number is thus reduced below five. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 201.

While a number of members less than five can not be organized as a court or proceed with a trial, they may perform such acts as are preliminary to the organization and action of the court. Less than five members may adjourn from day to day, and where five are present and one of them is challenged the remaining four may determine upon the sufficiency of the objection. Ibid., par. 202.

A court reduced to four members, and thereupon adjourning for an indefinite period, does not dissolve itself. In adjourning it should report the facts to the convening authority and await his orders. He may at any time complete it by the addition of a new member or members and order it to reassemble for business. Ibid., par 203.

Where a court, though reduced by the absence of members, operation of challenges, etc., to below five members, yet proceeds with and concludes the trial, its further proceedings, including its finding and sentence (if any), are unauthorized and inoperative. [1] See note 1, article 72, ante.

[2] Whether the trial of an officer by officers of an inferior rank can be avoided or not is a question not for the accused or the court, but for the officer convening the court; and his decision (as indicated by the detail itself as made in the convening order) upon this point, as upon that of the number of members to be detailed, is conclusive. An officer, therefore, can not successfully challenge a member because merely of being of a rank inferior to his own. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 210.

The statement sometimes added in orders convening courts-martials to the effect that "no officers other than those named can be detailed without injury to the service" is as superfluous and unnecessary for the purpose of excusing the detailing of officers junior to the accused as it is for accounting for the fact that less than the maximum number have been selected for the court. Ibid., 89, par. 2.

At the opening of a trial by court-martial it was objected by the accused that nine of the thirteen members as detailed were his inferiors in rank, and that the detailing of such inferiors could have been "avoided" without prejudice to the service. Held, that the objection was properly overruled by the court. Whether such a detail "can be avoided" is a question to be determined by the convening authority alone, and one upon which his determination is conclusive (a). Ibid., par. 211.

war in like cases; and you do further swear that you will not divulge[1] the sentence of the court until it shall be published by the proper authority, except to the judge-advocate; neither will you disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice,[2] in a due course of law. So help you God."[3] Act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 278).

[1] The only case which has been met with in which the members of a court-martial have been required to disclose their votes by the process of a civil court is that of In re Mackenzie, 1 Pa. Law J. R., 356, in which the members of a naval court-martial were compelled, against their objections, to state their votes as given upon the findings at a particular trial.

[2] In the present corresponding British article the words "or a court-martial" are added after the words "a court of justice."

[3] This article makes the administering to the court of the form of oath thereby prescribed an essential preliminary to its entering upon a trial (a). Until the oath is taken as specified, the court is not qualified "to try and determine." The arraignment of a prisoner and reception of his plea—which is the commencement of the trial—before the court is sworn is without legal effect. The article requires that the oath shall be taken not by the court as a whole, but by "each member." Where, therefore, all the members are sworn at the same time, the judge-advocate will preferably address each member by name, thus: "You, A B, C D, E F, etc., do swear," etc. A member added to the court, after the members originally detailed have been duly sworn, should be separately sworn by the judge-advocate in the full form prescribed by the article; otherwise he is not qualified to act as a member of the court. A member who prefers it may be affirmed instead of sworn. See section 1, Revised Statutes. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 225.

The members are sworn to try and determine the matter before them at the time of the administering of the oath. In a case, therefore, where, after the court had been sworn and the accused had been arraigned and had pleaded, an additional charge, setting forth a new and distinct offense, was introduced into the case, and the accused was tried and convicted upon the same, held that as to this charge the proceedings were fatally defective, the court not having been sworn to try and determine such charge (b). Ibid., par. 226.

It is a departure from the engagement expressed in the body of the oath—to try and determine according to evidence, and administer justice according to the Articles of War, etc.—for a court-martial to determine a case either upon personal knowledge of the facts possessed by the members and not put in evidence, or according to the private views of justice of the members independently of the provisions of the code (c). Ibid., 97, par. 3.

Where the vote of each member of the court upon one of several specifications upon which the accused was tried was stated in the record of trial, held that such statement was a clear violation of the oath of the court, though it did not affect the validity of the proceedings or sentence. A statement in the record of trial to the effect that all the members concurred in the finding or in the sentence, while it does not vitiate the proceedings or sentence, is a direct violation of the oath prescribed by this article. See sixty-second article. Ibid., par. 227.

The disclosing of the finding and sentence to a clerk by permitting him to remain with the court at the final deliberation and enter the judgment in the record is a violation of the oath and a grave irregularity, though one which does not affect the validity of the proceedings or sentence. Ibid., par. 229.

The words "a court of justice" are deemed to mean a civil or criminal court of the United States, or of a State, etc., and not to include a court-martial. A case can hardly be supposed in which it would become proper or desirable for a court-martial to inquire into the votes or opinions given in closed court by the members of another similar tribunal. Ibid., 98, par. 6.

[a] See, in this connection, G. O. 15, H. A., 1880, which, in directing that judge-advocates shall be detailed for regimental and garrison, as well as general, courts-martial, rescinds G. O. 49 of 1871, prescribing a special form of oath for the former courts, and thus provides for their taking the due and regular oath recited in article 84.

[1] Contempts, broadly considered, are of two kinds—direct and constructive. Contempts committed in the presence of the court, sitting judicially, or so near as to interfere with the orderly course of procedure, are direct contempts. Contempts committed, not in presence of the court, but which tend, by their operation, to interrupt, obstruct, embarrass, or prevent the due and orderly administration of justice, are constructive contempts. Indianapolis Water Co. v. The American Strawboard Co., 75 Fed. Rep., 972. Over the former, direct contempts courts-martial are endowed with jurisdiction by the terms of the eighty-sixth Article of War; in respect to the latter, constructive contempts, when committed by persons not subject to military jurisdiction, courts-martial are without jurisdiction.

The power of a court-martial to punish, under this article, being confined practically to acts done in its immediate presence,(a) such a court can have no authority to punish as for a contempt a neglect by an officer or soldier to attend as a witness in compliance with a summons.(b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 230.

A court-martial has none of the common-law power to punish for contempt vested in the ordinary courts of justice, but only such authority as is given it by this article. Thus, held that a court-martial would not be authorized to punish as for a contempt, under this article (or otherwise), a civilian witness duly summoned and appearing before it, but, when put on the stand, declining (without disorder) to testify. Ibid., par. 231. See also XVIII Opin. Atty. Gen., 278.

Where a contempt within the description of this article has been committed, and the court deems it proper that the offender shall be punished, the proper course is to suspend the regular business, and, after giving the party an opportunity to be heard, explain, etc.,(c) to proceed, if the explanation is insufficient, to impose a punishment, resuming thereupon the original proceedings. The action taken is properly summary, a formal trial not being called for. Close confinement in quarters or in the guardhouse during the trial of the pending case, or forfeiture of a reasonable amount of pay, has been the more usual punishment. Instead of proceeding against a military person for a contempt in the mode contemplated by this article, the alternative course may be pursued of bringing him to trial before a new court on a charge for a disorder under article 62.(d) Ibid., par. 233.

[a] It was held by the Secretary of War in the case of Lieutenant-Colonel Backenstos (G. O. 14, War Department, 1850) that a court-martial had, under this article, no power to punish its own members.

[b] As to the power of courts of inquiry to punish for contempt, see one hundred and fifteenth article and note.

and shall not receive a challenge to more than one member at a time.[1]

[1] This article authorizes the exercise of the right of challenge before all courts except field officers' courts and summary courts. These courts are not subject to be challenged, because, being composed of but one member, there is no authority provided which is competent to pass upon the validity of the challenge. Ibid., par. 234.

It is ordinarily a sufficient ground of challenge to a member that he is the author of the charges and is a material witness in the case. The mere fact that he is to be a witness is not, in general, to be held sufficient. Ibid., par. 235

The mere fact that a member signed or formally preferred the charges is not sufficient ground of objection, since he may have done so ministerially or by the order of a superior. But where a member, upon investigation or otherwise, has initiated or preferred the charges as accuser, or as prosecutor has caused them to be brought to trial, he is properly subject to challenge. Thus, that a member had originated and preferred the charge for a disobedience of his own order was held good cause of challenge. So in a case of a trial for an assault upon an officer, the fact that the officer upon whom the assault was committed, and who was the prosecuting witness, was a member of the court was held to constitute complete cause of challenge to him as member. Ibid., par. 236.

That a member is the regimental or company commander of the accused does not per se constitute sufficient ground of challenge. But such ground may exist where the commander has preferred the charges or where the relations between him and the accused have been such as to give rise to a presumption of prejudice. Ibid., par. 237.

Where a member, before the trial, has expressed an opinion, based upon a knowledge of the facts, that the accused would be convicted whichever way he might plead, held that he had clearly prejudged the case and that the court should have sustained an objection taken to him by the accused, although upon being challenged he declared that he was without predjudice. (a) Ibid., par. 238. In re Bird, 2 Sawyer, 33.

A member, on being challenged for prejudice, declared that he did not consider the accused (an officer) a gentleman, and would not associate with him, and that he had stated so; but he added at the same time that he was not prejudiced for or against him. Held, especially as one of the charges was "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," that the challenge was improperly overruled by the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G , par. 239.

It is not good ground of challenge to a member that he is junior in rank to the accused, nor is it sufficient ground that the member will gain a step or "file" in the line of promotion if the accused is dismissed. It is, however, a sufficient cause of challenge to a member that if the accused (an officer) be convicted and sentenced to be dismissed, the member will be forthwith entitled to promotion. Ibid., par. 240.

Held sufficient ground of challenge to a member of a court-martial that he had previously taken part in an investigation of the same case before a court of inquiry, though such court did not express a formal opinion. Ibid., par. 241.

Held good ground of challenge to a member of a court-martial in a case of alleged theft by a soldier that such member had been a member of a previous court of inquiry which had investigated the case and fixed the misappropriation of the property upon the accused. Ibid., par. 242.

Held that the members of a court-martial who had composed a previous court by which the same accused had been tried for the same act, though under a different charge, were all subject to be set aside on challenge. Ibid., par. 243.

It is not necessary (though usual and proper) for a member to withdraw from the court room on being challenged and pending the deliberation on the objection. Ibid., par. 244.

Courts should be liberal in passing upon challenges, but should not entertain an objection which is not specific, or allow one upon its mere assertion by the accused, without proof and in the absence of any admission on the part of the member. (b) A positive declaration by the challenged member to the effect that he has no preju-

O. 4, War Department, 1858, was simply a general objection to the member by the accused on account of "some unpleasant circumstances growing out of their official relations," no specific allegation of bias being made and the member himself expressly disclaiming any feeling of prejudice.

dice or interest in the case will, in general, in the absence of material evidence in support of the objection, justify the court in overruling it. Ibid., par. 245.

Where, before arraignment, the accused (an officer), without having personal knowledge of the existence of ground of challenge to a member, had credible hearsay information of its existence, held that he should properly have raised the objection before the members were sworn, and that the court was not in error in refusing to allow him to take it at a subsequent stage of the trial. Ibid., par. 246.

The fact that a sufficient cause of challenge exists against a member, but through ignorance of his rights, is not taken advantage of by the accused, or if asserted is improperly overruled by the court, can affect in no manner the validity in law of the proceedings or sentence, though it may sometimes properly furnish occasion for a disapproval of the proceedings, etc., or a remission in whole or in part of the sentence. (a) Ibid., par. 247.

At the trial of an officer in 1853, the accused challenged a member of the court "for bias, prejudice, and malice." The challenged member thereupon stated "that he had no prejudice or bias against the accused which could in the remotest degree interfere with his doing justice in the case," but, "being challenged, he requested to be relieved from sitting on the court," which the court refused, and overruled the challenge. The accused then requested that the member might be put on his voir dire in order that he might examine him as to the extent of any prejudice he might entertain, which application the court also refused. This refusal of the right of an accused person to place a challenged member on his voir dire, in order to ascertain whether the grounds of challenge advanced by him were or were not sufficient, was disapproved by the Secretary of War upon the ground that "an accused is now allowed in all cases, for the better security of an impartial trial, to show the mind of the juror by examining him before the court, and the only exception is where the cause of the challenge goes to the disgrace or discredit of the juror." G. O. No. 21, War Dept., of 1853.

The article imposes no limitation upon the exercise of the right of challenge other than that "more than one member shall not be challenged at a time." Thus while the panel, or the court as a whole, is not subject to challenge, yet all the members may be challenged provided they are challenged separately. The article contains no authority for challenging the judge-advocate. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 248.

In the case of an enlisted man tried in 1875, the judge-advocateof the court was the principal witness against the prisoner and was directly interested in his conviction. In this case it was remarked by the reviewing officer (the Secretary of War) that "it was not contemplated that a prisoner would be brought to trial before this court on charges which raised the question whether its judge-advocate had not himself been guilty of official misconduct. But such was the fact in this case. The judge-advocate had a personal interest in the conviction of the prisoner and was also the principal witness against him." Under such circumstances the officer should have applied to the proper authority to be relieved from duty as judge-advocate. The proceedings were disapproved. G. C. M. O. No. 41, War Dept., 1875; see also G. C. M.O. 66, 1875.

The court of itself can not excuse a member in the absence of a challenge. A member not challenged but considering himself disqualified can be relieved only by application to the convening authority. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par 249.

An accused challenged the entire court on the ground that the convening officer was "accuser." Held properly overruled; the array can not be challenged at military law. The article declares that "the court * * * shall not receive a challenge to more than one member at a time." Ibid., par. 250.

A court-martial can not relieve or "excuse" a member except upon a challenge duly interposed and sustained under this article. The fact that a member has been absent from the court for several days and has not heard the testimony meanwhile taken constitutes no legal ground for excusing him by the court. Ibid., par. 251.

An accused objected to a member on the ground that some time before he had had a disagreement with the member and thought that he "might be prejudiced." The member declared that he was conscious of no prejudice whatever, but that, on the

[a] See opinion of the Attorney-General of January 19, 1878 (XV Opins., 432), in which the opinion, expressed by the Judge-Advocate-General in the most recent of the cases upon which this paragraph is based—that the fact that one of the charges upon which the accused was convicted was preferred by a member of the court who also testified as a witness on the trial (but who, though clearly subject to objection, was not challenged by the accused) could not affect the validity of the sentence of dismissal after the same had been duly confirmed—is concurred in by the Attorney-General. And to a similar effect see Keyes v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 532.

In G. C. M. O. 88, Department of Dakota, 1878, the point is noticed that where a challenge interposed by the accused has been improperly disallowed a subsequent plea of guilty is not to be treated as a waiver of the advantage to which he may be entitled by reason of the improper ruling.

Prisoner standing mute.
89 Art. War.

ART. 89. When a prisoner, arraigned before a general court-martial, from obstinacy and deliberate design, stands mute, or answers foreign to the purpose, the court may proceed to trial and judgment as if the prisoner had pleaded not guilty.

Judge-advocate prosecutor and counsel for prisoner.
90 Art. War.

ART. 90. The judge-advocate, or some person deputed by him, or by the general or officer commanding the Army, detachment, or garrison, shall prosecute in the name of the United States, but when the prisoner has made his plea, he shall so far consider himself counsel for the prisoner as to object to any leading question to any of the witnesses, and to any question to the prisoner the answer to which might tend to criminate himself.

Judge-advocate to withdraw from closed sessions.
Sec. 2, July 27, 1892, v. 27, p. 278.

Whenever a court-martial shall sit in closed session the judge-advocate shall withdraw, and when his legal advice or his assistance in referring to recorded evidence is required it shall be obtained in open court. Section 2, act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 278).

Administration of oaths.
Sec. 4, July 27, 1892, v. 27, p. 278.

That judge-advocates of departments and of courts-martial, and the trial officers of summary courts, are hereby authorized to administer oaths for the purposes of the administration of military justice, and for other purposes of military administration. Section 4, act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 278).

Depositions.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 75, s. 27, v. 12, p. 736.
91 Art. War.

ART. 91. The depositions of witnesses residing beyond the limits of the State, Territory, or district in which any military court may be ordered to sit, if taken on reasonable notice to the opposite party and duly authenticated, may be read in evidence before such court in cases not capital.[1] contrary, his feelings toward the accused were friendly. Held that the court erred in sustaining the challenge. Ibid., par. 252.

The accused were Indian scouts, charged with mutiny. Some of the members of the court, though disclaiming any prejudice against the accused personally, were aware that they were present at the outbreak, and were fully apprised, from their own personal presence or knowledge of the circumstances, that the mutiny, which had involved homicide, constituted a most aggravated offense of the class. Held that as these members could scarcely avoid applying their impressions to the accused when shown to be connected with the disorder, they would fairly have been subject to objection as triers. Ibid., par. 253.

A mere general opinion in regard to the impropriety of acts such as those charged against the accused, unaccompanied by any opinion as to his guilt or innocence on the charges, is not a sufficient ground of objection under this article. Ibid., par. 254.

[1] A deposition can not be read in evidence in a capital case as in a case of a violation of article 21, or a case of a spy, or one of desertion in time of war; otherwise in a case of desertion in time of peace. Nor is the deposition admissible of a witness who resides in the State, etc., within which the court is held, except by consent. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 256.

In a case tried in 1875 the court refused to allow the accused time to confer with his counsel for the purpose of preparing cross-interrogatories to be propounded to witnesses whose depositions were to be taken at the instance of the prosecution. As the defense was not prejudiced by the error of the court, the findings were approved. The most ample opportunity should always be afforded the party on trial for such purpose. G. C. M. O. No. 26, War Dept., 1875.

Oath of witness. 92 Art. War.

ART. 92. All persons who give evidence before a court-martial shall be examined on oath, or affirmation, in the following form: "You swear (or affirm) that the evidence you shall give, in the case now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."[1]

Continuances. 93 Art. War.

ART. 93. A court-martial shall, for reasonable cause, grant a continuance to either party, for such time, and as often, as may appear to be just: Provided, That if the prisoner be in close confinement, the trial shall not be delayed for a period longer than sixty days.[2]

Order of voting. 95 Art. War.

ART. 95. Members of a court-martial, in giving their votes, shall begin with the youngest in commission.

Sentence of death. 96 Art. War.

ART. 96. No person shall be sentenced to suffer death except by the concurrence of two-thirds of the members of a general court-martial, and in the cases herein expressly mentioned.[3]

[1] This article prescribes a single specific form of oath to be taken by all witnesses. The Constitution, however (article 1 of amendment), has provided that Congress shall make no law prohibiting the free exercise of religion. Where, therefore, the prescribed form is not in accordance with the religious tenets of a witness, he should be permitted to be sworn according to the ceremonies of his own faith or as he may deem binding on his conscience.(a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 274, note 2.

The article does not prescribe by whom the oath shall be administered. By the custom of the service it is administered by the judge-advocate. (And see now the provision of the act of July 27, 1892, sec. 4.) When the judge-advocate himself takes the witness stand, he is properly sworn by the president of the court. Ibid., par. 274.

A witness who has once been sworn and has testified is not required to be resworn on being subsequently recalled to the stand by either party. The reswearing, however, of such a witness will not affect the legal validity of the proceedings or sentence. Ibid., par. 274, note 2.

[2] In making an application for a continuance or postponement under this article, on account of the absence of a witness, the form of affidavit prescribed in paragraph 887 of the Army Regulations should in general be substantially observed. But while the court may refuse the application if this regulation be not followed, it may, in its discretion, refrain from insisting that the same be strictly complied with, and accept a modified form.(b) It should, however, in all cases require that the desired evidence appear or be shown to be material, and not merely cumulative,(c) and that to await its production will not delay the trial for an unreasonable period. It should also, in general, before granting the continuance, be assured that the absence of the witness is not owing to any neglect on the part of the applicant. This feature, however, will not be so much insisted upon in military as in civil cases.(d) Ibid., 108, par. 1. See, also, the title "Continuances" in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

Article 94 was repealed by the act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 951).

[3] Though it has sometimes been viewed otherwise, it is deemed quite clear upon the terms of the present article that it is not necessary to the legality of a death sentence that two-thirds of the court should have concurred in the finding as well as the sentence.(e) Further, in the absence of any requirement to that effect in the Penitentiaries. July 16, 1862, c. 190, ss. 1, 4, v. 12, p. 589. 97 Art. War.

ART. 97. No person in the military service shall, under the sentence of a court-martial, be punished by confinement in a penitentiary, unless the offense of which he may be convicted would, by some statute of the United States, or by some statute of the State, Territory, or District in which such offense may be committed, or by the common law, as the same exists in such State, Territory, or District, subject such convict to such punishment.[1] article, it is not deemed essential to the validity of the sentence that the record should state the fact that two-thirds of the court concurred therein. The practice, however, has been to add such a statement.(a) Ibid., 112, par. 1.

A sentence of death imposed by a court-martial, upon a conviction of several distinct offenses, will be authorized and legal if any one of such offenses is made capitally punishable by the Articles of War, although the other offenses may not be so punishable. Ibid., par. 285.

A court-martial, in imposing a death sentence, should not designate a time or place for its execution, such a designation not being within its province, but pertaining to that of the reviewing authority. If it does so designate, this part of the sentence may be disregarded and a different time or place fixed by the commanding general. Ibid., par. 286.

Where a death sentence imposed by a court-martial has been directed by the proper authority to be executed on a particular day, and this day, owing to some exigency of the service, has gone by without the sentence being executed, it is competent for the same authority, or his proper superior, to name another day for the purpose, the time of its execution being an immaterial element of this punishment.(b) Ibid., par. 288.

[1] This article, by necessary implication, probibits the imposition of confinement in a penitentiary as a punishment for offenses of a purely or exclusively military character—such as desertion, for example.(c) Ibid., par. 288.

A sentence of penitentiary confinement in a case of a purely military offense is wholly unauthorized and should be disapproved. Effect can not be given to such a sentence by commuting it to confinement in a military prison or to some other punishment which would be legal for such offense. Nor in a case of such an offense can a severer penalty, as death, be commuted to confinement in a penitentiary. Ibid., par. 289.

Nor can penitentiary confinement be legalized as a punishment for purely military offenses by designating a penitentiary as a "military prison" and ordering the confinement there of soldiers sentenced to imprisonment on conviction of such offenses. Ibid., par. 290.

An offense charged as "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," which, however, is in fact a larceny, (d) embezzlement, violent crime, or other offense made punishable with penitentiary confinement by the law of the State, etc., may legally be visited with this punishment. Ibid., par. 291.

The term "penitentiary" as employed in this article has reference to civil prisons only, as the penitentiary of the United States or District of Columbia at Washington,

[a] In the case of an enlisted man, tried by a general court-martial for a violation of the twenty-first Article of War, the record failed to show affirmatively that two-thirds of the members concurred in the imposition of the death sentence; the sentence was therefore disapproved by the President. G. O. 172, A. G. O., 1862. See, also, G. O. 18, A. G. O., 1863.

[b] It was held by the Supreme Court in Coleman v. Tennessee (7 Otto, 519, 520) that a soldier who had been convicted of murder and sentenced to death by a general court-martial in May, 1865, but the execution of whose sentence had been meanwhile deferred, by reason of his escape and the pendency of civil proceedings in his case, might at the date of the ruling (October term, 1878) "be delivered up to the military authorities of the United States, to be dealt with as required by law."

More recently (May, 1879; XVI Opins., 349) it has been held in this case by the Attorney-General that the death sentence might legally be executed notwithstanding the fact that the soldier had meanwhile been discharged from the service, such discharge, while formally separating the party from the Army, being viewed as not affecting his legal status as a military convict. But, in view of all the circumstances of the case, it was recommended that the sentence be commuted to imprisonment for life or a term of years.

[d] In a case of larceny the court should inform itself as to whether the value of the property stolen be not too small to permit a penitentiary confinement for the offense under the local law. See G. O. 44, Eighth Army Corps, 1862; G. C. M. O. 63, Department of the Platte, 1872.

ART. 98. No person in the military service shall be punished by flogging, or by branding, marking, or tattooing on the body.

Flogging. Aug. 5, 1861, c. 54, s. 3, v. 12, p. 317; June 6, 1872, c. 316, s. 2, v. 17, p. 261. 98 Art. War.

the public prisons or penitentiaries of the different States, and the "penitentiaries erected by the United States" (see section 1892, Revised Statutes) in most of the Territories. The military prison at Leavenworth is not a penitentiary in the sense of the article. The term "State (or State's) prison" in a sentence is equivalent to penitentiary. Ibid., par. 292.

A military prisoner duly sentenced or committed to a penitentiary becomes subject to the government and rules of the institution. Ibid., par. 293.

Where a soldier is sentenced to be confined in a penitentiary, the proper reviewing authority may legally designate for the execution of the punishment any State or Territorial penitentiary within his command. Where there is no such penitentiary available for the purpose, or desirable to be resorted to, he will properly submit the case to the Secretary of War for the designation of a proper penitentiary. Ibid., 114, par. 7

A court-martial, in imposing by its sentence the punishment of confinement in a penitentiary, is not required to follow the statute of the United States or of the State, etc., as to the term of the confinement. It may adjudge, at its discretion, a less or a greater term than that affixed by such statute to the particular offense. At the same time the court will often do well to consult the statute, as indicating a reasonable measure of punishment for the offense. Ibid., par. 294.

Where a court-martial specifically sentences an accused to confinement in a "military prison," he can not legally be committed to a penitentiary, although such form of imprisonment would be authorized by the character of his offense. But where a sentence of confinement is expressed in general terms, as where it directs that the accused shall be confined "in such place or prison as the proper authority may order," or in terms to such effect, held that the same may, under this article, legally be executed by the commitment of the party to a penitentiary, to be designated by the reviewing officer or Secretary of War, provided, of course, the offense is of such a nature as to warrant this form of punishment. Ibid., par. 295.

Held that penitentiary confinement could not legally be adjudged upon a conviction of a violation of the twenty-first article, alleged in the specification to have consisted in the lifting up of a weapon (a pistol) against a commanding officer and discharging it at him with intent to kill. By charging the offense under this article the Government elected to treat it as a purely military offense, subject only to a military punishment. So, upon a conviction of joining in a mutiny, in violation of article 22, held that a sentence of confinement in a penitentiary would not be legal although the mutiny involved a homicide, set forth in the specification as an incidental aggravating circumstance. To have warranted such a punishment in either of these cases the Government should have treated the act as a "crime," and charged and brought it to trial as such under article 62. Ibid., par. 296.

Where the act is charged as a crime under article 62, and charge and specification taken together show an offense punishable with confinement in a penitentiary by the law of the locus of the crime, the sentence may legally adjudge such a punishment. So held in a case where charge and specification together made out an allegation of perjury under section 5392, Revised Statutes. Ibid., par. 297.

"Obtaining money under false pretenses" is punishable by confinement in a penitentiary by the laws of Arizona. A sentence of court-martial imposing this punishment, on conviction of an offense of this description committed in this Territory, charged as a crime under article 62, held authorized by article 97. Ibid., par. 298.

A conviction of a larceny of property of such slight value as not to authorize this punishment under the local law would not warrant a sentence of confinement in a penitentiary. In a case of larceny the court should inform itself as to whether the value of the property stolen be not too small to permit of penitentiary confinement for the offense under the law of the State, etc. (a) Ibid., 115, par. 13.

A punishment of confinement in a penitentiary, where legal, may be mitigated to confinement in a military prison or at a military post. Ibid., par. 299.

A discharged soldier, serving a sentence of confinement in a State or Territorial penitentiary, still remains under military control, at least so far as that his sentence may, by competent military authority, or by the President, be remitted, or may be mitigated—as, for example, to confinement in a military prison or at a military post. Ibid., par. 300.

Discharge and dismissal of officers.
99 Art. War.
July 13, 1866, c. 176, s. 5, v. 14, p. 92.

ART. 99. No officer shall be discharged or dismissed from the service, except by order of the President, or by sentence of a general court-martial; and in time of peace no officer shall be dismissed, except in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial, or in mitigation thereof.[1]

[1] Dismissal by Executive order is quite distinct from dismissal by sentence. The latter is a punishment; the former is removal from office. (a) The power to dismiss, which, as being an incident to the power to appoint public officers, had been regarded since 1789 as vested in the President by the Constitution, (b) was for the first time in 1866 (by the act of July 13 of that year, reenacted in the second clause of the present ninety-ninth article of war and in section 1229, Revised Statutes), expressly divested by Congress in so far as respects its exercise in time of peace. (c) By the statute law it is now authorized only in time of war. During the late war it was exercised in a great number of cases, sometimes for the purpose of summarily ridding the service of unworthy officers, sometimes in the form of a discharge or muster-out of officers whose services were no longer required. The distinction between this species of dismissal and dismissal by sentence is illustrated by the fact that the former has, with the sanction of legal authority, been repeatedly ordered in cases where a court-martial has previously acquitted the officer of the very offenses on account of which the summary action has been resorted to. (d) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1203.

The Executive, in summarily dismissing an officer, can not at the same time deprive him of pay due. Nor can the right of an officer to his pay, for any period prior to a summary dismissal ordered in his case, be divested by dating back of the order of dismissal. Such an order can not be made to relate back so as to affect the status or rights of the officer as they existed before the date of the taking effect of the dismissal. Ibid., par. 1213.

A summary dismissal "by order of the Secretary of War" is in law the act of the President. (e) Ibid., par. 1205.

A department or army commander can have, of course, no authority to summarily dismiss or discharge an officer from the military service. But where, in a case of a regular officer, this authority was in fact exercised, and the President, treating his office as vacant, proceeded to fill the vacancy by a new appointment, held that he had made the dismissal his own act and legalized the same. (f) So where (in 1863) an officer of volunteers was dismissed by the order of an army commander, which was never ratified in terms by the President, but a successor, appointed to the vacancy by the governor of the State, was accepted and mustered in by the United States, held (in 1880) that the dismissal was to be regarded as having been substantially ratified and legalized. So an unauthorized dismissal, by order of a regular officer, may be in effect made operative by a subsequent appointment and confirmation of a successor, as in Blake's case. Ibid., par. 1206.

A summary dismissal of an officer does not properly take effect until the order of dismissal or an official copy of the same is delivered to him, or he is otherwise officially notified of the fact of the dismissal. Ibid., par. 1204.

Held that it could not affect the operation of an order summarily dismissing an officer as "second lieutenant" that, before its being communicated to him by being promulgated to the regiment, he had become by promotion a first lieutenant. Ibid., par. 1211.

A dismissal of an officer by Executive order does not operate to disqualify him for reappointment to military office, or for appointment to civil office under the United States. Ibid., par. 1212.

There can be no revocation of a duly executed order of dismissal, however unmerited or injudicious the original act may be deemed to have been. For, distinct as dismissal by order is, in its nature, from dismissal by sentence (see section 1, ante), the effect of the proceeding in divesting the office is the same in each case. An officer dismissed by an order, though his dismissal may have involved no disgrace, is assimilated to an officer dismissed by sentence in so far that he is completely relegated to a civil status, having in law no nearer or other relation to the military service than has any civilian who has never been in the Army. Thus an order assuming to revoke a legal order of dismissal is as unauthorized as it is ineffectual. The original dismissal is an act done which can not be undone, and the order, which is the evidence of it, is therefore incapable of revocation or recall.(a) Nor can that be effected indirectly which can not legally be done directly. An officer dismissed by Executive order can not be relieved by being allowed to resign or be retired, or by being granted an honorable discharge. For, in order to be discharged, etc., from the Army, he must first be in the Army, and there is but one mode by which an officer once legally separated from the Army can be put into it, viz, by a new appointment according to the Constitution.(b) Ibid., par. 1214.

That a summary dismissal is not revocable by an Executive order is established law. Where an officer duly summarily dismissed in July, 1863, and subsequently restored by an order assuming to revoke the order of dismissal, procured to be passed by Congress in 1890 an act recognizing his restoration as legal, which, however, was vetoed by the President, held that his status was that of a person who had been illegally in the military service since the date of the order of so-called revocation. Ibid., par. 1215.

Where, by the direction of the President, an order was issued canceling the muster-in of a volunteer officer on account of facts indicating that he was not a fit person to hold a commission, held that this was a legal exercise of the authority of summary dismissal for cause vested in the President by the act of July 17, 1862. Ibid., par. 1210.

The President had not the same power of dismissal in the case of a volunteer officer as he has in that of a regular officer. This for the reason that the tenure of office of the former is for a fixed term and for a limited time only; the power to dismiss is thus, in his case, not an incident of the appointing power.(c) But the President was invested with a special power of dismissal of volunteer officers by the act of Congress of July 17, 1862. Ibid., par. 1210.

Held that the ruling in Blake's case (103 U. S. 231) was applicable, and that the office of an army officer might legally be vacated by the appointment and commission of a successor, although between the office of the original officer and that of the successor there may have intervened a tenure by a third officer. Ibid., par. 1207.

Thus (1) Captain A was dismissed from his office without legal authority; (2) Captain B, an unassigned officer, was assigned to the captaincy of A, and held it till his own resignation, one year and three months later; (3) Lieutenant C was then promoted and appointed to the office and his appointment was confirmed. Held that Lieutenant C was the legal incumbent of the office. Ibid., par. 1207.

Held that the ruling of the Supreme Court in the case of Blake was not applicable to volunteer officers of State organizations, and that a governor of a State, who had duly appointed a certain volunteer officer in a regiment, was not empowered to dismiss him by simply appointing to the same office, commissioning, and causing to be mustered into the United States service another person. Ibid., par. 1208.

Held that it was quite evidently the intention of Congress in the act of July 15, 1870, section 12, that the commission held by the officers who remained unassigned on January 1, 1871, should cease on that day. No action on the part of a mustering officer was required to carry the law into effect, as is shown by G. O. 1, of January 2, 1871, in which the separation from the service on January 1 of the unassigned officers was formerly announced. Ibid., par. 1217.

Suspension of officer's pay.
101 Art. War.

ART. 101. When a court-martial suspends an officer from command,[1] it may also suspend his pay and emoluments for the same time, according to the nature of his offense.[2] as referring mainly to the offenses made punishable by articles 42 and 60. With these, however, may be regarded as included all offenses in which fraud or cowardice is necessarily involved, though the same be not expressed in terms in the charge or specifications. Ibid., par. 301. See also In re Carter, 97 Fed. Rep., 496.

Though the injunction of the article as to the direction to be added in the sentence should of course regularly be complied with, a failure so to comply will not affect the validity of the punishment of dismissal adjudged by the sentence.(a) The declaration of the article that after the publication "it shall be scandalous for an officer to associate with" the dismissed officer, though it has in a few cases(b) been incorporated in the sentence, is not intended to be, and should not be, so expressed by the court. Ibid., par. 302.

[1] The punishment of suspension, as imposed by sentence, is usually in the form of a suspension from rank, or from command, for a stated term, sometimes accompanied by a suspension from pay for the same period. Suspension from rank includes suspension from command. Ibid., par. 2408.

A suspension from rank does not affect the right of the officer to his office. He retains the same as before, and, as an officer, remains subject as before to military control as well as to the jurisdiction of a court-martial for any military offense committed pending the term of suspension.(c) Ibid., par. 2409.

The effect of a suspension from rank (besides detaching the officer from the performance of the duties incident to his rank) is to deprive him of any right of promotion to a vacancy in a higher grade, occurring pending the term of suspension, and which he would have been entitled to receive by virtue of seniority had he not been suspended, such right accruing to the officer next in rank. But no such loss of promotion is incident to a mere suspension from command. Ibid., par. 2410.

Suspension from rank does not, however, deprive the officer of the right to rise in files in his grade—upon the promotion, for example, of the senior officer of such grade. The number of an officer in the list of his grade is not an incident of his rank, but of his appointment to office as conferred and dated, and, as we have seen, suspension does not affect the office. Moreover, loss of files is a continuing punishment, and if held to be involved in suspension from rank, the result would be that, for an indefinite period after the term of suspension had expired, the officer would remain under punishment, the sentence imposed by the court being thus added to in execution, contrary to a well-known principle of military law. Ibid., par. 2411.

It is further the effect of a suspension from rank that the officer loses for the time the minor rights and privileges of priority and precedence annexed to rank or command. Among these is the right to select quarters relatively to other officers. And where quarters are to be selected by several officers, one of whom is under sentence of suspension from rank, the suspended officer necessarily has the last choice. Or rather he has no choice, but quarters are assigned him by the commander; for, being still an officer of the Army, though without rank, he is entitled to some quarters. But advised that an officer sentenced to be suspended from rank could not, because of such suspension alone, be deprived of quarters previously duly selected, and occupied at the time of the suspension, such a sentence not affecting a right previously accrued and vested. Ibid., par. 2412.

Suspension from rank does not involve a status of confinement or arrest. In sentencing an officer to be suspended from rank, it is, indeed, not unusual for the court to require that he be confined during the term of suspension to his proper station, or that of his regiment, etc., i. e., that the sentence be executed there. Where this is not done, while the suspended officer is not entitled to a leave of absence, it can not affect the execution of his sentence to grant him one, and leaves of absence are not infrequently granted under such circumstances. Ibid., par. 2414.

Suspension from rank or command does not involve a loss or authorize a stoppage of pay for the period of suspension. (d) Pay can not be forfeited by implication. Unless, therefore, the sentence imposes a suspension from rank (or command) "and pay," or in terms to that effect, the suspended officer remains as much entitled to his pay as if he had not been suspended at all, and to require him to forfeit any pay would be adding to the punishment and illegal. Ibid., par. 2415.

[2] Where, however, the suspension is in terms extended by the sentence to pay, the pay is forfeited absolutely, not merely withheld. And all the pay is forfeited, unless otherwise expressly indicated in the sentence. The forfeiture imposed by a sentence of suspension from rank (or command) and pay for a designated term is a forfeiture of the pay of that specific term, the suspension of the rank and that of the pay being coincident. Under such a sentence the officer can not legally be deprived of pay due for a period prior to the suspension. Where an officer was sentenced to suspension from rank and pay for six months, held that his entire pay for those months was absolutely forfeited, notwithstanding that the pay of officers of his grade was increased by statute pending the term. Ibid., par. 2417.

A sentence of suspension from rank and pay does not affect the right of the officer to the allowances which are no part of his pay, (a) as the allowance for rent of quarters, as also the allowance for fuel, or rather right to purchase fuel at reduced rate. Ibid., par. 2418.

The status of an officer under suspension is the same whether such suspension has been imposed directly by sentence or by way of commutation for a more severe punishment. Thus, where a sentence of dismissal was commuted to suspension from rank or half pay for one year, held that the officer, while forfeiting the rights and privileges of rank and command during such term, was yet amenable to trial by court-martial for a military offense committed pending the same. Ibid., par. 2419.

Where an officer, when under a sentence of suspension, is ordered by the commander who approved the sentence, or some higher competent authority, to resume his command or the peformance of his regular military duty, such order will, in general, operate as a constructive remission of the punishment and thus terminate the suspension. (b) Ibid., par. 2420.

A sentence, "to be suspended from the Military Academy," in a case of a cadet, practically severs him from the military service as a cadet during the term of the suspension. It is usually added in such a sentence that at the end of such term the party is to join the next lower class. Ibid., par. 2416.

Like dismissal, suspension takes effect upon and from notice of the approval of the sentence officially communicated to the officer, either by the promulgation of the same at his station, or, where he is absent therefrom by authority, by the delivery to him of a copy of the order of approval or other form of official personal notification of the fact of the approval. Ibid., par. 2423.

Suspension, as a punishment for a noncommissioned officer, is not authorized in terms in article 101, nor is it contemplated in the Army Regulations. It has been adjudged in but rare cases, (c) and can not be regarded as sanctioned by principle or usage. Ibid., 733, par 15.

Suspension not divesting the officer of his office or commission, but simply holding in abeyance the rights and functions attached to his rank or command, he properly reverts, when the term of the punishment is completed, to his former rank and the command attached thereto, and continues to hold and exercise the same as before his arrest of trial. Ibid., 733, par 16.

Under existing usage (1892) an officer suspended by sentence from rank and command is deemed entitled to retain his quarters. But such rule may, in some cases, work a considerable inconvenience as well as prejudice to discipline, as where, for example, the suspended officer is a post commander, and continues, pending the term of his suspension, and while another officer has succeeded him as commander, to occupy the proper commanding officer's quarters. An army regulation prescribing that an officer in such a status shall not be entitled to retain or to select quarters by virtue of rank, but shall have assigned him any quarters that are available at his late station or elsewhere, advised as desirable to be adopted. Ibid., par 2413.

Under the ruling of the Secretary of War, as published in circular No. 3 (A. G. O.), 1888, an officer under suspension, but not required by his sentence to be "confined to the limits of his post," is not entitled to forage for his horse or horses during the term of his suspension. Ibid., par. 2424.

[1] The Constitution (Article V of the amendments) declares that "no person shall be subjected, for the same offense, to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb." The United States courts, in treating the term "put in jeopardy" as meaning practically tried, hold that the "jeopardy" indicated "can be interpreted to mean nothing short of the acquittal or conviction of the prisoner and the judgment of the court thereon."(d) So, held that the term "tried," employed in this article, meant duly Limitation of time of prosecution. 103 Art. War.

ART. 103. No person shall be liable to be tried and punished by a general court-martial for any offense which appears to have been committed more than two years before the issuing of the order for such trial, unless, by prosecuted, before a court-martial, to a final conviction or acquittal; and, therefore, that an officer or soldier, after having been duly convicted or acquitted by such a court, could not be subjected to a second military trial for the same offense except by and upon his own waiver and consent. For, that the accused may waive objection to a second trial was held by Attorney-General Wirt in 1818, (a) and has since been regarded as settled law. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 303.

Where an officer or soldier has been duly acquitted or convicted of a specific offense he can not, against his consent, be brought to trial for a minor offense included therein, and an acquittal or conviction of which was necessarily involved in the finding upon the original charge. Thus, a party convicted or acquitted of a desertion can not afterwards be brought to trial for an absence without leave committed in and by the same act. Ibid., par. 304.

Held that there was no "second" trial, in the sense of the article, in the following cases, viz: Where the party, after being arraigned or tried before a court which was illegally constituted or composed, or was without jurisdiction, was again brought to trial before a competent tribunal; where the accused, having been arraigned upon and having pleaded to certain charges, was rearraigned upon a new set of charges substituted for the others, which were withdrawn; where one of several distinct charges upon which the accused had been arraigned was withdrawn pending the trial, and the accused, after a trial and finding by the court upon the other charges, was brought to trial anew upon the charge thus withdrawn; where, after proceedings commenced, but discontinued without a finding, the accused was brought to trial anew upon the same charge; where, after having been acquitted or convicted upon a certain charge which did not in fact state the real offense committed, the accused was brought to trial for the same act, but upon a charge setting forth the true offense; where the accused was brought to trial after having had his case fully investigated by a different court, which, however, failed to agree in a finding and was consequently dissolved; (b) where the first court was dissolved because reduced below five members by the casualties of the service pending the trial; where, for any cause, there was a "mistrial," or the trial first entered upon was terminated, or the court dissolved, at any stage of the proceedings before a final acquittal or conviction. Ibid., par. 305.

Where an officer or soldier, having been acquitted or convicted of a criminal offense by a civil court, is brought to trial by a court-martial for a military offense involved in his criminal act, he can not plead "a former trial," in the sense of this article. So, where the trial for the military offense has preceded, he can not plead autrefois acquit or convict to an indictment for the civil crime committed in and by the same act. (c) Ibid., par. 306.

Where the accused has been once duly convicted or acquitted, he has been "tried" in the sense of the article, and can not be tried again against his will, though no action whatever be taken upon the proceedings by the reviewing authority, or though the proceedings, findings (and sentence, if any), be wholly disapproved by him. (d) It is immaterial whether the former conviction or acquittal is approved or disapproved. Ibid., par. 307.

That an accused has been, in the opinion of the reviewing authority, inadequately sentenced, either by a general or an inferior court, can not except his case from the application of this article; though insufficiently punished, he can not be tried again for the same offense. Ibid., par. 308.

Where an officer, who had killed a superior officer in an altercation at a military post, was brought to trial before a civil court on a charge of murder and acquitted, and was subsequently arraigned before a court-martial for the offense against military discipline involved in his criminal act, held that a plea of former trial interposed by him was properly overruled by the court. Ibid., par. 309.

A soldier was convicted of "manslaughter," but the findings and sentence were disapproved. He was then brought to trial on a charge of mutiny, as committed on the occasion of the homicide, the latter being alluded to in the specification as an incidental circumstance of aggravation, and was found guilty and sentenced. Held that the accused was not, in the sense of this article, "tried a second time for the Limitation in desertion, etc.

No person shall be tried or punished by a court-martial for desertion in time of peace and not in the face of an

same offense," the mutiny not consisting in the act of homicide, but constituting a distinct offense. Ibid., par. 310.

There can not, in view of this article, be a second trial where the offense is really the same, though it may be charged under a different description and under a different article of war. Thus, where the Government elects to try a soldier under the thirty-second article for "absence without leave," or under the forty-second for "lying out of quarters," and the testimony introduced develops the fact that the offense was desertion, the accused, after an acquittal or conviction, can not legally be brought a second time to trial for the same absence charged as a desertion. Ibid., par., 311.

[1] The prohibition of the article relates only to prosecutions before general courts-martial; it does not apply to trials before inferior courts. So courts of inquiry may be convened without regard to the period which has elapsed since the dates of the act or acts to be investigated. Nor does the limitation apply to the hearing of complaints by regimental courts under article 30. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 318; VI Opin. Att. Gen., 239.

In view of this article, it is the duty of the Government to prosecute an offender within a reasonable time after the commission of the offense. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 319.

It has been held, under the original article, that an officer or soldier could not be legally arrested, with a view to trial, where more than two years (in which he was amenable to justice) had elapsed since his offense. Ibid., 123, par. 7.

The limitation is properly matter of defense to be specially pleaded and proved. (a) By pleading guilty the accused is assumed to waive the right to plead the limitation by a special plea in bar. But, under a plea of not guilty, the limitation may be taken advantage of by evidence showing that it has taken effect. Ibid., par. 320.

By the absence referred to in the original article, in the term "unless by reason of having absented himself," is believed to be intended, not necessarily an absence from the United States, but an absence by reason of a "fleeing from justice," analogous to that specified in section 1045, Revised Statutes, which has been held to mean leaving one's home, residence, or known abode within the district, or concealing one's self therein, with intent to avoid detection or punishment for the offense against the United States. (b) Thus held that, in a case other than desertion, it was not essential or the prosecution to be prepared to prove that the accused had been beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the United States in order to save the case from the operation of the limitation. Ibid., par. 321.

A court-martial, in a case of an offense other than desertion, sustained a plea of the statute of limitations in bar of trial for the reason that the judge-advocate could produce no evidence to show that the accused was not within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States during his absence. Held that such showing was not necessary, and that it was sufficient that the absence should be any unauthorized absence from the military service whereby the absentee evades and for the time escapes trial. This construction of the term "absented himself" in the article corresponds to that placed on the words "fleeing from justice," as used in the statutes of the United States to designate those whom the statutes of limitation for the prosecution of crimes do not protect. Ibid., par. 322.

In the case of an enlisted man charged with desertion, the act of desertion having been committed more than ten years prior to the reference of the charges for trial, the accused pleaded the statute of limitations in bar of trial. The court declined to entertain the plea, and, regarding the statement of the accused as an instance of answering "foreign to the purpose," proceeded with the trial as if a plea of not guilty had been entered. As no action was taken by the court upon the plea of the accused, and no testimony taken at the trial with a view to establish his identity, the proceedings, finding, and sentence were disapproved by the Secretary of War. [2] For instances in which the proceedings in important cases were disapproved by the President on account of their not having been reviewed by the officer ordering the court, see G. O. 55, A. G. O., 1863; ibid., 101, 1863; ibid., 168, 1863, and 180, 1863.

In view of the provisions of the one hundred and sixth and this article, held that when in time of war a department commander is the reviewing authority, no confirmation of a sentence of dismissal by higher authority is necessary, but when a division or separate brigade commander is the reviewing authority, such sentence must be confirmed by the general commanding the army in the field to which the division or brigade belongs. And in the latter case, if the division or brigade does not belong to a separate army in the field, the commanding general of the Army of the United States would be the proper confirming authority, within the meaning of this article. [1] See the title "The Reviewing Authority" in the chapter entitled MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

[2] The One hundred and tenth Article of War, originally enacted as section 7 of the act of July 27, 1862 (12 Stat. L., 598), and as amended by the act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 278), was repealed by the act of June 18, 1898, which substituted the new summary court for the old summary court, having jurisdiction for the trial of enlisted men for minor offenses committed in time of peace, and for the field officers' court, having similar jurisdiction in time of war.

Where the reviewing officer deems that the proceedings of the court are in any material particular erroneous or ill advised, his proper course in general will be to reconvene the court for the purpose of having the defect corrected, at the same time furnishing it with the grounds of his opinion. Thus, if he regards the sentence inadequate, he should, in reassembling the court for a revision of the same, state the reasons why he considers it to be disproportionate to the amount of criminality involved in the offense. But although he can not compel the court to adopt his views in regard to the supposed defect, he may, in a proper case, express his formal disapprobation of their neglect to do so. Thus where a court-martial, on being reconvened, with a view of giving it an opportunity to modify a sentence manifestly too lenient for the offense found, decided to adhere to the sentence as adjudged, and, on being again reassembled to consider further grounds presented by the reviewing commander for the infliction of a severer penalty, again declined to increase the punishment, held that it was within the authority of the reviewing officer, and would be no more than proper and dignified for him, in taking final action upon the case, to reflect upon the refusal of the court as ill judged and as having the effect to impair the discipline and prejudice the interest of the military service. Ibid., par. 2231.

[3] An officer suspending the execution of a sentence for the action of the President under this article should first formally approve the same. Simply to forward the proceedings, stating that the sentence has been suspended, is incomplete and irregular. If the commander disapproves the sentence, he should not, of course, suspend and trasmit under this article, since there remains nothing for the President to act upon. Ibid., par. 339.

Where a case is submitted to the President for his action under this article, he may approve or disapprove the sentence in whole or in part, and, if approving, may exercise the power of remission or mitigation. Ibid., par. 340.

[2] This article, in connection with the two preceding articles, provides for the securing of the effects of deceased officers and soldiers, making inventory of the same, and accounting for them to the proper legal representative, etc. These articles have special reference to cases of deaths of military persons while in active service in the field or at remote military posts, and their provisions apply only to such effects as are left by the deceased "in camp or quarters." See articles 125 and 126. An attempt by the commander, etc., to secure effects left elsewhere would not be within the authority here given and might subject the officer to the liability of an administrator; such a proceeding would not therefore be advisable. (a) Upon accounting to the duly qualified legal representative, as directed in the article, the responsibility of the officer is discharged, and it remains for the representative to dispose of the property according to the law applicable to the case. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 373.

A military employee of the United States service having died in the service, his remains at the request of his relatives, were sent to them on a Mississippi steamboat. Wages being due to the employee at the time of his death, the disbursing officer paid out of these the charges of the transportation and turned over the balance to the man's heirs. Held, in view of the tenor and effect of this article, that the disposition of the funds in this case was erroneous, and that the full wages due (without deduction) should have been accounted for to the "legal representatives" of the deceased. ART. III. The persons designated in the preceding article may, even after occupation by the enemy, continue to fulfill their duties in the hospital or ambulance which they serve, or may withdraw in order to rejoin the corps to which they belong.

Under such circumstances, when these persons shall cease from their functions, they shall be delivered by the occupying army to the outposts of the enemy.

Employees in hospitals to take away private property only.

ART. IV. As the equipment of military hospitals remains subject to the laws of war, persons attached to such hospitals can not, in withdrawing, carry away any ARTICLE I. Les ambulances et les hôpitaux militaires seront reconnus neutres, et, comme tels, protégés et respectés par les belligérants aussi longtemps qu'il s'y trouvera des malades ou des blessés.

La neutralité cesserait, si ces ambulances ou ces hôpitaux étaient gardés par une force militaire.

ART. II. Le personnel des hôpitaux et des ambulances, comprenant l'intendance, les services de santé, d'administration, de transport des blessés, ainsi que les aumôniers, participera au bénéfice de la neutralité lorsqu'il fonctionnera, et tant qu'il restera des blessés à relever ou à secourir.

ART. III. Les personnes désignées dans l'article précédent pourront, même après l'occupation par l'ennemi, continuer à remplir leurs fonctions dans l'hôpital ou l'ambulance qu'elles desservent, ou se retirer pour rejoindre le corps auquel elles appartiennent.

Dans ces circonstances, lorsque ces personnes cesseront leurs fonctions, elles seront remises aux avant-postes ennemis, par les soins de l'armée occupante.

ART. IV. Le matériel des hôpitaux militaires demeurant soumis aux lois de la guerre, les personnes attachés à ces hôpitaux en pourront, en se retirant, emarticles but such as are their private property.

Under the same circumstances an ambulance shall, on the contrary, retain its equipment.

Art. V. Inhabitants of the country who may bring help to the wounded shall be respected, and shall remain free. The generals of the belligerent Powers shall make it their care to inform the inhabitants of the appeal addressed to their humanity, and of the neutrality which will be the consequence of it.

Any wounded man entertained and taken care of in a house shall be considered as a protection thereto. Any inhabitant who shall have entertained wounded men in his house shall be exempted from the quartering of troops, as well as from a part of the contributions of war which may be imposed.

Art. VI. Wounded or sick soldiers shall be entertained and taken care of, to whatever nation they may belong.

Commanders-in-chief shall have the power to deliver immediately to the outposts of the enemy soldiers who have been wounded in an engagement, when circumstances permit this to be done, and with the consent of both parties.

Those who are recognized, after their wounds are porter que les objets qui sont leur propriété particulière.

Dans les mêmes circonstances, au contraire, l'ambulance conservera son matériel.

Persons serving the wounded to remain free.

Art. V. Les habitants du pays qui porteront secours aux blessés seront respectés, et demeureront libres. Les généraux des Puissances belligérantes auront pour mission de prévenir les habitants de l'appel fait à leur humanité, et de la neutralité qui en sera la conséquence.

Houses where the wounded are cared for to be protected.

Tout blessé recueilli et soigné dans une maison y servira de sauvegarde.

Exemptions for care of wounded.

L'habitant qui aura recueilli chez lui des blessés sera dispensé du logement des troupes, ainsi que d'une partie des contributions de guerre qui seraient imposées.

Soldiers sick or wounded of any nation to be relieved and cared for.

Art. VI. Les militaires blessés ou malades seront recueillis et soignés, à quelque nation qu'ils appartiendront.

Delivery of wounded, etc.

Les Commandants-en-chef auront la faculté de remettre immédiatement aux avant-postes ennemis, les militaires blessés pendant le combat, lorsque les circonstances le permettront et du consentement des deux partis.

Soldiers incapacitated for service to be sent home.

Seront renvoyés dans leurs pays ceux qui, après guérihealed, as incapable of serving, shall be sent back to their country.

son, seront reconnus incapables de servir.

Conditions of return.

The others may also be sent back, on condition of not again bearing arms during the continuance of the war.

Les autres pourront être également renvoyés, à la condition de ne pas reprendre les armes pendant la durée de la guerre.

Evacuations, etc., to have absolute neutrality.

Evacuations, together with the persons under whose directions they take place, shall be protected by an absolute neutrality.

Les évacuations, avec le personnel qui les dirige, seront couvertes par une neutralité absolue.

Hospital, ambulance, and evacuation flag, etc.

Art. VII. A distinctive and uniform flag shall be adopted for hospitals, ambulances and evacuations. It must, on every occasion, be accompanied by the national flag. An arm-badge (brassard) shall also be allowed for individuals neutralized, but the delivery thereof shall be left to military authority.

Arm-badge.

Art. VII. Un drapeau distinctif et uniforme sera adopté pour les hôpitaux, les ambulances et les évacuations. Il devra être, en toute circonstance, accompagné du drapeau national. Un brassard sera également admis pour le personnel neutralisé, mais la délivrance en sera laissée à l'autorité militaire.

Flag and arm-badge to bear red cross, etc.

The flag and the arm-badge shall bear a red cross on a white ground.

Le drapeau et le brassard porteront croix rouge sur fond blanc.

Execution of details of convention.

Art. VIII. The details of execution of the present convention shall be regulated by the commanders-in-chief of belligerent armies, according to the instructions of their respective governments, and in conformity with the general principles laid down in this convention.[1]

Art. VIII. Les détails d'exécution de la présente convention seront réglés par les Commandants en chef des armées belligérantes, d'après les instructions de leurs Gouvernements repectifs, et conformément aux principes généraux énoncés dans cette convention.

ADDITIONAL ARTICLES.[1]

Proposed extension of provisions of convention to armies on the sea.

The governments of North Germany, Austria, Baden, Bavaria. Belgium, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, Sweden and Norway, Switzerland, Turkey, and Würtemburg, desiring to extend to armies on the sea the advantages of the Convention concluded at Geneva the 22d of August, 1864, for the amelioration of the condition of wounded soldiers in armies in the field, and to further particularize some of the stipulations of the said Convention, have named for their commissioners:

Rights of employees, etc., in hospitals or ambulances; their release and departure.

ARTICLE I. The persons designated in Article II. of the Convention shall, after the occupation by the enemy, continue to fulfil their duties, according to their wants, to the sick and wounded in the ambulance or the hospital which they serve. When they request to withdraw, the commander of the occupying troops shall fix the time of departure, which he shall only

Les Gouvernements de l'Allemagne du Nord, de l'Autriche, Bade, la Bavière, la Belgique, le Danemark, la France, la Grande Bretagne, l'Italie, les Pays-Bas, Suède et Norvége, la Suisse, la Turquie, le Wurtemberg, désirant étendre aux armées de mer les avantages de la Convention conclue à Genève, le 22 août 1864, pour l'amélioration du sort des militaires blessés dans les armées en campagne, et préciser davantage quelques-unes des stipulations de la dite Convention, ont nommé pour leurs Commissaires:

ARTICLE I. Le personnel désigné dans l'article deux de la Convention continuera, après l'occupation par l'ennemi, à donner dans la mesure des besoins, ses soins aux malades et aux blessés de l'ambulance on de l'hôspital qu'il dessert. Lorsqu'il demandera à se retirer, le commandant des troupes occupantes fixera le moment de ce départ, qu'il ne pourra toutefois be allowed to delay for a short time in case of military necessity.

[1] On the 20th of October, 1868, the above additional articles were proposed and signed at Geneva on behalf of Great Britain, Austria, Baden, Bavaria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Italy, Netherlands, North Germany, Sweden and Norway, Switzerland, Turkey, and Würtemberg.

ART. II. Arrangements will have to be made by the belligerent powers to ensure to the neutralized person, fallen into the hands of the army of the enemy, the entire enjoyment of his salary.

ART. III. Under the conditions provided for in Articles I. and IV. of the Convention, the name "ambulance"[1] applies to field hospitals and other temporary establishments, which follow the troops on the field of battle to receive the sick and wounded.

ART. IV. In conformity with the spirit of Article V. of the Convention, and to the reservations contained in the protocol of 1864, it is explained that for the appointment of the charges relative to the quartering of troops, and of the contributions of war, account only shall be taken in an equitable manner of the charitable zeal displayed by the inhabitants.

ART. V. In addition to Article VI. of the Convention, it is stipulated that, with the reservation of officers whose detention might be important to the fate of arms and within the limits fixed by the second paragraph of that article, the wounded fallen into the hands of the enemy shall be sent back to their country, after they are cured, or sooner if possible, on condition, nevertheless, of not again bearing arms during the continuance of the war.

[Articles concerning the Marine.]

ART. VI. The boats which, at their own risk and peril, during and after an engagement pick up the shipwrecked or wounded, or which having picked them up, différer que pour une courte durée en cas de nécessités militaires.

Salary of neutrals etc., when in enemy's hands.

ART. II. Des dispositions devront être prises par les Puissances belligérantes pour assurer au personnel neutralisé, tombé entre les mains de l'armée ennemie, la jouissance intégrale de son traitement.

Definition of the term "ambulance."

ART. III. Dans les conditions prévues par les articles un et quatre de la Convention, la dénomination d'ambulance s'applique aux hôpitaux de campagne et autres établissements temporaires qui suivent les troupes sur les champs de bataille pour y recevoir des malades et des blessés.

Charges for quartering of troops, and contributions, etc.

ART. IV. Conformément à l'esprit de l'article cinq de la Convention et aux réserves mentionnées au Protocole de 1864, il est expliqué que pour la répartition des charges relatives au logement de troupes et aux contributions de guerre, il ne sera tenu compte que dans la mesure de l'équité du zèle charitable déployé par les habitants.

Wounded to be returned to their country on condition of not again bearing arms in the war.

ART. V. Par extension de l'article six de la Convention, il est stipulé que sous la réserve des officiers dont la possession importerait au sort des armes, et dans les limites fixées par le deuxième paragraphe de cet article, les blessés tombés entre les mains de l'ennemi, lors même qu'ils ne seraient pas reconnus incapables de servir, devront être renvoyés dans leur pays après leur guérison, ou plus tôt si faire se peut, à la condition toutefois de ne pas reprendre les armes pendant la durée de la guerre.

Articles concernant la Marine.

Boats picking up the shipwrecked or wounded, etc.

ART. VI. Les embarcations qui, à leurs risques et périls, pendant et après le combat, recueillent ou qui, ayant recueilli des naufragés ou des blessés, les portent à bord convey them on board a neutral or hospital ship, shall enjoy, until the accomplishment of their mission, the character of neutrality, so far as the circumstances of the engagement and the position of the ships engaged will permit.

The appreciation of these circumstances is entrusted to the humanity of all the combatants. The wrecked and wounded thus picked and saved must not serve again during the continuance of the war.

Religious, medical, and hospital staff of a captured vessel declared neutral.

ART. VII. The religious, medical, and hospital staff of any captured vessel are declared neutral, and, on leaving the ship, may remove the articles and surgical instruments which are their private property.

Duties of staff officers, etc.

ART. VIII. The staff designated in the preceding article must continue to fulfil their functions in the captured ship, assisting in the removal of the wounded made by the victorious party; they will then be at liberty to return to their country, in conformity with the second paragraph of the first additional article.

Pay and allowance of staff.

The stipulations of the second additional article are applicable to the pay and allowance of the staff.

Captured hospital ships to remain under martial law, etc.; not to be used for other purposes.

ART. IX. The military hospital ships remain under martial law in all that concerns their stores; they become the property of the captor, but the latter must not divert them from their special appropriation during the continuance of the war.[1] d'un navire soit neutre, soit hospitalier, jouiront jusqu'à l'accomplissement de leur mission de la part de neutralité que les circonstances du combat et la situation des navires en conflit permettront de leur appliquer.

L'appéciation de ces circonstances est confiée à l'humanité de tous les combattants. Les naufragés et les blessés ainsi recueillis et sauvés ne pourront servir pendant la durée de la guerre.

ART. VII. Le personnel religieux, médical et hospitalier de tout bâtiment capturé, est déclaré neutre. Il emporte, en quittant le navire, les objets et les instruments de chirurgie qui sont sa propriété particulière.

ART. VIII. Le personnel désigné dans l'article précédent doit continuer à remplir ses fonctions sur la bâtiment capturé, concourir aux évacuations de blessés faites par le vainqueur, puis il doit être libre de rejoindre son pays, conformément au second paragraphe du premier article additionnel ci-dessus.

Les stipulations du deuxième article additionnel ci-dessus sont applicables au traitement de ce personnel.

ART. IX. Les bâtiments hôpitaux militaires restent soumis aux lois de la guerre, en ce qui concerne leur matériel; ils deviennent la propriété du capteur, mais celuici ne pourra les détourner de leur affection spéciale pendant la durée de la guerre.

[1] In the published English text, from which this version of the Additional Articles is taken, the following paragraph (marked in brackets) appears in continuation of Article IX. It is not, however, found in the original French text adopted by the Geneva conference October 20, 1868:

[The vessels not equipped for fighting, which, during peace, the Government shall have officially declared to be intended to serve as floating hospital ships, shall, however, enjoy during the war complete neutrality, both as regards stores, and also as regards their staff, provided their equipment is exclusively appropriated to the special service on which they are employed.]

By an instruction sent to the United States minister at Berne, January 20, 1883, the right is reserved to omit this paragraph from the English text, and to make any other necessary corrections, if at any time hereafter the Additional Articles shall be completed by the exchange of the ratifications hereof between the several signatory and adhering powers.

ART. X. Any merchantman, to whatever nation she may belong, charged exclusively with removal of sick and wounded, is protected by neutrality, but the mere fact, noted on the ship's books, of the vessel having been visited by an enemy's cruiser, renders the sick and wounded incapable of serving during the continuance of the war. The cruiser shall even have the right of putting on board an officer in order to accompany the convoy, and thus verify the good faith of the operation.

If the merchant ship also carries a cargo, her neutrality will still protect it, provided that such cargo is not of a nature to be confiscated by the belligerents.

The belligerents retain the right to interdict neutralized vessels from all communication, and from any course which they may deem prejudicial to the secrecy of their operations. In urgent cases special conventions may be entered into between commanders-in-chief, in order to neutralize temporarily and in a special manner the vessel intended for the removal of the sick and wounded.

ART. XI. Wounded or sick sailors and soldiers, when embarked, to whatever nation they may belong, shall be protected and taken care of by their captors.

Their return to their own country is subject to the provisions of Article VI. of the Convention, and of the additional Article V.

ART. XII. The distinctive flag to be used with the national flag, in order to indicate any vessel or boat which may claim the benefits of neutrality, in virtue of the principles of this Convention, is a white flag with a red cross. The belligerents may exercise in this respect any mode of verification which they may deem necessary.

Merchant vessels performing hospital duty to be treated as neutral; visited by enemy's cruiser rendering sick and wounded incapacitated from further war service.

ART. X. Tout bâtiment de commerce à quelque nation qu'il appartienne, chargé exclusivement de blessés et de malades dont il opère l'évacuation, est couvert par la neutralité; mais le fait seul de la visite, notifié sur le journal du bord, par un crosieur ennemi, rend les blessés et les malades incapable de servir pendant la durée de la guerre. Le croiseur aura même le droit de mettre à bord un commissaire pour accompagner le convoi et vérifier ainsi la bonne foi de l'opération.

Cargo of merchant ship protected; when; proviso.

Si le bâtiment de commerce contenait en outre un chargement, la neutralité le couvrirait encore pourvu que ce chargement ne fût pas de nature à être confisqué par le belligérant.

Right of belligerents.

Les belligérants conservent le droit d'interdire aux bâtiments neutralisés toute communication et toute direction qu'ils jugeraient nuisibles au secret de leurs opérations. Dans les cas urgents, des conventions particulières pourront être faites entre les commandants-en-chef pour neutraliser momentanément d'une manière spéciale les navires destinés à l'évacuation des blessés et des malades.

Wounded or sick sailors and soldiers, when embarked, etc.

ART. XI. Les marins et les militaires embarqués, blessés ou malades, à quelque nation qu'ils appartiennent, seront protégés et soignés par les capteurs.

Return to native country.

Leur repatriement est soumis aux prescriptions de l'article six de la Convention et de l'article cinq additionnel.

White flag with red cross, etc., used by vessels claiming neutrality.

ART. XII. Le drapeau distinctif à joindre au pavillon national pour indiquer un navire ou une embarcation quelconque qui réclame le bénéfice de la neutralité, en vertu des principes de cette Convention, est le pavillon blanc à croix rouge. Les belligérants exercent à cet égard toute vérification qu'ils jugent nécessaire.

Military hospitals painted white, etc.

Military hospital ships shall be distinguished by being painted white outside, with green strake.

Les bâtiments hôpitaux militaires seront distingués par une peinture extérieure blanche avec batterie verte.

Hospital ships, etc., and staff to be treated as neutral.

ART. XIII. The hospital ships which are equipped at the expense of the aid societies, recognized by the governments signing this Convention, and which are furnished with a commission emanating from the sovereign, who shall have given express authority for their being fitted out, and with a certificate from the proper naval authority that they have been placed under his control during their fitting out and on their final departure, and that they were then appropriated solely to the purpose of their mission, shall be considered neutral, as well as the whole of their staff. They shall be recognized and protected by the belligerents.

ART. XIII. Les navires hospitaliers, équipés aux frais des sociétés de secours reconnues par les Gouvernements signataires de cette Convention, pourvus de commission émanée du Souverain qui aura donné l'autorisation expresse de leur armement, et d'un document de l'autorité maritime compétente, stipulant qu'ils ont été soumis à son contrôle pendant leur armement et à leur départ final, et qu'ils étaient alors uniquement appropriés au but de leur mission, seront considérés comme neutres ainsi que tout leur personnel. Ils seront respectés et protégés par les belligérants.

Flag sign, etc., of neutrality.

They shall make themselves known by hoisting, together with their national flag, the white flag with a red cross. The distinctive mark of their staff, while performing their duties, shall be an armlet of the same colors. The outer painting of these hospital ships shall be white, with red strake.

Ils se feront reconnaître en hissant avec leur pavillon national, le pavillon blanc à croix rouge. La marque distinctive de leur personnel dans l'exercice de ses fonctions sera un brassard aux mêmes couleurs; leur peinture extérieure sera blanche avec batterie rouge.

Aid and assistance to wounded and wrecked belligerents, without distinction of nationality.

These ships shall bear aid and assistance to the wounded and wrecked belligerents, without distinction of nationality.

Ces navires porteront secours et assistance aux blessés et aux naufragés des belligérants sans distinction de nationalité.

They must take care not to interfere in any way with the movements of the combatants. During and after the battle they must do their duty at their own risk and peril.

Ils ne devront gêner en aucune manière les mouvements des combattants. Pendant et après le combat, ils agiront à leurs risques et périls.

Rights of belligerents to control and visit vessels, etc.

The belligerents shall have the right of controlling and visiting them; they will be at liberty to refuse their assistance, to order them to depart, and to detain them if the exigencies of the case require such a step.

Les belligérants auront sur eux le droit de contrôle et de visite; ils pourront refuser leur concours, leur enjoindre de s'éloigner et les détenir si la gravité des circonstances l'exigeait.

Wounded and wrecked picked up, etc., can not be reclaimed.

The wounded and wrecked picked up by these ships cannot be reclaimed by either of the com-

Les blessés et les naufragés recueillis par ces navires ne pourront être réclamés par aucun des batants, and they will be required not to serve during the continuance of the war.

Art. XIV. In naval wars any strong presumption that either belligerent takes advantage of the benefits of neutrality, with any other view than the interest of the sick and wounded, gives to the other belligerent, until proof to the contrary, the right of suspending the Convention, as regards such belligerent.

Should this presumption become a certainty, notice may be given to such belligerent that the Convention is suspended with regard to him during the whole continuance of the war.

Art. XV. The present act shall be drawn up in a single original copy, which shall be deposited in the Archives of the Swiss Confederation.

An authentic copy of this Act shall be delivered, with an invitation to adhere to it, to each of the signatory Powers of the Convention of the 22d of August, 1864, as well as to those that have successively acceded to it.

In faith whereof, the undersigned commissaries have drawn up the present project of additional articles and have apposed thereunto the seals of their arms.

combattants, et il leur sera imposé de ne pas servir pendant la durée de la guerre.

Rights of belligerents to suspend convention, etc.

Art. XIV. Dans les guerres maritimes, toute forte présomption que l'un des belligérants profite du bénéfice de la neutralité dans un autre intérêt que celui des blessés et des malades, permet à l'autre belligérant, jusqu'à preuve du contraire, de suspendre la Convention à son égard.

Notice of suspension of Convention, etc. to be given.

Si cette présomption devient une certitude, la Convention peut même lui être dénoncée pour toute la durée de la guerre.

Act embodied in one original copy and deposited in archives of Swiss Confederation.

Art. XV. Le présent acte sera dressé en un seul exemplaire original qui sera déposé aux archives de la Confédération suisse.

Authentic copy to be delivered to signatory powers, etc.

Une copie authentique de cet acte sera délivrée, avec, l'invitation d'y adhérer, à chacune des Puissances signataires de la Convention du 22 août 1864, ainsi qu'à celles qui y ont successivement accédé.

En foi de quoi les Commissaires soussignés ont dressé le présent Projet d'articles additionnels et y ont apposé le cachet de leurs armes.

AGREEMENT FOR THE ADAPTATION OF MARITIME WARFARE TO THE RULES OF THE GENEVA CONVENTION OF AUGUST 22, 1864.

Art. I. Military hospital ships—that is, ships constructed or fitted out by States especially and solely with a view to give assistance to the sick, wounded, and shipwrecked, the names of which shall have been communicated to the belligerent powers at the opening or during the continuance of hostilities, and in every case before being placed in service, are to be respected and may not be captured during the continuance of hostilities. These vessels are not assimilated to ships of war in matters pertaining to their sojourn in neutral ports.

Art. II. Hospital ships equipped wholly or in part at the expense of private individuals, or aid societies which have been officially recognized, are equally to be respected and exempted from capture, if the belligerent power to which they are attached has given them an official commission, and has notified their names to the adverse power at the opening of hostilities, or during their progress, but in every case before being placed in service. These ships shall carry a document from competent authority declaring that they have been subjected to its inspection during their equipment and at their final departure.

Art. III. Hospital ships equipped wholly or in part at the expense of private individuals, or societies officially recognized by neutral states, are to be respected and exempted from capture, if the neutral power to which they are subject issues commissions to them, and notifies their names to the belligerent powers at the outbreak of hostilities or during their continuance, but in all cases before being placed in service.

Art. IV. Ships mentioned in Articles I, II, and III shall carry aid and assistance to the sick, wounded, and shipwrecked individuals of the belligerent armies without distinction of nationality. The governments agree not to use these ships for any warlike purpose. These ships shall not embarrass in any manner the movements of the combatants. During and after the combat they shall act at their own risk and hazard. Belligerents shall have the right to visit and inspect them; they may refuse assistance to them, or require them to remove to a distance, or impose upon them a fixed sailing course, and may place a commissioner on board; they may even detain them if circumstances demand it. As far as possible orders given by belligerents to hospital ships shall be entered in their log books.

Art. V. Military hospital ships shall be distinguished by an exterior coloring of white with a green horizontal band of about one meter and a half in width. Ships mentioned in Articles II and III shall be distinguished by an exterior coloring of white with a red horizontal band of about one meter and a half in width. The small boats of the ships just mentioned, as well as the small boats which may be employed in hospital service, shall be distinguished by similar painting. All hospital ships shall be recognized by hoisting with their national flags the red cross emblazoned upon the white flag, as prescribed by the Geneva Convention.

Art. VI. Commercial vessels, yachts, or neutral small boats conveying or receiving sick, wounded, or shipwrecked persons are not liable to capture for engaging in such transport; but they remain liable to capture for any violations of neutrality which they may have committed.

Art. VII. The personnel of the medical and hospital service, including chaplains, of every captured vessel, is inviolable and can not be made prisoners of war. They carry away with them, on quitting the ship, the surgical instruments and appliances which are their personal property. These persons shall continue to perform their functions so long as may be necessary, and they may be withdrawn when the commander in chief deems such withdrawal possible. Belligerents are to secure to such persons who may fall into their hands the full enjoyment of their salaries.

Art. VIII. Persons in the military or naval service, to whatever nation they may belong, who are sick, wounded, or shipwrecked, shall be protected and cared for by their captors.

Art. IX. Sick, wounded, and shipwrecked persons in the service of a belligerent who fall into the hands of the enemy become prisoners of war. It is for the enemy to decide, according to the circumstances of the case, whether it is expedient to hold them, to send them to a port of their own nation, or to a neutral port, or even to a port of the enemy. In the last case the prisoners so returned to their country can not serve during the continuance of the war.

Art. X. Sick, wounded, or shipwrecked persons who are sent to a neutral port, with the consent of the local authority, shall, unless a contrary arrangement be entered into between the neutral state and the belligerents, be subjected to such restraint by the neutral state that it will be impossible for them to again take part in the operations of the war. The expenses of hospital treatment and internment of the sick, wounded, and shipwrecked shall be borne by the state to which they belong.

Art. XI. The rules contained in the foregoing article are obligatory only upon the contracting powers in the event of war between two or more of them. The said rules shall cease to be obligatory from the instant when, in a war between contracting powers, a noncontracting power joins one of the belligerents.

Art. XII. The present Convention shall be ratified with the briefest possible delay. The ratifications shall be deposited at The Hague; a minute shall be prepared, on the deposit of each ratification, of which a properly authenticated copy shall be transmitted, through diplomatic channels, to each of the contracting powers.

Art. XIII. Nonsignatory powers who have accepted the Geneva Convention of August 22, 1864, are permitted to adhere to this Convention. To that end they shall make known their adhesion to the contracting powers by a notification in writing, addressed to the Government of the Netherlands, and, communicated by it to all of the other contracting powers.

Art. XIV. If it should happen that one of the high contracting parties should disavow the present Convention, such disavowal shall not become operative until one year after it shall have been notified, in writing, to the Government of the Netherlands and immediately communicated by the latter to all of the other high contracting powers. This disavowal shall be operative only in respect to the power which shall have given notice of it.

Done at The Hague this 29th day of July, 1899.

Whereas on the twenty-second of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, at Geneva, Switzerland, plenipotentiaries respectively representing Italy, Baden, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, Portugal, France, Prussia, Saxony, and Wurtemburg, and the Federal Council of Switzerland agreed upon ten articles of a treaty or convention for the purpose of mitigating the evils inseparable from war; of suppressing the needless severity and ameliorating the condition of soldiers wounded on the field of battle; and particularly providing, among other things, in effect, that persons employed in hospitals, and in affording relief to the sick and wounded, and supplies for this purpose, shall be deemed neutral and entitled to protection; and that a distinctive and uniform flag shall be adopted for hospitals and ambulances, and convoys of sick and wounded, and an arm badge for individuals neutralized; and

Whereas said treaty has been ratified by all of said nations, and by others subsequently, to the number of forty-three or more, including the United States of America; and

Whereas a permanent organization is an agency needed in every nation to carry out the purposes of said treaty, and especially to secure supplies and to execute the humane objects contemplated by said treaty, with the power to adopt and use the distinctive flag and arm badge specified by said treaty in article seven, on which shall be the sign of the Red Cross, for the purpose of cooperating with the "Comité International de Secours aux Militaires Blessés" (International Committee of Relief for the Wounded in War); and

Whereas, in accordance with the requirements of customs of said international body, such an association, adopting and using said insignia, was formed in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, in July, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, known as "The American National Association of the Red Cross," and reincorporated April seventeenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, under the laws of the District of Columbia; and

Whereas it is believed that the importance of the work demands a reincorporation by the Congress of the United States: Now, therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Clara Barton, George Kennan, Julian B. Hubbell, of the District of Columbia; Stephen E. Barton, of New York; William R. Day, of Ohio; Brainard H. Warner, Ellen Spencer Mussey, Alvey A. Adee, of the District of Columbia; Joseph Sheldon, of Connecticut; Charles F. Fairchild, William Letchwerth, of New York City; Hilary A. Herbert, of Alabama; Joseph Gardner, Enola Lee Gardner, of Bedford, Indiana; John W. Noble, of Saint Louis, Missouri; Richard Olney, of Boston, Massachusetts; Alexander W. Terrell, of Austin, Texas; Leslie M. Shaw, Benjamin Tillinghast, of Iowa; Abraham C. Kaufman, of Charleston, South Carolina; J. B. Vinet, of New Orleans, Louisiana; George Gray, of Delaware; Redfield Proctor, of Vermont; George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts; Charles A. Russell, of Connecticut; Robert W. Miers, of Indiana; George C. Boldt, William T. Wardwell, of New York; Daniel Hastings, J. Wilkes O'Neill, of Pennsylvania; Thomas F. Walsh, of Colorado; John G. Lemmon, of California; Charles C. Glover, Walter S. Woodward, Elizabeth Kibbey, Mabel T. Boardman, Walter Wyman, Sumner I. Kimball, of the District of Columbia; Edward Lowe, of Michigan; Harriette L. Reed, of Boston, Massachusetts; William H. Sears, of Lawrence, Kansas; John K. Elwell, of Vinland, Kansas; E. R. Ridgely, of Pittsburg, Kansas; James Tanner, John Hitz, S. W. Briggs, Corry Curry, Lizzie W. Calver, Mary A. Logan, Mary L. Barton, S. B. Hege, and Helena H. Mitchell, of Washington, District of Columbia; Emma L. Nichols, of Chillicothe, Ohio; Lenora Halsted, of Saint Louis, Missouri; P. V. DeGraw, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Walter V. Phillips, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, and their associates and successors, are hereby created a body corporate and politic in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 2. That the name of this corporation shall be "The American National Red Cross," and by that name it shall have perpetual succession, with the power to sue and be sued in courts of law and equity within the jurisdiction of the United States; to have and to hold such real and personal estate as shall be convenient and necessary to carry out the purposes of this corporation hereinafter set forth, such real estate to be limited to such quantity as may be necessary for official use or office buildings; to adopt a seal and the same to alter and destroy at pleasure; and to have the right to have and to use, in carrying out its purposes hereinafter designated, as an emblem and badge, a Greek red cross on a white ground, as the same has been described in the treaty of Geneva, August twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and adopted by the several nations acceding thereto; to ordain and establish bylaws and regulations not inconsistent with the laws of the United States of America or any State thereof, and generally to do all such acts and things as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this Act and promote the purposes of said organization; and the corporation hereby created is designated as the organization which is authorized to act in matters of relief under said treaty. In accordance with article seven, of the treaty, the delivery of the brassard allowed for individuals neutralized in time of war shall be left to military authority.

SEC. 3. That the purposes of this corporation are and shall be—

First. To furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of armies in time of war, in accordance with the spirit and conditions of the conference of Geneva of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and also of the treaty of the Red Cross, or the treaty of Geneva of August twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to which the United States of America gave its adhesion on March first, eighteen hundred and eighty-two.

Second. And for said purposes to perform all the duties devolved upon a national society by each nation which has acceded to said treaty.

Third. To succeed to all the rights and property which have been hitherto held and to all the duties which have heretofore been performed by the American National Red Cross as a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the United States relating to the District of Columbia, which organization is hereby dissolved.

Fourth. To act in matters of voluntary relief and in accordance with the military and naval authorities as a medium of communication between the people of the United States of America and their armies, and to act in such matters between similar national societies of other governments through the "Comité International de Secours" and the Government and the people and the armies of the United States of America.

Fifth. And to continue and carry on a system of national and international relief in time of peace and apply the same in mitigating the sufferings caused by pestilence, famine, fire, floods, and other great national calamities.

Sixth. And to devise and carry on measures for preventing the same, and generally to promote measures of humanity and the welfare of mankind.

Sec. 4. That from and after the passage of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person within the jurisdiction of the United States to falsely and fraudulently hold himself out as, or represent or pretend himself to be a member of or an agent for the American National Red Cross for the purpose of soliciting, collecting, or recieving money or material; or for any person to wear or display the sign of the red cross, or any insignia colored in imitation thereof, for the fraudulent purpose of inducing the belief that he is a member of or an agent for the American National Red Cross. If any person violates the provisions of this section he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to a fine of not less than one nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or both, for each and every offense. The fine so collected shall be paid to the American National Red Cross. The appointment of the chief medical officer shall not be made without the approval in writing of the Secretary of War.

Sec. 5. That the said American National Red Cross shall, on the first day of January of each year, make and transmit to Congress a full, complete, and itemized report of all receipts and expenditures of whatever kind, and of its proceedings during the preceding year, and shall also give such information concerning its transactions and affairs as the Secretary of State may from time to time require, and, in respect of all business and proceedings in which it may be concerned in conection with the War and Navy Departments of the Government, shall make reports to the Secretary of War and to the Secretary of the Navy, respectively.

Sec. 6. That Congress shall have the right to repeal, alter, or amend this Act at any time. Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 277).

THE ARMY REORGANIZATION ACT OF FEBRUARY 2, 1901.

THE ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES, COMPOSITION.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the approval of this Act the Army of the United States, including the existing organizations, shall consist of fifteen regiments of cavalry, a corps of artillery, thirty regiments of infantry, one Lieutenant-General, six major-generals, fifteen brigadier-generals, an Adjutant-General's Department, an Inspector-General's Department, a Judge-Advocate-General's Department, a Quartermaster's Department, a Subsistence Department, a Medical Department, a Pay Department, a Corps of Engineers, an Ordnance Department, a Signal Corps, the officers of the Record and Pension Office, the chaplains, the officers and enlisted men of the Army on the retired list, the professors, corps of cadets, the army detachments and band at the United States Military Academy, Indian scouts as now authorized by law, and such other officers and enlisted men as may hereinafter be provided for: Provided, That when a vacancy shall occur through death, retirement, or other separation from active service in the office of storekeeper, now provided for by law in the Quartermaster's Department and Ordnance Department, respectively, said office shall cease to exist. Act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 748).

CAVALRY.

That each regiment of cavalry shall consist of one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, three majors, fifteen captains, fifteen first lieutenants, and fifteen second lieutenants; two veterinarians, one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, one commissary-sergeant, three squadron sergeants-major, two color-sergeants with rank, pay, and allowances of squadron sergeant-major, one band, and twelve troops organized into three squadrons of four troops each. Of the officers herein provided, the captains and lieutenants not required for duty with the troops shall be available for detail as regimental and squadron staff officers and such other details as may be authorized by law or regulations. Squadron adjutants shall receive one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum and the allowances of first lieutenants; squadron quartermasters and commissaries shall receive one thousand six hundred dollars per annum and the allowances of second lieutenants. Each cavalry band shall be organized as now provided by law. Each troop of cavalry shall consist of one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, six sergeants, six corporals, two cooks, two farriers and blacksmiths, one saddler, one wagoner, two trumpeters, and forty-three privates; the commissioned officers to be assigned from among those hereinbefore authorized: Provided, That the President, in his discretion, may increase the number of corporals in any troop of cavalry to eight, and the number of privates to seventy-six, but the total number of enlisted men authorized for the whole Army shall not at any time be exceeded. Sec. 2, ibid.

THE ARTILLERY CORPS.

That the regimental organization of the artillery arm of the United States Army is hereby discontinued, and that arm is constituted and designated as the Artillery Corps. It shall be organized as hereinafter specified and shall belong to the line of the Army. Sec. 3, ibid.

That the Artillery Corps shall comprise two branches—the coast artillery and the field artillery. The coast artillery is defined as that portion charged with the care and use of the fixed and movable elements of land and coast fortifications, including the submarine mine and torpedo defenses; and the field artillery as that portion accompanying an army in the field, and including field and light artillery proper, horse artillery, siege artillery, mountain artillery, and also machine-gun batteries: Provided, That this shall not be construed to limit the authority of the Secretary of War to order coast artillery to any duty which the public service demands or to prevent the use of machine or other field guns by any other arm of the service under the direction of the Secretary of War. Sec. 4, ibid.

That all officers of artillery shall be placed on one list, in respect to promotion, according to seniority in their several grades, and shall be assigned to coast or to field artillery according to their special aptitude for the respective services. Sec. 5, ibid.

That the Artillery Corps shall consist of a Chief of Artillery, who shall be selected and detailed by the President from the colonels of artillery, to serve on the staff of the general officer commanding the Army, and whose duties shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War; fourteen colonels, one of whom shall be the Chief of Artilley; thirteen lieutenant-colonels, thirty-nine majors, one hundred and ninety-five captains, one hundred and ninety-five first lieutenants, one hundred and ninety-five second lieutenants; and the captains and lieutenants provided for in this section not required for duty with batteries or companies shall be available for duty as staff officers of the various artillery garrisons and such other details as may be authorized by law and regulations; twenty-one sergeants-major, with the rank, pay, and allowances of regimental sergeants-major of infantry; twenty-seven sergeants-major, with the rank, pay, and allowances of battalion sergeants-major of infantry; one electrician sergeant to each coast artillery post having electrical appliances; thirty batteries of field artillery, one hundred and twenty-six batteries of coast artillery, and ten bands organized as now authorized by law for artillery regiments: Provided, That the aggregate number of enlisted men for the artillery, as provided under this Act, shall not exceed eighteen thousand nine hundred and twenty, exclusive of electrician sergeants. Sec. 6, ibid.

Twelve of the veterinarians herein provided for may be assigned to the artillery. Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 901).

That each company of coast artillery shall be organized as is now prescribed by law for a battery of artillery: Provided, That the enlisted strength of any company may be fixed, under the direction of the Secretary of War, according to the requirements of the service to which it may be assigned: And provided, That first-class gunners shall receive two dollars a month, and second-class gunners one dollar per month in addition to their pay. Sec. 7, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 749).

That each battery of field artillery shall be organized as is now prescribed by law, and the enlisted strength thereof shall be fixed under the direction of the Secretary of War. Sec. 8, ibid.

That the increase herein provided for the artillery shall be made as follows: Not less than twenty per centum before

July first, nineteen hundred and one, and not less than twenty per centum each succeeding twelve months until the total number provided for shall have been attained. All vacancies created or caused by this Act shall be filled by promotion according to seniority in the artillery arm. Second lieutenants of infantry or cavalry may, in the discretion of the President, be transferred to the artillery arm, taking rank therein according to date of commission, and such transfers shall be subject to approval by a board of artillery officers appointed to pass upon the capacity of such officers for artillery service: Provided, That the increase of officers of artillery shall be only in proportion to the increase of men. Sec. 9, ibid.

INFANTRY.

That each regiment of infantry shall consist of one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, three majors, fifteen captains, fifteeen first lieutenants, and fifteen second lieutenants; one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, one commissary-sergeant, three battalion sergeants-major, two color sergeants, with rank, pay, and allowances of battalion sergeants-major, one band, and twelve companies, organized into three battalions of four companies each. Of the officers herein provided, the captains and lieutenants not required for duty with the companies shall be available for detail as regimental and battalion staff officers and such other details as may be authorized by law or regulations. Battalion adjutants shall receive one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum and the allowances of first lieutenants, mounted; battalion quartermasters and commissaries shall receive one thousand six hundred dollars per annum and the allowances of second lieutenants, mounted. Each intantry band shall be organized as now provided by law. Each infantry company shall consist of one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, four sergeants, six corporals, two cooks, two musicians, one artificer, and forty-eight privates, the commissioned officers to be assigned from those hereinbefore authorized: Provided, That the President, in his discretion, may increase the number of sergeants in any company of infantry to six, the number of corporals to ten, and the number of privates to one hundred and twenty-seven, but the total number of enlisted men authorized for the whole Army shall not, at any time, be exceeded. Sec. 10, ibid.

ENGINEER TROOPS.

That the enlisted force of the Corps of Engineers shall consist of one band and three battalions of engineers. The engineers band shall be organized as now provided by law for bands of infantry regiments. Each battalion of engineers shall consist of one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, and four companies. Each company of engineers shall consist of one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, with the rank, pay, and allowances of sergeant, eight sergeants, ten corporals, two musicians, two cooks, thirty-eight first-class and thirty-eight second-class privates: Provided, That the President may, in his discretion, increase the number of sergeants in any company of engineers to twelve, the number of corporals to eighteen, the number of first-class privates to sixty-four, and the number of second-class privates to sixty-four, but the total number of enlisted men authorized for the whole Army shall not, at any time, be exceeded: And provided, That officers detailed from the Corps of Engineers to serve as battalion adjutants and battalion quartermasters and commissaries shall, while so serving, receive the pay and allowances herein authorized for battalion staff officers of infantry regiments. Sec. 11, ibid.

CHAPLAINS.

That the President is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, chaplains in the Army, at the rate of one for each regiment of cavalry and infantry in the United States service and twelve for the corps of artillery, with the rank, pay, and allowances of captains of infantry: Provided, That no person shall be appointed a chaplain in the Regular Army who shall have passed the age of forty years, nor until he shall have established his fitness as required by existing law: And provided, That the office of post chaplain is abolished, and the officers now holding commissions as chaplains, or who may hereafter be appointed chaplains, shall be assigned to regiments or to corps of artillery. Chaplains may be assigned to such stations as the Secretary of War shall direct, and they may be transferred, as chaplains, from one branch of the service or from one regiment to another by the Secretary of War, without further commission. When serving in the field, chaplains shall be furnished with necessary means of transportation by the Quartermaster's Department. Sec. 12, ibid.

THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

That the Adjutant-General's Department shall consist of one Adjutant-General with the rank of major-general, and when a vacancy shall occur in the office of Adjutant-General on the expiration of the service of the present incumbent, by retirement or otherwise, the Adjutant-General shall thereafter have the rank and pay of a brigadier-general, five assistant adjutants-general with the rank of colonel, seven assistant adjutants-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and fifteen assistant adjutants-general with the rank of major: Provided, That all vacancies created or caused by this section shall, as far as possible, be filled by promotion according to seniority of officers of the Adjutant-General's Deparment. Sec. 13, ibid.

THE INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

That the Inspector-General's Department shall consist of one Inspector-General with the rank of brigadier-general, four inspectors-general with the rank of colonel, four inspectors-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and eight inspectors-general with the rank of major: Provided, That all vacancies created or caused by this section shall be filled, as far as possible, by promotion according to seniority of officers of the Inspector-General's Department. Sec. 14, ibid.

Upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the grade of colonel in the Inspector-General's Department after the present lieutenant-colonels therein shall have been promoted or retired, such vacancy shall not be filled, and thereafter the number of officers authorized for that department shall be as follows: One inspector-general with the rank of brigadier-general; three inspectors-general with the rank of colonel; four inspectors-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and nine inspectors-general with the rank of major. Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 899).

THE JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

That the Judge-Advocate-General's Department shall consist of one Judge-Advocate-General with the rank of brigadier-general, two judge-advocates with the rank of colonel, three judge-advocates with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, six judge-advocates with the rank of major, and for each geographical department or tactical division of troops not provided with a judge-advocate from the list of officers holding permanent commissions in the Judge-Advocate-General's Department one acting judge-advocate with the rank, pay, and allowances of captain, mounted. Promotions to vacancies above the grade of major, created or caused by this Act, shall be made, according to seniority, from officers now holding commission in the Judge-Advocate-General's Department. Vacancies created or caused by this Act in the grade of major may be filled by appointment of officers holding commissions as judge-advocate of volunteers since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight. Vacancies which may occur thereafter in the grade of major in the Judge-Advocate-General's Department shall be filled by the appointment of officers of the line, or of persons who have satisfactorily served as judge-advocates of volunteers since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, or of persons from civil life who at date of appointment are not over thirty-five years of age and who shall pass a satisfactory examination to be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

Acting judge-advocates provided for herein shall be detailed from officers of the grades of captain or first lieutenant of the line of the Army who while so serving shall continue to hold their commissions in the arm of the service to which they permanently belong. Upon completion of a tour of duty not exceeding four years they shall be returned to the arm in which commissioned, and shall not be again detailed until they shall have completed two years' duty with the arm of the service in which commissioned. Sec. 15, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 751).

THE QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

That the Quartermaster's Department shall consist of one Quartermaster-General with the rank of brigadier-general, six assistant quartermasters-general with the rank of colonel, nine deputy quartermasters-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, twenty quartermasters with the rank of major, sixty quartermasters with the rank of captain, mounted; the military storekeeper now provided for by law, and one hundred and fifty post quartermaster-sergeants: Provided, That all vacancies in the grade of colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major created or caused by this section shall be filled by promotion according to seniority, as now prescribed by law. That to fill original vacancies in the grade of captain created by this Act in the Quartermaster's Department the President is authorized to appoint officers of volunteers commissioned in the Quartermaster's Department since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight: Provided further, That the President is authorized to continue in service, during the present emergency, for duty in the Philippine Islands and on transports, twenty-four captains and assistant quartermasters of volunteers. This authority shall extend only for the period when their services shall be absolutely necessary. Sec. 16, ibid.

THE SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT.

That the Subsistence Department shall consist of one Commissary-General with the rank of brigadier-general, three assistant commissaries-general with the rank of colonel, four deputy commissaries-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, nine commissaries with the rank of major, twenty-seven commissaries with the rank of captain, mounted, and the number of commissary-sergeants now authorized by law, who shall hereafter be known as post commissary-sergeants: Provided, That all vacancies in the grades of colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major, created or caused by this section, shall be filled by promotion, according to seniority, as now prescribed by law. That to fill original vacancies in the grade of captain, created by this Act, in the Subsistence Department, the President is authorized to appoint officers of volunteers commissioned in the Subsistence Department since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight. Sec. 17, ibid.

THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

That the Medical Department shall consist of one Surgeon-General with the rank of brigadier-general, eight assistant surgeons-general with the rank of colonel, twelve deputy surgeons-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, sixty surgeons with the rank of major, two hundred and forty assistant surgeons with the rank of captain or first lieutenant. the Hospital Corps, as now authorized by law, and the Nurse Corps: Provided, That all vacancies in the grades of colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major created or caused by this section shall be filled by promotion according to seniority, subject to the examination now prescribed by law: And provided, That the period during which any assistant surgeon shall have served as a surgeon or assistant surgeon in the Volunteer Army during the war with Spain or since shall be counted as a portion of the five years' service required to entitle him to rank of captain: And provided also, That nothing in this section shall affect the relative rank for promotion of any assistant surgeon now in the service, or who may be hereafter appointed therein, as determined by the date of his appointment or commission and as fixed in accordance with existing law and regulations: Provided further, That in emergencies the Surgeon-General of the Army, with the approval of the Secretary of War, may appoint as many contract surgeons as may be necessary, at a compensation not to exceed one hundred and fifty dollars per month. That on or after the passage of this Act the President may appoint for duty in the Philippine Islands, fifty surgeons of volunteers with the rank and pay of major, and one hundred and fifty assistant surgeons of volunteers with the rank and pay of captain, mounted, for a period of two years: Provided, That so many of these volunteer medical officers as are not required shall be honorably discharged the service whenever in the opinion of the Secretary of War their services are no longer necessary: Provided further, That assistant surgeons in the Volunteer Army of the United States commissioned by the President as captains, in accordance with the provisions of an Act for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes, approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, shall be entitled to the pay of a captain, mounted, from the date of their acceptance of such commission, as prescribed by law: Provided, That the Surgeon-General of the Army, with the approval of the Secretary of War, be, and he is hereby, authorized to employ dental surgeons to serve the officers and enlisted men of the Regular and Volunteer Army, in the proportion of not to exceed one for every one thousand of said Army, and not exceeding thirty in all. Said dental surgeons shall be employed as contract dental surgeons under the terms and conditions applicable to army contract surgeons, and shall be graduates of standard medical or dental colleges, trained in the several branches of dentistry, of good moral and professional character, and shall pass a satisfactory professional examination:

Provided, That three of the number of dental surgeons to be employed shall be first appointed by the Surgeon-General, with the approval of the Secretary of War, with reference to their fitness for assignment, under the direction of the Surgeon-General, to the special service of conducting the examinations and supervising the operations of the others; and for such special service an extra compensation of sixty dollars a month will be allowed: Provided further, That dental college graduates now employed in the Hospital Corps who have been detailed for a period of not less than twelve months to render dental service to the Army and who are shown by the reports of their superior officers to have rendered such service satisfactorily may be appointed contract dental surgeons without examination: Provided, That the Secretary of War be authorized to appoint in the Hospital Corps, in addition to the two hundred hospital stewards now allowed by law, one hundred hospital stewards: Provided, That men who have served as hospital stewards of volunteer regiments or acted in that capacity during and since the Spanish-American war for more than six months may be appointed hospital stewards in the Regular Army: And provided further, That all men so appointed shall be of good moral character and shall have passed a satisfactory mental and physical examination. Sec. 18, ibid.

THE NURSE CORPS (FEMALE).

That the Nurse Corps (female) shall consist of one Superintendent, to be appointed by the Secretary of War, who shall be a graduate of a hospital training school having a course of instruction of not less than two years, whose term of office may be terminated at his discretion, whose compensation shall be one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum, and of as many chief nurses, nurses, and reserve nurses as may be needed. Reserve nurses may be assigned to active duty when the emergency of the service demands, but shall receive no compensation except when on such duty: Provided, That all nurses in the Nurse Corps shall be appointed or removed by the Surgeon-General, with the approval of the Secretary of War; that they shall be graduates of hospital training schools, and shall have passed a satisfactory professional, moral, mental, and physical examination: And provided, That the Superintendent and nurses shall receive transportation and necessary expenses when traveling under orders; that the pay and allowances of nurses, and of reserve nurses, when on active service, shall be forty dollars per month when on duty in the United States and fifty dollars per month when without the limits of the United States. They shall be entitled to quarters, subsistence, and medical attendance during illness, and they may be granted leaves of absence for thirty days, with pay, for each calendar year; and, when serving as chief nurses, their pay may be increased by authority of the Secretary of War, such increase not to exceed twenty-five dollars per month. Payments to the Nurse Corps shall be made by the Pay Department. Sec. 19, ibid.

That the grade of veterinarian of the second class in cavalry regiments, United States Army, is hereby abolished, and hereafter the two veterinarians authorized for each cavalry regiment and the one veterinarian authorized for each artillery regiment[1] shall receive the pay and allowances of second lieutenants, mounted. Such number of veterinarians as the Secretary of War may authorize shall be employed to attend animals pertaining to the quartermaster's or other departments not directly connected with the cavalry and artillery regiments, at a compensation not exceeding one hundred dollars per month. Sec. 20, ibid.

THE PAY DEPARTMENT.

That the Pay Department shall consist of one Paymaster-General with the rank of brigadier-general, three assistant paymasters-general with the rank of colonel, four deputy paymasters-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, twenty paymasters with the rank of major, and twenty-five paymasters with the rank of captain, mounted: Provided, That all vacancies in the grade of colonel and lieutenant-colonel created or caused by this section shall be filled by promotion according to seniority, as now prescribed by law, and no more appointments to the grade of major and paymaster shall be made until the number of majors and paymasters is reduced below twenty: And provided, That persons who have served in the Volunteer Army since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, as additional paymasters may be appointed to positions in the grade of captain, created by this section.

[1] Replaced by a provision of the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 901), which authorizes twelve veterinarians for the Artillery Corps.

So long as there remain surplus majors an equal number of vacancies shall be held in the grade of captain, so that the total number of paymasters authorized by this section shall not be exceeded at any time. Sec. 21, ibid.

THE CORPS OF ENGINEERS.

That the Corps of Engineers shall consist of one Chief of Engineers with the rank of brigadier-general, seven colonels, fourteen lieutenant-colonels, twenty-eight majors, forty captains, forty first lieutenants, and thirty second lieutenants. The enlisted force provided in section eleven of this Act and the officers serving therewith shall constitute a part of the line of the Army: Provided, That the Chief of Engineers shall be selected as now provided by law, and hereafter vacancies in the Corps of Engineers in all other grades above that of second lieutenant shall be filled, as far as possible, by promotion according to seniority from the Corps of Engineers: And provided also, That vacancies remaining in the grades of first and second lieutenant may be filled by transfer of officers of the Regular Army, subject to such professional examination as may be approved by the Secretary of War. Vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant not filled by transfer shall be left for future promotions from the corps of cadets at the United States Military Academy. Sec. 22, ibid.

THE ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

That the Ordnance Department shall consist of one Chief of Ordnance with the rank of brigadier-general, four colonels, six lieutenant-colonels, twelve majors, twenty-four captains, and twenty-four first lieutenants, the ordnance storekeeper, and the enlisted men, including ordnance sergeants, as now authorized by law. All vacancies created or caused by this section shall, as far as possible, be filled by promotion according to seniority as now prescribed by law. Sec. 23, ibid.

THE SIGNAL CORPS.

That the Signal Corps shall consist of one Chief Signal Officer with the rank of brigadier-general, one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, four majors, fourteen captains, fourteen first lieutenants, eighty first-class sergeants, one hundred and twenty sergeants, one hundred and fifty corporals, two hundred and fifty first-class privates, one hundred and fifty second-class privates, and ten cooks: Provided, That vacancies created or caused by this section shall be filled by promotion of officers of the Signal Corps according to seniority, as now provided by law. Vacancies remaining after such promotions may be filled by appointment of persons who have served in the Volunteer Signal Corps since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight: Provided, That the President is authorized to continue in service during the present emergency, for duty in the Philippine Islands, five volunteer signal officers with the rank of first lieutenant and five volunteer signal officers with the rank of second lieutenant. This authority shall extend only for the period when their services may be absolutely necessary. Sec. 24, ibid.

THE RECORD AND PENSION OFFICE.

That the officers of the Record and Pension Office of the War Department shall be a chief of said office with the rank of brigadier-general and an assistant chief of said office with the rank of major: Provided, That any person appointed to be Chief of the Record and Pension Office after the passage of this Act shall have the rank of colonel. Sec. 25, ibid.

PROMOTIONS AND DETAILS.

That so long as there remain any officers holding permanent appointments in the Adjutant-General's Department, the Inspector-General's Department, the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, the Pay Department, the Ordnance Department, and the Signal Corps, including those appointed to original vacancies in the grades of captain and first lieutenant under the provisions of sections sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, and twenty-four of this Act, they shall be promoted according to seniority in the several grades, as now provided by law, and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to apply to vacancies which can be filled by such promotions or to the periods for which the officers so promoted shall hold their appointments, and when any vacancy, except that of the chief of the department or corps, shall occur, which can not be filled by promotion as provided in this section, it shall be filled by detail from the line of the Army, and no more permanent appointments shall be made in those departments or corps after the original vacancies created by this Act shall have been filled. Such details shall be made from the grade in which the vacancies exist, under such system of examination as the President may from time to time prescribe.

All officers so detailed shall serve for a period of four years, at the expiration of which time they shall return to duty with the line, and officers below the rank of lieutenant-colonel shall not again be eligible for selection in any staff department until they shall have served two years with the line.

That when vacancies shall occur in the position of chief of any staff corps or department the President may appoint to such vacancies, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, officers of the Army at large not below the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and who shall hold office for terms of four years. When a vacancy in the position of chief of any staff corps or department is filled by the appointment of an officer below the rank now provided by law for said office, said chief shall, while so serving, have the same rank, pay, and allowances now provided for the chief of such corps or department. And any officer now holding office in any corps or department who shall hereafter serve as chief of a staff corps or department and shall subsequently be retired, shall be retired with the rank, pay, and allowances authorized by law for the retirement of such corps or department chief: Provided, That so long as there remain in service officers of any staff corps or department holding permanent appointments, the chief of such staff corps or department shall be selected from the officers so remaining therein. Sec. 26, ibid.

That each position vacated by officers of the line, transferred to any department of the staff for tours of service under this Act, shall be filled by promotion in the line until the total number detailed equals the number authorized for duty in each staff department. Thereafter vacancies caused by details from the line to the staff shall be filled by officers returning from tours of staff duty. If under the operation of this Act the number of officers returned to any particular arm of the service at any time exceeds the number authorized by law in any grade, promotions to that grade shall cease until the number has been reduced to that authorized. Sec. 27, ibid.

Appointments to fill original vacancies in the lowest grade in the Adjutant-General's Department, the Inspector-General's Department, and Judge Advocate-General's Department, and in the grade of captain in the Quartermaster's Department, Subsistence Department, and Pay Department may be made from officers of volunteers commissioned since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and the age limit prescribed as to chaplains shall not apply to persons who served as chaplains of volunteers after said date who were under forty-two years of age when originally appointed. Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 900).

That vacancies in the grade of field officers and captain, created by this Act, in the cavalry, artillery, and infantry shall be filled by promotion according to seniority in each branch, respectively. Vacancies existing after the promotions have been made shall be provided for as follows: A sufficient number shall be reserved in the grade of second lieutenant for the next graduating class at the United States Military Academy.

Persons not over forty years of age who shall have at any time served as volunteers subsequent to April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, may be ordered before boards of officers for such examination as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, and those who establish their fitness before these examining boards may be appointed to the grades of first or second lieutenant in the Regular Army, taking rank in the respective grades according to seniority as determined by length of prior commissioned service; but no person appointed under the provisions of this section shall be placed above another in the same grade with longer commissioned service, and nothing herein contained shall change the relative rank of officers heretofore commissioned in the Regular Army.

Enlisted men of the Regular Army or volunteers may be appointed second lieutenants in the Regular Army to vacancies created by this act, provided that they shall have served one year, under the same conditions now authorized by law for enlisted men of the Regular Army. Sec. 28, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 755).

ENLISTMENTS.

That to fill vacancies occurring from time to time in the several organizations serving without the limits of the United States with trained men, the President is authorized to enlist recruits in numbers equal to four per centum in excess of the total strength authorized for such organizations. Sec. 29, ibid.

That the President is authorized to maintain the enlisted force of the several organizations of the Army at their maximum strength as fixed by this act during the present exigencies of the service, or until such time as Congress may hereafter otherwise direct: Provided, That in the event of the enlistment of a soldier in the Army for the period required by law, and after the expiration of one year of service, should either of his parents die, leaving the other solely dependent upon the soldier for support, such soldier may, upon his own application, be honorably discharged from the service of the United States upon due proof being made of such condition to the Secretary of War. Sec. 30, ibid.

That the Secretary of War is authorized to detach from the Army at large such number of enlisted men as may be necessary to perform duty at the various recruiting stations, and while performing such duty one member of each party shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of sergeant, and one the rank, pay, and allowances of corporal of the arm of the service to which they respectively belong. Sec. 31, ibid.

That when the exigencies of the service of any officer who would be entitled to promotion upon examination require him to remain absent from any place where an examining board could be convened, the President is hereby authorized to promote such officer, subject to examination, and the examination shall take place as soon thereafter as practicable. If upon examination the officer be found disqualified for promotion, he shall, upon the approval of the proceedings by the Secretary of War, be treated in the same manner as if he had been examined prior to promotion. Sec. 32, ibid.

The President of the United States is hereby authorized to select from the brigadier-generals of volunteers two volunteer officers, without regard to age, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint them brigadier-generals, United States Army, for the purpose of placing them on the retired list.

And the President is also hereby authorized to select from the retired list of the Army an officer not above the rank of brigadier-general who may have distinguished himself during the war with Spain, in command of a separate army, and to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the officer so selected to be major-general, United States Army, with the pay and allowances established by law for officers of that grade on the retired list. Sec. 33, ibid.

That all officers who have served during the war with Spain, or since, as officers of the Regular or Volunteer Army of the United States, and have been honorably discharged from the service by resignation or otherwise, shall be entitled to bear the official title, and, upon occasions of ceremony, to wear the uniform of the highest grade they have held by brevet or other commission in the regular or volunteer service. Sec. 34, ibid.

That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause preliminary examinations and surveys to be made for the purpose of selecting four sites with a view to the establishment of permanent camp grounds for instruction of troops of the Regular Army and National Guard, with estimates of the cost of the sites and their equipment with all modern appliances, and for this purpose is authorized to detail such officers of the Army as may be necessary to carry on the preliminary work; and the sum of ten thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the necessary expense of such work, to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of War: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall report to Congress the result of such examination and surveys, and no contract for said sites shall be made nor any obligation incurred until Congress shall approve such selections and appropriate the money therefor. Sec. 35, ibid.

That when in his opinion the conditions in the Philippine Islands justify such action the President is authorized to enlist natives of those islands for service in the Army, to be organized as scouts, with such officers as he shall deem necessary for their proper control, or as troops or companies, as authorized by this act, for the Regular Army. The President is further authorized, in his discretion, to form companies, organized as are companies of the Regular Army, in squadrons or battalions, with officers and noncommissioned officers corresponding to similar organizations in the cavalry and infantry arms. The total number of enlisted men in said native organizations shall not exceed twelve thousand, and the total enlisted force of the line of the Army, together with such native force, shall not exceed at any one time one hundred thousand.

The majors to command the squadrons and battalions shall be selected by the President from captains of the line of the Regular Army, and while so serving they shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of the grade of major. The captains of the troops or companies shall be selected by the President from first lieutenants of the line of the Regular Army, and while so serving they shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of captain of the arm to which assigned. The squadron and battalion staff officers, and first and second lieutenants of companies, may be selected from the noncommissioned officers or enlisted men of the Regular Army of not less than two years' service, or from officers or noncommissioned officers or enlisted men serving, or who have served, in the volunteers subsequent to April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and officers of those grades shall be given provisional appointments for periods of four years each, and no such appointments shall be continued for a second or subsequent term unless the officer's conduct shall have been satisfactory in every respect. The pay and allowances of provisional officers of native organizations shall be those authorized for officers of like grades in the Regular Army. The pay, rations, and clothing allowances to be authorized for the enlisted men shall be fixed by the Secretary of War, and shall not exceed those authorized for the Regular Army.

When, in the opinion of the President, natives of the Philippine Islands shall, by their services and character, show fitness for command, the President is authorized to make provisional appointments to the grades of second and first lieutenants from such natives, who, when so appointed, shall have the pay and allowances to be fixed by the Secretary of War, not exceeding those of corresponding grades of the Regular Army. Sec. 36, ibid.

That the President is authorized to organize and maintain one provisional regiment of not exceeding three battalions of infantry, for service in Porto Rico, the enlisted strength thereof to be composed of natives of that island as far as practicable. The regiment shall be organized as to numbers as authorized for infantry regiments of the Regular Army. The pay, rations, and clothing allowances to be authorized for the enlisted men shall be fixed by the Secretary of War, and shall not exceed those authorized for the Regular Army. The field officers shall be selected from officers of the next lower grades in the Regular Army and shall, while so serving in the higher grade, have the rank, pay, and allowances thereof. The company and regimental and battalion staff officers shall be appointed by the President. The President may, in his discretion, continue with their own consent the volunteer officers and enlisted men of the Porto Rico regiment, whose terms of service expire by law July first, nineteen hundred and one. Enlistments for the Porto Rico regiment shall be made for periods of three years, unless sooner discharged. The regiment shall be continued in service until further directed by Congress. Sec. 37, ibid.

The sale of or dealing in beer, wine or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange or canteen or army transport or upon any premises used for military purposes by the United States, is hereby prohibited. The Secretary of War is hereby directed to carry the provisions of this section into full force and effect. Sec. 38, ibid.

That nothing in this Act shall be held or construed so as to discharge any officer from the Regular Army or to deprive him of the commission which he now holds therein. Sec. 39, ibid.

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to prescribe the kinds and quantities of the component articles of the army ration, and to direct the issue of substitutive equivalent articles in place of any such components whenever, in his opinion, economy and a due regard to the health and comfort of the troops may so require. Sec. 40, ibid.

That the distinctive badges adopted by military societies of men "who served in the armies and navies of the United States during the Spanish-American war and the incident insurrection in the Philippines" may be worn upon all occasions of ceremony by officers and men of the Army and Navy of the United States who are members of said organizations in their own right. Sec. 41, ibid.

That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed. Sec. 42, ibid.

MAXIMUM PUNISHMENT CODE.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 42.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, March 26, 1901.

By direction of the Secretary of War, the following Executive order is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, March 12, 1901.

The Executive order, dated March 30, 1898, establishing limits of punishment for enlisted men of the Army, under an act of Congress approved September 27, 1890, and which was published in General Orders, No. 16, 1898, Headquarters of the Army, is amended so as to prescribe as follows:

ARTICLE I.

In all cases of desertion the sentence may include dishonorable discharge[1] and forfeiture of pay and allowances.

Subject to the modifications authorized in section 3 of this article, the limit of the term of confinement (at hard labor) for desertion shall be as follows:

SECTION 1. In case of surrender—

(a) When the deserter surrenders himself after an absence of not more than thirty days, one year.

(b) When the surrender is made after an absence of more than thirty days, eighteen months.

[1] In a case where, because of previous convictions, the punishment may, under General Orders, No. 42, of 1901, be dishonorable discharge, the department commander may properly require the charges to be brought to trial before a general court-martial, notwithstanding that, if the alternative punishment of dishonorable discharge be not resorted to, the punishment would be within the power of an inferior court. Dig. Opin., J. A. G., par. 1647.

An offense covered by General Orders, No. 42, of 1901, is cognizable by inferior court-martial whenever the limit prescribed in the order may, by substitution of punishment under the provisions of the order, be brought within the punishing power of inferior courts as defined by the eighty-third Article of War. Ibid., par. 1648.

The term "day" or "days," when used in General Orders, No. 42, of 1901, has reference to a day of twenty-four hours. Ibid., par. 1649.

A sentence of a summary court forfeited one month's pay in a case where, under General Orders, No. 42, of 1901, the maximum legal forfeiture was ten dollars. Held, that the sentence was void as to the forfeiture in excess of the limit, and advised that the amount collected in excess of such limit be refunded to the soldier. Ibid., par. 1650.

It is now held by the War Department that when a sentence of confinement or forfeiture exceeds the prescribed limit, the part within the limit is legal and may be approved and carried into execution. (a) Ibid., par. 1651.

[a] See paragraph 2, Circ. 12, A. G. O., 1892.

SEC. 2. In case of apprehension—

(a) When at the time of desertion the deserter shall not have been more than six months in the service, eighteen months.

(b) When he shall have been more than six months in the service, two and one-half years.

SEC. 3. The foregoing limitations are subject to modifications under the following conditions:

(a) The punishment of a deserter may be increased by one year of confinement at hard labor in consideration of each previous conviction of desertion.

(b) The punishment for desertion when joined in by two or more soldiers in the execution of a conspiracy, or for desertion in the presence of an outbreak of Indians or of any unlawful assemblage which the troops may be opposing, shall not exceed dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and confinement at hard labor for five years.

ARTICLE II.

Except as herein otherwise indicated, punishments shall not exceed the limits prescribed in the following table:

Breach of arrest in quarters.	One months' confinement at hard labor and forfeiture of $10; for noncommissioned officer, reduction in addition thereto.

---

a In specifications to charges of larceny or embezzlement the value of the property shall be stated.

ARTICLE III.

The introduction and use of evidence of previous convictions is subject to the following regulations:

1. Such evidence shall be limited to previous convictions by courts-martial of an offense or offenses within one year preceding the arraignment and during the current enlistment. These convictions must be proved by the records of previous trials and convictions, or by duly authenticated copies of such records, or by duly authenticated copies of the orders promulgating such trials and convictions. Charges forwarded to the authority competent to order a general court-martial, or submitted to a summary, garrison, or regimental court-martial, must be accompanied by the proper evidence of previous convictions.

2. Whenever a soldier is convicted of an offense for which a discretionary punishment is authorized, the court will receive evidence of previous convictions, if there be any. General, regimental, and garrison courts-martial will, after a finding of guilty, be opened for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is such evidence and, if so, of receiving it.

3. Previous convictions in connection with inferior court offenses.—When a soldier is convicted of an offense the punishment for which under Article II of this order or the custom of the service does not exceed one month's confinement at hard labor and forfeiture of one month's pay, the punishment so authorized may, upon proof of four or less previous convictions within the prescribed period, be increased one-half for each of such previous convictions; provided that upon proof of five or more such previous convictions, the limit of punishment shall be dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and confinement at hard labor for three months.

4. Previous convictions in connection with general court-martial offenses.—When the conviction is for an offense punishable under Article II of this order or the custom of the service with a greater punishment than one month's confinement at hard labor and forfeiture of one month's pay, such punishment, if it includes dishonorable discharge, shall not be increased by reason of previous convictions, but evidence thereof, whatever their number within the prescribed period, will be submitted to the court to aid it in determining upon the proper measure of punishment, subject to the limit already authorized.

If the authorized punishment under Article II of this order or the custom of the service exceeds one month's confinement at hard labor and forfeiture of one month's pay and does not include dishonorable discharge such punishment shall not be increased on account of previous convictions if less than five are considered, but if there be five or more, the court may adjudge dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of all pay and allowances with the authorized confinement, and when this confinement is less than three months it may be increased to three months.[1]

5. On a conviction of desertion evidence of convictions of previous desertions may also be introduced, irrespective of the period which may have elapsed since such conviction or convictions.

6. When a noncommissioned officer is convicted of an offense not punishable with reduction, he may, upon proof of one previous conviction within the prescribed period, be sentenced to reduction in addition to the punishment already authorized.

7. First-class privates may be reduced to second-class privates in all cases where for like offenses on the part of noncommissioned officers their reduction in grade is now authorized.

Article IV.

When a soldier shall, on one arraignment, be convicted of two or more offenses, none of which is punishable under Article II of this order or the custom of the service with dishonorable discharge, but the aggregate term of confinement for which may exceed six months, dishonorable discharge with forfeiture of pay and allowances may be awarded in addition to the authorized confinement.[2]

Article V.

If, in any case where the limit of punishment is dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and confinement at hard labor for a stated number of months, dishonorable discharge be not adjudged, the limit of forfeiture shall be all pay due and to become due during the prescribed limit of confinement.

[1] By the third subdivision of Article III of the Executive Order of March 30, 1898 (G. O. 16, A. G. O., 1898), it is provided that in consideration of previous convictions the limit of punishment shall be "dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and confinement at hard labor for three months." Such a sentence means, so far as the forfeiture is concerned, forfeiture of pay and allowances due at the date of the discharge. A court-martial when it has the power to award this sentence may award a lesser one, but in doing so can not award confinement and forfeiture greater in amount than confinement for three months and forfeiture of pay and allowances due, or its equivalent under the rule of substitution authorized in the order.(a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1653.

[2] The term "authorized confinement" as used in Article IV of General Order No. 16 of 1895 (now Article IV, General Order No. 16 of 1898), is not limited to the maximum authorized. Confinement for a period less than the maximum is also authorized confinement. The article means that when the maximum term may be more than six months, dishonorable discharge with forfeiture of pay and allowances may be awarded with whatever confinement, within the prescribed limit, the court may adjudge. Held also that such "authorized confinement" is limited to the specific confinement authorized by Article II, or if not provided for therein, by the custom of the service; that is to say, such confinement may not be increased by substitution of confinement for forfeiture, or on account of previous convictions, the same not being provided for by the terms of Article IV. Ibid., par. 1652.

(a) But see Article V, post.

ARTICLE VI.

This order prescribes the maximum limit of punishment for the offenses named, and this limit is intended for those cases in which the severest punishment should be awarded. In other cases the punishment should be graded down according to the extenuating circumstances. Offenses not herein provided for remain punishable as authorized by the Articles of War and the custom of the service.

ARTICLE VII.

Summary courts are subject to the restrictions named in the Eighty-third Article of War. Soldiers against whom charges may be preferred for trial by summary court shall not be confined in the guardhouse, but shall be placed in arrest in quarters, before and during trial and while awaiting sentence, except when in particular cases restraint may be necessary.

ARTICLE VIII.

Substitutions for punishment named in Article II of this order are authorized at the discretion of the courts at the following rates:

Two days' confinement at hard labor for one dollar forfeiture; or the reverse; one day's solitary confinement on bread and water diet for two days' confinement at hard labor or for one dollar forfeiture; provided that a noncommissioned officer not sentenced to reduction shall not be subject to confinement; and provided that solitary confinement shall not exceed fourteen days at one time, nor be repeated until fourteen days have elapsed, and shall not exceed eighty-four days in one year.[1]

ARTICLE IX.

Noncommissioned officers above the rank of corporal shall not, if they object thereto, be brought to trial before regimental, garrison, or summary courts-martial without the authority of the officer competent to order their trial by general court-martial; nor shall sergeants of the post noncommissioned staff or hospital stewards be reduced, but they may be dishonorably discharged whenever reduction is included in the limit of punishment.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

By command of Lieutenant-General Miles:

H. C. CORBIN,
Adjutant-General, Major-General U. S. Army.

[1] The order prescribing maximum punishments also provides for certain substitutions of punishment. The purpose of these provisions is not only to determine the measure, but also the kind of punishment which should be considered authorized so far as the offenses specified in the order are concerned. Thus where the prescribed limit is forfeiture and confinement a reprimand in lieu thereof can not legally be adjudged. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1654.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE FIELD.

General Orders, No. 100.

War Department,
Adjutant-General's Office,
Washington, April 24, 1863.

The following "Instructions for the government of armies of the United States in the field," prepared by Francis Lieber, LL. D., and revised by a board of officers, of which Maj. Gen. E. A. Hitchcock is president, having been approved by the President of the United States, he commands that they be published for the information of all concerned.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. Townsend,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Section I.

MARTIAL LAW—MILITARY JURISDICTION—MILITARY NECESSITY—RETALIATION.

1. A place, district, or country occupied by an enemy stands, in consequence of the occupation, under the martial law of the invading or occupying army, whether any proclamation declaring martial law or any public warning to the inhabitants has been issued or not. Martial law is the immediate and direct effect and consequence of occupation or conquest.

The presence of a hostile army proclaims its martial law.

2. Martial law does not cease during the hostile occupation, except by special proclamation ordered by the commander-in-chief, or by special mention in the treaty of peace concluding the war, when the occupation of a place or territory continues beyond the conclusion of peace as one of the conditions of the same.

3. Martial law in a hostile country consists in the suspension, by the occupying military authority, of the criminal and civil law, and of the domestic administration and government in the occupied place or territory, and in the substitution of military rule and force for the same, as well as in the dictation of general laws, as far as military necessity requires this suspension, substitution, or dictation.

The commander of the forces may proclaim that the administration of all civil and penal law shall continue either wholly or in part, as in times of peace, unless otherwise ordered by the military authority.

4. Martial law is simple military authority exercised in accordance with the laws and usages of war. Military oppression is not martial law; it is the abuse of the power which the law confers. As martial law is executed by military force, it is incumbent upon those who administer it to be strictly guided by the principles of justice, honor, and humanity—virtues adorning a soldier even more than other men, for the very reason that he possesses the power of his arms against the unarmed.

5. Martial law should be less stringent in places and countries fully occupied and fairly conquered. Much greater severity may be exercised in places or regions where actual hostilities exist, or are expected and must be prepared for. Its most complete sway is allowed—even in the commander's own country—when face to face with the enemy, because of the absolute necessities of the case, and of the paramount duty to defend the country against invasion.

To save the country is paramount to all other considerations.

6. All civil and penal law shall continue to take its usual course in the enemy's places and territories under martial law, unless interrupted or stopped by order of the occupying military power; but all the functions of the hostile government—legislative, executive, or administrative— whether of a general, provincial, or local character, cease under martial law, or continue only with the sanction, or, if deemed necessary, the participation of the occupier or invader.

7. Martial law extends to property and to persons, whether they are subjects of the enemy or aliens to that government.

8. Consuls, among Americans and European nations, are not diplomatic agents. Nevertheless, their offices and persons will be subjected to martial law in cases of urgent necessity only; their property and business are not exempted. Any delinquency they commit against the established military rule may be punished as in the case of any other inhabitant, and such punishment furnishes no reasonable ground for international complaint.

9. The functions of ambassadors, ministers, or other diplomatic agents accredited by neutral powers to the hostile government cease, so far as regards the displaced government; but the conquering or occupying power usually recognizes them as temporarily accredited to itself.

10. Martial law affects chiefly the police and collection of public revenue and taxes, whether imposed by the expelled government or by the invader, and refers mainly to the support and efficiency of the army, its safety, and the safety of its operations.

11. The law of war does not only disclaim all cruelty and bad faith concerning engagements concluded with the enemy during the war, but also the breaking of stipulations solemnly contracted by the belligerents in time of peace, and avowedly intended to remain in force in the case of war between the contracting powers.

It disclaims all extortions and other transactions for individual gain; all acts of private revenge, or connivance at such acts.

Offenses to the contrary shall be severely punished, and especially so if committed by officers.

12. Whenever feasible, martial law is carried out in cases of individual offenders by military courts; but sentences of death shall be executed only with the approval of the Chief Executive, provided the urgency of the case does not require a speedier execution, and then only with the approval of the chief commander.

13. Military jurisdiction is of two kinds: First, that which is conferred and defined by statute; second, that which is derived from the common law of war. Military offenses under the statute law must be tried in the manner therein directed; but military offenses which do not come within the statute must be tried and punished under the common law of war. The character of the courts which exercise these jurisdictions depends upon the local laws of each particular country.

In the armies of the United States the first is exercised by courts-martial, while cases which do not come within the Rules and Articles of War, or the jurisdiction conferred by statute or courts-martial, are tried by military commissions.

14. Military necessity, as understood by modern civilized nations, consists in the necessity of those measures which are indispensable for securing the ends of the war, and which are lawful according to the modern law and usages of war.

15. Military necessity admits of all direct destruction of life or limb of armed enemies, and of other persons whose destruction is incidentally unavoidable in the armed contests of the war; it allows of the capturing of every armed enemy and every enemy of importance to the hostile government or of peculiar danger to the captor; it allows of all destruction of property and obstruction of the ways and channels of traffic, travel, or communication, and of all withholding of sustenance or means of life from the enemy; of the appropriation of whatever an enemy's country affords necessary for the subsistence and safety of the army, and of such deception as does not involve the breaking of good faith, either positively pledged, regarding agreements entered into during the war, or supposed by the modern law of war to exist. Men who take up arms against one another in public war do not cease on this account to be moral beings, responsible to one another and to God.

16. Military necessity does not admit of cruelty—that is, the infliction of suffering for the sake of suffering or for revenge, nor of maiming or wounding except in fight, nor of torture to extort confessions. It does not admit of the use of poison in any way, nor of the wanton devastation of a district. It admits of deception, but disclaims acts of perfidy; and, in general, military necessity does not include any act of hostility which makes the return to peace unnecessarily difficult.

17. War is not carried on by arms alone. It is lawful to starve the hostile belligerent, armed or unarmed, so that it leads to the speedier subjection of the enemy.

18. When a commander of a besieged place expels the noncombatants, in order to lessen the number of those who consume his stock of provisions, it is lawful, though an extreme measure, to drive them back, so as to hasten on the surrender.

19. Commanders, whenever admissible, inform the enemy of their intention to bombard a place, so that the noncombatants, and especially the women and children, may be removed before the bombardment commences. But it is no infraction of the common law of war to omit thus to inform the enemy. Surprise may be a necessity.

20. Public war is a state of armed hostility between sovereign nations or governments. It is a law and requisite of civilized existence that men live in political, continuous societies, forming organized units, called states or nations, whose constituents bear, enjoy, and suffer, advance and retrograde together in peace and in war.

21. The citizen or native of a hostile country is thus an enemy, as one of the constituents of the hostile state or nation, and as such is subjected to the hardships of the war.

22. Nevertheless, as civilization has advanced during the last centuries, so has likewise steadily advanced, especially in war on land, the distinction between the private individual belonging to a hostile country and the hostile country itself, with its men in arms. The principle has been more and more acknowledged that the unarmed citizen is to be spared in person, property, and honor as much as the exigencies of war will admit.

23. Private citizens are no longer murdered, enslaved, or carried off to distant parts, and the inoffensive individual is as little disturbed in his private relations as the commander of the hostile troops can afford to grant in the overruling demands of a vigorous war.

24. The almost universal rule in remote times was, and continues to be with barbarous armies, that the private individual of the hostile country is destined to suffer every privation of liberty and protection and every disruption of family ties. Protection was, and still is with uncivilized people, the exception.

25. In modern regular wars of the Europeans, and their descendants in other portions of the globe, protection of the inoffensive citizen of the hostile country is the rule; privation and disturbance of private relations are the exceptions.

26. Commanding generals may cause the magistrate and civil officers of the hostile country to take the oath of temporary allegiance or an oath of fidelity to their own victorious government or rulers, and they may expel every one who declines to do so. But whether they do so or not, the people and their civil officers owe strict obedience to them as long as they hold sway over the district or country, at the peril of their lives.

27. The law of war can no more wholly dispense with retaliation than can the law of nations, of which it is a branch. Yet civilized nations acknowledge retaliation as the sternest feature of war. A reckless enemy often leaves to his opponent no other means of securing himself against the repetition of barbarous outrage.

28. Retaliation will, therefore, never be resorted to as a measure of mere revenge, but only as a means of protective retribution, and, moreover, cautiously and unavoidably; that is to say, retaliation shall only be resorted to after careful inquiry into the real occurrence and the character of the misdeeds that may demand retribution.

Unjust or inconsiderate retaliation removes the belligerents further and further from the mitigating rules of regular war, and by rapid steps leads them nearer to the internecine wars of savages.

29. Modern times are distinguished from earlier ages by the existence, at one and the same time, of many nations and great governments related to one another in close intercourse.

Peace is their normal condition; war is the exception. The ultimate object of all modern war is a renewed state of peace.

The more vigorously wars are pursued, the better it is for humanity. Sharp wars are brief.

30. Ever since the formation and coexistence of modern nations, and ever since wars have become great national wars, war has come to be acknowledged not to be its own end, but the means to obtain great ends of state, or to consist in defense against wrong; and no conventional restrictions of the modes adopted to injure the enemy is any longer admitted; but the law of war imposes many limitations and restrictions on principles of justice, faith, and honor.

SECTION II.

PUBLIC AND PRIVATE PROPERTY OF THE ENEMY—PROTECTION OF PERSONS, AND ESPECIALLY OF WOMEN; OF RELIGION, THE ARTS, AND SCIENCES—PUNISHMENT OF CRIME AGAINST THE INHABITANTS OF HOSTILE COUNTRIES.

31. A victorious army appropriates all public money, seizes all public movable property until further direction by its government, and sequesters for its own benefit or that of its government all the revenues of real property belonging to the hostile government or nation. The title to such real property remains in abeyance during military occupation and until the conquest is made complete.

32. A victorious army, by the martial power inherent in the same, may suspend, change, or abolish, as far as the marshal power extends, the relations which arise from the services due, according to the existing laws of the invaded country, from one citizen, subject, or native of the same to another.

The commander of the army must leave it to the ultimate treaty of peace to settle the permanency of this change.

33. It is no longer considered lawful—on the contrary, it is held to be a serious breach of the law of war—to force the subjects of the enemy into the service of the victorious government, except the latter should proclaim, after a fair and complete conquest of the hostile country or district, that it is resolved to keep the country, district, or place permanently as its own and make it a portion of its own country.

34. As a general rule the property belonging to churches, to hospitals, or other establishments of an exclusively charitable character, to establishments of education, or foundations for the promotion of knowledge, whether public schools, universities, academies of learning, or observatories, museums of the fine arts, or of a scientific character—such property is not to be considered public property in the sense of paragraph 31, but it may be taxed or used when the public service may require it.

35. Classical works of art, libraries, scientific collections, or precious instruments, such as astronomical telescopes, as well as hospitals, must be secured against all avoidable injury, even when they are contained in fortified places whilst besieged or bombarded.

36. If such works of art, libraries, collections, or instruments belonging to a hostile nation or government can be removed without injury, the ruler of the conquering state or nation may order them to be seized and removed for the benefit of the said nation. The ultimate ownership is to be settled by the ensuing treaty of peace.

In no case shall they be sold or given away if captured by the armies of the United States, nor shall they ever be privately appropriated or wantonly destroyed or injured.

37. The United States acknowledge and protect, in hostile countries occupied by them, religion and morality, strictly private property, the persons of the inhabitants, especially those of women, and the sacredness of domestic relations. Offenses to the contrary shall be rigorously punished.

This rule does not interfere with the right of the victorious invader to tax the people or their property, to levy forced loans, to billet soldiers, or to appropriate property, especially houses, lands, boats or ships, and churches, for temporary and military uses.

38. Private property, unless forfeited by crimes or by offenses of the owner, can be seized only by way of military necessity for the support or other benefit of the Army or of the United States.

If the owner has not fled, the commanding officer will cause receipts to be given, which may serve the spoliated owner to obtain indemnity.

39. The salaries of civil officers of the hostile government who remain in the invaded territory, and continue the work of their office, and can continue it according to the circumstances arising out of the war—such as judges, administrative or police officers, officers of city or communal governments—are paid from the public revenue of the invaded territory until the military government has reason wholly or partially to discontinue it. Salaries or incomes connected with purely honorary titles are always stopped.

40. There exists no law or body of authoritative rules of action between hostile armies, except that branch of the law of nature and nations which is called the law and usages of war on land.

41. All municipal law of the ground on which the armies stand, or of the countries to which they belong, is silent and of no effect between armies in the field.

42. Slavery, complicating and confounding the ideas of property (that is, of a thing) and of personality (that is, of humanity), exists according to municipal or local law only. The law of nature and nations has never acknowledged it. The digest of the Roman law enacts the early dictum of a pagan jurist, that, "so far as the law of nature is concerned, all men are equal." Fugitives escaping from a country in which they were slaves, villains, or serfs, into another country, have, for centuries past, been held free and acknowledged free by judicial decisions of European countries, even though the municipal law of the country in which the slave had taken refuge acknowledged slavery within its own dominions.

43. Therefore, in a war between the United States and a belligerent which admits of slavery, if a person held in bondage by that belligerent be captured by or come as a fugitive under the protection of the military forces of the United States, such person is immediately entitled to the rights and privileges of a freeman. To return such person into slavery would amount to enslaving a free person, and neither the United States nor any officer under their authority can enslave any human being. Moreover, a person so made free by the law of war is under the shield of the law of nations, and the former owner or State can have, by the law of postliminy, no belligerent lien or claim of service.

44. All wanton violence committed against persons in the invaded country, all destruction of property not commanded by the authorized officer, all robbery or pillage or sacking, even after taking a place by main force, all rape, wounding, maiming, or killing of such inhabitants, are prohibited under the penalty of death, or such other severe punishment as may seem adequate for the gravity of the offense.

A soldier, officer or private, in the act of committing such violence, and disobeying a superior ordering him to abstain from it, may be lawfully killed on the spot by such superior.

45. All captures and booty belong, according to the modern law of war, primarily to the government of the captor.

Prize money, whether on sea or land, can now only be claimed under local law.

46. Neither officers nor soldiers are allowed to make use of their position or power in the hostile country for private gain, not even for commercial transactions otherwise legitimate. Offenses to the contrary committed by commissioned officers will be punished with cashiering or such other punishment as the nature of the offense may require; if by soldiers, they shall be punished according to the nature of the offense.

47. Crimes punishable by all penal codes, such as arson, murder, maiming, assaults, highway robbery, theft, burglary, fraud, forgery, and rape, if committed by an American soldier in a hostile country against its inhabitants, are not only punishable as at home, but in all cases in which death is not inflicted the severer punishment shall be preferred.

SECTION III.

DESERTERS—PRISONERS OF WAR—HOSTAGES—BOOTY ON THE BATTLE-FIELD.

48. Deserters from the American Army, having entered the service of the enemy, suffer death if they fall again into the hands of the United States, whether by capture or being delivered up to the American Army; and if a deserter from the enemy, having taken service in the Army of the United States, is captured by the enemy, and punished by them with death or otherwise, it is not a breach against the law and usages of war requiring redress or retaliation.

49. A prisoner of war is a public enemy armed or attached to the hostile army for active aid, who has fallen into the hands of the captor, either fighting or wounded, on the field or in the hospital, by individual surrender or by capitulation.

All soldiers, of whatever species of arms; all men who belong to the rising en masse of the hostile country; all those who are attached to the army for its efficiency and promote directly the object of the war, except such as are hereinafter provided for; all disabled men or officers on the field or elsewhere, if captured; all enemies who have thrown away their arms and ask for quarter, are prisoners of war, and as such exposed to the inconveniences as well as entitled to the privileges of a prisoner of war.

50. Moreover, citizens who accompany an army for whatever pur pose, such as sutlers, editors, or reporters of journals, or contractors, if captured, may be made prisoners of war, and be detained as such.

The monarch and members of the hostile reigning family, male or female, the chief, and chief officers of the hostile government, its diplomatic agents, and all persons who are of particular and singular use and benefit to the hostile army or its government, are, if captured on belligerent ground, and if unprovided with a safe conduct granted by the captor's government, prisoners of war.

51. If the people of that portion of an invaded country which is not yet occupied by the enemy, or of the whole country, at the approach of a hostile army, rise, under a duly authorized levy, en masse to resist the invader, they are now treated as public enemies, and, if captured, are prisoners of war.

52. No belligerent has the right to declare that he will treat every captured man in arms of a levy en masse as a brigand or bandit.

If, however, the people of a country, or any portion of the same, already occupied by an army rise against it, they are violators of the laws of war, and are not entitled to their protection.

53. The enemy's chaplains, officers of the medical staff, apothecaries, hospital nurses, and servants, if they fall into the hands of the American Army, are not prisoners of war unless the commander has reasons to retain them. In this latter case, or if, at their own desire, they are allowed to remain with their captured companions, they are treated as prisoners of war, and may be exchanged if the commander sees fit.

54. A hostage is a person accepted as a pledge for the fulfillment of an agreement concluded between belligerents during the war, or in consequence of a war. Hostages are rare in the present age.

55. If a hostage is accepted, he is treated like a prisoner of war, according to rank and condition, as circumstances may admit.

56. A prisoner of war is subject to no punishment for being a public enemy, nor is any revenge wreaked upon him by the intentional infliction of any suffering, or disgrace, by cruel imprisonment, want of food, by mutilation, death, or any other barbarity.

57. So soon as a man is armed by a sovereign government and takes the soldier's oath of fidelity he is a belligerent; his killing, wounding, or other warlike acts are no individual crimes or offenses. No belligerent has a right to declare that enemies of a certain class, color, or condition, when properly organized as solders, will not be treated by him as public enemies.

58. The law of nations knows of no distinction of color, and if an enemy of the United States should enslave and sell any captured persons of their Army, it would be a case for the severest retaliation, if not redressed upon complaint.

The United States can not retaliate by enslavement; therefore death must be the retaliation for this crime against the law of nations.

59. A prisoner of war remains answerable for his crimes committed against the captor's army or people, committed before he was captured, and for which he has not been punished by his own authorities.

All prisoners of war are liable to the infliction of retaliatory measures.

60. It is against the usage of modern war to resolve, in hatred and revenge, to give no quarter. No body of troops has the right to declare that it will not give, and therefore will not expect, quarter; but a commander is permitted to direct his troops to give no quarter, in great straits, when his own salvation makes it impossible to cumber himself with prisoners.

61. Troops that give no quarter have no right to kill enemies already disabled on the ground or prisoners captured by other troops.

62. All troops of the enemy known or discovered to give no quarter in general, or to any portion of the army, receive none.

63. Troops who fight in the uniform of their enemies, without any plain, striking, and uniform mark of distinction of their own, can expect no quarter.

64. If American troops capture a train containing uniforms of the enemy, and the commander considers it advisable to distribute them for use among his men, some striking mark or sign must be adopted to distinguish the American soldier from the enemy.

65. The use of the enemy's national standard, flag, or other emblem of nationality for the purpose of deceiving the enemy in battle is an act of perfidy by which they lose all claim to the protection of the laws of war.

66. Quarter having been given to an enemy by American troops under a misapprehension of his true character, he may, nevertheless, be ordered to suffer death if within three days after the battle it be discovered that he belongs to a corps which gives no quarter.

67. The law of nations allows every sovereign government to make war upon another sovereign state, and therefore admits of no rules or laws different from those of regular warfare regarding the treatment of prisoners of war, although they may belong to the army of a government which the captor may consider as a wanton and unjust assailant.

68. Modern wars are not internecine wars, in which the killing of the enemy is the object. The destruction of the enemy in modern war, and, indeed, modern war itself, are means to obtain that object of the belligerent which lies beyond the war.

Unnecessary or revengeful destruction of life is not lawful.

69. Outposts, sentinels, or pickets are not to be fired upon, except to drive them in or when a positive order, special or general, has been issued to that effect.

70. The use of poison in any manner, be it to poison wells or food or arms, is wholly excluded from modern warfare. He that uses it puts himself out of the pale of the law and usages of war.

71. Whoever intentionally inflicts additional wounds on an enemy already wholly disabled or kills such an enemy, or who orders or encourages soldiers to do so, shall suffer death, if duly convicted, whether he belongs to the Army of the United States or is an enemy captured after having committed his misdeed.

72. Money and other valuables on the person of a prisoner, such as watches or jewelry, as well as extra clothing, are regarded by the American Army as the private property of the prisoner, and the appropriation of such valuables or money is considered dishonorable, and is prohibited.

Nevertheless, if large sums are found upon the persons of prisoners or in their possession they shall be taken from them, and the surplus, after providing for their own support, appropriated for the use of the Army, under the direction of the commander, unless otherwise ordered by the Government. Nor can prisoners claim as private property large sums found and captured in their train, although they have been placed in the private luggage of the prisoners.

73. All officers, when captured, must surrender their side arms to the captor. They may be restored to the prisoner in marked cases, by the commander, to signalize admiration of his distinguished bravery or approbation of his humane treatment of prisoners before his capture. The captured officer to whom they may be restored can not wear them during captivity.

74. A prisoner of war, being a public enemy, is the prisoner of the government and not of the captor. No ransom can be paid by a prisoner of war to his individual captor or to any officer in command. The government alone releases captives, according to rules prescribed by itself.

75. Prisoners of war are subject to confinement or imprisonment, such as may be deemed necessary on account of safety, but they are to be subjected to no other intentional suffering or indignity. The confinement and mode of treating a prisoner may be varied during his captivity according to the demands of safety.

76. Prisoners of war shall be fed upon plain and wholesome food, whenever practicable, and treated with humanity.

They may be required to work for the benefit of the captor's government, according to their rank and condition.

77. A prisoner of war who escapes may be shot or otherwise killed in his flight, but neither death nor any other punishment shall be inflicted upon him simply for his attempt to escape, which the law of war does not consider a crime. Stricter means of security shall be used after an unsuccessful attempt at escape.

If, however, a conspiracy is discovered, the purpose of which is a united or general escape, the conspirators may be rigorously punished, even with death; and capital punishment may also be inflicted upon prisoners of war discovered to have plotted rebellion against the authorities of the captors, whether in union with fellow-prisoners or other persons.

78. If prisoners of war, having given no pledge nor made any promise on their honor, forcibly or otherwise escape, and are captured again in battle, after having rejoined their own army, they shall not be punished for their escape, but shall be treated simply as prisoners of war, although they will be subjected to stricter confinement.

79. Every captured wounded enemy shall be medically treated, according to the ability of the medical staff.

80. Honorable men, when captured, will abstain from giving to the enemy information concerning their own army, and the modern law of war permits no longer the use of any violence against prisoners in order to extort the desired information, or to punish them for having given false information.

SECTION IV.

PARTISANS—ARMED ENEMIES NOT BELONGING TO THE HOSTILE ARMY—SCOUTS—ARMED PROWLERS—WAR REBELS.

81. Partisans are soldiers armed and wearing the uniform of their army, but belonging to a corps which acts detached from the main body for the purpose of making inroads into the territory occupied by the enemy. If captured, they are entitled to all the privileges of the prisoner of war.

82. Men, or squads of men, who commit hostilities, whether by fighting or inroads for destruction or plunder, or by raids of any kind, without commission, without being part and portion of the organized hostile army, and without sharing continuously in the war, but who do so with intermitting returns to their homes and avocations, or with the occasional assumption of the semblance of peaceful pursuits, divesting themselves of the character or appearance of soldiers—such men, or squads of men, are not public enemies, and therefore, if captured, are not entitled to the privileges of prisoners of war, but shall be treated summarily as highway robbers or pirates.

83. Scouts or single soldiers, if disguised in the dress of the country, or in the uniform of the army hostile to their own, employed in obtaining information, if found within or lurking about the lines of the captor, are treated as spies, and suffer death.

84. Armed prowlers, by whatever names they may be called, or persons of the enemy's territory, who steal within the lines of the hostile army for the purpose of robbing, killing, or of destroying bridges, roads, or canals, or of robbing or destroying the mail, or of cutting the telegraph wires, are not entitled to the privileges of the prisoner of war.

85. War rebels are persons within an occupied territory who rise in arms against the occupying or conquering army, or against the authorities established by the same. If captured, they may suffer death, whether they rise singly, in small or large bands, and whether called upon to do so by their own, but expelled, government or not. They are not prisoners of war; nor are they, if discovered and secured before their conspiracy has matured to an actual rising, or to armed violence.

SECTION V.

SAFE CONDUCT—SPIES—WAR TRAITORS—CAPTURED MESSENGERS—ABUSE OF THE FLAG OF TRUCE.

86. All intercourse between the territories occupied by belligerent armies, whether by traffic, by letter, by travel, or in any other way, ceases. This is the general rule. to be observed without special proclamation.

Exceptions to this rule, whether by safe conduct, or permission to trade on a small or large scale, or by exchanging mails, or by travel from one territory into the other, can take place only according to agreement approved by the government or by the highest military authority.

Contraventions of this rule are highly punishable.

87. Ambassadors, and all other diplomatic agents of neutral powers, accredited to the enemy, may receive safe conducts through the territories occupied by the belligerents, unless there are military reasons to the contrary, and unless they may reach the place of their destination conveniently by another route. It implies no international affront if the safe conduct is declined. Such passes are usually given by the supreme authority of the State, and not by subordinate officers.

88. A spy is a person who secretly, in disguise or under false pretense, seeks information with the intention of communicating it to the enemy.

The spy is punishable with death by hanging by the neck, whether or not he succeed in obtaining the information or in conveying it to the enemy.

89. If a citizen of the United States obtains information in a legitimate manner, and betrays it to the enemy, be he a military or civil officer or a private citizen, he shall suffer death.

90. A traitor under the law of war, or a war traitor, is a person in a place or district under martial law who, unauthorized by the military commander, gives information of any kind to the enemy or holds intercourse with him.

91. The war traitor is always severely punished. If his offense consists in betraying to the enemy anything concerning the condition, safety, operations, or plans of the troops holding or occupying the place or district, his punishment is death.

92. If the citizen or subject of a country or place invaded or conquered gives information to his own government, from which he is separated by the hostile army, or to the army of his government, he is a war traitor, and death is the penalty of his offense.

93. All armies in the field stand in need of guides, and impress them if they can not obtain them otherwise.

94. No person having been forced by the enemy to serve as guide is punishable for having done so.

95. If a citizen of a hostile and invaded district voluntarily serves as a guide to the enemy, or offers to do so, he is deemed a war traitor, and shall suffer death.

96. A citizen serving voluntarily as a guide against his own country commits treason, and will be dealt with according to the law of his country.

97. Guides, when it is clearly proved that they have misled intentionally, may be put to death.

98. All unauthorized or secret communication with the enemy is considered treasonable by the law of war.

Foreign residents in an invaded or occupied territory, or foreign visitors in the same, can claim no immunity from this law. They may communicate with foreign parts, or with the inhabitants of the hostile country, so far as the military authorities permit, but no further. Instant expulsion from the occupied territory would be the very least punishment for the infraction of this rule.

99. A messenger carrying written dispatches or verbal messages from one portion of the army, or from a besieged place, to another portion of the same army or its government, if armed and in the uniform of his army, and if captured while doing so in the territory occupied by the enemy, is treated by the captor as a prisoner of war. If not in uniform, nor a soldier, the circumstances connected with his capture must determine the disposition that shall be made of him.

100. A messenger or agent who attempts to steal through the territory occupied by the enemy to further, in any manner, the interests of the enemy, if captured is not entitled to the privileges of the prisoner of war, and may be dealt with according to the circumstances of the case.

101. While deception in war is admitted as a just and necessary means of hostility, and is consistent with honorable warfare, the common law of war allows even capital punishment for clandestine or treacherous attempts to injure an enemy, because they are so dangerous and it is so difficult to guard against them.

102. The law of war, like the criminal law regarding other offenses, makes no difference on account of the difference of sex, concerning the spy, the war traitor, or the war rebel.

103. Spies, war traitors, and war rebels are not exchanged according to the common law of war. The exchange of such persons would require a special cartel, authorized by the government, or, at a great distance from it, by the chief commander of the army in the field.

104. A successful spy or war traitor, safely returned to his own army, and afterwards captured as an enemy, is not subject to punishment for his acts as a spy or war traitor, but he may be held in closer custody as a person individually dangerous.

SECTION VI.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS—FLAGS OF TRUCE[1]—FLAGS OF PROTECTION.

105. Exchanges of prisoners take place, number for number, rank for rank, wounded for wounded, with added condition for added condition, such, for instance, as not to serve for a certain period.

[1] FLAGS OF TRUCE.

1. Dispatch of flag.—Communication by flag of truce, being an exception to the fundamental rule of nonintercourse between belligerents, is not to be resorted to except by the authority of the President or the commanding general of the army or forces operating against the enemy in the field. No inferior commander is empowered to resort to the use of a flag of truce except by the direction of such authorized superior.

2. The party sent out with a flag of truce should be commanded by a commissioned officer designated for the purpose. His command should consist of such number of noncommissioned officers and soldiers as may be requisite for the purposes of the mission, and no more; the party should be reduced to the least number that may be adequate and reasonable. No military person not a constituent of the party, and no civilian, should be allowed to accompany the flag, except by the express authority of the commander dispatching the same.

3. The officer commanding the party, or bearer proper, should be furnished with specific instructions, in writing if practicable, informing and directing him precisely as to his function and duties. Communications committed to him to be conveyed to the enemy should, if practicable, be in writing.

4. The officer in charge should comply literally and exactly with his instructions, not exceeding them. On approaching the enemy's lines he should exhibit the flag, or white signal employed as such, in time and in such a manner as to prevent his party being fired upon. He should deliver his dispatches, if any, to an officer duly authorized to receive them, should receive and carefully retain such dispatches as may be delivered to him, and, his mission being completed, should return as promptly as possible within his own lines. During his absence he should require his escort to confine themselves to their strict duties, and prohibit their holding any communication, except such as may be absolutely necessary, with the military persons or civilians within the enemy's lines.

5. The officer in charge, on his return, is to make at once to the commander by whose order he was dispatched a full report of the performance of his mission, including his precise communications to the enemy and the precise acts and communications of the enemy in reply thereto. He should furnish also a list of all persons, if any, accompanying the flag or returning with it, such as exchanged prisoners, persons authorized to pass the lines, etc., with the fact of their examination and all obtainable particulars of their character and purposes.

6. Reception of flag.—By the law of nations, the bearer in good faith of a flag of truce is, with his escort, inviolable. The flag is not to be fired upon, nor the bearer, or persons properly accompanying him, to be made prisoners. They are to be received with respect and treated with courtesy, and at the end of their mission to be allowed to return without impediment. Where unavoidably detained, they will, if necessary, properly be sheltered and subsisted and their animals foraged.

7. But as a flag of truce may be employed as a cover for illegal designs, the party should not be allowed to enter within the outer line of guards or pickets in the absence of express authority from the commander of the forces, and such precautions should be taken as to prevent their making observations or obtaining information.

8. The flag should either be met by another flag on the neutral ground or territory

106. In exchanging prisoners of war, such numbers of persons of inferior rank may be substituted as an equivalent for one of superior rank as may be agreed upon by cartel, which requires the sanction of the Government or of the commander of the army in the field.

107. A prisoner of war is in honor bound truly to state to the captor his rank, and he is not to assume a lower rank than belongs to him, in order to cause a more advantageous exchange, nor a higher rank, for the purpose of obtaining better treatment.

intervening between the hostile lines, or, on its arrival near the outer line, should be halted by the nearest sentinel or vedette and ordered to face in the direction from which it came. The sentinel or vedette will then, through his corporal, communicate the arrival of the flag to the officer in command of the nearest picket post or guard, who will himself proceed, or will send a commissioned or noncommissioned officer, with a small detachment, to meet the flag and ascertain its object, of which he will at once cause information to be transmitted to the chief commander. The commander, if he desires to receive the flag, which, in discretion, he may refuse to do, will thereupon dispatch a commissioned officer, with suitable escort and proper instructions, to formally receive the flag and respond officially to its communications, or to take charge of such dispatches as the bearer may desire to have forwarded to commander, returning later with the response, if any.

9. Should the officer in charge of the flag insist, in obedience to his instructions, upon a personal interview with the chief commander, the latter may, in his discretion, refuse such interview, or he may proceed to meet the flag in person, or he may cause the bearer to be conducted to his headquarters, or other place appointed, his eyes being bandaged if deemed expedient. But no no member of his escort should, except by express authority, be admitted with him within the lines.

10. Where, indeed, the flag is employed as a means of safe conduct for exchanged prisoners, hostages, refugees, or other civilians permitted by proper authority to pass the lines, these may be admitted by the authority of the chief commander, after having been carefully examined to ascertain if they have in their possession supplies or merchandise. They should be allowed to bring in with them only necessary personal effects.

11. Until the purpose of a flag of truce is accomplished and the party returns, the bearer and those accompanying him (except so far as admitted by authority within the lines) will remain halted in the same or other appointed place, in the presence of an adequate guard, or, if unusual delay be involved, may be allowed to make camp, under proper observation. During their stay no conversation should be held with them on any subject directly or indirectly relating to military or public affairs, and the guard attending them should be accompanied by a commissioned or noncommissioned officer to insure the observance of this precaution.

12. Should the officer in charge of the flag, or any of his escort, be detected in an attempt to obtain illicit information, or in any other form of abuse of the privilege of the flag, or should there arise a reasonable ground of suspicion that the flag has not been dispatched, or is not being employed, in good faith, the bearer and those implicated may be detained for investigation and punishment according to the laws of war. (G. O., No. 43, Headquarters of the Army, May 20, 1893.)

The use of flags of truce by the enemy during the late war was recognized as a belligerent right.(a) But the admission by flag of truce within the lines of the United States Army in time of war of persons coming from the lines of an enemy, can not entitle such persons to immunity from subsequent inquiry into their character and business, or from restraint and detention upon reasonable grounds of suspicion appearing against them. Moreover, a flag of truce does not operate as a safe-conduct, allowing the party admitted under it a free passage through the territory or a dispensation from the legal effects of war, but affords him a merely temporary protection not to be continued after the immediate mission of the flag has been accomplished. So held that a person who, during the war, availed himself of a flag of truce to enter our lines for an illegal purpose, was in no degree protected by the flag from liability to arrest, upon his purpose becoming apparent, or from amenability to trial and punishment for any overt act in violation of the laws of war. (Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 1374.)

[a] Williams v. Bruffy, 6 Otto, 187.

Offenses to the contrary have been justly punished by the commanders of released prisoners, and may be good cause for refusing to release such prisoners.

108. The surplus number of prisoners of war remaining after an exchange has taken place is sometimes released either for the payment of a stipulated sum of money, or, in urgent cases, of provision, clothing, or other necessaries.

Such arrangement, however, requires the sanction of the highest authority.

109. The exchange of prisoners of war is an act of convenience to both belligerents. If no general cartel has been concluded it can not be demanded by either of them. No belligerent is obliged to exchange prisoners of war.

A cartel is voidable as soon as either party has violated it.

110. No exchange of prisoners shall be made except after complete capture, and after an accurate account of them, and a list of the captured officers has been taken.

111. The bearer of a flag of truce can not insist upon being admitted. He must always be admitted with great caution. Unnecessary frequency is carefully to be avoided.

112. If the bearer of a flag of truce offer himself during an engagement, he can be admitted as a very rare exception only. It is no breach of good faith to retain such flag of truce, if admitted during the engagement. Firing is not required to cease on the appearance of a flag of truce in battle.

113. If the bearer of a flag of truce, presenting himself during an engagement, is killed or wounded it furnishes no ground of complaint whatever.

114. If it be discovered, and fairly proved, that a flag of truce has been abused for surreptitiously obtaining military knowledge, the bearer of the flag thus abusing his sacred character is deemed a spy.

So sacred is the character of a flag of truce, and so necessary is its sacredness, that while its abuse is an especially heinous offense, great caution is requisite, on the other hand, in convicting the bearer of a flag of truce as a spy.

114. It is customary to designate by certain flags (usually yellow) the hospitals in places which are shelled, so that the besieging enemy may avoid firing on them. The same has been done in battles when hospitals are situated within the field of the engagement.

116. Honorable belligerents often request that the hospitals within the territory of the enemy may be designated, so that they may be spared.

An honorable belligerent allows himself to be guided by flags or signals of protection as much as the contingencies and the necessities of the fight will permit.

117. It is justly considered an act of bad faith, of infamy or fiendishness, to deceive the enemy by flags of protection. Such act of bad faith may be good cause for refusing to respect such flags.

118. The besieging belligerent has sometimes requested the besieged to designate the buildings containing collections of works of art, scientific museums, astronomical observatories, or precious libraries, so that their destruction may be avoided as much as possible.

SECTION VII.

THE PAROLE.

119. Prisoners of war may be released from captivity by exchange, and, under certain circumstances, also by parole.

120. The term parole designates the pledge of individual good faith and honor to do, or to omit doing, certain acts after he who gives his parole shall have been dismissed, wholly or partially, from the power of the captor.

121. The pledge of the parole is always an individual, but not a private act.

122. The parole applies chiefly to prisoners of war whom the captor allows to return to their country or to live in greater freedom within the captor's country or territory on conditions stated in the parole.

123. Release of prisoners of war by exchange is the general rule; release by parole is the exception.

124. Breaking the parole is punished with death when the person breaking the parole is captured again.

Accurate lists, therefore, of the paroled persons must be kept by the belligerents.

125. When paroles are given and received there must be an exchange of two written documents, in which the name and rank of the paroled individuals are accurately and truthfully stated.

126. Commissioned officers only are allowed to give their parole, and they can give it only with the permission of their superior, as long as a superior in rank is within reach.

127. No noncommissioned officer or private can give his parole except through an officer. Individual paroles not given through an officer are not only void, but subject the individuals giving them to the punishment of death as deserters. The only admissible exception is where individuals, properly separated from their commands, have suffered long confinement without the possibility of being paroled through an officer.

128. No paroling on the battlefield, no paroling of entire bodies of troops after a battle, and no dismissal of large numbers of prisoners, with a general declaration that they are paroled, is permitted or of any value.

129. In capitulations for the surrender of strong places or fortified camps the commanding officer, in cases of urgent necessity, may agree that the troops under his command shall not fight again during the war unless exchanged.

130. The usual pledge given in the parole is not to serve during the existing war unless exchanged.

This pledge refers only to the active service in the field, against the paroling belligerent or his allies actively engaged in the same war. These cases of breaking the parole are patent acts, and can be visited with the punishment of death; but the pledge does not refer to internal service, such as recruiting or drilling the recruits, fortifying places not besieged, quelling civil commotions, fighting against belligerents unconnected with the paroling belligerents, or to civil or diplomatic service for which the paroled officer may be employed.

131. If the government does not approve of the parole, the paroled officer must return into captivity, and should the enemy refuse to receive him, he is free of his parole.

132. A belligerent government may declare, by a general order, whether it will allow paroling, and on what conditions it will allow it. Such order is communicated to the enemy.

133. No prisoner of war can be forced by the hostile government to parole himself, and no government is obliged to parole prisoners of war or to parole all captured officers if it paroles any. As the pledging of the parole is an individual act, so is paroling, on the other hand, an act of choice on the part of the belligerent.

134. The commander of an occupying army may require of the civil officers of the enemy, and of its citizens, any pledge he may consider necessary for the safety or security of his army, and upon their failure to give it he may arrest, confine, or detain them.

SECTION VIII.

ARMISTICE—CAPITULATION.

135. An armistice is the cessation of active hostilities for a period agreed between belligerents. It must be agreed upon in writing, and duly ratified by the highest authorities of the contending parties.

136. If an armistice be declared, without conditions, it extends no further than to require a total cessation of hostilities along the front of both belligerents.

If conditions be agreed upon, they should be clearly expressed, and must be rigidly adhered to by both parties. If either party violates any express condition, the armistice may be declared null and void by the other.

137. An armistice may be general, and valid for all points and lines of the belligerents, or special; that is, referring to certain troops or certain localities only.

An armistice may be concluded for a definite time or for an indefinite time, during which either belligerent may resume hostilities on giving the notice agreed upon to the other.

138. The motives which induce the one or the other belligerent to conclude an armistice, whether it be expected to be preliminary to a treaty of peace or to prepare during the armistice for a more vigorous prosecution of the war, does in no way affect the character of the armistice itself.

139. An armistice is binding upon the belligerents from the day of the agreed commencement; but the officers of the armies are responsible from the day only when they receive official information of its existence.

140. Commanding officers have the right to conclude armistices binding on the district over which their command extends, but such armistice is subject to the ratification of the superior authority, and ceases so soon as it is made known to the enemy that the armistice is not ratified, even if a certain time for the elapsing between giving notice of cessation and the resumption of hostilities should have been stipulated for.

141. It is incumbent upon the contracting parties of an armistice to stipulate what intercourse of persons or traffic between the inhabitants of the territories occupied by the hostile armies shall be allowed, if any. If nothing is stipulated, the intercourse remains suspended, as during actual hostilities.

142. An armistice is not a partial or a temporary peace; it is only the suspension of military operations to the extent agreed upon by the parties.

143. When an armistice is concluded between a fortified place and the army besieging it, it is agreed by all the authorities on this subject that the besieger must cease all extension, perfection, or advance of his attacking works as much so as from attacks by main force.

But as there is a difference of opinion among martial jurists whether the besieged have the right to repair breaches or to erect new works of defense within the place during an armistice, this point should be determined by express agreement between the parties.

144. So soon as a capitulation is signed, the capitulator has no right to demolish, destroy, or injure the works, arms, stores, or ammunition in his possession during the time which elapses between the signing and the execution of the capitulation, unless otherwise stipulated in the same.

145. When an armistice is clearly broken by one of the parties, the other party is released from all obligation to observe it.

146. Prisoners taken in the act of breaking an armistice must be treated as prisoners of war, the officer alone being responsible who gives the order for such a violation of an armistice. The highest authority of the belligerent aggrieved may demand redress for the infraction of an armistice.

147. Belligerents sometimes conclude an armistice while their plenipotentiaries are met to discuss the conditions of a treaty of peace; but plenipotentiaries may meet without a preliminary armistice; in the latter case the war is carried on without any abatement.

SECTION IX.

ASSASSINATION.

148. The law of war does not allow proclaiming either an individual belonging to the hostile army or a citizen or a subject of the hostile government an outlaw who may be slain without trial by any captor, any more than the modern law of peace allows such intentional outlawry; on the contrary, it abhors such outrage. The sternest retaliation should follow the murder committed in consequence of such proclamation, made by whatever authority. Civilized nations look with horror upon offers of rewards for the assassination of enemies as relapses into barbarism.

SECTION X.

INSURRECTION—CIVIL WAR—REBELLION.

149. Insurrection is the rising of people in arms against their government or a portion of it, or against one or more of its laws, or against an officer or officers of the government. It may be confined to mere armed resistance, or it may have greater ends in view.

150. Civil war is war between two or more portions of a country or state, each contending for the mastery of the whole, and each claiming to be the legitimate government. The term is also sometimes applied to war of rebellion, when the rebellious provinces or portions of the state are contiguous to those containing the seat of government.

151. The term rebellion is applied to an insurrection of large extent, and is usually a war between the legitimate government of a country and portions of provinces of the same who seek to throw off their allegiance to it and set up a government of their own.

152. When humanity induces the adoption of the rules of regular war toward rebels, whether the adoption is partial or entire, it does in no way whatever imply a partial or complete acknowledgment of their government, if they have set up one, or of them as an independent or sovereign power. Neutrals have no right to make the adoption of the rules of war by the assailed government toward rebels the ground of their own acknowledgment of the revolted people as an independent power.

153. Treating captured rebels as prisoners of war, exchanging them, concluding of cartels, capitulations, or other warlike agreements with them, addressing officers of a rebel army by the rank they may have in the same, accepting flags of truce, or, on the other hand, proclaiming martial law in their territory, or levying war taxes or forced loans, or doing any other act sanctioned or demanded by the law and usages of public war between sovereign belligerents, neither proves nor establishes an acknowledgment of the rebellious people, or of the government which they may have erected, as a public or sovereign power. Nor does the adoption of the rules of war toward rebels imply an engagement with them extending beyond the limits of these rules. It is victory in the field that ends the strife and settles the future relations between the contending parties.

154. Treating, in the field, the rebellious enemy according to the law and usages of war has never prevented the legitimate government from trying the leaders of the rebellion or chief rebels for high treason, and from treating them accordingly, unless they are included in a general amnesty.

155. All enemies in regular war are divided into two general classes—that is to say, into combatants and noncombatants, or unarmed citizens of the hostile government.

The military commander of the legitimate government, in a war of rebellion, distinguishes between the loyal citizen in the revolted portion of the country and the disloyal citizen. The disloyal citizen may further be classified into those citizens known to sympathize with the rebellion without positively aiding it, and those who, without taking up arms, give positive aid and comfort to the rebellious enemy without being bodily forced thereto.

156. Common justice and plain expediency require that the military commander protect the manifestly loyal citizens in revolted territories against the hardships of the war as much as the common misfortune of all war admits.

The commander will throw the burden of the war, as much as lies within his power, on the disloyal citizens of the revolted portion or province, subjecting them to a stricter police than the noncombatant enemies have to suffer in regular war; and if he deems it appropriate, or if his government demands of him that every citizen shall, by an oath of allegiance or by some other manifest act, declare his fidelity to the legitimate government, he may expel, transfer, imprison, or fine the revolted citizens who refuse to pledge themselves anew as citizens obedient to the law and loyal to the government.

Whether it is expedient to do so, and whether reliance can be placed upon such oaths, the commander or his government have the right to decide.

157. Armed or unarmed resistance by citizens of the United States against the lawful movements of their troops is levying war against the United States, and is therefore treason.

CIVIL SERVICE RULES.[1]

RULE IX. Reinstatements.

RULE X. Transfers.

RULE XI. Promotions.

RULE XII. List of all positions and employments and reports of changes in service to be furnished to commission.

Promulgating order.

In the exercise of power vested in him by the Constitution, and of authority given to him by the seventeen hundred and fifty-third section of the Revised Statutes, and by an act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States, approved January 16, 1883, the President hereby makes and promulgates the following rules, and revokes all others:

RULE I.

Commission to prescribe regulations.

1. The United States Civil Service Commission shall have authority to prescribe regulations in pursuance of, and for the execution of, the provisions of these rules and of the civil-service act.

Definitions of terms.

2. The several terms hereinafter mentioned, wherever used in these rules or the regulations of the commission, shall be construed as follows:

(a) The term "civil-service act" refers to "An act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States," approved January 16, 1883.

(b) The term "classified service" refers to all that part of the executive civil service of the United States included within the provisions of the civil-service act and these rules.

(c) The term "grade," in connection with employees or positions, refers to a group of employees or positions in the classified service arranged upon the basis of duties performed without regard to salaries received.

(d) The term "class," in connection with employees or positions, refers to a group of employees or positions in any grade arranged upon the basis of salaries received, in pursuance of the provisions of section 163 of the Revised Statutes and of section 6 of the civil-service act.

(e) The term "excepted position" refers to any position within the provisions of the civil-service act, but excepted from the requirement of competitive examination or registration for appointment thereto.

RULE II.

Dismissal for violation of act or rules.

1. Any person in the executive civil service of the United States who shall willfully violate any of the provisions of the civil-service act or of these rules shall be dismissed from office.

No interference with elections.

2. No person in the executive civil service shall use his official authority or official influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or controlling the result thereof.

No dismissal or change of rank for political or religious opinions.

3. No person in the executive civil service shall dismiss, or cause to be dismissed, or make any attempt to procure the dismissal of, or in any manner change the official rank or compensation of any other person therein because of his political or religious opinions or affiliations.

No disclosures of political or religious opinions of applicants, etc.

4. No question in any examination, or form of application, shall be so framed as to elicit information concerning, nor shall any inquiry be made concerning, nor any other attempt be made to ascertain, the political or religious opinions or affiliations of any applicant, competitor, or eligible; and all disclosures thereof shall be discountenanced. And no discrimination shall be exercised, threatened, or promised, against or in favor of any applicant, competitor, or elibible because of his political or religious opinions or affiliations.

Recommendations that can not be received, filed, or considered.

5. No recommendation of an applicant, competitor, or eligible, involving any disclosure of his political or religious opinions or affiliations, shall be received, filed, or considered by the commission, by any board of examiners, or by any nominating or appointing officer.

Penalties like in character.

6. In making removals or reductions, or in imposing punishment, for delinquency or misconduct, penalties like in character shall be imposed for like offenses, and action thereupon shall be taken irrespective of the political or religious opinions or affiliations of the offenders.

Status of employees after classification.

7. A person holding a position on the date said position is classified under the civil-service act shall be entitled to all the rights and benefits possessed by persons of the same class or grade appointed upon examination under the provisions of said act.

Procedure in removals.

8. No removal shall be made from the competitive classified service except for just cause and for reasons given in writing; and the person sought to be removed shall have notice and be furnished a copy of such reasons, and be allowed a reasonable time for personally answering the same in writing. Copy of such reasons, notice, and answer, and of the order of removal shall be made a part of the records of the proper department or office; and the reasons for any change in rank or compensation within the competitive classified service shall also be made a part of the records of the proper department or office.[1]

RULE III.

Different branches of classified service.

1. All that part of the executive civil service of the United States which has been or may hereafter be classified under the civil-service act shall be arranged in branches as follows: The departmental service, * * *

2. The departmental service shall include * * *

Extent of departmental service.

(a) All officers and employees of whatever designation, except persons merely employed as laborers or workmen and persons whose appointments are subject to confirmation by the Senate, however or for whatever purpose employed, whether compensated by a fixed salary or otherwise, who are serving in or on detail from—

The several Executive Departments, the commissions, and offices in the District of Columbia.

* * * * *

The force employed under custodians of public buildings.

* * * * *

The Engineer Department at large.

The Ordnance Department at large.

(b) All executive officers and employees outside of the District of Columbia not covered in (a), of whatever designation, except persons merely employed as laborers or workmen and persons whose appointments are subject to confirmation by the Senate, whether compensated by a fixed salary or otherwise—

Who are serving in a clerical capacity or whose duties are in whole or in part of a clerical nature.

Who are serving in the capacity of watchman or messenger.

Who are serving in the capacity of physician, hospital steward, nurse, or whose duties are of a medical nature.

Who are serving in the capacity of draftsman, civil engineer, steam engineer, electrical engineer, computer, or fireman.

[1] Amended July 27, 1897, and May 29, 1899.

The order of the President of July 27, 1897, prohibiting removals from positions subject to competitive examination except upon written charges and notice, is an administrative order regulating the conduct of the President's subordinates; but it has not the force of law, and confers upon an incumbent no right to hold office indefinitely, and no right of which a court of equity can take cognizance. Carr v. Gordon, 82 Fed. Rep., 373.

Employees already classified covered by rules.

7. All officers and employees who have heretofore been classified under the civil-service act shall be considered as still classified and subject to the provisions of these rules.

Employees and positions not covered by rules.

8. The following-mentioned positions or employees shall not be subject to any of the provisions of these rules, except sections 1, 2, and 3 of Rule II:[1]

(a) Any position filled by a person whose place of private business is conveniently located for his performance of the duties of said position, or any position filled by a person remunerated in one sum both for services rendered therein, and for necessary rent, fuel, and lights furnished for the performance of the duties thereof: Provided, That in either case the performance of the duties of said position requires only a portion of the time and attention of the occupant, paying him a compensation not exceeding, for his personal salary only, three hundred dollars per annum, and permitting of his pursuing other regular business or occupation.

(b) Any person in the military or naval service of the United States who is detailed for the performance of civil duties.

(c) Any person employed in a foreign country, under the State Department, or who is temporarily employed in a confidential capacity in a foreign country under any executive department or other office.[1]

(d) Any position the duties of which are of quasi-military or quasi-naval character and for the performance of which duties a person is enlisted for a term of years.

* * * * * * *

(g) Any person in the Quartermaster's Department at large of the United States Army employed as train master, chief packer, foreman packer, pack master, master baler, foreman of laborers, superintendent of stables, or forage master. Appointments to these positions shall be made hereafter on registration tests of fitness prescribed in regulations to be issued by the Secretary of War and approved by the President.[1]

(h) Any person in the Medical Department at large of the United States Army employed as chief packer, packer, or assistant packer. Appointments to these positions shall be made hereafter on registration tests of fitness prescribed in regulations to be issued by the Secretary of War and approved by the President.[1]

(i) Any person in the Ordnance Department at large of the United States Army employed as foreman, assistant foreman, forage master, weigher, skilled laborer, guard, or on piecework. Appointments to these positions shall be made hereafter on registration tests of fitness prescribed in regulations to be issued by the Secretary of War and approved by the President.[1]

[1] Amended May 29, 1899.

(j) Any person in the Engineer Department at large of the United States Army employed as subinspector, overseer, suboverseer, superintendent, master lock manager, deputy lock manager, assistant superintendent of canal, chief deputy inspector, deputy inspector, rodman, stadiaman, chainman, foreman, timekeeper, lock master, assistant lock master, custodian, storekeeper, fort keeper, torpedo keeper, assistant torpedo keeper, light keeper, board master, subforeman, master laborer, gauge reader, steward, dam tender, assistant dam tender, helper, carpenter's helper, machinist's helper, quarry master, blacksmith's helper, climber, barge master, recorder of vessels, track man, gardener, assistant gardener, or weigher. Appointments to these positions shall be made hereafter on registration tests of fitness prescribed in regulations to be issued by the Secretary of War and approved by the President.[1]

(k) Any person in the national military parks at Gettysburg, Shiloh, Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Vicksburg, and Antietam employed as commissioner, assistant in historical work, agent for purchases of land, historian, secretary, rodman, chainman, assistant superintendent, chief guardian, guardian, guard, inspector, carpenter, steam engineer, or painter. Appointments to these positions shall be made hereafter on registration tests of fitness prescribed in regulations to be issued by the Secretary of War and approved by the President.[1]

* * * * * * *

RULE IV.

Examinations authorized.

1. In pursuance of the provisions of section 2 of the civil-service act, there shall be provided, to test fitness for admission to positions which have been, or may hereafter be, classified under the civil-service act, examinations of a practical and suitable character involving such subjects and tests as the commission may direct.

Examinations required.

2. No person shall be appointed to, or be employed in, any position which has been, or may hereafter be, classified under the civil-service act, until he shall have passed

---

[1] Amended May 29, 1899.

the examination provided therefor, or unless he is specially exempt from examination by the provisions of said act or the rules made in pursuance thereof.[1]

When noncompetitive examinations may be held.

3. In pursuance of the provisions of section 2 of the civil-service act, wherever competent persons can be found who are willing to compete, no noncompetitive examination shall be given except as follows:

(a) To test fitness for transfer or for promotion in a part of the service to which promotion regulations have not been applied.

* * * * * *

When examination may be waived.

(c) To test the fitness of a person whom the head of an Executive Department or the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution shall nominate for appointment to a position in the classified service. The appointing officer in making such nomination shall certify that, in his opinion, the position to be filled requires such peculiar qualifications in respect to knowledge and ability, or such scientific or special attainments wholly or in part professional or technical as are not ordinarily acquired in the executive service of the United States, and for the reasons set forth the best interests of the public service require that an examination should be waived in whole or in part. If the President of the United States shall approve such nomination, the Civil Service Commission shall thereupon grant a certificate of qualification, upon such evidence as may be satisfactory to it, that the person so nominated is eligible for and may be appointed to such position by reason of his ascertained qualifications, and by reason of his age, health, and moral character: Provided, That a person so nominated and appointed shall not be transferred to any other position in the classified service except to one that may be filled under the provisions of this clause, and shall not be assigned to any other duties than those pertaining to the particular position to which thus appointed.[1]

---

[1] No person is eligible to an examination—

(a) Who is not a citizen of the United States (see sec. 35, Regulation V);

(b) Who is not within the age limitations prescribed for the examination for which he applies (see secs. 14–18);

(c) Who is physically disqualified for the service which he seeks;

(d) Who is addicted to the habitual use of intoxicating beverages to excess;

(e) Who is barred by Application Regulations IX and X (see sec. 35);

(f) Who is enlisted in the United States Army or Navy and has not secured permission for his examination from the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy, respectively.

(g) Who has been dismissed from the public service for delinquency or misconduct within one year preceding the date of his application;

(h) Who has failed after probation to receive absolute appointment to the position for which he again applies within one year from the date of the expiration of his probationary service;

(i) Who within one year has taken the same kind of examination for which he wishes to again apply: Provided, That persons who pass or fail in an examination may, upon filing a new application, be reexamined at the next annual examinations, though a full year has not quite elapsed since the former examination (see sec. 180);

(j) Who has made a false statement in his application or has been guilty of fraud or deceit in any manner connected with his application or examination, or who has been guilty of crime or infamous or notoriously disgraceful conduct. Section 12, MANUAL OF EXAMINATION.

Dates and places of examinations.

4. In pursuance of the provisions of section 3 of the civil-service act, examinations shall be provided at such places and upon such dates as the commission shall deem most practicable to subserve the convenience of applicants and the needs of the service.

Appointment and duties of boards of examiners.

5. In pursuance of the provisions of section 3 of the civil-service act, the commission shall appoint, from persons in the Government service, such boards of examiners as it may deem necessary. The members of said boards shall perform such duties as the commission may direct in connection with examinations, appointments, and promotions in any part of the service which has been or may hereafter be classified. The members of any board of examiners in the performance of their duties as such shall be under the direct and sole control and authority of the commission. The duties performed by the members of any board of examiners in their capacity as such shall be considered part of the duties of the office in which they are serving, and time shall be allowed for the peformance of said duties during the office hours of said office. The members of any board of examiners shall not all be adherents of one political party when persons of other political parties are available and competent to serve upon said board.

Executive officers to facilitate examinations.

6. In pursuance of the provisions of section 3 of the civil-service act, all executive officers of the United States shall facilitate civil-service examinations, and postmasters, customs officers, internal-revenue officers, and custodians of public buildings at places where such examinations are to be held shall, for the purpose of such examinations, permit and arrange for the use of suitable rooms under their charge and for heating, lighting, and furnishing the same.

RULE V.

Qualifications of applicants.

1. Every applicant for examination must be a citizen of the United States, must be of proper age, and must make an application under oath, upon a form prescribed by the commission, and accompanied by such certificates as may be prescribed.

[1] Amended May 29, 1899.

Applications from enlisted men.

2. No application for examination shall be accepted from any person serving in the Army, the Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States, unless the written consent of the head of the Department under which said person is enlisted is filed with his application.

Disqualifications of applicants and eligibles.

3. The commission may, in its discretion, refuse to examine an applicant, or to certify an eligible, who is physically so disabled as to be rendered unfit for the performance of the duties of the position to which he seeks appointment; or who has been guilty of a crime or of infamous or notoriously disgraceful conduct; or who has been dismissed from the service for delinquency or misconduct within one year next preceding the date of his application; or who has intentionally made a false statement in any material fact, or practiced or attempted to practice any deception or fraud in securing his registration or appointment. Any of the foregoing disqualifications shall be good cause for the removal of an eligible from the service after his appointment.

Age limitation for applicants.
No age limitations for preference claimants.

4. No application for examination shall be accepted unless the applicant is within the age limitations fixed herein for entrance to the position to which he seeks to be appointed: Provided, That subject to the other conditions of these rules the application of any person whose claim of preference under the provisions of section 1754 of the Revised Statutes has been allowed by the commission may be accepted without regard to his age: And provided further, That in case of positions for which no maximum age limitations are fixed herein the commission, upon consultation with and approval of the proper head of Department or office, may, by regulation, determine maximum age limitations and confine competition in examinations for such positions to persons within such limitations. The age limitations for entrance to positions in the different branches of the service shall be as follows:

	Minimum.	Maximum.
DEPARTMENTAL SERVICE:
Page, messenger boy, apprentice (other than apprentice in mints and assay offices), or student	14	20
* * * * *
All other positions	20	No limit.
* * * * *

Applications for trade positions.

5. No application shall be accepted for examination for a position which belongs to one of the recognized mechanical trades unless it shall be shown that the applicant has served as apprentice or as journeyman or as apprentice and journeyman at said trade for such periods as the commission may prescribe.

RULE VI.

The following-named employees or positions which have been classified under the civil-service act shall be excepted from the requirement of examination or registration, unless as otherwise herein specifically stated.

Exceptions from examination or registration.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE.

1. Not exceeding two private secretaries or confidential clerks to the President.

ALL EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

2. Not exceeding two private secretaries or confidential clerks to the head of each of the eight Executive Departments.[1]

3. Not exceeding one private secretary or confidential clerk to each of the assistant heads of the eight Executive Departments.[1]

4. Not exceeding one private secretary or confidential clerk to each of the following heads of bureaus appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate in the eight Executive Departments: * * * in the War Department, the Major-General Commanding the Army, the Adjutant-General, the Inspector-General, the Judge-Advocate-General, the Quartermaster-General, the Commissary-General of Subsistence, the Surgeon-General, the Paymaster-General, the Chief of Engineers, the Chief of Ordnance, the Chief Signal Officer, the Chief of the Record and Pension Office, and the Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds.[1] * * *

5. Not exceeding one private secretary or confidential clerk to each of the heads of bureaus appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate in the eight Executive Departments not enumerated in paragraph four of this rule, if authorized by law.[1]

6. All persons appointed by the President without confirmation by the Senate.[1]

WAR DEPARTMENT.

27. All paymasters' clerks.[2]

* * * * *

---

[1] Amended May 29, 1899.

[2] Amended June 29, 1900.

RULE VII.

Rating examination papers.

1. Examination papers shall be rated on a scale of 100, and the subjects therein shall be given such relative weights as the commission may prescribe. After a competitor's papers have been rated, he shall be duly notified of the result thereof.

Eligible average.

Eligible average of preference claimants.

2. Every competitor who attains an average percentage of 70 or over shall be eligible for appointment to the position for which he was examined; and the names of eligibles shall be entered, in the order of their average percentages, on the proper register of eligibles: Provided, That the names of all competitors whose claims to preference under the provisions of section 1754 of the Revised Statutes have been allowed by the commission, and who attain an average percentage of 65 or over, shall be placed, in the order of their average percentages, at the head of the proper register of eligibles.

Registration of applicants.

Registration of preference claimants.

3. For filling vacancies in positions for which competitive tests are not practicable, the registration of applicants shall be in the order in which they fulfill the requirements prescribed therefor by regulation of the commission: Provided, That persons who served in the military or naval service of the United States in the late war of the rebellion or the Spanish-American war and were honorably discharged therefrom, and persons who have been separated from such position above mentioned through no delinquency or misconduct, shall be placed at the head of the proper register in the order of their fulfillment of said requirements.[1]

Term of eligibility.

Amended May 29, 1899.

Suspension of eligibility upon enlistment.

4. The term of eligibility shall be one year from the date on which the name of the eligible is entered on the register: Provided, That this term may be extended, in the discretion of the commission, for a further period of one year from the date of the expiration of the first year's eligibility, upon such conditions as the commission may prescribe: And provided further, That in case a person whose name is upon any register shall be mustered into the military or naval service of the United States at a time when the United States may be engaged in war, the period of eligibility of such person shall, under such conditions as the Civil Service Commission may prescribe, be considered as suspended during the time such eligible may be serving in the Army or Navy of the United States.[1]

---

[1] Amended May 29, 1899.

RULE VIII.

Method of filling vacancies.

In pursuance of the provisions of section 2 of the civil-service act, whenever a vacancy occurs in any position which has been, or may hereafter be, classified under the civil-service act, and which is not an excepted position, the filling of said vacancy, unless filled through noncompetitive examination or by reinstatement, transfer, promotion, or reduction, shall be governed as follows:

Three names to be certified.

Certification for temporary appointment.

Certification by sexes.

1. The appointing or nominating officer shall request certification to him of the names of eligibles for the position vacant, and the commission shall certify to said officer from the proper register the three names at the head thereof which have not been three times certified to the department or office in which the vacancy exists: Provided, That certification for temporary appointment shall not be counted as one of the three certifications to which an eligible is entitled: And provided further, That whenever the sex of those whose names are to be certified is fixed by any law, rule, or regulation, or is specified in the request for certification, the names of those of the sex so fixed or specified shall be certified; but in other cases certification shall be made without regard to sex.

Selections from certifications.

2. Of the three names certified the nominating or appointing officer shall select one, and if at the time of selection there are more vacancies than one he may select more than one name, unless otherwise directed by the commission.

Probationary period authorized.

What is equivalent to absolute appointment.

Discharge of probationer.

Termination of probation in Indian school service.

Service of substitute part of probationary period.

3. A person selected for appointment shall be notified of his selection by the appointing or nominating officer, and upon his acceptance shall receive from the appointing officer a certificate of appointment for a probationary period of six months, at the end of which period, if the conduct and capacity of the probationer are satisfactory to the appointing officer, his retention in the service shall be equivalent to his absolute appointment; but if his conduct or capacity be not satisfactory, he shall be notified by the appointing officer that he will not receive absolute appointment because of such unsatisfactory conduct or want of capacity; and such notification shall discharge him from the service: Provided, That the probation of an employee in the Indian school service shall terminate at the end of the school year in which he is appointed: And provided further, That the time which an employee has actually served as substitute in parts of the service where substitutes are authorized shall be counted as part of the probationary period of his regular appointment, but that time served under a temporary appointment shall not be so counted.

Temporary service not to be so counted.

Objection of appointing officer to eligible.

4. If the appointing or nominating officer shall object to an eligible named in the certificate, stating that, because of some physical defect, mental unsoundness, or moral disqualification, particularly specified, said eligible would be incompetent or unfit for the performance of the duties of the vacant position, and if said officer shall sustain such objection with evidence satisfactory to the commission, the commission may certify the eligible on the register who is in average percentage next below those already certified in place of the one to whom objection is made and sustained.

Apportionment to be observed.

5. Certifications for appointment of persons for service in, or for direct detail from, any Department or office in Washington, D. C., shall be so made as to maintain, as nearly as the conditions of good administration will warrant, the apportionment of such appointments among the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia upon the basis of population: Provided, That appointments to the following-named positions shall not be so apportioned, viz: * * * those in the post quartermaster's office, * * * those of page, messenger boy, apprentice, and student, * * * And provided further, That a person who has been or may be separated from a classified position by reason of a necessary reduction of force, or by reason of an appointment to a position not in the classified service, may be reinstated under the provisions of Rule IX without filing new evidence of citizenship, and said appointment shall be charged to the apportionment of the State in which citizenship was claimed before said separation, unless a new citizenship is claimed, in which case the citizenship shall be proved in the manner required for original appointment.[1]

Exceptions from apportionment.

10. In any part of the service in which the employment of substitutes is not prohibited by law there may be certified and appointed, in the manner provided for in this rule, only such number of substitutes as are actually needed for the performance of substitute duty.

Employment of substitutes.

11. In any part of the service in which substitutes are employed certifications of those eligible to original appointment shall be made for filling vacancies in substitute positions only, and vacancies in regular positions shall be filled by the appointment or promotion thereto of substitutes in the order of their original appointment as substitutes whenever there are substitutes of the required sex who are eligible and willing to be so appointed or promoted. Substitutes so appointed or promoted shall, however, be subject to the provisions of these rules relating to probation and permanent appointment.

13. Whenever there are no names of eligibles upon a register for any grade in which a vacancy exists and the public interest requires that it must be filled before eligibles can be provided by the commission, such vacancy may, subject to the approval of the commission, be filled by appointment without examination and certification for such part of three months as will enable the commission to provide eligibles. Such temporary appointment shall expire by limitation as soon as an eligible shall be provided, and no person shall serve longer than three months in any one year under such temporary appointment or appointments unless by special authority of the commission previously obtained. Said year limitation shall commence from the date of such first appointment: Provided, That whenever an emergency shall arise requiring that a vacancy shall be filled before a certification can be issued and an appointment made thereto in the manner provided in these rules, such vacancy may be filled without regard to the provisions of these rules for such part of thirty days as may be required for the issuance of a certificate and the execution of the necessary details of an appointment thereto in accordance with said provisions. Such appointment shall in no case continue longer than thirty days.

When temporary appointment must cease.

14. Whenever a temporary appointment shall be made through certification from the eligible registers of the commission in the manner provided in these rules, such temporary appointment shall in no case continue longer than six months and shall expire by limitation at the end of that period.

When temporary appointment may be made permanent.
Promulgated May 29, 1899.

15. All persons serving under temporary appointments at the date of the approval of this section may be permanently appointed, in the discretion of the proper appointing officer, and the special rule approved January 20, 1899, relative to temporary appointments in the Navy Department, is hereby rescinded.[1]

RULE IX.

Reinstatements within one year.

A vacancy in any position which has been, or may hereafter be, classified under the civil-service act, may, upon requisition of the proper officer and the certificate of the commission, be filled by the reinstatement, without examination, of any person who, within one year next preceding the date of said requisition, has, through no delinquency or misconduct, been separated from a position included within the classified service at the date of said requisition and in that department or office and that branch of the service in which said vacancy exists: Provided, That for original entrance to the position proposed to be filled by reinstatement there is not required by these rules, in the opinion of the commission, an examination involving essential tests different from or higher than those involved in the examination for original entrance to the position formerly held by the person proposed to be reinstated: And provided further, That subject to the other conditions of these rules, any person who has served in the military or naval service of the United States in the late Amended Jan. 15, 1900.

And provided further, That any person dismissed from the service upon charges of delinquency or misconduct may be reinstated, subject to the other conditions of these rules, without regard to the one-year time limit of this rule, upon the certificate of the proper appointing officer that he has thoroughly investigated the case and that the charges upon which the dismissal was based were not true.[1]

Reinstatement where dismissal was made upon charges.

Rule X.

Transfers.

Within that part of the civil service of the United States which has been, or may hereafter be, classified under the civil-service act, transfers shall be governed as follows:

Transfers in same Department, office, or branch of service.

1. A person in any Department or office may be transferred within the same Department or office and the same branch of the service upon any test of fitness, not disapproved by the commission, which may be determined upon by the appointing officer, subject to the limitations of the provisos of section 2 of this rule.

Transfers from Department, office, or branch of service.

2. A person who has received absolute appointment may be transferred, without examination, from any Department, office, or branch of the service, upon requisition and consent of the proper officers, and the certificate of the commission: Provided, That no transfer shall be made of a person to a position within the same Department or office and the same branch of the service, or to a position in another Department, office, or branch of the service, if from original entrance to such position said person is barred by the age limitations prescribed therefor, or by the provisions regulating apportionment, but the provisions in relation to apportionment shall be waived upon the certificate of the appointing officer that the transfer is required in the interests of good administration: And provided further, That transfers shall not be made without examination, provided by the commission, to a position for original entrance to which, in the judgment of the commission, there is required by these rules an examination involving essential tests different from or higher than those involved in the examination required for original entrance to the position from which transfer is proposed; but a person employed in any grade shall not because of such employment be barred from the open competitive examination provided for original entrance to any other grade.[1]

Employees not barred from open competitive examinations.

Transfer from the office of the President.

3. Upon requisition of the proper officer and the certificate of the commission, transfer may be made without examination from the office of the President of the United States, after continuous service therein for the two years next preceding the date of said requisition, to any position classified under the civil-service act, if in said position there is required, in the judgment of the commission, the performance of the same class of work that is required to be performed in the position from which transfer is proposed.

Transfers not to be made, exception.

4. Transfer shall not be made from an excepted position to a position not excepted: Provided, That a person holding a position which is excepted, but which he was holding at the time of its classification, or which he entered or held in accordance with the provisions of these rules at a time when said position was subject to competitive examination, and has since served continuously therein, or a person holding a position which is excepted, but which he entered prior to the President's order of November 2, 1894, and has since served continuously therein, may, subject to the other conditions and provisions of this rule, be transferred to a position not excepted.

No transfer from unclassified to classified position, with exception.

5. Transfer shall not be made from a position not classified under the civil-service act to a classified position: Provided, That a person who, by promotion or transfer from a classified position, has entered an unclassified position in any part of the executive civil service other than a position of mere laborer or workman, or to serve under the authority of the General Government as a civilian in the insular possessions under the control of the United States, and has served continuously therein from the date of said promotion or transfer, may be transferred from said unclassified position to the position from which he was so transferred or to any position to which transfer could be made therefrom.[1]

6. Transfer shall not be made from a position outside the District of Columbia to a position within the District of Columbia except upon the certificate of the Commission, subject to the other conditions and provisions of this rule.

Transfer from position outside to position within the District of Columbia.

7. Any person who has been transferred from a classified position to another classified position may be retransferred to the position in which he was formerly employed, or to any position to which transfer could be made therefrom, without regard to the limitations of this rule.

Transfer from one classified position to another classified position.

8. All transfers herein authorized shall be made only after the issuance by the commission of the certificates therefor, except those which may be specifically exempted from such condition by regulation of the commission.

Certificates for transfers.

9. Whenever a person is proposed for transfer from one branch of the service to another branch of the service, and from a part of the service not within the provisions regulating apportionment to a part of the service within said provisions, and the transfer is one which, under the provisions of this rule, may be allowed without examination, such person shall be required, precedent to his transfer, to file a statement under oath setting forth the same facts accompanied by the same certificates or vouchers relating to residence as may be required in an application for examination.

Facts to be set forth in application for transfer.

Rule XI.

1. In pursuance of the requirements of section 7 of the civil-service act, competitive tests or examinations shall, as far as practicable and useful, be established to test fitness for promotion in any part of the civil service of the United States which has been, or may hereafter be, classified under the civil-service act.

Promotions.

2. Regulations to govern promotions shall be formulated by the commission after consultation with the heads of the several departments, bureaus, or offices. It shall be the duty of the head of each department, bureau, or office, when such regulations have been formulated, to promulgate the same, and any amendments or revocations thereof shall be approved by the commission before going into effect.

Commission to formulate details regulating promotions.

Commission to designate boards of promotion.

3. The commission shall, upon the nomination of the head of each department, bureau, or office, designate and select a suitable number of persons, not less than three, in said department, bureau, or office, to be members of a board of promotion. In the departments, bureaus, or offices in Washington, and in all other offices, the members of any board of promotion shall not all be adherents of one political party when persons of other political parties are available and competent to serve upon said board.

Promotions before adoption of regulations.

4. Until the regulations here authorized have been approved for any department, bureau, or office in which promotion regulations approved by the commission are not in force, promotions therein may be made from one class to another class which is in the same grade, and from one grade to another grade, upon any test of fitness not disapproved by the commission, which may be determined upon by the promoting officer: Provided, That no promotion of a person shall be made, except upon examination provided by the commission, from one class to another class, or from one grade to another grade, if for original entrance to said class or grade to which promotion is proposed there is required by these rules an examination involving essential tests different from or higher than those involved in the examination required for original entrance to the class or grade from which promotion is proposed: And provided further, That no promotion of a person shall be made, except upon examination provided by the commission, to a position in which, in the judgment of the commission, there is not required the performance of the same class of work or the practice of the same mechanical trade which is required to be performed or practiced in the position from which promotion is proposed; but a person employed in any grade shall not, because of such employment, be barred from the open competitive examination provided for original entrance to any other grade: And provided further, That no promotion of a person shall be made to a class or grade from original entrance to which such person is barred by the age limitations prescribed therefor or by the provisions regulating apportionment: And provided further, That nothing contained in this rule or in any regulation made in pursuance thereof shall be so construed as to prevent an appointing officer, in his discretion, from promoting a person who served in the military or naval service of the United States in the late war of the rebellion or in the Spanish-American war, and who was honorably discharged therefrom, who has been reinstated in the service in a grade or position below that from which he was separated to a grade or position no higher than that from which he was separated.[1]

RULE XII.

List of all positions and employments to be furnished to commission.

1. In pursuance of the provisions of section 2 of the civil-service act, every nominating or appointing officer in the executive civil service of the United States shall furnish to the commission a list of all the positions and employments under his control and authority, together with the names, designations, compensations, and dates of appointment or employment, of all persons serving in said positions or employments; said list to be arranged as follows: (a) Classified positions not excepted from examination; (b) classified positions excepted from examination; (c) unclassified positions.

Reports of changes in service to be made to commission.

2. Every nominating or appointing officer in the executive civil service shall report in detail to the commission, in form and manner to be prescribed by the commission, all changes, as soon as made, and the dates thereof, in the service under his control and authority, setting forth among other things the following: The position to which an appointment or reinstatement is made; the position from which a separation is made, whether the same was caused by dismissal, resignation, or death; and the position from which and the position to which a transfer or promotion is made; the compensation of every position from which or to which a change is made; the name of every person appointed, reinstated, promoted, transferred, or separated from the service; and every failure to accept an appointment and the reasons therefor.

RULE XIII.

Classification of employees.

The officers and employees in all branches of the classified service of the United States, for the purposes of these rules, shall be arranged in the following classes unless otherwise provided by law:

Class A. All persons receiving an annual salary of less than $720, or a compensation at the rate of less than $720 per annum.

Class B. All persons receiving an annual salary of $720 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $720 or more, but less than $840 per annum.

[1] Amended January 29, 1900.

Class C. All persons receiving an annual salary of $840 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $840 or more, but less than $900 per annum.

Class D. All persons receiving an annual salary of $900 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $900 or more, but less than $1,000 per annum.

Class E. All persons receiving an annual salary of $1,000 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $1,000 or more, but less than $1,200 per annum.

Class 1. All persons receiving an annual salary of $1,200 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $1,200 or more, but less than $1,400 per annum.

Class 2. All persons receiving an annual salary of $1,400 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $1,400 or more, but less than $1,600 per annum.

Class 3. All persons receiving an annual salary of $1,600 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $1,600 or more, but less than $1,800 per annum.

Class 4. All persons receiving an annual salary of $1,800 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $1,800 or more, but less than $2,000 per annum.

Class 5. All persons receiving an annual salary of $2,000 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $2,000 or more, but less than $2,500 per annum.

Class 6. All persons receiving an annual salary of $2,500 or more, or a compensation at the rate of $2,500 or more per annum.

Provided, That this classification shall not include persons appointed to an office by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, nor persons employed as mere laborers or workmen; but all positions whose occupants are designated as laborers or workmen and who were, prior to May 6, 1896, and on June 10, 1896, regularly assigned to work of the same grade as that performed by classified employees shall be included within this classification. Hereafter no person who is appointed as a laborer or workman without examination under the civil service rules shall be assigned to work of the same grade as that performed by classified employees.[1]

SUPPLEMENT

TO THE

MILITARY LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The chapters and paragraphs of this Supplement have been numbered to conform as closely as possible to the chapters and paragraphs of the Military Laws, containing the same general subject-matter.

New material has required three additional chapters in the Supplement—the first one (Chapter XLVIII) containing the legislation in regard to the General Staff Corps; the second (Chapter XLIX), such legislation by the Philippine government and the tariff laws of the United States as affect the Army, and the third (Chapter L), the recent acts of Congress relating to Alaska which affect the Army.

All paragraphs referred to, unless otherwise stated, are those of the Military Laws of the United States (fourth edition) or of this Supplement.

Appendices A, B and C contain, respectively, The Hague conventions of 1899 relating to " Maritime warfare " and the " Laws and customs of war on land," and the act of Congress incorporating " The American National Red Cross " association.

ERRATA.

MILITARY LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES, 1901.

(Fourth edition.)

CHAPTER I.

THE EXECUTIVE.

11a. Employees of the Executive Departments and other establishments of the executive branch of the Government may be detailed from time to time to the office of the President of the United States, for such temporary assistance as may be necessary. Act of February 26, 1907 (34 Stats., 401).

CHAPTER II.

PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO THE SEVERAL EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

APPOINTMENT OF CLERKS; RESTRICTIONS ON APPOINTMENT.

28a. Hereafter it shall be unlawful to detail civil officers, clerks, or other subordinate employees who are authorized or employed under or paid from appropriations made for the military or naval establishments, or any other branch of the public service outside of the District of Columbia, except those officers and employees whose details are now especially provided by law, for duty in any bureau, office, or other division of any Executive Department in the District of Columbia, except temporary details for duty connected with their respective offices. Sec. 6, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 449).

(This paragraph amplifies paragraph 28.)

28b. It shall not be lawful hereafter for any clerk or other employee in the classified service in any of the Executive Departments to be transferred from one Department to another Department until such clerk or other employee shall have served for a term of three years in the Department from which he desires to be transferred. Sec. 5, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 449).

31a. The appropriations herein made for the officers, clerks, and persons employed in the public service shall not be available for the compensation of any persons incapacitated otherwise than temporarily for performing such service, and the heads of Departments shall cause this provision to be enforced. Sec. 3, Act of February 26, 1907 (34 Stats., 993).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 31.)

CONTINGENT FUNDS.

56a. Section one hundred and ninety-two, Revised Statutes,[1] shall not apply to the subscriptions to newspapers by the military information division for the fiscal years ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred, June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and one, June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and two, June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and three, and thereafter. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 929).

(This modifies paragraph 56.)

56b. So much of section one hundred and ninety-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States as requires newspapers purchased for the use of the Executive Departments to be preserved for the permanent files of such Departments be, and the same is hereby, repealed. Sec. 7, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 449).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 56.)

58a. For contingent expenses of the military information division, General Staff Corps, including the purchase of law books, professional books of reference, professional and technical periodicals and newspapers, and of the military attachés at the United States embassies and legations abroad, and of the branch office of the Military Information Division at Manila, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, ten thousand dollars: Provided, That section thirty-six hundred and forty-eight, Revised Statutes,[2] shall not apply to subscriptions for foreign and professional newspapers and periodicals to be paid for from this appropriation. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 260).

(This provision now appears annually in the appropriation act for the support of the Army. It has the effect of modifying paragraph 617.)

ESTIMATES.

64a. Hereafter the estimates for expenses of the Government, except those for sundry civil expenses, shall be prepared and submitted each year according to the order and arrangement of the appropriation Acts for the year preceding. And any changes in such order and arrangement, and transfers of salaries from one office or bureau to another office or bureau, or the consolidation of offices or bureaus desired by the head of any Executive Department may be submitted by note in the estimates. * * *

[1] SEC. 192, R. S. The amount expended in any one year for newspapers, for any Department, except the Department of State, including all the Bureaus and offices connected therewith, shall not exceed one hundred dollars. And all newspapers purchased with the public money for the use of either of the Departments must be reserved as files for such Department.

[2] SEC. 3648, R. S. No advance of public money shall be made in any case whatever. And in all cases of contracts for the performance of any service, or the delivery of articles of any description, for the use of the United States, payment shall not exceed the value of the service rendered, or of the articles delivered previously to such payment. It shall, however, be lawful, under the special direction of the President, to make such advances to the disbursing officers of the Government as may be necessary to the faithful and prompt discharge of their respective duties, and to the fulfillment of the public engagements. The President may also direct such advances as he may deem necessary and proper, to persons in the military and naval service employed on distant stations, where the discharge of the pay and emoluments to which they may be entitled cannot be regularly effected.

Hereafter the heads of the several Executive Departments and all other officers authorized or required to make estimates for the public service shall include in their annual estimates furnished the Secretary of the Treasury for inclusion in the Book of Estimates all estimates of appropriations required for the service of the fiscal year for which they are prepared and submitted, and special or additional estimates for that fiscal year shall only be submitted to carry out laws subsequently enacted, or when deemed imperatively necessary for the public service by the Department in which they shall originate, in which case such special or additional estimate shall be accompanied by a full statement of its imperative necessity and reasons for its omission in the annual estimates. Sec. 4, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 448).

68a. The Public Printer is authorized hereafter to procure and supply, on the requisition of the head of any Executive Department or other Government establishment, complete manifold blanks, books, and forms, required in duplicating processes; also complete patented devices with which to file money-order statements, or other uniform official papers, and to charge such supplies to the allotment for printing and binding of the Department or Government establishment requiring the same. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 481).

68b. Hereafter no book or document not having to do with the ordinary business transactions of the Executive Departments shall be printed on the requisition of any Executive Department or unless the same shall have been expressly authorized by Congress. Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 1249).

68c. Hereafter, in the printing and binding of documents or reports emanating from the Executive Departments, bureaus, and independent offices of the Government, the cost of which is now charged to the allotment for printing and binding for Congress, or to appropriations or allotments of appropriations other than those made to the Executive Departments, bureaus, or independent offices of the Government, the cost of illustrations, composition, stereotyping, and other work involved in the actual preparation for printing, apart from the creation of manuscript, shall be charged to the appropriation or allotment of appropriation for the printing and binding of the Department, bureau, or independent office of the Government in which such documents or reports originate; the balance of cost shall be charged to the allotment for printing and binding for Congress, and to the appropriation or allotment of appropriation of the Executive Department, bureau, or independent office of the Government, in proportion to the number delivered to each; the cost of any copies of such documents or reports distributed otherwise than through Congress, or the Executive Departments, bureaus, and independent offices of the Government, if such there be, shall be charged as heretofore: Provided, That on or before the first day of December in each fiscal year each Executive Department, bureau, or independent office of the Government to which an appropriation or allotment of appropriation for printing and binding is made, shall obtain from the Public Printer an estimate of the probable cost of all publications of such Department, bureau, or independent office now required by law to be printed, and so much thereof as would, under the terms of this resolution, be charged to the appropriation or allotment of appropriation of the Department, bureau, or independent office of the Government in which such publications originate, shall thereupon be set aside to be applied only to the printing and binding of such documents and reports, and shall not be available for any other purpose until all of such allotment of cost on account of such documents and reports shall have been fully paid. Joint Res. of March 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 825).

68d. The number of copies of any public document or report now authorized to be printed or which may hereafter be authorized to be printed for any of the Executive Departments, or bureaus or branches thereof, or independent offices of the Government may be supplied in two or more editions, instead of one, upon a requisition on the Public Printer by the official head of such Department or independent office, but in no case shall the aggregate of said editions exceed the number of copies now authorized, or which may hereafter be authorized. Joint Res. of March 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 826).

68e. Hereafter there shall be submitted in the regular annual estimates to Congress under and as a part of the expenses for "Printing and binding," estimates for all printing and binding required by each of the Executive Departments, their bureaus and offices, and other Government establishments at Washington, District of Columbia, for each fiscal year; and after the fiscal year nineteen hundred and seven no appropriations other than those made specifically and solely for printing and binding shall be used for such purposes in any Executive Department or other Government establishment in the District of Columbia: Provided, That nothing in this section shall apply to stamped envelopes, or envelopes and articles of stationery other than letter heads and note heads, printed in the course of manufacture. Sec. 2, Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 762).

68f. Hereafter no part of the appropriations made for printing and binding shall be used for any illustration, engraving, or photograph in any document or report ordered printed by Congress unless the order to print expressly authorizes the same, nor in any document or report of any executive department or other Government establishment until the head of the executive department or Government establishment shall certify in a letter transmitting such report that the illustration is necessary and relates entirely to the transaction of public business. Sec. 1, Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 1213).

75a. Hereafter the Secretary of the Treasury shall require, and it shall be the duty of the head of each Executive Department or other Government establishment to furnish him, within thirty days after the close of each fiscal year, a statement of all money arising from proceeds of public property of any kind or from any source other than the postal service, received by said head of Department or other Government establishment during the previous fiscal year for or on account of the public service, or in any other manner in the discharge of his official duties other than as salary or compensation, which was not paid into the General Treasury of the United States, together with a detailed account of all payments, if any, made from such funds during such year. All such statements, together with a similar statement applying to the Treasury Department, shall be transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury to Congress at the beginning of each regular session. Sec. 5, Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 763).

MISCELLANEOUS REQUIREMENTS.

100a. No part of any money appropriated by this Act shall be used for purchase, maintaining, driving, or operating any carriage or other vehicle, other than those authorized for personal purposes in section two of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation Act for the fiscal year nineteen hundred and five, unless the same shall have conspicuously painted thereon at all times the full name of the Executive Department or other branch of the public service to which the same belong and in the service of which the same are used. Sec. 3, Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 513).

100b. No part of any money appropriated by this or any other Act shall be used for purchasing, maintaining, driving, or operating any carriage or vehicle (other than those for the use of the President of the United States, the heads of the Executive Departments, and the Secretary to the President, and other than those used for transportation of property belonging to or in the custody of the United States), for the personal or official use of any officer or employee of any of the Executive Departments or other Government establishments at Washington, District of Columbia, unless the same shall be specifically authorized by law or provided for in terms by appropriation of money, and all such carriages and vehicles so procured and used for official purposes shall have conspicuously painted thereon at all times the full name of the Executive Department or other branch of the public service to which the same belong and in the service of which the same are used. Sec. 4, Act of February 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 687).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 100a.)

CHAPTER III.

THE DEPARTMENT OF WAR.

DUTIES OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

126b. No action looking to the discontinuance of the transport service shall be taken without further action of Congress. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 939).

126d. Vessels of the United States, or belonging to the United States, and no others, shall be employed in the transportation by sea of coal, provisions, fodder, or supplies of any description, purchased pursuant to law, for the use of the Army or Navy unless the President shall find that the rates of freight charges by said vessels are excessive and unreasonable, in which case contracts shall be made under the law as it now exists: Provided, That no greater charges be made by such vessels for transportation of articles for the use of the said Army and Navy than are made by such vessels for transportation of like goods for private parties or companies. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 518).

126g. Sections one and two of this Act shall not apply to the transportation of merchandise or passengers between ports or places in the Philippine Archipelago. Until Congress shall have authorized the registry as vessels of the United States of vessels owned in the Philippine Archipelago the government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized to adopt, from time to time, and enforce regulations governing the transportation of merchandise and passengers between ports or places in the Philippine Archipelago. Sec. 3, Act of April 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 154).

126h. Sections one and two of this Act shall not apply to the voyage of a vessel between a port of the United States and a port or place in the Philippine Archipelago begun before April eleventh, nineteen hundred and nine. Sec. 4, Act of April 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 154).

126i. Sections one and two of this Act shall not apply to vessels owned by the United States. Sec. 5, Act of April 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 154).

126j. On and after the passage of this Act the same tonnage taxes shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all foreign vessels coming into the United States from the Philippine Archipelago which are required by law to be levied, collected, and paid upon vessels coming into the United States from foreign countries: Provided, however, That until April eleventh, nineteen hundred and nine, the provisions of law restricting to vessels of the United States the transportation of passengers and merchandise directly or indirectly from one port of the United States to another port of the United States shall not be applicable to foreign vessels engaging in trade between the Philippine Archipelago and the United States: And provided further, That the Philippine Commission shall be authorized and empowered to issue licenses to engage in lighterage or other exclusively harbor business to vessels or other craft actually engaged in such business at the date of the passage of this Act, and to vessels or other craft built in the Philippine Islands or in the United States and owned by citizens of the United States or by inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. Sec. 6, Act of April 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 154).

126k. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall, from time to time, issue regulations for the enforcement of this Act, except as otherwise provided in section three: Provided, That such of the navigation laws of the United States as are in force in the Philippine Archipelago in regard to vessels arriving in the Philippine Islands from the mainland territory and other insular possessions of the United States shall continue to be administered by the proper officials of the government of the Philippine Islands. Sec. 7, Act of April 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 155).

CONGRESS OF NATIONS.

141a. The sum of three thousand dollars a year is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the support and maintenance of the permanent international commission of the congresses of navigation and for the payment of the actual expenses of the properly accredited national delegates of the United States to the meetings of the congresses and of the commission; and that the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized to draw his warrant each year upon the Secretary of the Treasury for such sum, not to exceed three thousand dollars, as may in his opinion be proper to apply to the purposes above mentioned, and that the said sum shall be disbursed under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

The national delegates aforesaid from the United States shall serve without compensation, but shall be reimbursed for their actual expenses incurred while traveling to and from the meetings, and while in attendance thereon, from the funds herein appropriated and authorized to be expended. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 485).

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS.

141b. The Division of Insular Affairs of the War Department, organized by the Secretary of War, is hereby continued until otherwise provided, and shall hereafter be known as the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department. The business assigned to said Bureau shall embrace all matters pertaining to civil government in the island possessions of the United States subject to the jurisdiction of the War Department; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to detail an officer of the Army whom he may consider especially well qualified, to act under the authority of the Secretary of War as the chief of said Bureau; and said officer while acting under said detail shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a colonel. Sec. 87, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 712).

141c. The Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department shall hereafter be appointed by the President for the period of four years, unless sooner relieved, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and while holding that office he shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a brigadier-general. Act of June 25, 1906 (34 Stats., 456).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 141b.)

141d. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to detail an officer of the Army, whom he may consider especially well qualified, to act as principal assistant to the Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department, and said principal assistant while acting under said detail shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a major. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1162).

141e. The provisions of section twenty-seven of the Act of February second, nineteen hundred and one, with reference to the transfer of officers of the line to the departments of the staff for tours of service, shall apply to the vacancy created by this Act and to the return of the officer so detailed to the line of the Army. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1162).

(See paragraph 582.)

APPROPRIATIONS.

272a. No Executive Department or other Government establishment of the United States shall expend, in any one fiscal year, any sum in excess of appropriations made by Congress for that fiscal year, or involve the Government in any contract or other obligation for the future payment of money in excess of such appropriations unless such contract or obligation is authorized by law. Nor shall any Department or any officer of the Government accept voluntary service for the Government or employ personal service in excess of that authorized by law, except in cases of sudden emergency involving the loss of human life or the destruction of property. All appropriations made for contingent expenses or other general purposes, except appropriations made in fulfillment of contract obligations expressly authorized by law, or for objects required or authorized by law without reference to the amounts annually appropriated therefor, shall, on or before the beginning of each fiscal year, be so apportioned by monthly or other allotments as to prevent expenditures in one portion of the year which may necessitate deficiency or additional appropriations to complete the service of the fiscal year for which said appropriations are made; and all such apportionments shall be adhered to and shall not be waived or modified except upon the happening of some extraordinary emergency or unusual circumstance which could not be anticipated at the time of making such apportionment, but this provision shall not apply to the contingent appropriations of the Senate or House of Representatives; and in case said apportionments are waived or modified as herein provided, the same shall be waived or modified in writing by the head of such Executive Department or other Government establishment having control of the expenditure, and the reasons therefor shall be fully set forth in each particular case and communicated to Congress in connection with estimates for any additional appropriations required on account thereof. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be summarily removed from office and may also be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not less than one month. Act of February 27, 1906 (34 Stats., 48).

(This paragraph amends Section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 4 of the deficiency appropriation act of March 3, 1905, 33 Stats., 1257.)

272b. No Act of Congress hereafter passed shall be construed to make an appropriation out of the Treasury of the United States, or to authorize the execution of a contract involving the payment of money in excess of appropriations made by law, unless such Act shall in specific terms declare an appropriation to be made or that a contract may be executed. Sec. 9, Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 764).

(See paragraphs 272a, 659, and 1623.)

APPLICATION OF BALANCES.

279a. Hereafter the appropriations "Ordnance-stores ammunition," "Small-arms target practice," and "Ordnance stores and supplies" shall be available for two years to procure the stores authorized by them. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1175).

(See paragraph 282.)

CHAPTER V.

THE DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY—THE ACCOUNTING OFFICERS.

DESIGNATED DEPOSITORIES.

290a. The treasury of the Philippine Islands and such banking associations in said islands with a paid up capital of not less than two million dollars and chartered by the United States or any State thereof as may be designated by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall be depositories of public money of the United States, subject to the provisions of existing law governing such depositories in the United States: Provided, That the treasury of the government of said islands shall not be required to deposit bonds in the Treasury of the United States, or to give other specific securities for the safe-keeping of public money except as prescribed, in his discretion, by the Secretary of War. Sec. 85, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 711).

CHAPTER VII.

THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE—HABEAS CORPUS—THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

HABEAS CORPUS.

361a. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion, insurrection, or invasion the public safety may require it, in either of which events the same may be suspended by the President, or by the governor, with the approval of the Philippine Commission, wherever during such period the necessity for such suspension shall exist. Sec. 5, Act of July 1, 1920 (32 Stats., 692).

(This paragraph applies to the Philippine Islands, being a part of the "Act temporarily to provide for the administration of the affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.")

CHAPTER XI.

THE MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT—GENERAL PROVISIONS OF ORGANIZATION.

NATIVE TROOPS—TROOPS IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

501a. Any companies of Philippine scouts ordered to assist the Philippine constabulary in the maintenance of order in the Philippine Islands may be placed under the command of officers serving as chief or assistant chiefs of the Philippine constabulary, as herein provided: Provided, That when the Philippine scouts shall be ordered to assist the Philippine constabulary, said scouts shall not at any time be placed under the command of inspectors or other officers of the constabulary below the grade of assistant chief of constabulary. Sec. 2, Act of January 30, 1903 (32 Stats., 783).

THE PORTO RICAN REGIMENT.

505a. Citizens of Porto Rico shall be eligible for enlistment in the Regular Army and the Porto Rico Regiment may be ordered for service outside of the island of Porto Rico. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 934).

(This amplifies paragraphs 671 and 1366 in regard to enlistments.)

505b. For Porto Rico Provisional Regiment of Infantry, composed of two battalions of four companies each, to include the enlisted men of the present regiment who may be in the service June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and four, and officers as herein provided. The field officers shall be detailed from the officers of the Regular Army of the same grade and shall receive the pay and emoluments of their grade. The present officers of the regiment below the grade of field officers who are mentally, morally, and physically qualified and have proved efficient in their respective positions may be reappointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate (and such officers shall be entitled to preference in such appointments) for a provisional term of four years. Officers so reappointed shall be eligible for promotion in the regiment up to and including the rank of captain, upon examination as to their fitness for such promotion. Vacancies then existing or thereafter occurring in the grade of second lieutenant may be filled by the President, in his discretion, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, by the appointment of citizens of Porto Rico for the provisional term of four years, whose qualifications for commissions shall be established by such examination as the President may prescribe, who shall also be eligible for promotion in the regiment up to and including the rank of captain, upon an examination as to their fitness. Vacancies not filled as hereinbefore provided by the reappointment or promotion of the present officers or by the appointment or promotion of citizens of Porto Rico, shall be filled by detail from the line of the infantry of the Army of the same grade with the vacancy to be filled. Men hereafter enlisted in the regiment shall be citizens of Porto Rico and shall be enlisted for a term of two years; and except in the case of noncommissioned officers shall not be reenlisted in time of peace. The names of all enlisted men who have served honorably in the regiment shall be kept at the headquarters of the regiment, and these men shall be regarded as a reserve, to be specially considered in time of war. The pay and allowances of officers and enlisted men of the regiment shall be the same as authorized for like grades in the Regular Army. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 266).

(This paragraph alters the provision of paragraph 505.)

THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

518a. All the volunteer forces of the United States called for by authority of Congress shall, except as hereinbefore provided, be organized in the manner provided by the Act entitled "An Act to provide for temporarily increasing the military establishment of the United States in time of war, and for other purposes," approved April twenty-second, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight. Sec. 24, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 780).

(This paragraph has reference to the "Act to promote the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes." The provisions of this Act are incorporated, in this supplement, in the chapter entitled "Militia," excepting section 23 of the Act which belongs more properly to the "Volunteer Army" and which will be found in this supplement as paragraph 522a.)

522a. For the purpose of securing a list of persons specially qualified to hold commissions in any volunteer force which may hereafter be called for and organized under the authority of Congress, other than a force composed of organized militia, the Secretary of War is authorized from time to time to convene boards of officers at suitable and convenient army posts in different parts of the United States, who shall examine as to their qualifications for the command of troops or for the performance of staff duties all applicants who shall have served in the Regular Army of the United States, in any of the volunteer forces of the United States, or in the organized militia of any State or Territory or District of Columbia, or who, being a citizen of the United States, shall have attended or pursued a regular course of instruction in any military school or college of the United States Army, or shall have graduated from any educational institution to which an officer of the Army or Navy has been detailed as superintendent or professor pursuant to law after having creditably pursued the course of military instruction therein provided. Such examinations shall be under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War, and shall be especially directed to ascertain the practical capacity of the applicant. The record of previous service of the applicant shall be considered as a part of the examination. Upon the conclusion of each examination the board shall certify to the War Department its judgment as to the fitness of the applicant, stating the office, if any, which it deems him qualified to fill, and, upon approval by the President, the names of the persons certified to be qualified shall be inscribed in a register to be kept in the War Department for that purpose. The persons so certified and registered shall, subject to a physical examination at the time, constitute an eligible class for commissions pursuant to such certificates in any volunteer force hereafter called for and organized under the authority of Congress, other than a force composed of organized militia, and the President may authorize persons from this class, to attend and pursue a regular course of study at any military school or college of the United States other than the Military Academy at West Point and to receive from the annual appropriation for the support of the Army the same allowances and commutations as provided in this Act for officers of the organized militia: Provided, That no person shall be entitled to receive a commission as a second lieutenant after he shall have passed the age of thirty; as first lieutenant after he shall have passed the age of thirty-five; as captain after he shall have passed the age of forty; as major after he shall have passed the age of forty-five; as lieutenant-colonel after he shall have passed the age of fifty, or as colonel after he shall have passed the age of fifty-five: And provided further, That such appointments shall be distributed proportionately as near as may be, among the various States contributing such volunteer force: And provided, That the appointments in this section provided for shall not be deemed to include appointments to any office in any company, troop, battery, battalion, or regiment of the organized militia which volunteers as a body or the officers of which are appointed by the governor of a State or Territory. Sec. 23, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 779).

CHAPTER XII.

General Officers, Aids, and Military Secretaries.

555a. When the office of Lieutenant-General shall become vacant it shall not thereafter be filed, but said office shall cease and determine: Provided further, That nothing in this provision shall affect the retired list. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1160).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 555. See paragraph 558.)

CHAPTER XIII.

Rank and command—Tactical and Territorial Organizations.

CLERKS AND MESSENGERS.

572a. Pay to clerks and messengers at headquarters of division and departments and office of the Chief of Staff.

One chief clerk, at the office of the Chief of Staff, two thousand dollars per annum.

Four clerks, at one thousand eight hundred dollars each per annum.

Ten clerks, at one thousand six hundred dollars each per annum.

Twenty-five clerks, at one thousand four hundred dollars each per annum.

Sixty-five clerks, at one thousand two hundred dollars each per annum.

Eighty-six clerks, at one thousand dollars each per annum.

Sixty-eight general-service messengers, at seven hundred and twenty dollars each per annum.

In all, two hundred and seventy-three thousand one hundred and sixty dollars. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 261).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 572 by providing for the clerks needed under the new organization for the General Staff and for military divisions.)

573a. It shall not hereafter be lawful to detail clerks or other civilian employees authorized for the Office of the General Staff for duty, temporary or otherwise, in any office or bureau of the War Department at Washington, District of Columbia, or to detail clerks or other employees from the War Department for service in the Office of the General Staff. Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 418).

573b. No clerk, messenger, or laborer at headquarters of divisions, departments, or office of the Chief of Staff, shall be assigned to duty with any bureau in the War Department. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1161).

CHAPTER XIV.

THE STAFF DEPARTMENTS—GENERAL PROVISIONS—DISBURSING OFFICERS.

APPOINTMENTS AND DETAILS.

577a. No officer hereafter detailed or appointed under the provisions of section twenty-six of the Act of February second, nineteen hundred and one, who has less than four years to serve from the date of his detail or appointment to the date of his retirement shall serve under such detail or appointment or be paid as if on the active list beyond the date of his retirement. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 509).

SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS ARISING DURING THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR.

605a. The proper accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby, directed, in the settlement of the accounts of disbursing officers of the War Department, arising between the twenty-first day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, from which date war with Spain is declared to have existed, and the eighth day of July, nineteen hundred and one, inclusive, the date on which the last organization of the Volunteer Army was mustered out of the service of the United States, to allow such credits for payments and for losses of funds, vouchers, and property as may be recommended under authority of the Secretary of War by the heads of the military bureaus to which such accounts respectively pertain. Sec. 1, Act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stats., 955).

605b. The accounts of military officers, whether of the line or staff, for Government property charged to them, shall be closed by the proper accounting officers whenever, in the judgment of the Secretary of War, it will be for the interest of the United States to do so: Provided, That such accounts originated subsequent to April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and prior to the ninth day of July, nineteen hundred and one: Provided further, That no settlement shall be made by the officers of the Treasury, under this act, of the accounts of any officer whose combined responsibility for public money and Government property shall exceed the sum of five thousand dollars, and only of such officers of the Army in whose accounts there is no apparent fraud against the United States: And provided further, That this act shall remain in force for two years from and after its passage, and no longer. Sec. 2, Act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stats., 956).

DEPOSIT AND SAFE-KEEPING OF THE PUBLIC MONEY.

607a. All funds received as the value of military stores transferred by the several staff departments of the Army to the Insular Department of the Philippines shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States and remain available during the fiscal year nineteen hundred and five for the procurement of like military stores to replace those so transferred. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 275).

LOST CHECKS—DUPLICATE CHECKS.

631a. Whenever any original disbursing officer's check is lost, stolen, or destroyed, the Secretary of the Treasury may authorize the officer issuing the same, after the expiration of six months and within three years from the date of such disbursing officer's check, to issue a duplicate thereof upon the execution of such bond to indemnify the United States as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That when such original disbursing officer's check does not exceed in amount the sum of fifty dollars the Secretary of the Treasury may authorize the issuance of a duplicate at any time after the expiration of thirty days and within three years from the date of such disbursing officer's check. Act of June 19, 1906 (34 Stats., 301).

(This paragraph amends section 3646 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of March 23, 1906, and takes the place of paragraph 631.)

FORMS OF KEEPING AND RENDERING ACCOUNTS.

635a. Hereafter, in all payments to be made under the provisions of army appropriation acts, when the rate of compensation is annual, payment shall be made monthly at the rate of one-twelfth of the annual rate, and of such monthly rate and of all other monthly rates of compensation one-thirtieth shall be the daily rate for computation of pay for fractional parts of a month; and for the purposes of this Act each and every month shall be held to consist of thirty days, whether the actual number of days be greater or less. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 934).

(See Circular 33, War Department, 1904.)

635b. The annual compensation of officers, agents, and employees of the United States for services rendered subsequent to June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and four, shall be divided into twelve equal installments, one of which shall be the pay for each calendar month; and in making payments for a fractional part of a month, one-thirtieth of one of such installments, or of a monthly compensation, shall be the rate to be paid for each day. For the purpose of computing such compensation each and every month shall be held to consist of thirty days, without regard to the actual number of days in any month, thus excluding the thirty-first day of any month from the computation, and treating February as if it actually had thirty days. Sec. 4, Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 513).

(See Circular 33, War Department, 1904.)

635c. Hereafter, where the compensation of any person in the military service of the United States is annual or monthly the following rules for division of time and computation of pay for services rendered are hereby established: Annual compensation shall be divided into twelve equal installments, one of which shall be the pay for each calendar month; and in making payments for a fractional part of a month one-thirtieth of one of such installments, or of a monthly compensation, shall be the daily rate of pay. For the purpose of computing such compensation and for computing time for services rendered during a fractional part of a month in connection with annual or monthly compensation, each and every month shall be held to consist of thirty days, without regard to the actual number of days in any calendar month, thus excluding the thirty-first of any calendar month from the computation and treating February as if it actually had thirty days. Any person entering the service of the United States during a thirty-one day month and serving until the end thereof shall be entitled to pay for that month from the date of entry to the thirtieth day of said month, both days inclusive; and any person entering said service during the month of February and serving until the end thereof shall be entitled to one month's pay, less as many thirtieths thereof as there were days elapsed prior to date of entry: Provided, That for one day's unauthorized absence on the thirty-first day of any calendar month one day's pay shall be forfeited. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 248).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraphs 635a, 635b, and 1192a, and amends paragraph 1192. See paragraph 802. The act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 763), contains a similar provision to the above, substituting for the words "any person in the military service of the United States," the words "any person in the service of the United States.")

CHAPTER XV.

THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

663a. The officers of the Adjutant-General's Department, except the Adjutant-General, and the officers of the Record and Pension Office shall hereafter constitute one department of the Army, to be known as the Military Secretary's Department; and the Adjutant-General's Office and the Record and Pension Office, heretofore constituting bureaus of the War Department, shall hereafter constitute a consolidated bureau to be known as the Military Secretary's Office of the War Department. The officers so consolidated shall be borne on one list in the order of rank held by them, and those of them who hold permanent appointments as officers of the Adjutant-General's Department or of the Record and Pension Office shall be entitled to promotion below the grade of brigadier-general, as now provided by law and in the order of their standing on said list. Except as otherwise provided herein, the laws now in force shall continue to govern the appointment, promotion, and detail of all officers of the consolidated department hereby created: Provided, That the officers of the said consolidated department shall be subject to the supervision of the Chief of Staff in all matters pertaining to the command, discipline, or administration of the existing military establishment: Provided further, That no appointments or details to the grade of assistant adjutant-general with the rank of major shall be made until the number of officers of that grade shall be reduced to less than ten, and thereafter the number of officers of said grade in the consolidated department shall be ten: Provided further, That of the officers consolidated as hereinbefore provided the senior in rank, who shall be chief of the consolidated department and the title of whose office is hereby changed to that of the military secretary, shall hereafter have the rank of major-general, and the second senior of said officers shall hereafter have the rank of brigadier-general: Provided further, That when the office of Military Secretary with the rank of major-general shall hereafter become vacant, it shall not be filled with said rank, and thereafter the chief of the Military Secretary's Department shall have the rank of a brigadier-general with the title of The Military Secretary, and there shall be only one officer above the rank of colonel in the said department. Except as hereinafter provided, the remaining offices of the consolidated department shall retain the titles that they now bear: Provided further, That when the office of Adjutant-General shall become vacant the vacancy so created on the active list of the Army shall not be filled, and thereafter the several officers now designated by the title assistant adjutant-general and by the title assistant chief of the Record and Pension Office shall be designated by the title Military Secretary. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 262).

(This paragraph merges the Adjutant-General's Department with the Record and Pension Office; the Military Secretary's Department assuming the duties heretofore appertaining to both. The laws applicable to the Adjutant-General's Department and to the Record and Pension Office are now applicable to the Military Secretary's Department, except where otherwise provided. See Chapter XXV, Military Laws of the United States, "The Record and Pension Office.")

663b. Nothing in this Act shall be so construed as to deprive any officer of his commission or to increase the total number of officers of the Army, except as herein specially provided, and all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 276).

663c. Whenever the office of the Adjutant-General and the Record and Pension Office shall be consolidated by operation of law, any appropriation available at the time of such consolidation, or that may thereafter become available, for the support of either of those offices shall be equally available for the support of the bureau formed by the consolidation, and all employees provided by law for either of said offices, except such employees as were transferred by the Secretary of War to the Military Information Division of the General Staff prior to April first, nineteen hundred and four, shall be regarded as employees of the consolidated bureau and shall be exclusively engaged upon the work of that bureau as required in the case of the employees of the Record and Pension Office by the Acts making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal years nineteen hundred and four and nineteen hundred and five. Act of April 27, 1904 (33 Stats., 401).

663d. Hereafter the Military Secretary's Department of the Army shall be known as the Adjutant-General's Department, the senior in rank of the officers of said department shall be designated by the title of The Adjutant-General, the other officers of the Department shall be designated by the title of Adjutant-General, and The Military Secretary's Office of the War Department shall be known as the Adjutant-General's Office. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1158).

THE RECRUITING SERVICE.

OATH OF ENLISTMENT.

679a. Hereafter the Secretary of War shall be authorized to detach from the Army at large such number of enlisted men as may be necessary to perform duty at the various recruit depots and the United States military prison, and of the enlisted men so detached, and while performing such duty, there shall be allowed for each depot and the prison one who shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of battalion or squadron sergeant-major, and for each recruit and prison company one who shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of first sergeant, five the rank, pay, and allowances of sergeant, and six the rank, pay, and allowances of corporal, of the arm of the service to which they respectively belong. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 242).

(See paragraph 679.)

679b. Hereafter recruit and prison companies shall have noncommissioned officers, musicians, artificers and cooks of the number and grades allowed by law for companies of infantry. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1160).

(See paragraphs 679 and 679*a*.)

CHAPTER XVII.

THE JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, DETAILS.

694a. Vacancies created or caused by this Act in the grade of major may be filled by appointment of officers holding commissions as judge-advocate of volunteers since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight. Vacancies which may occur thereafter in the grade of major in the Judge-Advocate-General's Department shall be filled by the appointment of officers of the line, or of persons who have satisfactorily served as judge-advocates of volunteers since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, or of persons from civil life who at date of appointment are not over thirty-five years of age and who shall pass a satisfactory examination to be prescribed by the Secretary of War. Sec. 15, Act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stats., 751).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 694, from which part of the text was omitted.)

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

PROMOTIONS, TRANSFERS, AND DETAILS.

706a. The military storekeeper now on duty at the White House as doorkeeper to the President may be continued in that employment and shall receive the full pay and allowances of his grade from the date of his retirement until relieved by the President. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 511).

POST QUARTERMASTER-SERGEANTS.

707a. Two hundred quartermaster-sergeants, at four hundred and eight dollars each. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 261).

(See paragraph 707.)

THE PROCUREMENT OF SUPPLIES.

714a. For providing prizes to be established by the Secretary of War for enlisted men of the Army who graduate from the Army schools for bakers and cooks, the total amount of such prizes at the various schools not to exceed nine hundred dollars per annum, * * * dollars. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1166).

(See paragraph 714.)

715a. For continuing the construction, equipment, and maintenance of suitable buildings at military posts and stations for the conduct of the post exchange, school, library, reading, lunch, amusement rooms, and gymnasium, to be expended in the discretion and under the direction of the Secretary of War, five hundred thousand dollars: Provided, That not more than forty thousand dollars of the above appropriation shall be expended at any one post or station. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 270).

(See paragraphs 715 and 1551.)

716a. No part of the appropriations for the Quartermaster's Department shall be expended on printing, unless the same shall be done by contract after due notice and competition, except in such cases as the emergency will not admit of the giving notice of competition, and in cases where it is impracticable to have the necessary printing done by contract the same may be done, with the approval of the Secretary of War, by the purchase of material and the hire of necessary labor for the purpose. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1167).

(This amends paragraph 716 by adding to the conditional prohibition the "purchase of material.")

719a. Whenever the ice machines, steam laundries, and electric plants shall not come in competition with private enterprise for sale to the public, and in the opinion of the Secretary of War it becomes necessary to the economical use and administration of such ice machines, steam laundries, and electric plants as have been or may hereafter be established in pursuance of law, surplus ice may be disposed of, laundry work may be done for other branches of the Government, and surplus electric light and power may be sold on such terms and in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War: Provided, That the funds received from such sales and in payment of such laundry work shall be used to defray the cost of operation of said ice, laundry, and electric plants; and the sales and expenditures herein provided for shall be accounted for in accordance with the methods prescribed by law, and any sums remaining, after such cost of maintenance and operation have been defrayed, shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation from which the cost of operation of such plant is paid. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1167).

TRANSPORTATION.

720a. In time of war or threatened war preference and precedence shall, upon the demand of the President of the United States, be given, over all other traffic, to the transportation of troops and material of war, and carriers shall adopt every means within their control to facilitate and expedite the military traffic. Sec. 2, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 587).

USE OF TRANSPORTS.

724a. No part of this appropriation shall be applied to the payment of the expenses of using transports in any other Government work than the transportation of the Army, its supplies and employees; and when, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, accommodations are available, transportation may be provided for the officers, enlisted men, employees, and supplies of the Navy, the Marine Corps, and for members and employees of the Philippine and Hawaiian governments, officers of the War Department, Members of Congress, other officers of the Government while traveling on official business, and without expense to the United States, for the families of those persons herein authorized to be transported, and when accommodations are available, transportation may be provided for general passengers to the island of Guam, rates and regulations therefor to be prescribed by the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1170).

PUBLIC ANIMALS; VETERINARIANS.

732a. When practicable, horses shall be purchased in the open market at all military posts or stations, when needed, at a maximum price to be fixed by the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1168).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 732.)

FUEL AND FORAGE.

740a. Hereafter, fuel may be furnished to commissioned officers on the active list by the Quartermaster's Department, for the actual use of such officers only, at the rate of three dollars per cord for standard oak wood, or at an equivalent rate for other kinds of fuel, the amount so furnished to each to be limited to the officer's actual personal necessities as certified to by him. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 250).

740b. Hereafter the heat and light actually necessary for the authorized allowance of quarters for officers and enlisted men shall be furnished at the expense of the United States under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1167).

OFFICERS' HORSES.

741a. When a mounted officer of the line is ordered to duty beyond the seas or to make a change of station in the United States in which the cost of transportation for the private horses which he is required to keep exceeds the sum allowed for that purpose in the Army Regulations, the Secretary of War is authorized, under such regulations in respect to inspection and valuation as he may prescribe, to permit the purchase of said horses by the Quartermaster's Department at a price not exceeding the average contract price paid for horses during the preceding fiscal year, from which sum shall be deducted one-seventh of such contract price for each year, or major fraction of a year, which may have elapsed since date of purchase by said officer. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 937).

741b. Nothing in the Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year nineteen hundred and seven, or any other Act, shall hereafter be held or construed so as to deprive officers of the Army, wherever on duty in the military service of the United States, of forage, bedding, shoeing, or shelter for their authorized number of horses, or of any means of transportation or maintenance therefor for which provision is made by the terms of this Act. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1166).

WORKING PARTIES AND EXTRA DUTY PAY.

745a. Extra pay * * * shall not be paid to any enlisted man who receives extra-duty pay under existing laws or army regulations. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1066).

(See paragraph 745).

CLOTHING AND BEDDING.

750a. For indemnity to officers and men of the Army for clothing and bedding, and so forth, destroyed since April twenty-second, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, by order of medical officers of the Army for sanitary reasons, four million dollars. Act of June 30, 1902, (32 Stats., 517).

(This provision appears also in subsequent army appropriation acts, and its effect is to broaden the scope of paragraph 750 within certain dates.)

ACCOUNTABILITY FOR CLOTHING.

753a. Clothing balances accumulating to the soldier's credit under section thirteen hundred and two shall, when payable to him upon his discharge, be paid out of the appropriation for pay of the Army for the then current fiscal year. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 246).

(This paragraph amends section 1308 of the Revised Statutes. See paragraph 753.)

CHAPTER XIX.

THE SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT.

POST COMMISSARY-SERGEANTS.

762a. Two hundred post commissary-sergeants, at four hundred and eight dollars each, eighty-one thousand six hundred dollars. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 261).

(See paragraph 762.)

DUTIES.

768a. Hereafter officers intrusted with the disbursement of funds for the subsistence of the Army are hereby authorized to keep, at their own risk, in their personal possession for disbursement, such restricted amounts of subsistence funds for facilitating payments of small amounts to public creditors as shall from time to time be authorized by the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1166).

THE RATION.

769a. For difference between the cost of the ration at twenty-five cents and the cost of rations differing in whole or in part from the ordinary ration, to be issued to enlisted men in camp in the United States during periods of recovery from low conditions of health consequent upon service in unhealthy regions or in debilitating climates (to be expended only under special authority of the Secretary of War); and for ice to organizations of enlisted men stationed at such places as the Secretary of War may determine; in all, seven million dollars, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, and accounted for as "Subsistence of the Army," and for that purpose to constitute one fund. Act of April 23, 1904 (38 Stats., 268).

770a. Hereafter the emergency ration prescribed for use on emergent occasions shall, when issued, be furnished in addition to the regular ration under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1165).

(See section 5 of paragraph 770.)

COMMUTATION OF RATIONS.

791a. For payment of commutation of rations in lieu of the regular established ration for members of the Nurse Corps (female) while on duty in hospital, and for enlisted men, applicants for enlistment held under observation, and general prisoners sick therein, at the rate of thirty cents per ration (except that at the General Hospital at Fort Bayard, New Mexico, fifty cents per ration is authorized for enlisted patients in said hospital) to be paid to the surgeon in charge, * * * dollars. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1166).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 791. See paragraphs 769a and 773.)

CHAPTER XX.

THE PAY DEPARTMENT.

DUTIES.

801a. All the money hereinbefore appropriated for pay of the Army and miscellaneous shall be disbursed and accounted for by officers of the Pay Department as pay of the Army, and for that purpose shall constitute one fund. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 267).

801b. Hereafter all payments to the militia under the provisions of section fifteen of the Act of Congress approved January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, and all allowances for mileage shall be made solely from the sums herein appropriated for such purposes. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 267).

(See paragraphs 1662a and 1662b.)

801c. All the accounts of individual paymasters shall be analyzed under the several heads of the appropriation and recorded in detail by the Paymaster-General of the Army before said accounts are forwarded to the Treasury Department for final audit. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 267).

801d. All the money hereinbefore appropriated, except the appropriation for mileage of officers and contract surgeons when authorized by law, for pay of the Army and miscellaneous shall be disbursed and accounted for by officers of the Pay Department as pay of the Army, and for that purpose shall constitute one fund. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 248).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 801a.)

801e. Hereafter all the accounts of individual paymasters shall be analyzed under the several heads of the appropriation and recorded in detail by the Paymaster-General of the Army before said accounts are forwarded to the Treasury Department for final audit, and the Secretary of War may hereafter authorize the assignment to duty in the office of the Paymaster-General, not to exceed five paymasters' clerks, now authorized by law. Act of March 2, 1905 (33 Stats., 832).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 801c.)

PAY OF COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

811a. Hereafter all commissioned officers of the Army may transfer or assign their pay accounts, when due and payable, under such regulations and restrictions as the Secretary of War may prescribe. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1159).

(See paragraph 909a.)

RETIRED OFFICERS.

824a. No part of this sum shall be used for payment of further increase of longevity pay to officers now on the retired list, and officers hereafter retired from active service shall not be therefrom allowed or paid any increase of longevity pay above the sum allowed and paid to such officers at the date of retirement, unless retired on account of wounds received in battle. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 511).

824b. Hereafter, except in case of officers retired on account of wounds received in battle, no officer now on the retired list shall be allowed or paid any further increase of longevity pay, and officers hereafter retired, except as herein provided, shall not be allowed or paid any further increase of longevity pay above that which had accrued at date of their retirement. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 932).

(This paragraph changes the law heretofore existing. See note 5 to paragraph 824.)

PAY DURING ABSENCE.

828a. Leaves to be absent from the Philippine Islands, other than to return to the United States, which may be granted officers of the Army serving in said islands and sailing from Manila, shall be regarded as taking effect on the dates such officers reach Manila, and as terminating on the dates of their departure from Manila, in returning to their stations. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1171).

BARRACKS AND QUARTERS.

830a. At all posts and stations where there are public quarters belonging to the United States officers may be furnished with quarters in kind in such public quarters, and not elsewhere, by the Quartermaster's Department, assigning to the officers of each grade, respectively, such number of rooms as is stated in the following table, namely: Second lieutenants, two rooms; first lieutenants, three rooms; captains, four rooms; majors, five rooms; lieutenant-colonels, six rooms; colonels, seven rooms; brigadier-generals, eight rooms; major-generals, nine rooms; lieutenant-general, ten rooms: Provided further, That at places where there are no public quarters commutation therefor may be paid by the Pay Department to the officer entitled to the same at a rate not exceeding twelve dollars per month per room. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1168).

(This paragraph amends section 9 of the act of June 17, 1878, 20 Stats., page 151, and takes the place of paragraph 830.)

TRAVEL ALLOWANCES.

840a. Hereafter officers, active and retired, when traveling under competent orders without troops, and retired officers who have so traveled since March third, nineteen hundred and five, shall be paid seven cents per mile and no more; distances to be computed and mileage to be paid over the shortest usually traveled routes, with deduction as hereinafter provided; and payment and settlement of mileage accounts of officers shall be made according to distances and deductions computed over routes established and by mileage tables prepared by the Paymaster-General of the Army under the direction of the Secretary of War. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 246).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 840.)

840b. When the station of an officer is changed while he is on leave of absence he will on joining the new station be entitled to mileage for the distance to the new station from the place where he received the order directing the change, provided the distance be no greater than from the old to the new station; but if the distance be greater he will be entitled to mileage for a distance equal to that from the old to the new station only. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 247).

(This paragraph is a reenactment of similar provisions contained in the urgent deficiencies appropriation act of February 27, 1907, 34 Stats., 32.)

841a. For all sea travel actual expenses only shall be paid to officers, contract surgeons, contract dental surgeons, and veterinarians, to paymasters' clerks, and to the expert accountant of the Inspector-General's Department, when traveling on duty under competent orders, with or without troops, and the amount so paid shall not include any shore expenses at port of embarkation or debarkation; but for the purpose of determining allowances for all travel under orders, or for officers and enlisted men on discharge, travel in the Philippine Archipelago, the Hawaiian Archipelago, the home waters of the United States, and between the United States and Alaska shall not be regarded as sea travel and shall be paid for at the rates established by law for land travel within the boundaries of the United States. Act of June 12, 1906 (43 Stats., 247).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraphs 841 and 847a.)

843a. Officers who so desire may, upon application to the Quartermaster's Department, be furnished under their orders transportation requests for the entire journey by land, exclusive of sleeping and parlor car accommodations, or by water; and the transportation so furnished shall, if travel was performed under a mileage status, be a charge against the officer's mileage account, to be deducted at the rate of three cents per mile by the paymaster paying the account, and of the amount so deducted there shall be turned over to an authorized officer of the Quartermaster's Department three cents per mile for transportation furnished, except over any railroad which is a free or fifty per centum land-grant railroad, for the credit of the appropriation for the transportation of the Army and its supplies. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 246).

844a. When the established route of travel shall, in whole or in part, be over the line of anv railroad on which the troops and supplies of the United States are entitled to be transported free of charge, or over any fifty per centum land-grant railroad, officers traveling as herein provided for shall, for the travel over such roads, be furnished with transportation requests, exclusive of sleeping and parlor car accommodations, by the Quartermaster's Department. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 246).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 844.)

MILEAGE TO PAYMASTERS' CLERKS AND TO THE EXPERT ACCOUNTANT OF THE INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

847a. Hereafter actual expenses only shall be paid to paymasters' clerks and the expert accountant of the Inspector-General's Department for sea travel when traveling on duty to, from, or between our island possessions. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 511).

(See paragraph 847.)

PAY OF ENLISTED MEN.

862a. Hereafter first-class gunners of field artillery shall receive two dollars per month and second-class gunners one dollar per month in addition to their pay. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 260).

(See paragraph 1444.)

ADDITIONAL PAY.

865a. Expert riflemen, hereafter qualifying as such, shall receive one dollar a month in addition to their pay. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 929).

865b. Hereafter enlisted men qualifying as expert riflemen shall receive in addition to their pay three dollars per month; those qualifying as sharpshooters, two dollars per month, and those qualifying as marksmen, one dollar per month, under such regulation as the Secretary of War may prescribe. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 241).

(This takes the place of paragraph 865a.)

REENLISTMENT AND CONTINUOUS SERVICE PAY.

869a. All enlisted men of the Regular Army who served as commissioned officers of United States Volunteers organized in eighteen hundred and ninety-eight and eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, or who have served or may be now serving as such in the Porto Rico Provisional Regiment or in the Philippine Scouts, who, upon their muster out, have returned or may return to the ranks of the Regular Army, shall have such period of service counted as if it had been rendered as enlisted men, and that they be entitled to all continuous-service pay and to count, in computing the time necessary to enable them to retire, as enlisted men. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 934).

(See paragraphs 1381 and 1381a.)

869b. All enlisted men of the Regular Army who have been appointed commissioned officers of Philippine Scouts subsequent to March second, nineteen hundred and three, or who may hereafter be so appointed, and who, upon their muster out, have returned or may return to the ranks of the Regular Army, shall have such period of service counted as if it had been rendered as enlisted men, and that they be entitled to all continuous service pay and to count, in computing the time necessary to enable them to retire, as enlisted men. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 247).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 869a.)

DEPOSITS.

879a. Any enlisted man of the Army may deposit his savings, in sums not less than five dollars, with any army paymaster, who shall furnish him a deposit book, in which shall be entered the name of the paymaster and of the soldier, and the amount, date, and place of such deposit. The amount so deposited shall be accounted for in the same manner as other public funds, and shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States and kept as a separate fund, known as pay of the Army deposit fund, repayment of which to the enlisted man on discharge from the service shall be made out of the fund created by said deposits, and shall not be subject to forfeiture by sentence of court-martial, but shall be forfeited by desertion, and shall not be permitted to be paid until final payment on discharge, or to the heirs or representatives of a deceased soldier, and that such deposits be exempt from liability for such soldier's debts: Provided, That the Government shall be liable for the amount deposited to the person so depositing the same. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 246).

(This paragraph amends Section 1305 of the Revised Statutes and takes the place of paragraph 879.)

STOPPAGES AND DEDUCTIONS.

889a. So much of section forty-eight hundred and nineteen, Revised Statutes, as requires that twelve and one-half cents per month be deducted from the pay of retired enlisted men of the Army and passed to the credit of the Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home in the District of Columbia, be, and the same is hereby, repealed. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 242).

(This paragraph supersedes paragraphs 889 and 2271).

CHAPTER XXI.

THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

CONTRACT SURGEONS—DENTAL SURGEONS.

907a. For two hundred and fifty contract surgeons, four hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 266).

(See paragraph 907.)

908a. Hereafter the number of dental surgeons authorized by law shall be thirty-one, of which number one shall be detailed to the United States Military Academy. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1163).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 908.)

909a. Hereafter contract surgeons and contract dental surgeons on duty in Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and Porto Rico may transfer or assign their pay accounts, when due and payable, in the methods now provided by regulations for commissioned officers of the Army. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 266).

909b. For the pay of civilian physicians employed to examine physically applicants for enlistment and enlisted men, and to render other professional services from time to time under proper authority, * * * dollars. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1172).

DUTIES.

910a. The Surgeon-General of the Army, the Surgeon-General of the Navy, and the supervising Surgeon-General of the Marine-Hospital Service, are hereby constituted a board with authority, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to promulgate from time to time such rules as may be necessary in the judgment of said board to govern the issue, suspension, and revocation of licenses for the maintenance of establishments for the propagation and preparation of viruses, serums, toxins, antitoxins, and analogous products, applicable to the prevention and cure of diseases of man, intended for sale in the District of Columbia, or to be sent, carried, or brought for sale from any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, into any other State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or from the United States into any foreign country, or from any foreign country into the United States: Provided, That all licenses issued for the maintenance of establishments for the propagation and preparation in any foreign country of any virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product aforesaid, for sale, barter, or exchange in the United States, shall be issued upon condition that the licentiates will permit the inspection of the establishments where said articles are propagated and prepared, in accordance with section three of this Act. Sec. 4, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 729).

910b. There shall be an advisory board for the hygienic laboratory provided by the Act of Congress approved March third, nineteen hundred and one, for consultation with the Surgeon-General of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service relative to the investigations to be inaugurated, and the methods of conducting the same, in said laboratory. Said board shall consist of three competent experts, to be detailed from the Army, the Navy, and the Bureau of Animal Industry by the Surgeon-General of the Army, the Surgeon-General of the Navy, and the Secretary of Agriculture, respectively, which experts, with the director of the said laboratory, shall be ex officio members of the board, and serve without additional compensation. Five other members of said board shall be appointed by the Surgeon-General of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall be skilled in laboratory work in its relation to the public health, and not in the regular employment of the Government. The said five members shall each receive compensation of ten dollars per diem while serving in conference, as aforesaid, together with allowance for actual and necessary traveling expenses and hotel expenses while in conference. Said conference is not to exceed ten days in any one fiscal year. The term of service of the five members of said board, not in the regular employment of the Government, first appointed shall be so arranged that one of said members shall retire each year, the subsequent appointments to be for a period of five years. Appointments to fill vacancies occurring in a manner other than as above provided shall be made for the unexpired term of the member whose place has become vacant. Sec. 5, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 713).

913a. When a contract surgeon is in charge of a hospital he shall have the same authority as a commissioned medical officer. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 266).

(See paragraph 907 and note thereto; see also A. R. 1418 and 1421 of 1904.)

MEDICAL ATTENDANCE—PHILIPPINE CONSTABULARY.

913b. Whenever it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Chief of the Philippines Constabulary, or of an assistant chief of the Philippines Constabulary in charge of an established district, that an officer or enlisted man of the Philippines Constabulary is suffering from illness or injury incurred in line of duty and that there is not within reach or available a medical officer required by law to render medical or surgical attendance to such officer or enlisted man, as provided by law, the Chief of the Philippines Constabulary, or an assistant chief of the Philippines Constabulary, as herein defined, may specially authorize the employment of an available medical officer or contract surgeon of the United States Army to render such medical attendance as may be required, and pay therefor in accordance with the prescribed schedule of fees for medical services in the Philippines Constabulary.

Sec. 2. In any case in which an officer or enlisted man of the Philippines Constabulary entitled to medical treatment is received at a military hospital under the control of the United States military authorities, the regular schedule of fees for subsistence and attendance at such hospital shall be paid and no more, and in such cases payment shall be made on proper vouchers by the paymaster of the Philippines Constabulary to the chief surgeon of the Division of the Philippines, and not as a personal fee to any officer in charge of such military hospital.

Sec. 3. The appropriations for medical attendance of the Philippines Constabulary are hereby made available for payment for medical attendance as herein provided, subject to the conditions prescribed for such attendance in Act Numbered Eight hundred and seven, that officers shall be entitled only to reimbursement for hospital charges incurred by them by reason of injury or disability received in line of duty.

Sec. 4. In all cases in which suspensions have been made by the Auditor for the Philippine Islands on account of payments made by disbursing officers for the Philippines Constabulary to medical officers or contract surgeons of the United States Army for medical services rendered to members of the Philippines Constabulary, and such payments have not been refunded, the Auditor is hereby authorized to credit the accounts of such disbursing officers with the amounts so suspended, and the appropriations against which the same were at the time charged are hereby made available for such payments, and for this purpose and to this extent this Act is made retroactive.

Sec. 5. In cases in which payments have been made by provincial treasurers, upon the orders of the provincial boards, to officers of the United States Army or to medical officers receiving salaries from the Insular Government but whose duties did not require them to render such service, for medical attendance upon provincial prisoners, the Auditor is hereby authorized to allow credit in the accounts of such provincial treasurers for such payments when it shall be shown to his satisfaction that there was available no medical officer required by law to perform such medical service, the provisions of Act Numbered One hundred and forty-eight to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, That such payments are reasonable, and a certificate of the Commissioner of Public Health that the fees charged in any case are reasonable may be accepted by the Auditor as final. The president of a provincial board of health or of a municipal board of health may be required to render, without charge, to any officer or enlisted man of the Philippines Constabulary, or to a provincial prisoner, such medical service as may be needed in any case, upon notice by the officer in immediate command of such Constabulary officer or enlisted man or by the governor of the province, as the case may be, of the necessity for such service; or to any indigent person when directed to render such service by the provincial governor or by a municipal president, as the case may be: Provided, That in no case shall the president of a provincial board of health or the president of a municipal board of health be paid for medical services rendered to any person authorized by law to receive medical attendance at the expense of the Insular Government or at the expense of a province. Secs. 1 to 5, Act of the Philippine Commission of November 7, 1903 (No. 985).

THE HOSPITAL CORPS.

914a. The Hospital Corps of the United States Army shall consist of sergeants first class, sergeants, corporals, privates first class, and privates. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 930).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 914. See also paragraphs 915–921, and 924.)

919a. The rank and pay of sergeants first class, sergeants, and privates first class shall be as now provided by law for hospital stewards, acting hospital stewards, and privates of the Hospital Corps; corporals shall receive twenty dollars per month and privates sixteen dollars, with such increase on account of length of service as is now or may hereafter be allowed by law to other enlisted men. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 930).

(See paragraphs 923 and 924).

924a. The Secretary of War is authorized to organize companies of instruction, ambulance companies, field hospital, and other detachments of the Hospital Corps as the necessities of the service may require. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 930).

PURCHASES OF MEDICAL SUPPLIES.

932a. Purchase of medicines and medical stores, or the engagement of services not personal for the Medical Department of the Army, may be made by the Medical Department in open market in the manner common among business men when the aggregate of the amount required does not exceed two hundred dollars, but every such purchase or employment shall be promptly reported to the Secretary of War. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 272).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 932.)

SALE OF MEDICAL SUPPLIES.

934a. Hereafter civilian employees of the Army stationed at military posts may, under regulations to be made by the Secretary of War, purchase necessary medical supplies when prescribed by a medical officer of the Army. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 273).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 934.)

935a. Hereafter all moneys arising from dispositions of serviceable medical and hospital supplies authorized by law and regulation shall constitute one fund on the books of the Treasury Department, which shall be available to replace medical and hospital supplies throughout the fiscal year in which the dispositions were effected and throughout the following fiscal year. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 256).

MISCELLANEOUS.

935b. For medical care and treatment not otherwise provided for, including care and subsistence in private hospitals, of officers, enlisted men, and civilian employees of the Army, of applicants for enlistment, and of prisoners of war and other persons in military custody or confinement, when entitled thereto by law, regulation, or contract: Provided, That this shall not apply to officers and enlisted men who are treated in private hospitals or by civilian physicians while on furlough, * * * dollars. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1172).

935c. For the proper care and treatment of epidemic and contagious diseases in the Army or at military posts or stations, including measures to prevent the spread thereof, and the payment of reasonable damages not otherwise provided for, for bedding and clothing injured or destroyed in such prevention, * * * dollars. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1172).

939a. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the erection of a National Sanitarium for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Hot Springs, in the State of South Dakota, which shall be erected by and under the direction of the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, which Sanitarium, when in a condition to receive members, shall be subject to such rules, regulations, and restrictions as shall be provided by said Board of Managers: Provided, That such Sanitarium shall be erected on land donated to the United States by the people of Hot Springs, South Dakota, and accompanied with a deed of perpetual lease to one or more of the medical or hot springs for the use of the above-named Sanitarium, the location and area of the land and springs of hot water to be selected by the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, or such persons as they may appoint to make the selection of location and hot springs, and that exclusive jurisdiction shall be vested in said Board of Managers over the premises occupied by said Sanitarium as over other realty held by said Board until further enactment by the Congress of the United States. Sec. 1, act of May 29, 1902 (32 Stats., 282).

939b. The further sum of twenty thousand dollars is hereby appropriated, to be used for the transportation to and from said Sanitarium of such patients as may be ordered to said Sanitarium by said Board of Managers and for equipping and maintaining said Sanitarium, subject to the aforesaid rules and regulations of said Board of Managers: Provided, That any member of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers who shall be certified to said Sanitarium by the medical and legal authorities of said Board of Managers shall be admitted and treated thereat until discharged therefrom or returned to some Branch of the National Home by order of said Board of Managers. Sec. 2, Act of May 29, 1902 (32 Stats., 282).

GENERAL HOSPITAL, FORT BAYARD, NEW MEXICO.

939c. All persons admitted to treatment in the general hospital at Fort Bayard, New Mexico, shall, while patients in said hospital, be subject to the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 255).

939d. The hospital at Fort Bayard, New Mexico, for the treatment of tuberculosis, shall be opened to the treatment of the officers and men of the Navy and Marine Corps. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1172).

CHAPTER XXII.

The Corps of Engineers.

ORGANIZATION.

953a. The Corps of Engineers shall consist of one Chief of Engineers with the rank of brigadier-general, of ten colonels, sixteen lieutenant-colonels, thirty-two majors, forty-three captains, forty-three first lieutenants, and forty-three second lieutenants. The enlisted force provided in section eleven of this Act, and the officers serving with the organized battalions thereof, shall constitute a part of the line of the Army: Provided, That the Chief of Engineers shall be appointed as now provided by law, and hereafter vacancies in the Corps of Engineers in all other grades above that of second lieutenant shall be filled by promotion, according to seniority, from the Corps of Engineers. Any vacancies occurring at any time in the grade of second lieutenant shall be left for future promotions from the corps of cadets at the United States Military Academy. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 263).

(This paragraph contains an amendment to section 22 of the act of February 2, 1901. See paragraph 953. See also paragraphs 954–956, and 962.)

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS.

978a. Section seventeen hundred and ninety-seven of the Revised Statutes of the United States is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 1797. That the Chief of Engineers shall have charge of the public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the President, through the War Department, except those buildings and grounds which are otherwise provided for by law; and when it shall be made to appear to the said Chief of Engineers, or to the officer under his direction having immediate charge of said public buildings and grounds, that any person or persons is in unlawful occupation of any portion of said public lands in the District of Columbia, it shall be the duty of said officer in charge thereof to notify the marshal of the District of Columbia in writing of such unlawful occupation, and the said marshal shall thereupon cause the said trespasser or trespassers to be ejected from said lands, and shall restore possession of the same to the officer charged by law with the custody thereof." Act of April 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 152).

(This extends the duties of the Chief of Engineers. See paragraph 978.)

978b. Hereafter no public building, or the approaches thereto, other than the Capitol building and the White House, in the District of Columbia, shall be used or occupied in any manner whatever in connection with ceremonies attending the inauguration of President of the United States, or other public function, except as may hereafter be expressly authorized by law. Act of April 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 152).

980a. The action of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in heretofore granting permits for the extension of any building or buildings, or any part or parts thereof, in the District of Columbia, beyond the building line and upon the streets and avenues of said city, is hereby ratified, without prejudice, however, to the legal rights of the Government in the event of the destruction by fire or otherwise of any such structure. And hereafter no such permits shall be granted except upon special application and with the concurrence of all of said Commissioners and, where such extensions are to be placed upon buildings to be erected on land adjoining United States public reservations, the approval of the Secretary of War. Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 385).

(This paragraph amends the act of March 3, 1891, 26 Stats., 868.)

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

990a. For the care and maintenance of the Washington Monument, namely: For one custodian, at one hundred dollars per month; one steam engineer, at eighty dollars per month; one assistant steam engineer, at sixty dollars per month; one fireman, at fifty dollars per month; one assistant fireman, at forty-five dollars per month; one conductor of elevator car at seventy-five dollars per month; one attendant on floor, at sixty dollars per month; one attendant on top floor, at sixty dollars per month; three night and day watchmen, at sixty dollars per month each. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 493).

(This paragraph modifies the pay of certain employees as set forth in paragraph 990.)

LIGHT-HOUSE BOARD.

1028a. The following-named offices, bureaus, divisions, and branches of the public service, now and heretofore under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Treasury, and all that pertains to the same, known as the Light-House Board, the Light-House Establishment, * * * are transferred from the Department of the Treasury to the Department of Commerce and Labor, and the same shall hereafter remain under the jurisdiction and supervision of the last-named Department. Sec. 4, Act of February 14, 1903 (32 Stats., 826).

* * * * * * *

(This paragraph affects the provisions of paragraphs 1024 and 1025.)

1028b. All duties performed and all power and authority now possessed or exercised by the head of any executive department in and over any bureau, office, officer, board, branch, or division of the public service by this Act transferred to the Department of Commerce and Labor, or any business arising therefrom or pertaining thereto, or in relation to the duties performed by and authority conferred by law upon such bureau, officer, office, board, branch, or division of the public service, whether of an appellate or revisory character or otherwise, shall hereafter be vested in and exercised by the head of the said Department of Commerce and Labor.

All duties, power, authority and jurisdiction, whether supervisory, appellate or otherwise, now imposed or conferred upon the Secretary of the Treasury by Acts of Congress relating to merchant vessels or yachts, their measurement, numbers, names, registers, enrollments, licenses, commissions, records, mortgages, bills of sale, transfers, entry, clearance, movements and transportation of their cargoes and passengers, owners, officers, seamen, passengers, fees, inspection, equipment for the better security of life, and by Acts of Congress relating to tonnage tax, boilers on steam vessels, the carrying of inflammable, explosive or dangerous cargo on vessels, the use of petroleum or other similar substances to produce motive power and relating to the remission or refund of fines, penalties, forfeitures, exactions or charges incurred for violating any provision of law relating to vessels or seamen or to informer's shares of such fines, and by Acts of Congress relating to the Commissioner and Bureau of Navigation, Shipping Commissioners, their officers and employees, Steamboat-Inspection Service and any of the officials thereof, shall be and hereby are transferred to and imposed and conferred upon the Secretary of Commerce and Labor from and after the time of the transfer of the Bureau of Navigation, the Shipping Commissioners and the Steamboat-Inspection Service to the Department of Commerce and Labor, and shall not thereafter be imposed upon or exercised by the Secretary of the Treasury. And all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are, so far as inconsistent, hereby repealed. Sec. 10, Act of February 14, 1903 (32 Stats., 829).

THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RESPECTING THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

1043a. Any funds which have been, or may hereafter be, appropriated by Congress for improving the Mississippi River between the Head of the Passes and the mouth of the Ohio River, and which may be allotted to levees, may be expended, under the direction of the Secretary of War, in accordance with the plans, specifications, and recommendations of the Mississippi River Commission, as approved by the Chief of Engineers, for levees upon any part of said river between the Head of the Passes and Cape Girardeau, Missouri. Act of June 4, 1906 (34 Stats., 208).

THE CALIFORNIA DÉBRIS COMMISSION.

1061a. In case a majority of the members of said Commission, within thirty days after the time so fixed, concur in the decision in favor of the petitioner or petitioners, the said Commission shall thereupon make an order directing the methods and specifying in detail the manner in which operations shall proceed in such mine or mines; what restraining or impounding works, if any, if facilities therefor can be found, shall be built and maintained; how and of what material; where to be located; and in general set forth such further requirements and safeguards as will protect the public interests and prevent injury to the said navigable rivers and the lands adjacent thereto, with such further conditions and limitations as will observe all the provisions of this Act in relation to the working thereof and the payment of taxes on the gross proceeds of the same: Provided, That all expense incurred in complying with said order shall be borne by the owner or owners of such mine or mines: And provided further, That where it shall appear to said Commission that hydraulic mining may be carried on without injury to the navigation of said navigable rivers and the lands adjacent thereto, an order may be made authorizing such mining to be carried on without requiring the construction of any restraining or impounding works or any settling reservoirs: And provided also, That where such an order is made a license to mine, no taxes provided for herein on the gross proceeds of such mining operations shall be collected. Act of February 27, 1907 (34 Stats., 1002).

(This paragraph amends section 13 of the act of March 1, 1893, and takes the place of paragraph 1061.)

1081a. So much of the act of March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, as provides that the members of the California Débris Commission shall receive only actual expenses in lieu of mileage while traveling on duty is hereby repealed, and hereafter the officers of the commission shall receive the mileage allowed by law. Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stats., 631).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1081.)

THE ISTHMIAN CANAL COMMISSION.

1085a. To enable the President to construct the canal and works appurtenant thereto as provided in this Act, there is hereby created the Isthmian Canal Commission, the same to be composed of seven members, who shall be nominated and appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall serve until the completion of said canal unless sooner removed by the President, and one of whom shall be named as the chairman of said Commission. Of the seven members of said Commission at least four of them shall be persons learned and skilled in the science of engineering, and of the four at least one shall be an officer of the United States Army, and at least one other shall be an officer of the United States

Navy, the said officers respectively being either upon the active or the retired list of the Army or of the Navy. Said commissioners shall each receive such compensation as the President shall prescribe until the same shall have been otherwise fixed by the Congress. In addition to the members of said Isthmian Canal Commission, the President is hereby authorized through said Commission to employ in said service any of the engineers of the United States Army at his discretion, and likewise to employ any engineers in civil life, at his discretion, and any other persons necessary for the proper and expeditious prosecution of said work. The compensation of all such engineers and other persons employed under this Act shall be fixed by said Commission, subject to the approval of the President. The official salary of any officer appointed or employed under this Act shall be deducted from the amount of salary or compensation provided by or which shall be fixed under the terms of this Act. Said Commission shall in all matters be subject to the direction and control of the President, and shall make to the President annually and at such other periods as may be required, either by law or by the order of the President, full and complete reports of all their actings and doings and of all moneys received and expended in the construction of said work and in the performance of their duties in connection therewith, which said reports shall be by the President transmitted to Congress. And the said Commission shall furthermore give to Congress, or either House of Congress, such information as may at any time be required either by Act of Congress or by the order of either House of Congress. The President shall cause to be provided and assigned for the use of the Commission such offices as may, with the suitable equipment of the same, be necessary and proper, in his discretion, for the proper discharge of the duties thereof. Sec. 7, Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 483).

GOVERNMENT OF THE CANAL ZONE AT PANAMA.

1085b. The President is hereby authorized, upon the acquisition of the property of the New Panama Canal Company and the payment to the Republic of Panama of the ten millions of dollars provided by article fourteen of the treaty between the United States and the Republic of Panama, the ratifications of which were exchanged on the twenty-sixth day of February, nineteen hundred and four, to be paid to the latter Government, to take possession of and occupy on behalf of the United States the zone of land and land under water of the width of ten miles, extending to the distance of five miles on each side of the center line of the route of the canal to be constructed thereon, which said zone begins in the Caribbean sea three marine miles from mean low-water mark and extends to and across the Isthmus of Panama into the Pacific Ocean to the distance of three marine miles from mean low-water mark, and also of all islands within said zone, and in addition thereto the group of islands in the Bay of Panama named Perico, Naos, Culebra, and Flamenco, and, from time to time, of any lands and waters outside of said zone which may be necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal, or of any auxiliary canals or other works necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of said enterprise, the use, occupation, and control whereof were granted to the United States by article two of said treaty. The said zone is hereinafter referred to as " the Canal Zone." The payment of the ten millions of dollars provided by article fourteen of said treaty shall be made in lieu of the indefinite appropriation made in the third section of the Act of June twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred and two, and is hereby appropriated for said purpose.

Sec. 2. That until the expiration of the Fifty-eighth Congress, unless provision for the temporary government of the Canal Zone be sooner made by Congress, all the military, civil, and judicial powers as well as the power to make all rules and regulations necessary for the government of the Canal Zone and all the rights, powers, and authority granted by the terms of said treaty to the United States shall be vested in such person or persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President shall direct for the government of said Zone and maintaining and protecting the inhabitants thereof in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion. Secs. 1 and 2, Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 429).

1085c. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to borrow on the credit of the United States from time to time, as the proceeds may be required to defray expenditures authorized by this Act (such proceeds when received to be used only for the purpose of meeting such expenditures), the sum of one hundred and thirty million dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, and to prepare and issue therefor coupon or registered bonds of the United States in such form as he may prescribe, and in denominations of twenty dollars or some multiple of that sum, redeemable in gold coin at the pleasure of the United States after ten years from the date of their issue, and payable thirty years from such date, and bearing interest payable quarterly in gold coin at the rate of two per centum per annum; and the bonds herein authorized shall be exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under State, municipal, or local authority: Provided, That said bonds may be disposed of by the Secretary of the Treasury at not less than par, under such regulations as he may prescribe, giving to all citizens of the United States an equal opportunity to subscribe therefor, but no commissions shall be allowed or paid thereon; and a sum not exceeding one-tenth of one per centum of the amount of the bonds herein authorized is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay the expense of preparing, advertising, and issuing the same. Sec. 8, Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 484).

1085e. That the two per cent bonds of the United States authorized by section eight of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans," approved June twenty-eight, nineteen hundred and two, shall have all the rights and privileges accorded by law to other two per cent bonds of the United States, and every national banking association having on deposit, as provided by law, such bonds issued under the provisions of said section eight of said Act approved June twenty-eight, nineteen hundred and two, to secure its circulating notes, shall pay to the Treasurer of the United States, in the months of January and July, a tax of one-fourth of one per cent each half year upon the average amount of such of its notes in circulation as are based upon the deposit of said two per cent bonds; and such taxes shall be in lieu of existing taxes on its notes in circulation imposed by section fifty-two hundred and fourteen of the Revised Statutes. Section 1, Act of December 21, 1905 (34 Stats., 5).

1085f. The President shall annually, and at such other periods as may be provided, either by law or by his order, require full and complete reports to be made to him by the persons appointed or employed by him in charge of the government of the Canal Zone, the construction of the Isthmian Canal, and the operation of the Panama Railroad, including an itemized account of all moneys received and expended, which said reports shall be by the President transmitted to Congress. The President shall annually cause to be made, by the persons appointed and employed by him in charge of the government of said Canal Zone and the construction of said canal, estimates of expenditures and appropriations, in detail as far as practicable, which estimates shall cover all annual salaries paid to persons employed on said work, excepting laborers and skilled laborers, and shall be submitted to Congress in the manner provided in section five of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and two, and for other purposes." And no money shall be expended for any of the purposes of constructing and maintaining said Isthmian Canal, or for any expenses incident thereto, except in accordance with appropriations made by Congress. Sec. 3, Act of December 21, 1905 (34 Stats., 5).

1085g. The President is hereby authorized to cause to be entered into such contract or contracts as may be deemed necessary for the proper excavation, construction, completion, and defense of said canal, harbors, and defenses, by the route finally determined upon under the provisions of this Act. Appropriations therefor shall from time to time be hereafter made, not to exceed in the aggregate the additional sum of one hundred and thirty-five millions of dollars should the Panama route be adopted, or one hundred and eighty millions of dollars should the Nicaragua route be adopted. Sec. 5, Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 483).

1085h. Nothing contained in section five of the Act of June twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred and two, entitled "An Act to provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans," shall prevent the President from entering into such contract or contracts as may be deemed expedient by him for the completion of the construction of the Panama Canal. Sec. 6, Act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stats., 1370).

1085i. The appropriations for the pay of officers and employees of the several departments on the Isthmus under the Act of June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, shall apply to the pay of such officers and employees when necessarily temporarily detailed upon duty away from the Isthmus. Sec. 7, Act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stats., 1370).

1085l. Hereafter the accounts for the Isthmian Canal Commission shall be audited by the Auditor for the War Department. Act of February 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 647).

1085n. The provisions of an Act entitled "An Act relating to the limitations of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon the public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia," approved August first, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, and of an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, and for prior years, and for other purposes," approved February twenty-seventh, nineteen hundred and six, shall not apply to unskilled alien laborers and to the foremen and superintendents of such laborers employed in the construction of the isthmian canal within the Canal Zone. Sec. 4, Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 669).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1085*m*.)

FORTIFICATIONS.

1086a. Hereafter in acquiring sites for fortifications it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, in every case of such acquirement, to purchase or otherwise procure at the same time, under this and future appropriations for this purpose, sufficient land for necessary barracks and quarters for the artillery troops required in connection with each of such fortifications; but no part of the money appropriated for military posts shall be used for the purchase of any land except as herein specifically provided. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 497).

1086b. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to apply the money herein appropriated under the heading "Fortifications and other works of defense," in carrying on the various works, by contract or otherwise, as may be most economical and advantageous to the Government. Where said works are done by contract, such contract shall be made after sufficient public advertisement for proposals, in such manner and form as the Secretary of War shall prescribe; and such contracts shall be made with the lowest responsible bidders, accompanied by such securities as the Secretary of War shall require, conditioned for the faithful prosecution and completion of the work according to such contract. Act of April 21, 1904 (33 Stats., 234).

THE NAVIGABLE WATERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

1097a. Grand River in the State of Missouri above the city of Brunswick, in the county of Chariton in said State, is hereby declared to be not a navigable stream and shall be so treated by the Secretary of War and by all other authorities. Act of February 15, 1905 (33 Stats., 715).

RIVER AND HARBOR WORKS.

1098a. There shall be organized in the Office of the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, by detail from time to time from the Corps of Engineers, a board of five engineer officers, whose duties shall be fixed by the Chief of Engineers, and to whom shall be referred for consideration and recommendation, in addition to any other duties assigned, so far as in the opinion of the Chief of Engineers may be necessary, all reports upon examinations and surveys provided for by Congress, and all projects or changes in projects for works of river and harbor improvement heretofore or hereafter provided for. And the board shall submit to the Chief of Engineers recommendations as to the desirability of commencing or continuing any and all improvements upon which reports are required. And in the consideration of such works and projects the board shall have in view the amount and character of commerce existing or reasonably prospective which will be benefited by the improvement, and the relation of the ultimate cost of such work, both as to cost of construction and maintenance, to the public commercial interests involved, and the public necessity for the work and propriety of its construction, continuance, or maintenance at the expense of the United States. And such consideration shall be given as time permits to such works as have heretofore been provided for by Congress, the same as in the case of new works proposed. The board shall, when it considers the same necessary, and with the sanction and under orders from the Chief of Engineers, make, as a board or through its members, personal examinations of localities. And all facts, information, and arguments which are presented to the board for its consideration in connection with any matter referred to it by the Chief of Engineers shall be reduced to and submitted in writing, and made a part of the records of the Office of the Chief of Engineers. It shall further be the duty of said board, upon a request transmitted to the Chief of Engineers by the Committee on River and Harbors of the House of Representatives, or the Committee on Commerce of the Senate, in the same manner to examine and report through the Chief of Engineers upon any projects heretofore adopted by the Government or upon which appropriations have been made, and report upon the desirability of continuing the same or upon any modifications thereof which may be deemed desirable.

The board shall have authority, with the approval of the Chief of Engineers, to rent quarters, if necessary, for the proper transaction of its business, and to employ such civil employees as may, in the opinion of the Chief of Engineers, be required for properly transacting the business assigned to it, and the necessary expenses of the board shall be paid from allotments made by the Chief of Engineers from any appropriations made by Congress for the work or works to which the duties of the board pertain. Sec. 3, Act of June 13, 1902 (32 Stats., 372).

1103a. No appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for improving harbors and deepening channels shall be used for the construction of Government dredges for use on the Great Lakes or on the Atlantic coast north of Cape Henry unless there shall be a specific appropriation for that purpose: Provided, however, That this provision shall not apply to any dredge the construction of which has heretofore been authorized by the Secretary of War. Sec. 4, Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 452).

PURCHASE AND SALE OF LANDS.

1106a. When any land or other property which has been heretofore or may be hereafter purchased or acquired for the improvement of rivers and harbors is no longer needed, or is no longer serviceable, it may be sold in such manner as the Secretary of War may direct, and the proceeds credited to the appropriation for the work for which it was purchased or acquired; and the Secretary of War may direct the transfer of any property employed in river and harbor works, and in such event the property so transferred shall be valued and credited to the project upon which it was theretofore used and charged to the project to which it shall be transferred. The Secretary may also direct a temporary transfer of any property employed in the improvement of rivers and harbors whenever, in his judgment, such transfer would secure efficient or economical results, and such adjustment in the way of charges and credits shall be made between the projects affected as may be equitable. Sec. 5, Act of June 13, 1902 (32 Stats., 373).

1106b. Whenever any person, company, or corporation, municipal or private, shall undertake to secure any land or easement therein, needed in connection with a work of river and harbor improvement duly authorized by Congress, for the purpose of conveying the same to the United States free of cost, or for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating locks, dry docks, or other works to be conveyed to the United States free of cost, and of constructing, maintaining and operating dams for use in connection therewith, and shall be unable for any reason to obtain the same by purchase and acquire a valid title thereto, the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, cause proceedings to be instituted in the name of the United States for the acquirement by condemnation of said land or easement, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General of the United States to institute and conduct such proceedings upon the request of the Secretary of War: Provided, That all expenses of said proceedings and any award that may be made thereunder shall be paid by the said person, company, or corporation, to secure which payment the Secretary of War may require the said person, company, or corporation to execute a proper bond in such amount as he may deem necessary before said proceedings are commenced. Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 632).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1106.)

OPERATION OF CANALS AND OTHER WORKS OF IMPROVEMENT.

1113a. That section four of the river and harbor Act of August eighteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, be, and is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 4. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to prescribe such rules and regulations for the use, administration, and navigation of any or all canals and similar works of navigation that now are, or that hereafter may be, owned, operated, or maintained by the United States as in his judgment the public necessity may require; and he is also authorized to prescribe regulations to govern the speed and movement of vessels and other water craft in any public navigable channel which has been improved under authority of Congress, whenever, in his judgment, such regulations are necessary to protect such improved channels from injury, or to prevent interference with the operations of the United States in improving navigable waters or injury to any plant that may be employed in such operations. Such rules and regulations shall be posted, in conspicuous and appropriate places, for the information of the public; and every person and every corporation which shall violate such rules and regulations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof in any district court of the United States within whose territorial jurisdiction such offense may have been committed, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding six months, in the discretion of the court." Sec. 11, Act of June 13, 1902 (32 Stats., 374).

(This paragraph amends paragraphs 1112 and 1113.)

BRIDGES, ETC., OVER THE NAVIGABLE WATERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

1114a. Any bridge built in accordance with the provisions of this Act shall be a lawful structure and shall be recognized and known as a post route, upon which no higher charge shall be made for the transmission over the same of the mails, the troops, and the munitions of war of the United States than the rate per mile paid for the transportation over any railroad, street railway, or public highway leading to said bridge; and the United States shall have the right to construct, maintain, and repair, without any charge therefor, telegraph and telephone lines across and upon said bridge and its approaches; and equal privileges in the use of said bridge and its approaches shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies. Sec. 2, Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stats., 85).

1114b. When, hereafter, authority is granted by Congress to any persons to construct and maintain a dam for water power or other purposes across any of the navigable waters of the United States, such dams shall not be built or commenced until the plans and specifications for its construction, together with such drawings of the proposed construction and such map of the proposed location as may be required for a full understanding of the subject, have been submitted to the Secretary of War and Chief of Engineers for their approval, or until they shall have approved such plans and specifications and the location of such dam and accessory works; and when the plans for any dam to be constructed under the provisions of this Act have been approved by the Chief of Engineers and by the Secretary of War it shall not be lawful to deviate from such plans either before or after completion of the structure unless the modification of such plans has previously been submitted to and received the approval of the Chief of Engineers and of the Secretary of War: Provided, That in approving of said plans and location such conditions and stipulations may be imposed as the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War may deem necessary to protect the present and future interests of the United States, which may include the condition that such persons shall construct, maintain, and operate, without expense to the United States, in connection with said dam and appurtenant works, a lock or locks, booms, sluices, or any other structures which the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers at any time may deem necessary in the interest of navigation, in accordance with such plans as they may approve, and also that whenever Congress shall authorize the construction of a lock, or other structures for navigation purposes, in connection with such dam, the person owning such dam shall convey to the United States, free of cost, title to such land as may be required for such constructions and approaches, and shall grant to the United States a free use of water power for building and operating such constructions. Sec. 1, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 386).

1114c. The right is hereby reserved to the United States to construct, maintain, and operate, in connection with any dam built under the provisions of this Act, a suitable lock or locks, or any other structures for navigation purposes, and at all times to control the said dam and the level of the pool caused by said dam to such an extent as may be necessary to provide proper facilities for navigation. Sec. 2, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 386).

1114d. The person, company, or corporation building, maintaining, or operating any dam and appurtenant works, under the provisions of this Act, shall be liable for any damage that may be inflicted thereby upon private property, either by overflow or otherwise. The persons owning or operating any such dam shall maintain, at their own expense, such lights and other signals thereon and such fishways as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall prescribe. Sec. 3, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 386).

1114e. All rights acquired under this Act shall cease and be determined if the person, company, or corporation acquiring such rights shall, at any time, fail to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of the Act, or with any of the stipulations and conditions that may be prescribed as aforesaid by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War. Sec. 4, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 386).

1114f. Any persons who shall fail or refuse to comply with the lawful order of the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers, made in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this Act, and any persons who shall be guilty of a violation of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and every month such persons shall remain in default shall be deemed a new offense and subject such persons to additional penalties therefor; and in addition to the penalties above described the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers may, upon refusal of the persons owning or controlling any such dam and accessory works to comply with any lawful order issued by the Secretary of War or Chief of Engineers in regard thereto, cause the removal of such dam and accessory works as an obstruction to navigation at the expense of the persons owning or controlling such dam, and suit for such expense may be brought in the name of the United States against such persons, and recovery had for such expense in any court of competent jurisdiction; and the removal of any structures erected or maintained in violation of the provisions of this Act or the order or direction of the Secretary of War or Chief of Engineers made in pursuance thereof may be enforced by injunction, mandamus, or other summary process, upon application to the circuit court in the district in which such structure may, in whole or in part, exist, and proper proceedings to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney-General of the United States at the request of the Chief of Engineers or the Secretary of War; and in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to navigation created by the construction of any dam under this Act, the cause or question arising may be tried before the circuit court of the United States in any district in which any portion of said obstruction or dam touches. Sec. 5, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 386).

1114g. Whenever Congress shall hereafter by law authorize the construction of any dam across any of the navigable waters of the United States, and no time for the commencement and completion of such dam is named in said Act, the authority thereby granted shall cease and be null and void unless the actual construction of the dam authorized in such Act be commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date of the passage of such Act. Sec. 6, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 387).

1114h. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is hereby expressly reserved as to any and all dams which may be constructed in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and the United States shall incur no liability for the alteration, amendment, or repeal thereof to the owner or owners or any other persons interested in any dam which shall have been constructed in accordance with its provisions. Sec. 7, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 387).

1114i. The word "persons" as used in this Act shall be construed to import both the singular and the plural, as the case demands, and shall include corporations, companies, and associations. Sec. 8, Act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stats., 387).

1115a. No bridge erected or maintained under the provisions of this Act shall at any time unreasonably obstruct the free navigation of the waters over which it is constructed, and if any bridge erected in accordance with the provisions of this Act shall, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, at any time unreasonably obstruct such navigation, either on account of insufficient height, width of span, or otherwise, or if there be difficulty in passing the draw opening or the drawspan of such bridge by rafts, steamboats, or other water craft, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, after giving the parties interested reasonable opportunity to be heard, to notify the persons owning or controlling such bridge to so alter the same as to render navigation through or under it reasonably free, easy, and unobstructed, stating in such notice the changes required to be made, and prescribing in each case a reasonable time in which to make such changes, and if at the end of the time so specified the changes so required have not been made, the persons owning or controlling such bridge shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this Act; and all such alterations shall be made and all such obstructions shall be removed at the expense of the persons owning or operating said bridge. The persons owning or operating any such bridge shall maintain, at their own expense, such lights and other signals thereon as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall prescribe. If the bridge shall be constructed with a draw, then the draw shall be opened promptly by the persons owning or operating such bridge upon reasonable signal for the passage of boats and other water craft. If tolls shall be charged for the transit over any bridge constructed under the provisions of this Act, of engines, cars, street cars, wagons, carriages, vehicles, animals, foot passengers, or other passengers, such tolls shall be reasonable and just, and the Secretary of War may, at any time, and from time to time, prescribe the reasonable rates of toll for such transit over such bridge, and the rates so prescribed shall be the legal rates and shall be the rates demanded and received for such transit. Sec. 4, Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stats., 85).

(This paragraph and paragraph 1115*b* take the place of paragraphs 1115, 1116, and 1117.)

1115b. Any persons who shall fail or refuse to comply with the lawful order of the Secretary of War or the Chief of Engineers, made in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this Act, and any persons who shall be guilty of a violation of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished in any court of competent jurisdiction by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and every month such persons shall remain in default shall be deemed a new offense and subject such persons to additional penalties therefor; and in addition to the penalties above described the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers may, upon refusal of the persons owning or controlling any such bridge and accessory works to comply with any lawful order issued by the Secretary of War or Chief of Engineers in regard thereto, cause the removal of such bridge and accessory works at the expense of the persons owning or controlling such bridge, and suit for such expense may be brought in the name of the United States against such persons, and recovery had for such expense in any court of competent jurisdiction; and the removal of any structures erected or maintained in violation of the provisions of this Act or the order or direction of the Secretary of War or Chief of Engineers made in pursuance thereof may be enforced by injunction, mandamus, or other summary process, upon application to the circuit court in the district in which such structure may, in whole or in part, exist, and proper proceedings to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney-General of the United States at the request of the Secretary of War; and in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to navigation created by the construction of any bridge under this Act, the cause or question arising may be tried before the circuit court of the United States in any district which any portion of such obstruction or bridge touches. Sec. 5, Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stats., 85).

(See note to paragraph 1115.)

1117a. Any regulations heretofore or hereafter prescribed by the Secretary of War in pursuance of the fourth and fifth sections of the river and harbor Act of August eighteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and any regulations hereafter prescribed in pursuance of the aforesaid section four as amended by section eleven of this Act, may be enforced as provided in section seventeen of the river and harbor Act of March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, the provisions whereof are hereby made applicable to the said regulations. Sec. 6, Act of June 13, 1902 (32 Stats., 374).

1117b. All railroad companies desiring the use of any railroad bridge built in accordance with the provisions of this Act shall be entitled to equal rights and privileges relative to the passage of railway trains or cars over the same and over the approaches thereto upon payment of a reasonable compensation for such use; and in case of any disagreement between the parties in regard to the terms of such use or the sums to be paid all matters at issue shall be determined by the Secretary of War upon hearing the allegations and proofs submitted to him. Sec. 3, Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stats., 85).

1117c. Whenever Congress shall hereafter by law authorize the construction of any bridge over or across any of the navigable waters of the United States, and no time for the commencement and completion of such bridge is named in said Act, the authority thereby granted shall cease and be null and void unless the actual construction of the bridge authorized in such Act be commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date of the passage of such Act. Sec. 6, Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stats., 86).

1117d. The word "persons" as used in this Act shall be construed to import both the singular and the plural, as the case demands, and shall include municipalities, quasi municipal corporations, corporations, companies, and associations. Sec. 7, Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stats., 86).

1117e. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is hereby expressly reserved as to any and all bridges which may be built in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and the United States shall incur no liability for the alteration, amendment, or repeal thereof to the owner or owners or any other persons interested in any bridge which shall have been constructed in accordance with its provisions. Sec. 8, Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stats., 86).

HARBOR LINES.

1119a. The Secretary of War * * * is hereby, empowered, subject to the restrictions and under the conditions hereinafter mentioned, to authorize the construction, extension, and maintenance of any wharf, pier, dolphin, boom, weir, breakwater, sea wall, bulkhead, jetty, or other structure on any of the lands belonging to the United States which underlie the harbor areas and navigable streams and bodies of water in or surrounding Porto Rico and the islands adjacent thereto and the filling in and dredging of such lands. Sec. 1, Act of June 11, 1906 (34 Stats., 234).

1119b. The word " person " as used in this Act shall be construed to import either the singular or the plural, as the case demands, and shall include individuals, municipalities, quasi-municipal corporations, corporations, companies, and associations. Sec. 2, Act of June 11, 1906 (34 Stats., 234).

1119c. The powers granted in the foregoing sections shall be subject, however, to the following restrictions:

(a) No authorization to any person to construct, extend, or maintain any such structure shall continue for a longer period than the period set forth in such authorization, and shall provide that the Government of the United States or with the approval of the Secretary of War the government of Porto Rico shall have the right at any time after the expiration of thirty years from the date of such authorization, and after three months' notice, to take any such structure from the owner thereof upon paying the value of the same at the time it shall be so taken, and the amount paid shall not exceed the original cost of the same as may be fixed under paragraph (f) hereof. In case the Government of the United States or the government of Porto Rico, exercising the right of purchase as aforesaid should claim that the value of the structure when seized and taken is less than its original cost, the extent of deterioration or diminution from the original value shall be determined by a board or commission of four members, two of whom shall be appointed by the Secretary of War for the Government of the United States or by the Governor of Porto Rico for the government of Porto Rico as the case may be and two by the owner of such structure. If the four members thus chosen and appointed shall not be able to agree, they shall choose by mutual agreement a referee, whose decision shall be final, but in no case shall the amount to be paid exceed the original cost as fixed under the provisions of said paragraph (f). If the four members thus chosen and appointed are unable by mutual agreement to select a referee, then the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army shall be the referee, and his decision shall be final.

All authorizations granted by the Secretary of War for any such construction, extension, or maintenance

(b) Shall be subject to alteration, amendment, or repeal by Congress;

(c) Shall provide that the wharfage fees and charges for vessels, for passengers, and for goods loaded or discharged on, from, at, or over any such structure, and for approach and entry to any such structure, shall be no greater than are just, reasonable, and fairly remunerative, and for that purpose shall at all times be subject to regulation and revision by the said Secretary of War; that such fees and charges shall be the same for all persons, and all persons shall have equal right to approach, enter, and use the said structure, subject to such reasonable rules and regulations as the grantee thereof may establish, all of which rules and regulations shall be subject to revision by the Secretary of War;

(d) That all necessary dredging in or in connection with the said structure, or the use thereof, shall be made by the grantee of the authorization;

(e) That such authorization shall be null and void unless actual construction shall be commenced within one year from the date of such authorization by the Secretary of War, and completed within three years from the date of such authorization, or within such lesser periods as may be therein fixed: Provided, That the Secretary of War may for due cause shown extend the time for the completion of such construction for a reasonable period.

(f) That duly verified accounts of expenditure for the construction, extension, or improvement of such structure shall be exhibited to, and filed with, the United States army engineer at the city of San Juan, Porto Rico, who shall report to the Secretary of War the entire cost of such structure, extension, or improvement to be built under such authorization.

(g) That the said structure shall not be sublet, sold, transferred, or assigned, nor shall the authorization therefor be granted, sold, transferred, or assigned without the consent of the Secretary of War, nor in any case to a person engaged, directly or indirectly, in the same line of business, in the same harbor area, navigable stream, or body of water, and that any grant, subletting, sale, transfer, or assignment in violation hereof shall be null and void;

(h) That any and all vessels owned or chartered by the United States Government shall in case of any emergency, or in time of war, have prior right, free of charge, to the use of any such structure; and

(i) Shall contain such further restrictions as the Secretary of War may see fit to impose therein. Sec. 3, Act of June 11, 1906 (34 Stats., 235).

1119d. No such authorization by the Secretary of War shall be granted to any person unless the applicant therefor shall first furnish to the Secretary of War satisfactory proof either that he (or it) is the owner or lessee of the approaches to the shore end of the proposed structure, with the right to use the same in connection therewith, or that he (or it) is the owner of a franchise granting the right to use said approaches in connection with such proposed structure. Every application to the Secretary of War for any such authorization shall be accompanied by plans and specifications for such structure, extension, or improvement, which said plans and specifications shall be submitted to, and approved by, the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army before the granting of any such authorization by the Secretary of War, and such plans and specifications shall not be deviated from in any such structure, extension, or improvement without the written consent, first obtained, of the said Chief of Engineers. Sec. 4, Act of June 11, 1906 (34 Stats., 236).

1119e. Nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to affect legal or equitable rights, if any, existing at the date of the approval of this Act which were acquired by the government of Porto Rico or any other party under any contract, lease or license, for the construction, extension, improvement, or maintenance of any such structure, granted by the United States authorities prior to the approval of this Act. Sec. 5, Act of June 11, 1906 (34 Stats., 236).

NIAGARA FALLS.

1150b. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to grant permits for the diversion of water in the United States from said Niagara River or its tributaries for the creation of power to individuals, companies, or corporations which are now actually producing power from the waters of said river, or its tributaries, in the State of New York, or from the Erie Canal; also permits for the transmission of power from the Dominion of Canada into the United States, to companies legally authorized therefor, both for diversion and transmission, as hereinafter stated, but permits for diversion shall be issued only to the individuals, companies, or corporations as aforesaid, and only to the amount now actually in use or contracted to be used in factories the buildings for which are now in process of construction, not exceeding to any one individual, company or corporation as aforesaid a maximum amount of eight thousand six hundred cubic feet per second, and not exceeding to all individuals, companies or corporations as aforesaid an aggregate amount of fifteen thousand six hundred cubic feet per second; but no revocable permits shall be issued by the said Secretary under the provisions hereafter set forth for the diversion of additional amounts of water from the said river or its tributaries until the approximate amount for which permits may be issued as above, to wit, fifteen thousand six hundred cubic feet per second, shall for a period of not less than six months have been diverted from the waters of said river or its tributaries, in the State of New York: Provided, That the said Secretary, subject to the provisions of section five of this Act, under the limitations relating to time above set forth is hereby authorized to grant revocable permits, from time to time, to such individuals, companies, or corporations, or their assigns, for the diversion of additional amounts of water from the said river or its tributaries to such amount, if any, as, in conection with the amount diverted on the Canadian side, shall not injure or interfere with the navigable capacity of said river, or its integrity and proper volume as a boundary stream, or the scenic grandeur of Niagara Falls; and that the quantity of electrical power which may by permits be allowed to be transmitted from the Dominion of Canada into the United States, shall be one hundred and sixty thousand horsepower: Provided further, That the said Secretary, subject to the provisions of section five of this Act, may issue revocable permits for the transmission of additional electrical power so generated in Canada, but in no event shall the amount included in such permits, together with the said one hundred and sixty thousand horsepower and the amount generated and used in Canada, exceed three hundred and fifty thousand horsepower: Provided always, That the provisions herein permitting diversions and fixing the aggregate horespower herein permitted to be transmitted into the United States, as aforesaid, are intended as a limitation on the authority of the Secretary of War, and shall in no wise be construed as a direction to said Secretary to issue permits, and the Secretary of War shall make regulations preventing or limiting the diversion of water and the admission of electrical power as herein stated; and the permits for the transmission of electrical power issued by the Secretary of War may specify the persons, companies, or corporations by whom the same shall be transmitted, and the persons, companies, or corporations to whom the same shall be delivered. Sec. 2, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 626).

1150c. Any person, company, or corporation diverting water from the said Niagara River or its tributaries, or transmitting electrical power into the United States from Canada, except as herein stated, or violating any of the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two thousand five hundred dollars nor less than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding one year, or by both such punishments, in the discretion of the court. And, further, the removal of any structures or parts of structures erected in violation of this Act, or any construction incidental to or used for such diversion of water or transmission of power as is herein prohibited, as well as any diversion of water or transmission of power in violation hereof, may be enforced or enjoined at the suit of the United States by any circuit court having jurisdiction in any district in which the same may be located, and proper proceedings to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney-General of the United States. Sec. 3, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 627).

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT—THE BOARD OF ORDNANCE AND FORTIFICATION, ARMS, ARMORIES, AND ARSENALS.

ORGANIZATION.

1151a. The Ordnance Department shall consist of one chief of ordnance with the rank of brigadier-general; six colonels, nine lieutenant-colonels, nineteen majors, twenty-five captains, twenty-five first lieutenants, and the enlisted men, including ordnance-sergeants, as now authorized by law. Act of June 25, 1906 (34 Stats., 455).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1151.)

DETAILS.

1155a. Hereafter details for service to the grade of first lieutenant in the Ordnance Department under the provisions of the Act of February second, nineteen hundred and one, may be made, from the Army at large, from the grade of first or second lieutenant, and officers so detailed shall, while so serving, receive the pay of first lieutenant:

Provided, That no officer shall be so detailed except upon such examination as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 942).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1155.)

1155b. Details to the Ordnance Department under the provisions of the Act of February second, nineteen hundred and one, may be made from the Army at large from the grade in which the vacancy exists, or from the grade below: Provided, That no officer shall be so detailed except upon the recommendation of a board of ordnance officers, and after at least one examination, which shall be open to competition: And provided further, That officers so detailed in grades below that of major shall not be again eligible for such detail until after they shall have served for at least one year out of that department. Act of June 25, 1906 (34 Stats., 455).

(This paragraph amends paragraphs 1155, 1155*a*, and 1156.)

MISCELLANEOUS REQUIREMENTS.

1161a. The services of skilled draftsmen and such other services, not clerical, as the Secretary of War may deem necessary, may be employed in the office of the Chief of Ordnance to carry into effect the various appropriations for the armament of fortifications, to be paid from such appropriations, in addition to the amount specifically appropriated for draftsmen in the Army Ordnance Bureau: Provided, That the entire expenditures for this purpose for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and five, shall not exceed forty thousand dollars, and that the Secretary of War shall each year in the annual estimates report to Congress the number of persons so employed and the amount paid to each. Act of March 18, 1904 (33 Stats., 115).

PURCHASES.

1169a. Hereafter purchases of ordnance and ordnance stores and supplies and the procurement of services may be made by the Ordnance Department in open market, in the manner common among business men, when the aggregate of the amount required does not exceed two hundred dollars, but every such purchase exceeding one hundred dollars shall be immediately reported to the Secretary of War. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 275).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1169.)

SALES OF SERVICEABLE ORDNANCE AND ORDNANCE STORES.

1178a. Hereafter moneys arising from deductions made from carriers on account of the loss of or damage to military stores in transit shall be credited to the proper appropriation or funds out of which such or similar stores shall be replaced and individual pieces of United States armament which are not needed on account of historical value, and can be advantageously replaced, may be sold at a price not less than their cost price, when there exist for such sale sentimental reasons adequate in the judgment of the Secretary of War or Secretary of the Navy. Act of March 2, 1905 (33 Stats., 840).

(See paragraphs 1181a and 1640a.)

1181a. Hereafter all moneys arising from disposition authorized by law and regulation of serviceable ordnance and ordnance stores shall constitute one fund on the books of the Treasury Department, which shall be available to replace ordnance and ordnance stores throughout the fiscal year in which the disposition was effected and throughout the following year. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to sell to American designers such serviceable ordnance and ordnance stores as may be necessary in the development of designs which may be used in the military service: Provided, That such ordnance and ordnance stores can be spared for the purpose, and funds arising from such sales shall be available to replace like ordnance and ordnance stores. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 276).

AMMUNITION FOR MORNING AND EVENING GUN.

1184a. For firing the morning and evening gun at military posts prescribed by General Orders, Numbered Seventy, Headquarters of the Army, dated July twenty-third, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and at National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and its several branches, including National Soldiers' Home in Washington, District of Columbia, and at Soldiers and Sailors' State Homes, including material for cartridges, bags, reworking obsolete powder, and so forth, thirteen thousand five hundred dollars. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 275).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1184 by providing for "reworking obsolete powder.")

ARMS, ARMORIES, AND ARSENALS.

1192a. Hereafter all employees of the Ordnance Department whose rate of compensation is annual shall be paid monthly at the rate of one-twelfth of the annual rate, and of such monthly rate and of all other monthly rates of compensation one-thirtieth shall be the daily rate for computation of pay for fractional parts of a month; and for the purposes of this provision each and every month shall be held to consist of thirty days, whether the actual number of days be greater or less. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 276).

(See paragraph 635a.)

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

1201a. For the purpose of furnishing a national trophy and medals and other prizes to be provided and contested for annually, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, said contest to be open to the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and the National Guard or organized militia of the several States, Territories, and of the District of Columbia, and for the cost of the trophy, prizes, and medals herein provided for, the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended for the purposes hereinbefore prescribed under the direction of the Secretary of War. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 580).

(See General Orders, 61, H. A., 1903, and General Orders, 53, War Department, 1904.)

1201b. For the purpose of furnishing a national trophy and medals and other prizes to be provided and contested for annually, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, said contest to be open to the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and the National Guard or organized militia of the several States, Territories, and of the District of Columbia, and for the cost of the trophy, prizes, and medals herein provided for, and for the promotion of rifle practice, the sum of four thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended for the purposes hereinbefore prescribed under the direction of the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1175).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1201a, by providing for the "promotion of rifle practice.")

1201c. The Chief of Ordnance, in conducting manufacturing or similar operations, is authorized to charge any indirect or general expense for labor or material therefor against any of the appropriations authorizing these operations in such manner as is most economical and efficient, provided that the methods adopted shall show that each of such appropriations bears its ratable share of the total amount of these expenses. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1062).

THE BOARD OF ORDNANCE AND FORTIFICATIONS.

1215a. All material purchased under the foregoing provisions of this Act shall be of American manufacture, except in cases when, in the judgment of the Secretary of War, it is to the manifest interest of the United States to make purchases in limited quantities abroad, which material shall be admitted free of duty. Act of April 21, 1904 (33 Stats., 237).

(See paragraph 1542. Similar provisions were embodied in the "Act making appropriation for fortifications and other works of defense, etc.," approved June 6, 1902, and the Act making appropriation for the same purpose, approved March 3, 1903.)

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE SIGNAL CORPS.

ORGANIZATION.

1218a. There shall be added to the Signal Corps of the Army, as now authorized by law, one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, four captains, and four first lieutenants. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 932).

(This paragraph increases the number of officers provided for in paragraph 1218.)

1219a. That the President be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an officer of the Signal Corps as chief of the telegraph and cipher bureau of the Executive Office, who shall have, while so serving, the rank, pay, and allowances of a major. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 932).

APPOINTMENTS, PROMOTIONS, DETAILS.

1222a. The vacancies thus created or caused shall be filled first by the promotion of officers of the Signal Corps, according to seniority, and thereafter by details from the line of the Army. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 932).

(See paragraph 1218a.)

ENLISTED MEN.

1224a. Hereafter second-class privates of the Signal Corps shall be designated as privates, with the same pay and allowances as now allowed by law to second-class privates. Fifty first-class sergeants may be temporarily added to the Signal Corps for service in the Philippine Islands and Alaska; such additional force, or part thereof, to be continued only as long as in the opinion of the Secretary of War (or the President) it may be necessary for the efficiency of the Army. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 509).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1224.)

1224b. One hundred and thirty-two first-class sergeants, at five hundred and forty dollars each.

One hundred and forty-four sergeants, at four hundred and eight dollars each.

One hundred and fifty-six corporals, at two hundred and forty dollars each.

Five hundred and fifty-two first-class privates, at two hundred and four dollars each.

One hundred and sixty-eight privates, at one hundred and fifty-six dollars each.

Twenty-four cooks, at two hundred and forty dollars each.

Thirty-six master signal electricians, at nine hundred dollars each. The increase of enlisted men herein authorized shall take effect immediately. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 261).

(This paragraph increases the enlisted strength of the Signal Corps. See paragraph 1224.)

SKILLED DRAFTSMEN, ETC.

1224c. The services of skilled draftsmen and such other services as the Secretary of War may deem necessary may be employed only in the Signal Office to carry into effect the various appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, to be paid from such appropriations, in addition to the foregoing employees appropriated for in the Signal Office: Provided, That the entire expenditures for this purpose for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight, shall not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, and that the Secretary of War shall each year in the annual estimates report to Congress the number of persons so employed, their duties, and the amount paid to each. Act of February 26, 1907 (34 Stats., 964).

DUTIES.

1230a. Hereafter the purchase of signal stores and equipment, or the engagement of services not personal, by the Signal Corps of the Army, may be made by the Signal Corps of the Army in open market in the manner common among business men when the aggregate of the amount required does not exceed two hundred dollars, but every such purchase or employment shall be promptly reported to the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 929).

MILITARY TELEGRAPH LINES.

1233a. That of the receipts of the Washington-Alaska Military Cable and Telegraph System that have been covered into the Treasury of the United States, the sum of one hundred and ninety thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, made available until expended for defraying the cost of such extensions and betterments of the system as may be approved by the Secretary of War, the extent of such extensions and the cost thereof to be reported to Congress by the Secretary of War: Provided further, That hereafter detailed estimates shall be submitted to Congress for any further extension of the cable or telegraph lines in the district of Alaska. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1159).

CHAPTER XXV.

THE RECORD AND PENSION OFFICE.

RECORD AND PENSION OFFICE.

1239a. That the military rolls and records of the Indian wars or any other wars prior to the civil war, now preserved in the Interior or other Departments, be transferred to the War Department, to be preserved in the Record and Pension Office of that Department, and that they shall be properly indexed and arranged for use. Joint Res. of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 591).

CHAPTER XXVI.

CHAPLAINS.

1258a. The President may, from time to time, select from among the chaplains of the Army any chaplains having not less than ten years' service, in the grade of captain, who shall have been commended as worthy of special distinction for exceptional efficiency by the regimental or district commanders with whose commands they may be serving as chaplains, approved through regular military channels, and may, with the advice and consent of the Senate, promote such regimental or artillery chaplains to be chaplains with the grade, pay, and allowances of major; every such promotion being made with a view to active service until the statutory age for the compulsory relinquishment thereof, except in cases of physical disability incurred in the line of duty: Provided, That the total number in active service so promoted shall not at any time exceed fifteen, and that the remaining chaplains shall have the grade, pay, and allowances of captain, mounted, after they shall have completed seven years of service: And provided further, That all persons who may hereafter be appointed as chaplains shall have the grade, pay, and allowances of first lieutenant, mounted, until they shall have completed seven years of service.

SEC. 2. That all officers provided for in this Act shall have a uniform designation in official address as chaplains of their respective regiments or of the Artillery Corps.

Sec. 3. That nothing in this Act shall be construed as depriving any chaplain of his commission in the Army, or as interfering with existing law pertaining to regimental and corps assignments or transfers, and that nothing herein contained shall be held or construed to increase the number of chaplains, as now authorized by law, or to reduce the grade of any now serving.

Sec. 4. That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this Act be, and the same are hereby, repealed. Act of April 21, 1904 (33 Stats., 226).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1258.)

1258b. In addition to the number of chaplains now authorized by law there shall hereafter be one for the Corps of Engineers. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 256).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1258*a*.)

1258c. In addition to the chaplains now authorized for the Artillery Corps the President is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and subject to the laws governing appointment of chaplains in the Army, one chaplain for each regiment of field artillery and two for the coast artillery, with the rank, pay, and allowances now authorized by law for chaplains in the Army. Sec. 12, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 864).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1258*a*.)

CHAPTER XXVII.

Commissioned Officers.

APPOINTMENTS.

1270a. Vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant shall be filled as now provided by law, except that no person shall be appointed from civil life before he shall have reached the age of twenty-one years, nor after he shall have reached the age of twenty-seven years, nor until he shall have passed a satisfactory examination as to his moral, physical, and educational qualifications. Sec. 5. Act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stats., 979).

LEAVES OF ABSENCE.

1287a. Officers appointed to the Regular Army from the volunteer service, whose service has been continuous, shall, in the computation of leaves of absence after their appointment in the Regular Army, be entitled to the leave credits which accrued to them as volunteer officers where such leave credits were not availed of during their volunteer service. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 508).

(See paragraphs 826–828.)

DETAILS FROM THE RETIRED LIST.

1290a. Section twelve hundred and twenty-five of the Revised Statutes,[1] concerning the detail of officers of the Army and Navy to educational institutions, is hereby, amended so as to permit the President to detail under the provisions of that Act, and in addition to the detail of the officers of the Army and Navy now authorized to be detailed under the existing provisions of said Act, such retired officers and noncommissioned officers of the Army and Navy of the United States as in his judgment may be required for that purpose to act as instructors in military drill and tactics in schools in the United States and Territories where such instructions shall have been authorized by the educational authorities thereof, and where the services of such instructors shall have been applied for by said authorities. Sec. 1, Act of April 21, 1904 (33 Stats., 225).

(This paragraph amends paragraphs 1288–1290.)

1291a. No detail shall be made under this Act to any school unless it shall pay the cost of commutation of quarters of the retired officers or noncommisisoned officers detailed thereto and the extra-duty pay to which they may be entitled by law to receive for the performance of special duty: Provided, That no detail shall be made under the provisions of this Act unless the officers and noncommissioned officers to be detailed are willing to accept such position: Provided further, That they shall receive no compensation from the Government other than their retired pay. Sec. 2, Act of April 21, 1904 (33 Stats., 225).

---

[1] SEC. 1225, R. S. The President may, upon the application of any established college or university within the United States, having capacity to educate, at the same time, not less than one hundred and fifty male students, detail an officer of the Army to act as president, superintendent, or professor thereof; but the number of officers so detailed shall not exceed (twenty) (thirty) at any time, and they shall be apportioned throughout the United States, as nearly as may be practicable, according to population. Officers so detailed shall be governed by general rules prescribed, from time to time, by the President. The Secretary of War is authorized to issue at his discretion and under proper regulations to be prescribed by him, out of any small arms or pieces of field artillery belonging to the Government and which can be spared for that purpose, such number of the same as may appear to be required for military instruction and practice, by the students of any college or university under the provisions of this section; and the Secretary shall require a bond in each case, in double the value of the property, for the care and safe-keeping thereof, and for the return of the same when required.

ISSUES OF ORDNANCE AND ORDNANCE STORES.

1292a. The Secretary of War is authorized to issue at his discretion, and under proper regulations to be prescribed by him, out of ordnance and ordnance stores belonging to the Government, and which can be spared for that purpose, upon the approval of the governors of the respective States and Territories, such number of the same as may be required for military instruction and practice by such school, and the Secretary shall require a bond in each case, for double the value of the property, for the care and safe-keeping thereof and for the return of the same when required. Sec. 3, Act of April 21, 1904 (33 Stats., 226).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1292.)

1292b. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to issue, at his discretion and under proper regulations to be prescribed by him, without cost of transportation to the United States, such obsolete ordnance and ordnance stores as may be available to State and Territorial educational institutions and to State soldiers and sailors orphans' homes, for purposes of drill and instruction.

And the Secretary of War shall require from such institutions or homes a bond in each case in double the value of the property issued, for the care and safe-keeping thereof and for the return of the same to the United States when required: Provided, That the issues herein provided for shall be made only to institutions upon recommendation of the governors of States and Territories and shall not be made in any case to any educational institution to which issues of such stores are allowed to be made under provisions of existing law. Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 817).

(See paragraphs 1182, 1183, 1292, and 1292a.)

RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS.

1299a. Hereafter no officer holding a rank above that of colonel shall be retired except for disability or on account of having reached the age of sixty-four years until he shall have served at least one year in such rank. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 245).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1299.)

RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS.

1303a. Any officer of the Army below the grade of brigadier-general who served with credit as an officer or as an enlisted man in the regular or volunteer forces during the civil war prior to April ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, otherwise than as a cadet, and whose name is borne on the official register of the Army, and who has heretofore been, or may hereafter be, retired on account of wounds or disability incident to the service, or on account of age or after forty years' service, may, in the discretion of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, be placed on the retired list of the Army with the rank and retired pay of one grade above that actually held by him at the time of retirement: Provided, That this Act shall not apply to any officer who received an advance of grade since the date of his retirement or who has been restored to the Army and placed on the retired list by virtue of the provisions of a special Act of Congress; and the Secretary of War may assign retired officers of the Army, with their consent, to active duty in recruiting, for service in connection with the organized militia in the several States and Territories upon the request of the governor thereof, as military attachés, upon courts-martial, courts of inquiry and boards, and to staff duties not involving service with troops; and such officers while so assigned shall receive the full pay and allowances of their respective grades. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 264).

1303b. A colonel or lieutenant-colonel heretofore or hereafter assigned to active duty shall hereafter receive the same pay and allowances as a retired major would receive under a like assignment. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 245).

1303c. Officers who served creditably in the regular or volunteer forces during the civil war prior to April ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and who now hold the rank of brigadier-general on the active list of the Army, having previously held that rank for three years or more, shall, when retired from active service, have the rank and retired pay of major-general. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1163).

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

1323a. In addition to the detail of retired officers now authorized by law, it shall hereafter be lawful for the Secretary of War to detail, whenever in his judgment the public interests require it, not exceeding twenty retired officers for service in connection with the organized militia in the States or Territories, upon the request of the governor thereof, and such retired officers shall be entitled, while so employed, to receive the full pay and allowances of their respective grades. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 932).

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RESPECTING COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

1332a. Officers of the Army of the United States may be detailed for service as chief and assistant chiefs, the said assistant chiefs not to exceed in number four, of the Philippine constabulary, and that during the continuance of such details the officer serving as chief shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of brigadier-general, and the officers serving as assistant chiefs shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of colonel: Provided, That the difference between the pay and allowances of brigadier-general and colonel, as herein provided, and the pay and allowances of the officers so detailed in the grades from which they are detailed shall pe paid out of the Philippine treasury. Sec. 1, Act of January 30, 1903 (32 Stats., 783).

CHAPTER XXVIII.

BREVETS—MEDALS OF HONOR—CERTIFICATES OF MERIT—FOREIGN DECORATIONS.

MEDALS OF HONOR.

1356a. For three thousand medals of honor to be prepared, with suitable emblematic devices, upon the design of the medal of honor heretofore issued, or upon an improved design, together with appropriate rosettes or other insignia to be worn in lieu of the medal, and to be presented by direction of the President, and in the name of Congress, to such officers, noncommissioned officers, and privates as have most distinguished, or may hereafter most distinguish, themselves by their gallantry in action, twelve thousand dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to use so many of the medals and rosettes or other insignia provided for by this Act as may be necessary to replace the medals that have been issued under the joint resolution of Congress approved July twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and section six of the Act of Congress approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three: And provided further, That whenever it shall appear from official records in the War Department that any officer or enlisted man of the Army so distinguished himself in action as to entitle him to the award of the Congressional medal of honor under the provisions of the sixth section of the Act of Congress approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An Act making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and for other purposes," the fact that the person who so distinguished himself has since become separated from the military service, or that the award of the medal to him was not specifically recommended or applied for while he was in the said service, shall not be held to prevent the award and presentation of the medal to such person under the provisions of the law hereinbefore cited. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 274).

(See paragraphs 1356 and 1357.)

1356b. That in any case where the President of the United States has heretofore, under any Act or resolution of Congress, caused any medal to be made and presented to any officer or person in the United States on account of distinguished or meritorious services, on a proper showing made by such person to the satisfaction of the President that such medal has been lost or destroyed through no fault of the beneficiary, and that diligent search has been made therefor, the President is hereby authorized to cause to be prepared and delivered to such person a duplicate of such medal, the cost of which shall be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Joint Res. of April 15, 1904 (33 Stats., 588).

(See paragraph 1357.)

1356c. The holders of medals of honor under the Act approved July twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and section six of the Act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, shall not be required to surrender such medals in case such medals are replaced, in pursuance of the provisions of the Act of Congress approved April twenty-third, nineteen hundred and four; and that wherever the holders of such medals of honor have surrendered them, in order to receive the medals provided for by said Act approved April twenty-third, nineteen hundred and four, such medals shall be returned to them: Provided, That no recipient of both medals shall wear both medals at the same time. Joint Res., February 27, 1907 (34 Stats., 1422).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1356a.)

CORPS BADGES AND INSIGNIA OF SOCIETIES.

1362a. The distinctive badge adopted by the Army and Navy Union of the United States may be worn, in their own right, upon all public occasions of ceremony by officers and enlisted men of the Army and Navy of the United States who are members of said organization. Joint Res., March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1423).

1363a. The distinctive badges adopted by military societies of men who served in the armies and navies of the United States during the Chinese relief expedition of nineteen hundred may be worn upon all occasions of ceremony by officers and men of the Army and Navy of the United States who are members of said organization in their own right. Joint Res., January 12, 1903 (32 Stats., 1229).

1363b. Whoever, in the District of Columbia, not being a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, of the Grand Army of the Republic, of the Sons of Veterans, of the Woman's Relief Corps, of the Union Veteran's Union, of the Union Veteran Legion, of the United Spanish War Veterans, of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and not entitled under the rules of the order to wear the same, willfully wears or uses the insignia, distinctive ribbon, or badge of membership, rosette, or button thereof, or who uses or wears the same to obtain aid or assistance thereby, shall be punished by a fine of not more than twenty dollars or by imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Act of March 15, 1906 (34 Stats., 62).

CHAPTER XXIX.

ENLISTED MEN.

RETIREMENT OF ENLISTED MEN.

1379a. When an enlisted man shall have served thirty years either in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, or in all, he shall, upon making application to the President, be placed upon the retired list, with seventy-five per centum of the pay and allowances he may then be in receipt of, and that said allowances shall be as follows: Nine dollars and fifty cents per month in lieu of rations and clothing and six dollars and twenty-five cents per month in lieu of quarters, fuel, and light: Provided, That in computing the necessary thirty years' time all service in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps shall be credited.

SEC. 2. That all Acts and parts of Acts, so far as they conflict with the provisions of this Act, are hereby repealed. Secs. 1 and 2, Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1217).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1379. See paragraphs 869a, and 1381a.)

1381a. Hereafter in computing the length of service for retirement, credit shall be given soldiers for double the time of their actual service in China, Cuba, the Philippine Islands, the Island of Guam, Alaska, and Panama; but double credit shall not be given for service hereafter rendered in Porto Rico or the Territory of Hawaii. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 264).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1381. See paragraphs 869 and 869a.)

DUPLICATE CERTIFICATES OF DISCHARGE.

1388a. Whenever satisfactory proof shall be furnished to the War Department that any officer or enlisted man who has been or shall hereafter be honorably discharged from the military service of the United States has lost his certificate of discharge, or the same has been destroyed without his privity or procurement, the Secretary of War shall be authorized to furnish to such officer or enlisted man, or to the widow of such officer or enlisted man, a certificate of such discharge, to be indelibly marked, so that it may be known as a certificate in lieu of a lost or destroyed discharge: Provided, That such certificate shall not be accepted as a voucher for the payment of any claim against the United States for pay, bounty, or other allowance, or as evidence in any other case. Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 629).

(This paragraph virtually takes the place of sec. 224 of R. S.; paragraph 1388.)

APPREHENSION OF DESERTERS—REWARDS.

1409a. For the apprehension, securing, and delivering of deserters, including escaped military prisoners, and the expenses incident to their pursuit; and no greater sum than fifty dollars for each deserter or escaped military prisoner shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be paid to any civil officer or citizen for such services and expenses. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 269).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1409.)

DECEASED SOLDIERS.

1415a. Hereafter, in the settlement of the accounts of deceased officers or enlisted men of the Army, where the amount due the decedent's estate is less than five hundred dollars and no demand is presented by a duly appointed legal representative of the estate, the accounting officers may allow the amount found due to the decedent's widow or legal heirs in the following order of precedence: First, to the widow; second, if decedent left no widow, or the widow be dead at time of settlement, then to the children or their issue, per stirpes; third, if no widow or descendants, then to the father and mother in equal parts, provided the father has not abandoned the support of his family, in which case to the mother alone; fourth, if either the father or mother be dead then to the one surviving; fifth, if there be no widow, child, father, or mother at the date of settlement, then to the brothers and sisters and children of deceased brothers and sisters, per stirpes: Provided, That this Act shall not be so construed as to prevent payment from the amount due the decedent's estate of funeral expenses, provided a claim therefor is presented by the person or persons who actually paid the same before settlement by the accounting officers. Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 750).

EXPENSES OF TRANSPORTATION AND BURIAL.

1416a. To enable the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to cause to be transported to their homes the remains of officers and soldiers who die at military camps or who are killed in action or who die in the field or hospital in Alaska and at places outside of the limits of the United States, or who die while on voyage at sea, forty thousand dollars. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 496).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1416.)

1417a. [For] expenses of the interment of officers killed in action or who die when on duty in the field, or at military posts or on the frontiers, or when traveling under orders, and of noncommissioned officers and soldiers; and in all cases where such expenses would have been lawful claims against the Government reimbursement may be made of expenses heretofore or hereafter incurred by individuals of burial and transportation of remains of officers, including acting assistant surgeons, not to exceed the amount now allowed in the cases of officers, and for the reimbursement in the cases of enlisted men not exceeding the amount now allowed in their cases, may be paid out of the proper funds appropriated by this Act, and the disbursing officers shall be credited with such reimbursement heretofore made; but hereafter no reimbursement shall be made of such expenses incurred prior to the twenty-first day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 269).

(See paragraph 1417.)

1418a. To enable the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to cause to be transported to their homes the remains of civilian employees of the Army who have died, or may hereafter die, while in the employ of the War Department in Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, China, Alaska, and the Philippines, including the remains of any honorably discharged soldiers who are entitled under the terms of their discharge to return transportation on Goverment transport, and who die while on said transport, five thousand dollars. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 496).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1418.)

CHAPTER XXX.

THE TROOPS OF THE LINE.

CAVALRY.

1424a. Each cavalry band shall consist of one chief musician; one chief trumpeter; one principal musician; one drum major, who shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a first sergeant; four sergeants; eight corporals; one cook, and eleven privates. Sec. 2, act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stats., 977).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1424, which is defective.)

THE ARTILLERY CORPS.

1443a. One hundred electrician sergeants, to be assigned for duty at such places as the Secretary of War may direct, at four hundred and eight dollars each, * * * : Provided, That there shall be added to the Artillery Corps twenty-five master electricians, to be enlisted by the Secretary of War, after such examination as he may prescribe, who shall receive seventy-five dollars per month and the allowance of an ordnance sergeant. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 930).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1443.)

1443b. The artillery of the United States Army shall consist of the Chief of Artillery, the coast artillery, and the field artillery. The coast artillery and the field artillery shall be organized as hereinafter specified, and the artillery shall belong to the line of the Army: Provided, That on and after July first, nineteen hundred and eight, the Chief of Artillery shall cease to exercise supervision over the field artillery and shall thereafter be designated as the Chief of Coast Artillery. Sec. 1, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 861).

(This paragraph and the following paragraphs take the place of all previous paragraphs referring to the organization of the artillery.)

1443c. On and after the approval of this Act the coast artillery and the field artillery shall be permanently separated, the separation to be effected as follows:

All officers in the present Artillery Corps shall remain on one list as regards promotion until sufficient promotions shall have been made as far as the present number of officers permit, to provide in each grade, together with the officers remaining therein, the total number of officers of the grade provided for in this Act for the coast and field artillery combined. After such promotion they shall, in each grade, be assigned by the President to the coast artillery or to the field artillery, according to special aptitude and qualifications and agreeably to individual preference, so far as may be practicable and for the good of the service, such assignments to be permanent; and all officers promoted or appointed in the artillery thereafter shall be commissioned as officers of the coast artillery or the field artillery, as the case may be, and shall be promoted by seniority in their own branch, subject to the provisions of the laws governing promotion in the Army at large. Sec. 9, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 863).

1443d. All vacancies created or caused by this Act which can be filled by promotion of officers now in the Artillery Corps shall be filled by promotion according to seniority, subject to examination as now prescribed by law. Of the vacancies created or caused by this Act which can not be filled by promotion of officers now in the Artillery Corps, one-fifth in each branch shall be filled in each fiscal year until the total number of officers herein provided for shall have been attained. The vacancies remaining in the grade of second lieutenant shall be filled by appointment in the following order: First, of graduates of the United States Military Academy; second, of enlisted men whose fitness for advancement shall have been determined by competitive examination; third, of candidates from civil life; and all such appointments shall be made in accordance with the provisions of existing law. Sec. 10, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 863).

1443e. The regimental and battalion noncommissioned staff officers herein authorized for regiments of field artillery shall have the pay and allowances of corresponding grades in the cavalry; the battalion quartermaster-sergeant shall have the pay and allowances of sergeant-major, junior grade, of the Artillery Corps; the chief mechanic the pay and allowances of sergeant, and the mechanics of field artillery the pay and allowances of artificers of field artillery; engineer, sixty-five dollars a month and allowances of ordnance-sergeant; electrician-sergeant, first class, forty-five dollars a month and allowances of ordnance-sergeant; electrician-sergeant, second class, thirty-five dollars a month and allowances of ordnance-sergeant; master gunner, the pay and allowances of ordnance-sergeant; fireman, thirty dollars a month and allowances of ordnance-sergeant; and that the rates of pay of all other enlisted men of the coast and the field artillery shall be as now provided by law: Provided, That casemate electricians, observers, first class, and plotters shall receive nine dollars a month in addition to their pay; that chief planters, chief loaders, observers, second class, gun commanders, and gun pointers shall receive seven dollars a month in addition to their pay, and that first-class gunners shall receive two dollars a month and second-class gunners one dollar a month in addition to their pay: Provided further, That the number of casemate electricians shall not exceed forty-four; that the number of observers, first class, shall not exceed one hundred and seventy; that the number of plotters shall not exceed one hundred and seventy; that the number of chief planters shall not exceed forty-four; that the number of chief loaders shall not exceed forty-four; that the number of observers, second class, shall not exceed one hundred and seventy; that the number of gun commanders shall not exceed three hundred and seventy-eight, and that the number of gun pointers shall not exceed three hundred and seventy-eight: And provided further, That no enlisted man shall receive under this section more than one addition to his pay. Sec. 11, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 863).

THE COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

1443f. The coast artillery is the artillery charged with the care and use of the fixed and movable elements of land and coast fortifications, including the submarine mine and torpedo defenses. Sec. 3, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 861).

1443g. The coast artillery shall constitute a corps, and shall consist of one Chief of Coast Artillery with the rank, pay, and allowances of a brigadier-general, as provided in section one of this Act; fourteen colonels; fourteen lieutenant-colonels; forty-two majors; two hundred and ten captains; two hundred and ten first lieutenants, and two hundred and ten second lieutenants; and the captains and lieutenants provided for in this section not required for duty with companies shall be available for duty as staff officers of the various coast artillery commands and for such other details as may be authorized by law and regulations; twenty-one sergeants-major with the rank, pay, and allowances of regimental sergeants-major of infantry; twenty-six master electricians; sixty engineers; seventy-four electrician-sergeants, first class; seventy-four electrician-sergeants, second class; forty-two sergeants-major with the rank, pay, and allowances of battalion sergeants-major of infantry; forty-two master gunners; sixty firemen; one hundred and seventy companies, and fourteen bands, organized as now provided for by law for artillery corps bands. Sec. 5, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 861).

1443h. Each company of coast artillery shall consist of one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, two cooks, two mechanics, two musicians, and such number of sergeants, corporals, and privates as may be fixed by the President in accordance with the requirements of the service to which it may be assigned: Provided, That the total number of sergeants and corporals in the coast artillery, so fixed, shall not exceed one thousand three hundred and sixty and two thousand and forty, respectively, and that the total enlisted strength of the coast artillery, as provided under this Act, shall not exceed nineteen thousand one hundred and forty-seven, exclusive of master electricians, electrician-sergeants, first class, and electrician-sergeants, second class. Sec. 6, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 862).

THE FIELD ARTILLERY.

1443i. The field artillery is the artillery which accompanies an army in the field, and includes light artillery, horse artillery, siege artillery, and mountain artillery. Sec. 4, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 861).

1443j. The field artillery shall consist of six regiments, each organized as follows: One colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, eleven captains, thirteen first lieutenants, and thirteen second lieutenants; two veterinarians, one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, one commissary-sergeant, two battalion sergeants-major, two battalion quartermaster-sergeants, two color-sergeants, one band, and six batteries organized into two battalions of three batteries each. Of the officers herein provided the captains and lieutenants not required for duty with batteries shall be available for detail as regimental and battalion staff officers, and for such other details as may be authorized by law and regulations. Battalion adjutants shall be detailed from the captains, and battalion quartermasters and commissaries from lieutenants. Each field artillery band shall be organized as provided by law for cavalry bands: Provided, That the President in his discretion may increase by nine mounted orderlies the regimental strength herein authorized. Sec. 7, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 862).

1443k. Each battery of field artillery shall consist of one captain, two first lieutenants, two second lieutenants, one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, one stable sergeant, one chief mechanic, six sergeants, twelve corporals, four mechanics, three cooks, two musicians, and one hundred and two privates, the commisioned officers to be assigned from among those hereinbefore authorized for the regiment: Provided, That the President in his discretion may increase the number of sergeants in any battery of field artillery to eight, the number of corporals to sixteen, the number of mechanics to seven, the number of musicians to three, and the number of privates to one hundred and forty-nine: Provided further, That nothing contained in this Act shall increase the total number of enlisted men in the line of the Army, together with the native scouts, as authorized by section thirty-six of the Act of Congress approved February second, nineteen hundred and one, entitled "An Act to increase the efficiency of the permanent military establishment of the United States."' Sec. 8, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats.. 862).

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY—THE ARMY WAR COLLEGE—THE SERVICE SCHOOLS.

THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

ORGANIZATION: ACADEMIC AND MILITARY STAFF.

1458a. For pay of one associate professor of modern languages, in addition to pay as captain, five hundred dollars. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 442).

(The above appropriation act amends paragraph 1458, by the creation of an additional office.)

1458b. For one civilian instructor of French, to be employed under rules prescribed by the Secretary of War, two thousand dollars;

For two civilian instructors in Spanish, at two thousand dollars per year each, to be employed under rules prescribed by the Secretary of War, four thousand dollars. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 445).

(The above appropriation act amends paragraph 1458 by the creation of two additional offices.)

1458c. For pay of one professor of ordnance and science of gunnery (lieutenant-colonel), in addition to pay as major: Provided, That the position shall be filled by the detail of an officer of the Army, who, while so serving, shall have the title and status of other professors, * * * five hundred dollars. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1063).

(The above paragraph amends paragraphs 1458 and 1471.)

THE ACADEMIC STAFF.

1471a. The professors and the associate professor of the United States Military Academy shall have the actual rank in the United States Army now assigned to them by assimilation in the regulations of the Military Academy prescribed by the President of the United States, and that they shall exercise command only in the academic department of the United States Military Academy. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 409).

(See note to paragraph 1495.)

CORPS OF CADETS.

1479a. The number of cadets authorized to be appointed by the President from the United States at large shall not at any one time exceed forty. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 410).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1479.)

1480a. Hereafter the actual and necessary traveling expenses of candidates while proceeding from their homes to the Military Academy for qualification as cadets shall, if admitted, be credited to their accounts and paid after admission from the appropriation for the transportation of the Army and its supplies. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 409).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1480.)

1480b. Cadets appointed to the Military Academy at West Point, New York, for admission after the year nineteen hundred and seven, may be admitted on the first day of March in place of the first day of June. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1063).

PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

1485a. Hereafter the pay of cadets shall be fixed at five hundred dollars per annum and one ration per day, or commutation therefor, such commutation to be thirty cents per day, to be paid from the appropriation for the subsistence of the Army. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 409).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1485.)

THE MILITARY ACADEMY BAND.

1508a. The Military Academy band shall hereafter consist of one teacher of music, who shall be the leader of the band, one enlisted band sergeant and assistant leader, and of forty enlisted musicians. The teacher of music shall receive the pay of a second lieutenant, not mounted; the enlisted band sergeant and assistant leader shall receive six hundred dollars per year; and of the enlisted musicians of the band, twelve shall each receive thirty-four dollars per month, twelve shall each receive twenty-five dollars per month, and the remaining sixteen shall each receive seventeen dollars per month, and each of the aforesaid enlisted men shall also be entitled to the clothing, fuel, rations, and other allowances of musicians of cavalry; and the said teacher of music, the band sergeant and assistant leader, and the enlisted musicians of the band shall be entitled to the same benefits in respect to pay, emoluments, and retirement arising from longevity, reenlistment, and length of service as are, or may hereafter become, applicable to other officers or enlisted men of the Army. Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 853).

(This paragraph amends section 1111 of the Revised Statutes and takes the place of paragraph 1508.)

GENERAL ARMY SERVICE MEN, QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

1510a. Hereafter no part of the moneys appropriated for use of the Quartermaster's Department shall be used in payment of extra duty pay for the Army service men in the Quartermaster's Department at West Point. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1167).

ARMY WAR COLLEGE.

1514a. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to expend the sum of four hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, from the unexpended balance of an emergency fund appropriated in the Act approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, for the erection of the necessary buildings for the Army War College, established at Washington Barracks, District of Columbia, for the instruction of officers of the Army and militia of the United States. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 512).

(See paragraph 1514 and General Orders, 155, H. A. 1901.)

UNITED STATES ENGINEER SCHOOL.

1515a. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to expend the sum of five hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, from the unexpected balance of the appropriation for barracks and quarters for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred, which sum is hereby reappropriated for the construction of the necessary buildings for the Engineer School at Washington Barracks, District of Columbia. Act of June 30, 1902, (32 Stats., 519).

(See General Orders, 155, H. A. 1901.)

1515b. For equipment and maintenance of the United States Engineer School at Washington Barracks, District of Columbia, including purchase of instruments, implements, and materials, for the use of the school and for instruction of engineer troops in their special duties as sappers and miners; for land and submarine mines, pontoniers, torpedo drill, and signaling; for purchase and binding of professional works of recent date treating of military and civil engineering and kindred scientific subjects, for the library of the United States Engineer School. Act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats., 519).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1515. See General Orders, 155, H. A. 1901.)

UNITED STATES SERVICE SCHOOLS.

1519a. To provide means for the theoretical and practical instruction at the Artillery School, at Fort Monroe, Virginia; the School of Submarine Defense, at Fort Totten, New York; the General Service and Staff College, at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and the School of Application for Cavalry and Field Artillery, at Fort Riley, Kansas, by the purchase of text-books, books of reference, scientific and professional papers, the purchase of modern instruments and material for theoretical and practical instruction, and for all other absolutely necessary expenses, to be allotted in such proportions as may, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, be for the best interest of the military service, twenty-five thousand dollars. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 259).

(See General Orders, 155, H. A. 1901.)

CHAPTER XXXII.

CONTRACTS AND PURCHASES.

MISCELLANEOUS REQUIREMENTS.

1543a. Hereafter the purchase of supplies and the procurement of services for all branches of the Army service may be made in open market, in the manner common among business men, when the aggregate of the amount required does not exceed five hundred dollars; but every such purchase exceeding one hundred dollars shall be promptly reported to the Secretary of War for approval, under such regulations as he may prescribe. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 258).

(This paragraph makes general to "all branches of the army service" the authority to purchase supplies and procure services in open market, and increases the amount that may be thus expended to "five hundred dollars.")

PENAL OFFENSES.

1566a. Every officer, clerk, agent, or employee of the United States, and every person representing himself to be or assuming to act as such officer, clerk, agent, or employee, who is guilty of extortion, under color of his office, clerkship, agency, or employment, or under color of his pretended or assumed office, clerkship, agency, or employment, and every person who shall attempt any act which if performed would make him guilty of such extortion, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, except those officers or agents of the United States otherwise differently and specially provided for in the subsequent sections of this chapter. Act of June 28, 1906 (34 Stats., 546).

(This paragraph amends section 5481 of the Revised Statutes and takes the place of paragraph 1566. It has reference to Title 70, Chapter 6, R. S.)

THE EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

1573a. The provisions of the Act entitled "An Act relating to the limitations of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon the public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia," approved August first, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, shall not apply to alien laborers employed in the construction of the Isthmian Canal within the Canal Zone. Act of February 27, 1906 (34 Stats., 33).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 1573.)

1573b. The provisions of an Act entitled "An Act relating to the limitations of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon the public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia," approved August first, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, and of an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, and for prior years, and for other purposes," approved February twenty-seventh, nineteen hundred and six, shall not apply to unskilled alien laborers and to the foremen and superintendents of such laborers employed in the construction of the isthmian canal within the Canal Zone. Sec. 4, Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stats., 669).

(The above paragraph amends paragraphs 1573 and 1573a.)

BONDS TO SECURE PAYMENT FOR LABOR AND MATERIALS.

1576a. Hereafter any person or persons entering into a formal contract with the United States for the construction of any public building, or the prosecution and completion of any public work, or for repairs upon any public building or public work, shall be required, before commencing such work, to execute the usual penal bond, with good and sufficient sureties, with the additional obligation that such contractor or contractors shall promptly make payments to all persons supplying him or them with labor and materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract; and any person, company, or corporation who has furnished labor or materials used in the construction or repair of any public building or public work, and payment for which has not been made, shall have the right to intervene and be made a party to any action instituted by the United States on the bond of the contractor, and to have their rights and claims adjudicated in such action and judgment rendered thereon, subject, however, to the priority of the claim and judgment of the United States. If the full amount of the liability of the surety on said bond is insufficient to pay the full amount of said claims and demands, then, after paying the full amount due the United States, the remainder shall be distributed pro rata among said interveners. If no suit should be brought by the United States within six months from the completion and final settlement of said contract, then the person or persons supplying the contractor with labor and materials shall, upon application therefor, and furnishing affidavit to the Department under the direction of which said work has been prosecuted that labor or materials for the prosecution of such work has been supplied by him or them, and payment for which has not been made, be furnished with a certified copy of said contract and bond, upon which he or they shall have a right of action, and shall be, and are hereby, authorized to bring suit in the name of the United States in the circuit court of the United States in the district in which said contract was to be performed and executed, irrespective of the amount in controversy in such suit, and not elsewhere, for his or their use and benefit, against said contractor and his sureties, and to prosecute the same to final judgment and execution: Provided, That where suit is instituted by any of such creditors on the bond of the contractor it shall not be commenced until after the complete performance of said contract and final settlement thereof, and shall be commenced within one year after the performance and final settlement of said contract, and not later: And provided further, That where suit is so instituted by a creditor or by creditors, only one action shall be brought, and any creditor may file his claim in such action and be made party thereto within one year from the completion of the work under said contract, and not later. If the recovery on the bond should be inadequate to pay the amounts found due to all of said creditors, judgment shall be given to each creditor pro rata of the amount of the recovery. The surety on said bond may pay into court, for distribution among said claimants and creditors, the full amount of the sureties' liability, to wit, the penalty named in the bond, less any amount which said surety may have had to pay to the United States by reason of the execution of said bond, and upon so doing the surety will be relieved from further liability: Provided further, That in all suits instituted under the provisions of this Act such personal notice of the pendency of such suits, informing them of their right to intervene as the court may order, shall be given to all known creditors, and in addition thereto notice of publication in some newspaper of general circulation, published in the State or town where the contract is being performed, for at least three successive weeks, the last publication to be at least three months before the time limited therefor. Act of February 24, 1905 (33 Stats., 811).

(This paragraph amends the act of March 13, 1894, 28 Stats., 278, and takes the place of paragraph 1576.)

CHAPTER XXXIII.

THE PUBLIC LANDS—MILITARY RESERVATIONS—MILITARY POSTS.

HOMESTEADS.

1587a. The rights of honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors of the late civil and the Spanish war, as defined and described in sections twenty-three hundred and four and twenty-three hundred and five of the Revised Statutes,[1] as amended by the Act of March first, nineteen hundred and one, shall not be abridged. Sec. 4, Act of April 27, 1904 (33 Stats., 322).

ACQUISITION OF LANDS BY THE UNITED STATES. (PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.)

1599a. All the property and rights which may have been acquired in the Philippine Islands by the United States under the treaty of peace with Spain, signed December tenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, except such land or other property as shall be designated by the President of the United States for military and other reservations of the Government of the United States, are hereby placed under the control of the government of said islands to be administered for the benefit of the inhabitants thereof, except as provided is this Act. Sec. 12, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 695).

PUBLIC LANDS (PHILIPPINE ISLANDS).

1599b. Whenever it shall be made to appear to the secretary of any province or the commander of any military department in the Philippine Islands that any lands within the province are saline in character, it shall be the duty of said provincial secretary or commander, under the regulations of the Government of the Philippine Islands, to take testimony in reference to such lands, to ascertain their true character, and to report the same to the secretary of the interior for the Philippine Islands; and if, upon such testimony, the secretary of the interior shall find that such lands are saline and incapable of being purchased under any of the laws relative to the public domain, then and in such case said lands shall be offered for sale at the office of the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the said government may be described as mining recorder of the province or department in which the same shall be situated, as the case may be, under such regulations as may be prescribed by said Government and sold to the highest bidder, for cash, at a price of not less than three dollars per hectare; and in case such lands fail to sell when so offered, then the same shall be subject to private sale at such office, for cash, at a price not less than three dollars per hectare, in the same manner as other lands in settler shall be allowed six months after locating his homestead, and filing his declaratory statement, within which to make his entry and commence his settlement and improvement.

Sec. 2305, R. S. The time which the homestead settler has served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect title, or if discharged on account of wounds received or disability incurred in the line of duty, then the term of enlistment shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect title, without reference to the length of time he may have served; but no patent shall issue to any homestead settler who has not resided upon, improved, and cultivated his homestead for a period of at least one year after he shall have commenced his improvements.

the said Islands are sold. All executive proclamations relating to the sales of public saline lands shall be published in only two newspapers, one printed in the English language and one in the Spanish language, at Manila, which shall be designated by said Secretary of the interior. Sec. 58, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 705).

1599c. Whenever it shall be made to appear to the secretary of any province or the commander of any military department in the Philippine Islands that any lands within the province are saline in character, it shall be the duty of said provincial secretary or commander, under the regulations of the government of the Philippine Islands, to take testimony in reference to such lands, to ascertain their true character, and to report the same to the secretary of the interior for the Philippine Islands; and if upon such testimony the secretary of the interior shall find that such lands are saline and incapable of being purchased under any of the laws relative to the public domain, then and in such case said lands shall be offered for sale at the office of the provincial secretary, or such other officer as by the said government may be described as mining recorder of the province or department in which the same shall be situated, as the case may be, under such regulations as may be prescribed by said government and sold to the highest bidder for cash at a price of not less than six pesos per hectare; and in case such lands fail to sell when so offered, then the same shall be subject to private sale at such office, for cash, at a price not less than six pesos per hectare, in the same manner as other lands in the said islands are sold. All executive proclamations relating to the sales of public saline lands shall be published in only two newspapers, one printed in the English language and one in the Spanish language, at Manila, which shall be designated by said secretary of the interior. Sec. 9, Act of February 6, 1905 (33 Stats., 697).

(This paragraph amends section 58 of the act of July 1, 1902, and takes the place of paragraph 1599*b*.)

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF DEEDS.

1599d. Deeds and other instruments affecting land situate in the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States may be acknowledged in the islands of Guam and Samoa or in the Canal Zone before any notary public or judge, appointed therein by proper authority, or by any officer therein who has ex officio the powers of a notary public: Provided, That the certificate by such notary in Guam, Samoa, or the Canal Zone, as the case may be, shall be accompanied by the certificate of the governor or acting governor of such place to the effect that the notary taking said acknowledgment was in fact the officer he purported to be; and any deeds or other instruments affecting lands so situate, so acknowledged since the first day of January, nineteen hundred and five, and accompanied by such certificate shall have the same effect as such deeds or other instruments hereafter so acknowledged and certified. Act of June 28, 1906 (34 Stats., 552).

RUINS OR MONUMENTS.

1614a. Any person who shall appropriate, excavate, injure, or destroy any historic or prehistoric ruin or monument, or any object of antiquity, situated on lands owned or controlled by the Government of the United States, without the permission of the Secretary of the Department of the Government having jurisdiction over the lands on which said antiquities are situated, shall, upon conviction, be fined in a sum of not more than five hundred dollars or be imprisoned for a period of not more than ninety days, or shall suffer both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. Sec. 1, Act of June 8, 1906 (34 Stats., 225).

1614b. The President of the United States is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to declare by public proclamation historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures, and other objects of historic or scientific interest that are situated upon the lands owned or controlled by the Government of the United States to be national monuments, and may reserve as a part thereof parcels of land, the limits of which in all cases shall be confined to the smallest area compatible with the proper care and management of the objects to be protected: Provided, That when such objects are situated upon a tract covered by a bona fide unperfected claim or held in private ownership, the tract, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the proper care and management of the object, may be relinquished to the Government, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to accept the relinquishment of such tracts in behalf of the Government of the United States. Sec. 2, Act of June 8, 1906 (34 Stats., 225).

1614d. The Secretaries of the Departments aforesaid shall make and publish from time to time uniform rules and regulations for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act. Sec. 4, Act of June 8, 1906 (34 Stats., 225).

MILITARY POSTS.

1621a. Hereafter no military post within the United States shall be established without the express authority of Congress. Act of March 2, 1905 (33 Stats., 836).

HAWAII.

1625a. The Secretary of War is authorized to acquire leases in such lands in Hawaii as have been set aside for purposes of a military post. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 464).

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE PUBLIC PROPERTY.

DEFICIENCY IN, AND DAMAGE TO, PUBLIC PROPERTY.

1640a. Hereafter moneys arising from deductions made from carriers on account of the loss of or damage to military stores in transit shall be credited to the proper appropriation or funds out of which such or similar stores shall be replaced and individual pieces of United States armament which are not needed on account of historical value, and can be advantageously replaced, may be sold at a price not less than their cost price, when there exist for such sale sentimental reasons adequate in the judgment of the Secretary of War or Secretary of the Navy. Act of March 2, 1905 (33 Stats., 840).

(See paragraphs 1178 and 1181a.)

CHAPTER XXXV.

THE MILITIA—THE MILITIA OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA—THE TERRITORIAL MILITIA.

COMPOSITION AND ENROLLMENT.

1650a. Sections sixteen hundred and twenty-five to sixteen hundred and sixty, both included, of title sixteen of the Revised Statutes, and section two hundred and thirty-two therof, relating to the militia, are hereby repealed. Sec. 25, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 780).

(This paragraph repeals paragraphs 133, 1651 to 1690, both inclusive, and paragraphs 2020 to 2022, both inclusive.)

1651a. The militia shall consist of every able-bodied male citizen of the respective States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, and every able-bodied male of foreign birth who has declared his intention to become a citizen, who is more than eighteen and less than forty-five years of age. Sec. 1, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775).

(This and the following paragraph take the place of the paragraph repealed by the act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775). See paragraphs 1650a and 1707.)

1651b. [The militia] shall be divided into two classes—the organized militia, to be known as the National Guard of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia, or by such other designations as may be given them by the laws of the respective States or Territories, and the remainder to be known as the Reserve Militia. Sec. 1, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775).

EXEMPTIONS.

1655a. The Vice-President of the United States, the officers, judicial and executive, of the Government of the United States, the members and officers of each House of Congress, persons in the military or naval service of the United States, all custom-house officers, with their clerks, postmasters and persons employed by the United States in the transmission of the mail, ferrymen employed at any ferry on a post road, artificers and workmen employed in the armories and arsenals of the United States, pilots, mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States, and all persons who are exempted by the laws of the respective States or Territories shall be exempted from militia duty, without regard to age. Sec. 2, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775).

(See paragraph 1708.)

1655b. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to require or compel any member of any well-recognized religious sect or organization at present organized and existing whose creed forbids its members to participate in war in any form, and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein, in accordance with the creed of said religious organization, to serve in the militia or any other armed or volunteer force under the jurisdiction and authority of the United States. Sec. 2, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775).

ORGANIZATION.

1656a. The regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active militia in the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia who have heretofore participated or shall hereafter participate in the apportionment of the annual appropriation provided by section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, whether known and designated as National Guard, militia, or otherwise, shall constitute the organized militia. The organization, armament, and discipline of the organized militia in the several States and Territories and in the District of Columbia shall be the same as that which is now or may hereafter be prescribed for the Regular and Volunteer Armies of the United States, within five years from the date of the approval of this Act. Sec. 3, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775).

(See paragraph 1717.)

1657a. The President of the United States, in time of peace, may by order fix the minimum number of enlisted men in each company, troop, battery, signal corps, engineer corps, and hospital corps. Sec. 3, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775).

(See paragraph 1718.)

1661a. Any corps of artillery, cavalry and infantry existing in any of the States at the passage of the Act of May eighth, seventeen hundred and ninety-two, which, by the laws, customs or usages of the said States have been in continuous existence since the passage of said Act under its provisions and under the provisions of Section two hundred and thirty-two and Sections sixteen hundred and twenty-five to sixteen hundred and sixty, both inclusive, of Title sixteen of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the Militia, shall be allowed to retain their accustomed privileges, subject, nevertheless, to all other duties required by law in like manner as the other Militia. Sec. 3, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 775).

INSTRUCTION AND DISCIPLINE.

1662a. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to provide for participation by any part of the organized militia of any State or Territory on the request of the governor thereof in the encampment, maneuvers, and field instruction of any part of the Regular Army at or near any military post or camp or lake or seacoast defenses of the United States. In such case the organized militia so participating shall receive the same pay, subsistence, and transportation as is provided by law for the officers and men of the Regular Army, to be paid out of the appropriation for the pay, subsistence, and transportation of the Army: Provided, That the command of such military post or camp and of the officers and troops of the United States there stationed shall remain with the regular commander of the post without regard to the rank of the commanding or other officers of the militia temporarily so encamped within its limits or in its vicinity. Sec. 15, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 777).

1662b. No part of the sums appropriated for the support of the Regular Army shall be used to pay any part of the expenses of the organized militia of any State, Territory, or District of Columbia, while engaged in joint encampment, maneuvers, and field instruction of the Regular Army and militia as provided by section fifteen of the Act of January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, entitled "An Act to promote the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes." Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 265).

1662c. Each State or Territory furnished with material of war under the provisions of this or former Acts of Congress shall, during the year next preceding each annual allotment of funds, in accordance with section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes as amended, have required every company, troop, and battery in its organized militia not excused by the governor of such State or Territory to participate in practice marches or go into camp of instruction at least five consecutive days, and to assemble for drill and instruction at company, battalion, or regimental armories or rendezvous or for target practice not less than twenty-four times, and shall also have required during such year an inspection of each such company, troop, and battery to be made by an officer of such militia or an officer of the Regular Army. Sec. 18, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 778).

1662d. Upon the application of the governor of any State or Territory furnished with material of war under the provisions of this Act or former laws of Congress, the Secretary of War may detail one or more officers of the Army to attend any encampment of the organized militia, and to give such instruction and information to the officers and men assembled in such camp as may be requested by the governor. Such officer or officers shall immediately make a report of such encampment to the Secretary of War, who shall furnish a copy thereof to the governor of the State or Territory. Sec. 19, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 778).

1662f. Hereafter when any portion of the organized militia of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia participates in the encampment, maneuvers, and field instruction of any part of the Regular Army, under the provisions of section fifteen of the Act of January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, they may, after being duly mustered by an officer of the Regular Army, be paid at any time after such muster for the period from the date of leaving the home rendezvous to date of return thereto as determined in advance, both dates inclusive, and such payment, if otherwise correct, shall pass to the credit of the paymaster making the same. Act of June 12, 1906 (34 Stats., 249).

1663a. Whenever any officer of the organized militia shall, upon recommendation of the governor of any State, Territory, or general commanding the District of Columbia, and when authorized by the President, attend and pursue a regular course of study at any military school or college of the United States such officer shall receive from the annual appropriation for the support of the Army the same travel allowances, and quarters, or commutation of quarters, to which an officer of the Regular Army would be entitled if attending such school or college under orders from proper military authority, and shall also receive commutation of subsistence at the rate of one dollar per day while in actual attendance upon the course of instruction. Sec. 16, Act of January 12, 1903 (32 Stats., 778).

RETURNS.

1664a. There shall be appointed in each State, Territory and District of Columbia, an Adjutant-General, who shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by the laws of such State, Territory, and District, respectively, and make returns to the Secretary of War, at such times and in such form as he shall from time to time prescribe, of the strength of the organized militia, and also make such reports as may from time to time be required by the Secretary of War. That the Secretary of War shall, with his annual report of each year, transmit to Congress an abstract of the returns and reports of the adjutants-general of the States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, with such observations thereon as he may deem necessary for the information of Congress. Sec. 12, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

(See paragraphs 1715 and 1716.)

ACTIVE SERVICE OF THE MILITIA.

1669a. Whenever the United States is invaded, or in danger of invasion from any foreign nation, or of rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, or the President is unable, with the other forces at his command, to execute the laws of the Union in any part thereof, it shall be lawful for the President to call forth, for a period not exceeding nine months, such number of the militia of the State or of the States or Territories or of the District of Columbia as he may deem necessary to repel such invasion, suppress such rebellion, or to enable him to execute such laws, and to issue his orders for that purpose to such officers of the militia as he may think proper. Sec. 4, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

(See paragraph 1711.)

1670a. When the militia of more than one State is called into the actual service of the United States by the President he may, in his discretion, apportion them among such States or Territories or to the District of Columbia according to representative population. Sec. 6, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

1671a. The militia, when called into the actual service of the United States, shall be subject to the same Rules and Articles of War as the regular troops of the United States. Sec. 9, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

1672a. Courts-martial for the trial of officers or men of the militia, when in the service of the United States, shall be composed of militia officers only. Sec. 8, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

1673a. Whenever the President calls forth the militia of any State or Territory or of the District of Columbia to be employed in the service of the United States, he may specify in his call the period for which such service is required, not exceeding nine months, and the militia so called shall continue to serve during the term so specified, unless sooner discharged by order of the President. Sec. 5, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stat., 776).

(See paragraph 1711.)

1674a. Every officer and enlisted man of the militia who shall be called forth in the manner hereinbefore prescribed and shall be found fit for military service shall be mustered or accepted into the United States service by a duly authorized mustering officer of the United States: Provided, however, That any officer or enlisted man of the militia who shall refuse or neglect to present himself to such mustering officer upon being called forth as herein prescribed shall be subject to trial by court-martial, and shall be punished as such court-martial may direct. Sec. 7, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

(See paragraph 1711.)

PAY, RATIONS, EMOLUMENTS.

1681a. The militia, when called into the actual service of the United States, shall, during their time of service, be entitled to the same pay and allowances as are or may be provided by law for the Regular Army. Sec. 10, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

1683a. When the militia is called into the actual service of the United States, or any portion of the militia is accepted under the provisions of this Act, their pay shall commence from the day of their appearing at the place of company rendezvous. But this provision shall not be construed to authorize any species of expenditure previous to arriving at such places of rendezvous which is not provided by existing laws to be paid after their arrival at such places of rendezvous. Sec. 11, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 776).

PENSIONS.

1687a. When any officer, noncommissioned officer, or private of the militia is disabled by reason of wounds or disabilities received or incurred in the service of the United States he shall be entitled to all the benefits of the pension laws existing at the time of his service, and in case such officer, noncommissioned officer, or private dies in the service of the United States or in returning to his place of residence after being mustered out of such service, or at any time, in consequence of wounds or disabilities received in such service, his widow and children, if any, shall be entitled to all the benefits of such pension laws. Sec. 22, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 779).

ARMAMENT AND EQUIPMENT.

1691a. The sum of two million dollars is hereby annually appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of providing arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the militia, such appropriation to remain available until expended. Sec. 1, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 449).

(This paragraph reenacts and amends section 1661 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the acts of February 12, 1887, and June 6, 1900. See paragraph 1691.)

1691b. Said appropriation shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories, under the direction of the Secretary of War, according to the number of Senators and Representatives to which each State respectively is entitled in the Congress of the United States, and to the Territories and District of Columbia such proportion and under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, however, That no State shall be entitled to the benefits of the appropriation apportioned to it unless the number of its regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active militia shall be at least one hundred men for each Senator and Representative to which such State is entitled in the Congress of the United States. And the amount of said appropriation which is thus determined not to be available shall be covered back into the Treasury: Provided also, That the sums so apportioned among the several States and Teritories and the District of Columbia shall be available for the purpose named in section fourteen of the Act of January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, for the actual excess of expenses of travel in making the inspections therein provided for over the allowances made for same by law; for the promotion of rifle practice, including the acquisition, construction, maintenance, and equipment of shooting galleries and suitable target ranges; for the hiring of horses and draft animals for the use of mounted troops, batteries, and wagons; for forage for the same and for such other incidental expenses in connection with encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction provided for in sections fourteen and fifteen of the said Act of January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, as the Secretary of War may deem necessary. Sec. 2, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 449).

(This paragraph reenacts and amends section 2 of the act of February 12, 1887. See paragraph 1693.)

1692a. The annual appropriation made by section sixteen hundred and sixty-one, Revised Statutes, as amended, shall be available for the purpose of providing for issue to the organized militia any stores and supplies or publications which are supplied to the Army by any department. Any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, purchase for cash from the War Department, for use of its militia, stores, supplies, material of war, or military publications, such as are furnished to the Army, in addition to those issued under the provisions of this Act, at the price at which they are listed for issue to the Army, with the cost of transportation added, and funds received from such sales shall be credited to the appropriations to which they belong and shall not be covered into the Treasury, but shall be available until expended to replace therewith the supplies sold to the State and Territories and to the District of Columbia in the manner herein provided. Sec. 17, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 778).

1692b. The sums hereby appropriated for the expenses of the organized militia for such joint encampment, maneuvers, and field instruction shall be disbursed as, and for that purpose shall constitute, one fund; and the Secretary of War shall hereafter forward to Congress at its next session a detailed statement of the expenses of such encampments and maneuvers. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 265).

(This paragraph relates to the joint encampment, etc., provided for by sections 15 and 21 of the act of January 21, 1903. See paragraphs 1662a and 1699a.)

1693a. Whenever it shall appear by the report of inspections, which it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to cause to be made at least once in each year by officers detailed by him for that purpose, that the organized militia of a State or Territory or of the District of Columbia is sufficiently armed, uniformed, and equipped for active duty in the field, the Secretary of War is authorized, on the requisition of the governor of such State or Territory, to pay to the quartermaster-general thereof, or to such other officer of the militia of said State as the said governor may designate and appoint for the purpose, so much of its allotment out of the said annual appropriation under section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes as amended as shall be necessary for the payment, subsistence, and transportation of such portion of said organized militia as shall engage in actual field or camp service for instruction, and the officers and enlisted men of such militia while so engaged shall be entitled to the same pay, subsistence, and transportation or travel allowances as officers and enlisted men of corresponding grades of the Regular Army are or may hereafter be entitled by law, and the officer so designated and appointed shall be regarded as a disbursing officer of the United States, and shall render his accounts through the War Department to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury for settlement, and he shall be required to give good and sufficient bonds to the United States, in such sums as the Secretary of War may direct, faithfully to account for the safe-keeping and payment of the public moneys so intrusted to him for disbursement. Sec. 14, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 777).

(See paragraph 1693.)

1694a. The purchase or manufacture of arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for the militia under the provisions of this Act shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of War, as such arms, ordnance and quartermaster stores, and camp equipage are now manufactured or otherwise provided for the use of the Regular Army, and they shall be receipted for and shall remain the property of the United States, and be annually accounted for by the governors of the States and Territories and by the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, for which purpose the Secretary of War shall prescribe and supply the necessary blanks and make such regulations as he may deem necessary to protect the interests of the United States. Sec. 3, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 450).

(This paragraph reenacts and amends section 3 of the act of February 12, 1887. See paragraph 1694.)

1696a. Whenever any property furnished to any State or Territory, or the District of Columbia, as hereinbefore provided, has been lost or destroyed, or has become unserviceable or unsuitable from use in service, or from any other cause, it shall be examined by a disinterested surveying officer of the organized militia, to be appointed by the governor of the State or Territory, or the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, to whom the property has been issued, and his report shall be forwarded by said governor or commanding general direct to the Secretary of War, and if it shall appear to the Secretary of War from the record of survey that the property has been lost or destroyed through unavoidable causes, he is hereby authorized to relieve the State from further accountability therefor; if it shall appear that the loss or destruction of property was due to carelessness or neglect or that its loss could have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable care, the money value thereof shall be charged against the allotment to the States under section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes as amended. If the articles so surveyed are found to be unserviceable or unsuitable, the Secretary of War shall direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them, except unserviceable clothing which shall be destroyed, and if sold the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States. Sec. 4, Act of June 22, 1906 (34 Stats., 450).

(This paragraph amends section 4 of the act of February 12, 1887, and takes the place of paragraph 1696.)

1700a. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to issue, on the requisitions of the governors of the several States and Territories, or of the commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia, such number of the United States standard service magazine arms, with bayonets, bayonet scabbards, gun slings, belts, and such other necessary accouterments and equipments as are required for the Army of the United States, for arming all of the organized militia in said States and Territories and District of Columbia, without charging the cost or value thereof, or any which have been issued since December first, nineteen hundred and one, or any expense connected therewith, against the allotment to said State, Territory, or District of Columbia, out of the annual appropriation provided by section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes, as amended, or requiring payment therefor, and to exchange, without receiving any money credit therefor, ammunition, or parts thereof, suitable to the new arms, round for round, for corresponding ammunition suitable to the old arms theretofore issued to said State, Territory, or District by the United States: Provided, That said rifles and carbines and other property shall be receipted for and shall remain the property of the United States and be annually accounted for by the governors of the States and Territories as now required by law, and that each State, Territory, and District shall, on receipt of the new arms, turn in to the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, without receiving any money credit therefor, and without expense for transportation, all United States rifles and carbines now in its possession.

To provide means to carry into effect the provisions of this section, the necessary money to cover the cost of exchanging or issuing the new arms, accouterments, equipments, and ammunition to be exchanged or issued hereunder is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Sec. 13, Act of January 21, 1903 (32 Stats., 777).

1700b. For the purpose of furnishing the necessary articles requisite to fully arm, equip, and supply each regiment, battalion, squadron, company, troop, battery, signal, engineer, and hospital corps and medical department of the organized militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia with the same armament and equipment as are now prescribed for corresponding branches of the line or staff in the Regular Army, without cost to said States, Territories, or the District of Columbia, but to remain the property of the United States, and to be accounted for in the manner now prescribed by law, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized, under such regulations as he may prescribe, on the requisitions of the governors of the several States and Territories, or the commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia, to issue the said armament and equipment to the organized militia; and the sum of two million dollars is hereby appropriated and made immediately available until expended for the procurement and issue of the articles constituting the same. Act of March, 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 942).

1700c. For the purpose of procuring field-artillery material for the organized militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, without cost to the said States, Territories, or the District of Columbia, but to remain the property of the United States and to be accounted for in the manner now prescribed by law, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized, under such regulations as he may prescribe, on the requisitions of the governors of the several States and Territories or the commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia, to issue said artillery material to the organized militia; and the sum of five hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars is hereby appropriated and made immediately available, for the procurement and issue of the articles constituting the same. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 275).

1700d. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, whenever a new type of small arm shall have been adopted for the use of the Regular Army, and when a sufficient quantity of such arms shall have been manufactured to constitute, in his discretion, an adequate reserve for the armament of any regular and volunteer forces that it may be found necessary to raise in case of war, to cause the organized militia of the United States to be furnished with small arms of the type so adopted, with bayonets and the necessary accouterments and equipments, including ammunition therefor: Provided, That such issues shall be made in the manner provided in section thirteen of the Act approved January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, entitled "An Act to promote the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes." Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1174).

1700e. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to sell, at the prices at which they are listed for the Army, upon the request of the governors of the several States and Territories, such magazine rifles belonging to the United States as are not necessary for the equipment of the Army and the organized militia, for the use of rifle clubs formed under regulations prepared by the national board for the promotion of rifle practice and approved by the Secretary of War. Sec. 1, Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 986).

(See paragraphs 1692a and 1692c.)

1705a. Section two of the Act approved May nineteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, authorizing the Secretary of War to issue, on the requisition of the governor of a State bordering on the sea or Gulf coast, and having a permanent camping ground for the encampment of the militia not less than six days annually, two heavy guns and four mortars, with carriages and platforms, for their instruction, and for the construction of a suitable battery for the cannon so issued, and appropriating five thousand dollars for each State to carry out the above-mentioned objects, is hereby repealed: Provided, That this repeal shall not affect the existing law regarding the disposition of the cannon and other stores already issued. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1060).

(This paragraph repeals paragraph 1705.)

THE MILITIA OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

ARMS, UNIFORMS, AND EQUIPMENTS.

1742a. All moneys collected on account of deductions made from the pay of any officer or enlisted man of the National Guard of the District of Columbia on account of Government property lost or destroyed by such individual shall be repaid into the United States Treasury to the credit of the officer of the militia of the District of Columbia who is accountable to the United States Government for such property lost or destroyed. Act of April 27, 1904 (33 Stats., 389).

1750a. All moneys collected on account of deductions made from the pay of any officer or enlisted man of the National Guard of the District of Columbia for or on account of any violation of the regulations governing said National Guard shall be held by the commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia, who is authorized to expend such moneys so collected for necessary clerical and general incidental expenses of the service, including books, or for the pay of troops, other than Government employees; and for all moneys so collected and expended the commanding general shall make an accounting in like manner as for the appropriation disbursed for pay of troops. Act of April 27, 1904 (33 Stats., 389).

EXPENSES AND ALLOWANCES, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

1770a. For the following, to be expended under the authority of the commanding general, who is hereby authorized and empowered to make necessary contracts and leases, and to be accounted for in like manner as the appropriations disbursed for pay of troops, namely:

For rent, fuel, light, heat, care, and repair of armories, practice ships, boats, machinery, and dock, dredging alongside of dock, and for telephone service, eighteen thousand dollars.

For lockers, furniture, and gymnastic aparatus for armories, four hundred dollars.

For printing and stationery, six hundred and fifty dollars.

For cleaning and repairing uniforms, arms, and equipments, and contingent expenses, one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

For custodian in charge of United States property and storerooms, nine hundred dollars.

For clerk, office of the Adjutant-General, seven hundred and twenty dollars.

For expenses of drills and parades, one thousand seven hundred dollars.

For expenses of rifle practice and matches, three thousand six hundred dollars.

For expenses of camps, instruction, practice marches, and practice cruises, including fuel for cruising purposes, fifteen thousand two hundred dollars.

For pay of troops, other than Government employees, to be disbursed under the direction of the commanding-general, seventeen thousand six hundred dollars. Act of April 27, 1904 (33 Stats., 389).

(See paragraphs 1766, 1769–1770.)

NAVAL BATTALION, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

1781a. In addition to the companies of volunteer militia now authorized in the District of Columbia there may be organized not more than four companies of naval militia, which shall constitute a battalion to be known as the naval battalion of the National Guard of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 2. That the officers of the naval battalion shall consist of one commander, and a staff to consist of one executive officer with the rank of lieutenant-commander, one navigating officer with the rank of lieutenant, one signal, ordnance, and equipment officer with the rank of lieutenant, one chief engineer, one paymaster, and one surgeon, each with the relative rank of lieutenant.

SEC. 3. That each company shall consist of one lieutenant, one lieutenant, junior grade, two ensigns, and not less than sixty nor more than one hundred petty officers and enlisted men.

SEC. 4. That in all matters not otherwise specially provided for, the provisions of law which provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia shall apply to the naval battalion.

SEC. 5. That general routine of duty, discipline, and exercises of the naval battalion, and parts thereof, shall conform with the laws, customs, and usages of the Navy, as far as the same apply, and where they do not apply then such routine of duty, discipline, and exercises shall conform to the laws governing the volunteer forces of the District of Columbia. Secs. 1 to 5, Act of May 11, 1898 (30 Stats., 404.)

CHAPTER XXXVI.

MILITARY TRIBUNALS.

ARREST AND CONFINEMENT.

1788a. For a donation of five dollars to each dishonorably discharged prisoner upon his release from confinement, under court-martial sentence, involving dishonorable discharge. * * * Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 269).

(This paragraph is a reenactment of similar provisions contained in the annual appropriation acts for the support of the Army.)

1788b. For a suit of citizen's outer clothing, to cost not exceeding ten dollars, to be issued upon release from confinement to each prisoner who has been confined under a court-martial sentence involving dishonorable discharge. * * * Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 721).

(This paragraph is a reenactment of similar provisions contained in the annual appropriation acts for the support of the Army.)

1788c. Transportation of the Army, including * * * the transportation of persons on their discharge from the United States military prison to their homes (or elsewhere as they may elect), provided the cost in each case shall not be greater than to the place of last enlistment, * * * dollars. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1169).

PRISONS.

1788d. Hereafter any military prison that the Secretary of War may designate for the confinement of general prisoners for whom there is no room at the United States Military Prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, or whom it is impracticable to send there, shall be regarded as a branch of the said United States Military Prison and equally with it shall be subject to the laws relating thereto, including chapter six, title fourteen, of the Revised Statutes. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1169).

RULES OF EVIDENCE.

1815a. The competency of a witness to testify in any civil action, suit, or proceeding in the courts of the United States shall be determined by the laws of the State or Territory in which the court is held. Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 618).

(This paragraph amends section 858 of the Revised Statutes, and paragraph 1815.)

UNITED STATES PRISONERS: GOOD CONDUCT ALLOWANCE.

1837a. Each prisoner who has been or shall hereafter be convicted of any offense against the laws of the United States, and is confined, in execution of the judgment or sentence upon any such conviction, in any United States penitentiary or jail, or in any penitentiary, prison, or jail of any State or Territory, for a definite term, other than for life, whose record of conduct shows that he has faithfully observed all the rules and has not been subjected to punishment, shall be entitled to a deduction from the term of his sentence to be estimated as follows, commencing on the first day of his arrival at the penitentiary, prison, or jail: Upon a sentence of not less than six months nor more than one year, five days for each month; upon a sentence of more than one year and less than three years, six days for each month; upon a sentence of not less than three years and less than five years, seven days for each month; upon a sentence of not less than five years and less than ten years, eight days for each month; upon a sentence of ten years or more, ten days for each month. When a prisoner has two or more sentences, the aggregate of his several sentences shall be the basis upon which his deduction shall be estimated. Sec. 1, Act of June 21, 1902 (32 Stats., 397).

1837b. In the case of convicts in any United States penitentiary, the Attorney-General shall have the power to restore to any such convict who has heretofore or may hereafter forfeit any good time by violating any existing law or prison regulation such portion of lost good time as may be proper, in his judgment, upon recommendations and evidence submitted to him by the warden in charge. Restoration, in the case of United States convicts confined in State and Territorial institutions, shall be regulated in accordance with the rules governing such institutions, respectively. Sec. 2, Act of June 21, 1902 (32 Stats., 397).

1837c. This Act shall take effect and be in force from and after thirty days from the date of its approval, and shall apply only to sentences imposed by courts subsequent to the time that this Act takes effect, as hereinbefore provided. Prisoners serving under any sentence imposed prior to such time shall be entitled and receive the commutation heretofore allowed under existing laws. Such existing laws are hereby repealed as to all sentences imposed subsequent to the time when this Act takes effect. Sec. 3, Act of June 21, 1906 (32 Stats., 398).

CHAPTER XXXVII.

CITIZENSHIP AND NATURALIZATION.

CITIZENSHIP.

1871a. All children born outside the limits of the United States who are citizens thereof in accordance with the provisions of section nineteen hundred and ninety-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States and who continue to reside outside the United States shall, in order to receive the protection of this Government, be required upon reaching the age of eighteen years to record at an American consulate their intention to become residents and remain citizens of the United States and shall be further required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States upon attaining their majority. Sec. 6, Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1229).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1871.)

1872a. Any American woman who marries a foreigner shall take the nationality of her husband. At the termination of the martial relation she may resume her American citizenship, if abroad, by registering as an American citizen within one year with a consul of the United States, or by returning to reside in the United States, or, if residing in the United States at the termination of the marital relation, by continuing to reside therein. Sec. 3, Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1228).

1877a. Any American citizen shall be deemed to have expatriated himself when he has been naturalized in any foreign state in conformity with its laws, or when he has taken an oath of allegiance to any foreign state.

When any naturalized citizen shall have resided for two years in the foreign state from which he came, or for five years in any other foreign state it shall be presumed that he has ceased to be an American citizen, and the place of his general abode shall be deemed his place of residence during said years: Provided, however, That such presumption may be overcome on the presentation of satisfactory evidence to a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States, under such rules and regulations as the Department of State may prescribe: And provided also, That no American citizen shall be allowed to expatriate himself when this country is at war. Sec. 2, Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1228).

1879a. The Secretary of State shall be authorized, in his discretion, to issue passports to persons not citizens of the United States as follows: Where any person has made a declaration of intention to become such a citizen as provided by law and has resided in the United States for three years a passport may be issued to him entitling him to the protection of the Government in any foreign country: Provided, That such passport shall not be valid for more than six months and shall not be renewed, and that such passport shall not entitle the holder to the protection of this Government in the country of which he was a citizen prior to making such declaration of intention. Sec. 1, Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1228).

(This paragraph amends section 4076 of the Revised Statutes.)

NATURALIZATION.

1880a. Exclusive jurisdiction to naturalize aliens as citizens of the United States is hereby conferred upon the following specified courts:

United States circuit and district courts now existing, or which may hereafter be established by Congress in any State, United States district courts for the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Hawaii, and Alaska, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, and the United States courts for the Indian Territory; also all courts of record in any State or Territory now existing, or which may hereafter be created, having a seal, a clerk, and jurisdiction in actions at law or equity, or law and equity, in which the amount in controversy is unlimited.

That the naturalization jurisdiction of all courts herein specified, State, Territorial, and Federal, shall extend only to aliens resident within the respective judicial districts of such courts.

The courts herein specified shall, upon the requisition of the clerks of such courts, be furnished from time to time by the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization with such blank forms as may be required in the naturalization of aliens, and all certificates of naturalization shall be consecutively numbered and printed on safety paper furnished by said Bureau. Sec. 3, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 596).

(This and the following paragraph—1880b—take the place of paragraphs 1880, 1884, and 1885, which are repealed by section 26 of the act above cited.)

1880b. An alien may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States in the following manner and not otherwise:

First. He shall declare on oath before the clerk of any court authorized by this Act to naturalize aliens, or his authorized deputy, in the district in which such alien resides, two years at least prior to his admission, and after he has reached the age of eighteen years, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which the alien may be at the time a citizen or subject. And such declaration shall set forth the name, age, occupation, personal description, place of birth, last foreign residence and allegiance, the date of arrival, the name of the vessel, if any, in which he came to the United States, and the present place of residence in the United States of said alien: Provided, however, That no alien who, in conformity with the law in force at the date of his declaration, has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States shall be required to renew such declaration.

Second. Not less than two years nor more than seven years after he has made such declaration of intention he shall make and file, in duplicate, a petition in writing, signed by the applicant in his own handwriting and duly verified, in which petition such applicant shall state his full name, his place of residence (by street and number, if possible), his occupation, and, if possible, the date and place of his birth; the place from which he emigrated, and the date and place of his arrival in the United States, and, if he entered through a port, the name of the vessel on which he arrived; the time when and the place and name of the court where he declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States; if he is married he shall state the name of his wife and, if possible, the country of her nativity and her place of residence at the time of filing his petition; and if he has children, the name, date, and place of birth and place of residence of each child living at the time of the filing of his petition: Provided, That if he has filed his declaration before the passage of this Act he shall not be required to sign the petition in his own handwriting.

The petition shall set forth that he is not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government, or a member of or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in or opposed to organized government, a polygamist or believer in the practice of polygamy, and that it is his intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce absolutely and forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly by name to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he at the time of filing of his petition may be a citizen or subject, and that it is his intention to reside permanently within the United States, and whether or not he has been denied admission as a citizen of the United States, and, if denied, the ground or grounds of such denial, the court or courts in which such decision was rendered, and that the cause for such denial has since been cured or removed, and every fact material to his naturalization and required to be proved upon the final hearing of his application.

The petition shall also be verified by the affidavits of at least two credible witnesses, who are citizens of the United States, and who shall state in their affidavits that they have personally known the applicant to be a resident of the United States for a period of at least five years continuously, and of the State, Territory, or district in which the application is made for a period of at least one year immediately preceding the date of the filing of his petition, and that they each have personal knowledge that the petitioner is a person of good moral character, and that he is in every way qualified, in their opinion, to be admitted as a citizen of the United States.

At the time of filing his petition there shall be filed with the clerk of the court a certificate from the Department of Commerce and Labor, if the petitioner arrives in the United States after the passage of this Act, stating the date, place, and manner of his arrival in the United States, and the declaration of intention of such petitioner, which certificate and declaration shall be attached to and made a part of said petition.

Third. He shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly by name of the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject; that he will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and bear true faith and allegiance to the same.

Fourth. It shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting any alien to citizenship that immediately preceding the date of his application he has resided continuously within the United States five years at least, and within the State or Territory where such court is at the time held one year at least, and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same. In addition to the oath of the applicant, the testimony of at least two witnesses, citizens of the United States, as to the facts of residence, moral character, and attachment to the principles of the Constitution shall be required, and the name, place of residence, and occupation of each witness shall be set forth in the record.

Fifth. In case the alien applying to be admitted to citizenship has borne any hereditary title, or has been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or state from which he came, he shall, in addition to the above requisites, make an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility in the court to which his application is made, and his renunciation shall be recorded in the court.

Sixth. When any alien who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States dies before he is actually naturalized the widow and minor children of such alien may, by complying with the other provisions of this Act, be naturalized without making any declaraton of intention. Sec. 4, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats, 596).

(This and the preceding paragraph—1880a—take the place of paragraphs 1880, 1884, and 1885, which are repealed by section 26 of the act above cited.)

1881a. The clerk of the court shall, immediately after filing the petition, give notice thereof by posting in a public and conspicious place in his office, or in the building in which his office is situated, under an appropriate heading, the name, nativity, and residence of the alien, the date and place of his arrival in the United States, and the date, as nearly as may be, for the final hearing of his petition, and the names of the witnesses whom the applicant expects to summon in his behalf; and the clerk shall, if the applicant requests it, issue a subpœna for the witnesses so named by the said applicant to appear upon the day set for the final hearing, but in case such witnesses can not be produced upon the final hearing other witnesses may be summoned. Sec. 5, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 598).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1881, which is repealed by section 26 of the act above cited.)

1881b. Petitions for naturalization may be made and filed during term time or vacation of the court and shall be docketed the same day as filed, but final action thereon shall be had only on stated days, to be fixed by rule of the court, and in no case shall final action be had upon a petition until at least ninety days have elapsed after filing and posting the notice of such petition: Provided, That no person shall be naturalized nor shall any certificate of naturalization be issued by any court within thirty days preceding the holding of any general election within its territorial jurisdiction. It shall be lawful, at the time and as a part of the naturalization of any alien, for the court, in its discretion, upon the petition of such alien, to make a decree changing the name of said alien, and his certificate of naturalization shall be issued to him in accordance therewith. Sec. 6, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 598).

1885a. Any foreign woman who acquires American citizenship by marriage to an American shall be assumed to retain the same after the termination of the marital relation if she continue to reside in the United State, unless she makes formal renunciation thereof before a court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens, or if she resides abroad she may retain her citizenship by registering as such before a United States consul within one year after the termination of such marital relation. Sec. 4, Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1229).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 1885, which was repealed by section 26 of the act of June 29, 1906.)

1887a. In case the petitioner has not resided in the State, Territory, or district for a period of five years continuously and immediately preceding the filing of his petition he may establish by two witnesses, both in his petition and at the hearing, the time of his residence within the State, provided that it has been for more than one year, and the remaining portion of his five years' residence within the United States required by law to be established may be proved by the depositions of two or more witnesses who are citizens of the United States, upon notice to the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and the United States attorney for the district in which said witnesses may reside. Sec. 10, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 599).

1889a. A child born without the United States of alien parents shall be deemed a citizen of the United States by virtue of the naturalization of or resumption of American citizenship by the parent: Provided, That such naturalization or resumption takes place during the minority of such child: And provided further, That the citizenship of such minor child shall begin at the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States. Sec. 5, Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1229).

1892a. No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to all organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such disbelief in or opposition to all organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity, or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers, either of specific individuals or of officers generally, of the Government of the United States or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, or who has violated any of the provisions of this Act, shall be naturalized or be made a citizen of the United States. All courts and tribunals and all judges and officers thereof having jurisdiction of naturalization proceedings or duties to perform in regard thereto shall, on the final application for naturalization, make careful inquiry into such matters, and before issuing the final order or certificate of naturalization cause to be entered of record the affidavit of the applicant and of his witnesses so far as applicable, reciting and affirming the truth of every material fact requisite for naturalization. All final orders and certificates of naturalization hereafter made shall show on their face specifically that said affidavits were duly made and recorded, and all orders and certificates that fail to show such facts shall be null and void.

That any person who purposely procures naturalization in violation of the provisions of this section shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or shall be imprisoned not less than one nor more than ten years, or both, and the court in which such conviction is had shall thereupon adjudge and declare the order or decree and all certificates admitting such person to citizenship null and void. Jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the courts having jurisdiction of the trial of such offense to make such adjudication.

That any person who knowingly aids, advises, or encourages any such person to apply for or to secure naturalization or to file the preliminary papers declaring an intent to become a citizen of the United States, or who in any naturalization proceeding knowingly procures or gives false testimony as to any material fact, or who knowingly makes an affidavit false as to any material fact required to be proved in such proceeding, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not less than one nor more than ten years, or both. Sec. 39, Act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stats., 1222).

1892b. No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such disbelief in or opposition to organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity, or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers, either of specific individuals or of officers generally, of the Government of the United States, or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, or who is a polygamist, shall be naturalized or be made a citizen of the United States. Sec. 7, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 598).

(This provision takes the place of a similar provision contained in paragraph 1892a, the whole of which is repealed by section 26 of the act above cited.)

1892c. No alien shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted as a citizen of the United States who can not speak the English language: Provided, That this requirement shall not apply to aliens who are physically unable to comply therewith, if they are otherwise qualified to become citizens of the United States: And provided further, That the requirements of this section shall not apply to any alien who has prior to the passage of this Act declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States in conformity with the law in force at the date of making such declaration: Provided further, That the requirements of section eight shall not apply to aliens who shall hereafter declare their intention to become citizens and who shall make homestead entries upon the public lands of the United States and comply in all respects with the laws providing for homestead entries on such lands. Sec. 8, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 599).

1892d. Every final hearing upon such petition shall be had in open court before a judge or judges thereof, and every final order which may be made upon such petition shall be under the hand of the court and entered in full upon a record kept for that purpose, and upon such final hearing of such petition the applicant and witnesses shall be examined under oath before the court and in the presence of the court. Sec. 9, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 599).

(This provision takes the place of a similar provision contained in paragraph 1892a, the whole of which is repealed by section 26 of the act above cited.)

1892f. It shall be the duty of the United States district attorneys for the respective districts, upon affidavit showing good cause therefor, to institute proceedings in any court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens in the judicial district in which the naturalized citizen may reside at the time of bringing the suit, for the purpose of setting aside and canceling the certificate of citizenship on the ground of fraud or on the ground that such certificate of citizenship was illegally procured. In any such proceedings the party holding the certificate of citizenship alleged to have been fraudulently or illegally procured shall have sixty days personal notice in which to make answer to the petition of the United States; and if the holder of such certificate be absent from the United States or from the district in which he last had his residence, such notice shall be given by publication in the manner provided for the service of summons by publication or upon absentees by the laws of the State or the place where such suit is brought.

If any alien who shall have secured a certificate of citizenship under the provisions of this Act shall, within five years after the issuance of such certificate, return to the country of his nativity, or go to any other foreign country, and take permanent residence therein, it shall be considered prima facie evidence of a lack of intention on the part of such alien to become a permanent citizen of the United States at the time of filing his aplication for citizenship, and, in the absence of countervailing evidence, it shall be sufficient in the proper proceeding to authorize the cancellation of his certificate of citizenship as fraudulent, and the diplomatic and consular officers of the United States in foreign countries shall from time to time, through the Department of State, furnish the Department of Justice with the names of those within their respective jurisdictions who have such certificates of citizenship and who have taken permanent residence in the country of their nativity, or in any other foreign country, and such statements, duly certified, shall be admissible in evidence in all courts in proceedings to cancel certificates of citizenship.

Whenever any certificate of citizenship shall be set aside or canceled, as herein provided, the court in which such judgment or decree is rendered shall make an order canceling such certificate of citizenship and shall send a certified copy of such order to the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization; and in case such certificate was not originally issued by the court making such order it shall direct the clerk of the court to transmit a copy of such order and judgment to the court out of which such certificate of citizenship shall have been originally issued. And it shall thereupon be the duty of the clerk of the court receiving such certified copy of the order and judgment of the court to enter the same of record and to cancel such original certificate of citizenship upon the records and to notify the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization of such cancellation.

The provisions of this section shall apply not only to certificates of citizenship issued under the provisions of this Act, but to all certificates of citizenship which may have been issued heretofore by any court exercising jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings under prior laws. Sec. 15, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 601).

1892g. Every person who falsely makes, forges, counterfeits, or causes or procures to be falsely made, forged, or counterfeited, or knowingly aids or assists in falsely making, forging, or counterfeiting any certificate of citizenship, with intent to use the same, or with the intent that the same may be used by some other person or persons, shall be guilty of a felony, and a person convicted of such offense shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than ten years, or by a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Sec. 16, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 602).

1892h. No person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished for any crime arising under the provisions of this Act unless the indictment is found or the information is filed within five years next after the commission of such crime. Sec. 24, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 603).

1892i. Any person who knowingly procures naturalization in violation of the provisions of this Act shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or shall be imprisoned not more than five years, or both, and upon conviction the court in which such conviction is had shall thereupon adjudge and declare the final order admitting such person to citizenship void. Jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the courts having jurisdiction of the trial of such offense to make such adjudication. Any person who knowingly aids, advises, or encourages any person not entitled thereto to apply for or to secure naturalization, or to file the preliminary papers declaring an intent to become a citizen of the United States, or who in any naturalization proceeding knowingly procures or gives false testimony as to any material fact, or who knowingly makes an affidavit false as to any material fact required to be proved in such proceeding, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both. Sec. 23, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 603).

(These provisions take the place of similar provisions contained in paragraph 1892a, which is repealed by section 26 of the act above cited.)

1892k. Sections twenty-one hundred and sixty-five, twenty-one hundred and sixty-seven, twenty-one hundred and sixty-eight, twenty-one hundred and seventy-three, of the Revised Statutes of the United States of America, and section thirty-nine of chapter one thousand and twelve of the Statutes at Large of the United States of America for the year nineteen hundred and three, and all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with or repugnant to the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. Sec. 26, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 603).

(This paragraph repeals paragraphs 1880, 1881, 1884, 1885, 1890, and 1892a.)

1892l. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall have power to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for properly carrying into execution the various provisions of this Act. Certified copies of all papers, documents, certificates, and records required to be used, filed, recorded, or kept under any and all of the provisions of this Act shall be admitted in evidence equally with the originals in any and all proceedings under this Act and in all cases in which the originals thereof might be admissible as evidence. Sec. 28, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 606).

1892m. All the applicable provisions of the naturalization laws of the United States shall apply to and be held to authorize the admission to citizenship of all persons not citizens who owe permanent allegiance to the United States, and who may become residents of any State or organized Territory of the United States, with the following modifications: The applicant shall not be required to renounce allegiance to any foreign sovereignty; he shall make his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States at least two years prior to his admission; and residence within the jurisdiction of the United States, owing such permanent allegiance, shall be regarded as residence within the United States within the meaning of the five years' residence clause of the existing law. Sec. 30, Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stats., 606).

CHAPTER XXXIX.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF MILITARY FORCE.

NATIONAL QUARANTINE.

2068a. The Secretary of the Treasury shall have the control, direction, and management of all quarantine stations, grounds, and anchorages established by authority of the United States, and as soon as practicable after the approval of this Act shall select and designate such suitable places for them and establish the same at such points on or near the coast line of the United States or the border of the United States and a foreign country, as in his judgment are best suited for the same and necessary to prevent the introduction of yellow fever into the United States, and, in his discretion, he may also establish at the group of islands known as the Dry Tortugas, at the western end of the Florida reef, and at such other point or points on or near the coast line of the United States (not to exceed four in the aggregate) as he deems necessary, quarantine grounds, stations, and anchorages, whereat or whereto infected vessels bound for any port in the United States may be detained or sent for the purpose of being disinfected, having their cargos disinfected and discharged, if necessary, and their sick treated in hospitals until all danger of infection or contagion from such vessels, their cargoes, passengers, or crews has been removed. Sec. 1, Act of June 19, 1906 (34 Stats., 299).

2068b. In cases in which the title to the land and water so selected and designated is in the United States it shall be the duty of the department, bureau, or official of the United States having custody or possession of such land and water, or any part thereof, not used by the Government for other purposes designated by law, or possession of said Dry Tortugas Islands, on demand of the Secretary of the Treasury, to deliver the same into his custody and possession for the use of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, evidencing such delivery by a suitable instrument in writing to be delivered to the Secretary of the Treasury. That in cases in which the title to such land and water, or any part thereof, is in any other owner than the United States it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to secure the title and possession of the same to the United States for the use of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States, by purchase at a reasonable price, if possible; but if, in his judgment, the price demanded for such property be excessive, he is hereby authorized to apply to the Attorney-General of the United States to cause to be instituted, in the proper tribunal, condemnation proceedings in the name of the United States for the purpose of acquiring for the United States the title and possession of such land and water, and said Attorney-General shall, as soon as possible after such application by the Secretary of the Treasury, cause such proceedings to be instituted and conducted to a conclusion, and the custody and possession of such land and water, when duly acquired in accordance with the award made in such condemnation proceedings, shall be delivered to the Secretary of the Treasury for the use of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service. Sec. 2, Act of June 19, 1906 (34 Stats., 299).

2068c. Any vessel, or any officer of any vessel, or other person other than State health or quarantine officers, entering within the limits of any quarantine grounds and anchorages, or any quarantine station and anchorage, or departing therefrom, in disregard of the quarantine rules and regulations or without the permission of the officer in charge of such quarantine ground and anchorage, or of such quarantine station and anchorage, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than three hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. That any master or owner of any vessel violating any provision of this Act, or any provision of an Act entitled "An Act granting additional powers and imposing additional duties on the Marine-Hospital Service," approved February fifteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, or violating any rule or regulation made in accordance with this Act or said Act of February fifteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, relating to the inspection of vessels, or to the prevention of the introduction of contagious or infectious diseases into the United States, or any master, owner, or agent of any vessel making a false statement relative to the sanitary condition of such vessel or its contents, or as to the health of any passenger or person thereon shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. Sec. 4, Act of June 19, 1906 (34 Stats., 300).

EXTRADITION.

2093a. The provisions of section ten hundred and fourteen of the Revised Statutes,[1] so far as applicable, shall apply throughout the United States for the arrest and removal therefrom to the Philippine Islands of any fugitive from justice charged with the commission of any crime or offense against the United States within the Philippine Islands, and shall apply within the Philippine Islands for the arrest and removal therefrom to the United States of any fugitive from justice charged with the commission of any crime or offense against the United States. Such fugitive may, by any judge or magistrate of the Philippine Islands, and agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders therein, be arrested and imprisoned, or bailed, as the case may be, pending the issuance of a warrant for his removal to the United States, which warrant it shall be the duty of a judge of the court of first instance seasonably to issue, and of the officer or agent of the United States designated for the purpose to execute. Such officer or agent, when engaged in executing such warrant without the Philippine Islands, shall have all the powers of a marshal of the United States so far as such powers are requisite for the prisoner's safe-keeping and the execution of the warrant. Sec. 1, Act of February 9, 1903 (32 Stats., 806).

2093b. The provisions of sections fifty-two hundred and seventy-eight and fifty-two hundred and seventy-nine of the Revised Statutes,[1] so far as applicable, shall apply to the Philippine Islands, which, for the purposes of said sections, shall be deemed a Territory within the meaning thereof. Sec. 2, Act of February 9, 1903 (32 Stats., 807).

[1] SEC. 1014, R. S. For any crime or offense against the United States, the offender may, by any justice or judge of the United States, or by any commissioner of a circuit court to take bail, or by any chancellor, judge of a supreme or superior court, chief or first judge of common pleas, mayor of a city, justice of the peace, or other magistrate, of any State where he may be found, and agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders in such State; and at the expense of the United States, be arrested and imprisoned, or bailed, as the case may be, for trial before such court of the United States as by law has cognizance of the offense. Copies of the process shall be returned as speedily as may be into the clerk's office of such court, together with the recognizances of the witnesses for their appearance to testify in the case. And where any offender or witness is committed in any district other than that where the offense is to be tried, it shall be the duty of the judge of the district where such offender or witness is imprisoned, seasonably to issue, and of the marshal to execute, a warrant for his removal to the district where the trial is to be had.

2093c. The provisions of sections fifty-two hundred and seventy, fifty-two hundred and seventy-one, fifty-two hundred and seventy-two, fifty-two hundred and seventy-three, fifty-two hundred and seventy-four, fifty-two hundred and seventy-five, fifty-two hundred and seventy-six, and fifty-two hundred and seventy-seven of the Revised Statutes (as amended by the Act approved August third, eighteen hundred and eighty-two), so far as applicable, shall apply to the Philippine Islands for the arrest and removal therefrom of any fugitives from justice charged with the commission within the jurisdiction of any foreign government of any of the crimes provided for by treaty between the United States and such foreign nation, and for the delivery by a foreign government of any person accused of crime committed within the jurisdiction of the Philippine Islands. Such fugitive from justice of a foreign country may, upon warrant duly issued by any judge or magistrate of the Philippine Islands, and agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders therein, be arrested and brought before such judge or magistrate, who shall proceed in the matter in accordance with the provisions of the Revised Statutes hereby made applicable to the Philippine Islands: Provided, That for the purposes of this section the order or warrant for delivery of a person committed for extradition prescribed by section fifty-two hundred and seventy-two of the Revised Statutes shall be issued by the governor of the Philippine Islands under his hand and seal of office, and not by the Secretary of State.

Sec. 2. That the provisions of sections fifty-four hundred and nine and fifty-four hundred and ten of the Revised Statutes are hereby made applicable to proceedings in extradition from the Philippine Islands, either to the United States under an Act entitled "An Act to provide for the removal of persons accused of crime to and from the Philippine Islands for trial," approved February ninth, nineteen hundred and three, or to foreign countries under the provisions of this Act. Secs. 1 and 2, Act of February 6, 1905 (33 Stats., 698).

[1] Sec. 5278, R. S. Whenever the executive authority of any State or Territory demands any person as a fugitive from justice, of the executive authority of any State or Territory, to which such person has fled, and produces a copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate of any State or Territory, charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime, certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the State or Territory from whence the person so charged has fled, it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the State or Territory to which such person has fled to cause him to be arrested and secured, and to cause notice of the arrest to be given to the executive authority making such demand, or to the agent of such authority appointed to receive the fugitive, and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he shall appear. If no such agent appears within six months from the time of the arrest, the prisoner may be discharged. All costs of expenses incurred in the apprehending, securing, and transmitting such fugitive to the State or Territory making such demand, shall be paid by such State or Territory.

Sec. 5279, R. S. Any agent so appointed who receives the fugitive into his custody, shall be empowered to transport him to the State or Territory from which he has fled. And every person who, by force, sets at liberty or rescues the fugitive from such agent while so transporting him, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than one year.

(This paragraph makes applicable to the Philippine Islands paragraphs 2090–2092.)

RESTRICTION UPON THE USE OF MILITARY FORCE.

2103a. From and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful to employ any part of the Army of the United States, as a posse comitatus, or otherwise, for the purpose of executing the laws, except in such cases and under such circumstances as such employment of said force may be expressly authorized by the Constitution or by act of Congress; and no money appropriated by this act shall be used to pay any of the expenses incurred in the employment of any troops in violation of this section and any person wilfully violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding two years or by both such fine and imprisonment. Sec. 15, Act of June 18, 1878 (20 Stats., 152).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 2103, from which a portion of the text was omitted.)

THE LAW OF WAR—MILITARY OCCUPATION.

2112a. The action of the President of the United States heretofore taken by virtue of the authority vested in him as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, as set forth in his order of July twelfth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, whereby a tariff of duties and taxes as set forth by said order was to be levied and collected at all ports and places in the Philippine Islands upon passing into the occupation and possession of the forces of the United States, together with the subsequent amendments of said order, are hereby approved, ratified, and confirmed, and the actions of the authorities of the government of the Philippine Islands, taken in accordance with the provisions of said order and subsequent amendments, are hereby approved: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall be held to amend or repeal an Act entitled "An Act temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," approved March eight, nineteen hundred and two. Sec. 2, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 692).

CHAPTER XL.

PENSIONS.

THE GENERAL PENSION LAW.

2125a. From and after the passage of this Act all persons on the pension roll, and all persons hereafter granted a pension, who, while in the military or naval service of the United States and in the line of duty, shall have lost both eyes, or who have become totally blind from causes occurring in the service of the United States, shall receive a pension at the rate of one hundred dollars per month: Provided, however, That this Act shall not be so construed as to reduce any pension under any Act, public or private. Act of April 8, 1904 (33 Stats., 163).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2125.)

2131a. From and after the passage of this Act all persons on the pension roll, and all persons hereafter granted a pension, who, while in the military or naval service of the United States and in the line of duty, shall have lost one hand or one foot, or been totally disabled in the same, shall receive a pension at the rate of forty dollars per month; that all persons who, in like manner, shall have lost an arm at or above the elbow or a leg at or above the knee, or been totally disabled in the same, shall receive a pension at the rate of forty-six dollars per month; that all persons who, in like manner, shall have lost an arm at the shoulder joint or a leg at the hip joint, or so near the shoulder or hip joint or where the same is in such a condition as to prevent the use of an artificial limb, shall receive a pension at the rate of fifty-five dollars per month, and that all persons who, in like manner, shall have lost one hand and one foot, or been totally disabled in the same, shall receive a pension at the rate of sixty dollars per month; and that all persons who, in like manner, shall have lost both feet shall receive a pension at the rate of one hundred dollars per month: Provided, however, That this Act shall not be so construed as to reduce any pension under any act, public or private. Act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stats., 944).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2131.)

2136a. The investigation of claims for the reimbursement of expenses of the last sickness and burial of deceased pensioners shall be at the instance and under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, and no part of any accrued pension shall hereafter be used to reimburse any State, county, or municipal corporation for expenses incurred by such State, county, or municipal corporation under State law for expenses of the last sickness or burial of a deceased pensioner. Act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stats., 1111).

DEPENDENT RELATIVES.

2149a. Section forty-seven hundred and eight of the laws of the United States governing the granting of army and navy pensions, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4708. The remarriage of any widow, dependent mother, or dependent sister entitled to pension shall not bar her right to such pension to the date of her remarriage, whether an application therefor was filed before or after such marriage; but on the remarriage of any widow, dependent mother, or dependent sister having a pension such pension shall cease: Provided, however, That any widow who was the lawful wife of any officer or enlisted man or other person in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States, as described in paragraphs one, two, and three of section forty-six hundred and ninety-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States, during the period of his service in any war, and whose name was placed or shall hereafter be placed on the pension roll because of her husband's death as the result of wound or injury received or disease contracted in such military or naval service, and whose name has been or shall hereafter be dropped from said pension roll by reason of her marriage to another person who has since died or shall hereafter die, or from whom she has been heretofore or shall be hereafter divorced, upon her own application and without fault on her part, and if she is without means of support other than her daily labor, as defined by the Acts of June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety, and May ninth, nineteen hundred, shall be entitled to have her name again placed on the pension roll at the rate now provided for widows by the Acts of July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, and March nineteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, such pension to commence from the date of the filing of her application in the Pension Bureau after the approval of this Act: And provided further, That where such widow is already in receipt of a pension from the United States she shall not be entitled to restoration under this Act: And provided further, That where the pension of said widow on her second or subsequent marriage has accrued to a helpless or idiotic child, or a child or children under the age of sixteen years, she shall not be entitled to restoration under this Act unless said helpless or idiotic child, or child or children under sixteen years of age, be then a member or members of her family and cared for by her, and upon the restoration of said widow the payment of pension to said child or children shall cease." Sec. 1, Act of February 28, 1903 (32 Stats., 920).

(This paragraph takes the place of paragraph 2149.)

2149b. The provisions of this Act shall be extended to those widows otherwise entitled whose husbands died of wounds, injuries, or disease contracted during the period of their military and naval service, but who were deprived of pension under the Act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, because of their failure to draw any pension by reason of their remarriage. Sec. 2, Act of February 28, 1903 (32 Stats., 921).

THE DEPENDENT PENSION LAW.

2151a. Any person who served ninety days or more in the military or naval service of the United States during the late civil war or sixty days in the war with Mexico, and who has been honorably discharged therefrom, and who has reached the age of sixty-two years or over, shall, upon making proof of such facts according to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may provide, be placed upon the pension roll, and be entitled to receive a pension as follows: In case such person has reached the age of sixty-two years, twelve dollars per month; seventy years, fifteen dollars per month; seventy-five years or over, twenty dollars per month; and such pension shall commence from the date of the filing of the application in the Bureau of Pensions after the passage and approval of this Act: Provided, That pensioners who are sixty-two years of age or over, and who are now receiving pensions under existing laws, or whose claims are pending in the Bureau of Pensions, may, by application to the Commissioner of Pensions in such form as he may prescribe, receive the benefits of this Act; and nothing herein contained shall prevent any pensioner or person entitled to a pension from prosecuting his claim and receiving a pension under any other general or special Act: Provided, That no person shall receive a pension under any other law at the same time or for the same period that he is receiving a pension under the provisions of this Act: Provided further, That no person who is now receiving or shall hereafter receive a greater pension under any other general or special law than he would be entitled to receive under the provisions herein shall be pensionable under this Act.

Sec. 2. That rank in the service shall not be considered in applications filed hereunder.

Sec. 3. That no pension attorney, claim agent, or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services rendered in presenting any claim to the Bureau of Pensions, or securing any pension, under this Act. Act of February 6, 1907 (34 Stats., 879).

(See paragraphs 2166 and 2166a.)

2151b. The benefits of the Act of February sixth, nineteen hundred and seven, entitled "An Act granting pensions to certain enlisted men, soldiers, and officers who served in the civil war and the war with Mexico," are hereby extended to include any person who served the period of time therein specified during the late civil war or in the war with Mexico and who is now or may hereafter become entitled to pension under the Acts of June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety, February fifteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, and the joint resolution of July first, nineteen hundred and two, or the Acts of January twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, and February seventeenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven. Act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stats., 1406).

(See paragraphs 2166, 2166*a*, and 2151*a*.)

2151c. Hereafter the age of sixty-two years and over shall be considered a permanent specific disability within the meaning of the pension laws. Act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stats., 1406).

(See paragraph 2151.)

2154a. The Act approved June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act granting pensions to soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated for the performance of manual labor, and providing for pensions to widows, minor children, and dependent parents," is construed and held to include all persons and the widows and minor children of all deceased persons, subject to the limitations of said Act, who served for ninety days in the military or naval service of the United States during the late war of the rebellion, and who have been honorably discharged therefrom, and section forty-seven hundred and sixteen, Revised Statutes United States, is amended accordingly: Provided, however, That the foregoing shall not apply to those who served in the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth regiments United States Volunteer Infantry who had a prior service in the Confederate army or navy and who enlisted in said regiments while confined as prisoners of war under a stipulation that they were not to be pensionable under the laws of the United States, nor to those who, having had such prior service, enlisted in the military or naval service of the United States after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-five. Sec. 1, Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 750).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2227.)

MEXICAN WAR PENSIONS.

2166a. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of twelve dollars per month, all Mexican war survivors now on the roll, or who may hereafter be placed on the roll, under the Acts of January twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, and February fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven. Act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stats., 1228).

PENSIONS FOR INDIAN WARS, 1832–1842.

2167a. The provisions, limitations, and benefits of the Act entitled "An Act granting pensions to survivors of the Indian wars of eighteen hundred and thirty-two to eighteen hundred and forty-two, inclusive, known as the Black Hawk war, Creek war, Cherokee disturbances, and the Seminole war," approved July twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, be, and the same are hereby, extended, from the date of the passage of this Act, to the surviving officers and enlisted men, including marines, militia, and volunteers of the military and naval service of the United States who served for thirty days or more and were honorably discharged under the United States military, State, Territorial, or provisional authorities in the Florida and Georgia Seminole Indian war of eighteen hundred and seventeen and eighteen hundred and eighteen; the Fevre River Indian war of Illinois of eighteen hundred and twenty-seven; the Sac and Fox Indian war of eighteen hundred and thirty-one; the Sabine Indian disturbances of eighteen hundred and thirty-six and eighteen hundred and thirty-seven; the Cayuse Indian war of eighteen hundred and forty-seven and eighteen hundred and forty-eight, on the Pacific coast; the Florida wars with the Seminole Indians, from eighteen hundred and forty-two to eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, inclusive; the Texas and New Mexico Indian war of eighteen hundred and forty-nine to eighteen hundred and fifty-six; the California Indian disturbances of eighteen hundred and fifty-one and eighteen hundred and fifty-two; the Utah Indian disturbances of eighteen hundred and fifty to eighteen hundred and fifty-three, inclusive, and the Oregon and Washington Territory Indian wars from eighteen hundred and fifty-one to eighteen hundred and fifty-six, inclusive; and also to include the surviving widows of such officers and enlisted men: Provided, That such widows have not remarried. Act of June 27, 1902 (32 Stats., 399).

2167b. Where there is no record of enlistment or muster into the service of the United States in any of the wars mentioned in this Act the record of pay by the United States shall be accepted as full and satisfactory proof of such enlistment and service. Act of June 27, 1902 (32 Stats., 399).

DECLARATION AND EVIDENCE IN PENSION CASES.

2201a. In the administration of the pension laws any enlisted man of the Army, including regulars, volunteers, and militia, or any appointed or enlisted man of the Navy or Marine Corps, who was honorably discharged from the last contract of service entered into by him during the late war of the rebellion, shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from all similar contracts of service previously entered into by him with the United States during said war: Provided, That such enlisted or appointed man served not less than six months under said last enlistment or appointment, that his entire service under said last enlistment or appointment was faithful, and that he did not receive by reason of said last enlistment or appointment any bounty or gratuity other than from the United States in excess of that to which he would have been entitled if he had continued to serve faithfully until honorably discharged under any contract of service previously entered into by him, either in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, during the war of the rebellion. Sec. 2, Joint Res. of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 750).

2201b. In the administration of the pension laws any enlisted man or commissioned officer of the Army, including regulars, volunteers, and militia, or any appointed or enlisted man or commissioned officer of the Navy or Marine Corps, who was honorably discharged from any subsequent contract of service entered into by him during the late war of the rebellion, shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from all previous contracts of service as commissioned officer or enlisted man previously entered into by him with the United States during said war: Provided, That such enlisted or appointed man or commissioned officer served not less than six months under any subsequent enlistment, appointment, or commission; that his entire service under any said subsequent enlistment, appointment, or commission was faithful, and that he did not receive by reason of said enlistment, appointment, or commission any bounty or gratuity other than from the United States in excess of that to which he would have been entitled if he had continued to serve faithfully until honorably discharged under any contract of service previously entered into by him, either in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, during the war of the rebellion. Joint Res. of June 28, 1906 (34 Stats., 836).

(This paragraph amends section 2 of the joint resolution of July 1, 1902, and takes the place of paragraph 2201a.)

ATTORNEYS' FEES.

2203a. No pension attorney, claim agent, or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services rendered in securing the introduction of a bill or the passage thereof through Congress granting pension or increase of pension; and any person who shall, directly or indirectly, contract for, demand, receive, or retain any compensation for such services shall be deemed guilty of an offense, and upon conviction thereof shall, for each and every such offense, be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisoned not exceeding two years, or both, in the discretion of the court. Act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stats., 1407).

CHAPTER XLI.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME.

BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS.

2263a. The chief of the Military Secretary's Department shall be a member of the Board of Commissioners of the United States Soldiers' Home. Act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats., 263).

CHAPTER XLII.

THE NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.

OFFICERS OF THE BRANCHES OF THE NATIONAL HOME.

2298a. Hereafter the officers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and officers under the Board of Managers thereof, shall be appointed, so far as may be practicable, from persons whose military or naval service would render them eligible, if disabled and not otherwise provided for, for admission to the Home, and they may be appointed, removed, and transferred, from time to time, as the interests of the institution may require, by the Board of Managers. Act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stats., 472).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2298.)

ACCOUNTS.

2316a. At the Central Branch, at Dayton, Ohio: For current expenses, namely: Pay of officers and noncommissioned officers of the Home, with such exceptions as are hereinafter noted, and their clerks and orderlies; also payments for chaplains and religious instruction, printers, bookbinders, librarians, musicians, telegraph and telephone operators, guards, policemen, watchmen, and fire company; for all property and materials purchased for their use, including repairs not done by the Home; for necessary expenditures for articles of amusement, boats, library books, magazines, papers, pictures, and musical instruments, and for repairs not done by the Home; and for stationery, advertising, legal advice, for payments due heirs of deceased members: Provided, That all receipts on acount of the effects of deceased members during the fiscal year shall be also available for such payments; and for such other expenditures as can not properly be included under other heads of expenditure, sixty thousand dollars. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 500).

(This paragraph relates to the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, and is a reenactment of previous legislation on the subject.)

STATE AND TERRITORIAL HOMES.

2321a. No part of this appropriation shall be apportioned to any State or Territorial Home until its laws, rules, or regulations respecting the pensions of its inmates be made to conform to the provisions of section four of an Act approved March third, eighteen hundred and eighty-three, entitled "An Act prescribing regulations for the Soldiers' Home located at Washington, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;" but the above proviso shall not apply to any State or Territorial Home into which the wives or widows of soldiers are admitted and maintained. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 504).

(This paragraph relates to the sundry civil appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905. See paragraphs 2263–2266, 2268, 2272–2274, 2279, 2281, 2284, and 2285.)

2324a. No part of this appropriation shall be apportioned to any State or Territorial Home that maintains a bar or canteen where intoxicating liquors are sold. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 504).

(This provision appears for the first time in the annual appropriation for sundry civil expenses, of April 28, 1904, and is inserted here because it is probable it will become a part of the annual legislation for these Homes.)

2324b. One-half of any sum or sums retained by State Homes on account of pensions received from inmates shall be deducted from the aid herein provided for. Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 1227).

PENSIONS TO INMATES.

2328a. Any balance of pension money due a member of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at the time of his death shall be paid to his widow, minor children or dependent mother or father in the order named, and should no widow, minor child, or dependent parent be discovered within one year from the time of the death of the pensioner, said balance shall be paid to the post fund of the Branch of said National Home of which the pensioner was a member at the time of his death, to be used for the common benefit of the members of the Home under the direction of the Board of Managers, subject to future reclamation by the relatives hereinbefore designated, upon application filed with the Board of Managers within five years after the pensioner's death. Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stats., 564).

(See paragraph 2328.)

CHAPTER XLIII.

THE GOVERNMENT HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE.

ADMISSIONS.

2347a. The proviso in the Act approved August seventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, appearing on page three hundred and thirty of the Twenty-second Statutes at Large, and relating to pensions of inmates of the Government Hospital for the Insane, is hereby stricken out and the following inserted:

"Provided, That in addition to the persons now entitled to admission to said hospital, any inmate of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers who is now or may hereafter become insane shall, upon an order of the president of the Board of Managers of the said National Home, be admitted to said hospital and treated therein. During the time that any pensioner shall be an inmate of the Government Hospital for the Insane all money due or becoming due upon his or her pension shall be paid by the pension agent to the superintendent of the hospital, upon a certificate by such superintendent that the pensioner is an inmate of the hospital and is living, and such pension money shall be by said superintendent disbursed and used, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of the pensioner, and, in the case of a male pensioner, his wife, minor children, and dependent parents, or, if a female pensioner, her minor children, if any, in the order named, and to pay his or her board and maintenance in the hospital; the remainder of such pension money, if any, to be placed to the credit of the pensioner and to be paid to the pensioner or the guardian of the pensioner in the event of his or her discharge from the hospital; or, in the event of the death of said pensioner while an inmate of said hospital, shall, if a female pensioner, be paid to her minor children, and, in the case of a male pensioner, to be paid to his wife, if living; if no wife survives him, then to his minor children; and in case there is no wife nor minor children, then the said unexpended balance to his or her credit shall be applied to the general uses of said hospital: Provided further, That in the case of pensioners transferred to the hospital from the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, any pension money to his credit at said Home at the time of his said transfer shall be transferred with him to said hospital and placed to his credit therein, to be expended as hereinbefore provided; and in case of his return from said hospital to the Home, any balance to his credit at said hospital shall, in like manner, be transferred to said Home, to be expended in accordance with the rules established in regard thereto. This provision shall also be applicable to all unexpended pension money heretofore paid to the officers of the said hospital on account of pensioners who were but are not now inmates thereof."[1] Act of February 20, 1905 (33 Stats., 731).

2347b. In addition to the persons now entitled to admission to the Government Hospital for the Insane, any inmate of the Soldiers' Home who is now or may hereafter become insane shall, upon an order of the president of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home, be admitted to said hospital and treated therein; and the expenses of maintaining any such person shall be paid from the Soldiers' Home fund. Act of July 7, 1884 (23 Stats., 213).

2348a. The Secretary of War may, in his discretion, contract for the care, maintenance, and treatment of the insane natives of the Philippine Islands serving in the Army of the United States at any asylum in the Philippine Islands in all cases which he is now authorized by law to cause to be sent to the Government Hospital for the Insane in the District of Columbia. Act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stats., 1173).

[1] Under the provisions of the Act of February 20, 1905 (33 Stats., 731), the regulations established by the Secretary of the Interior fix the amount to be charged to any pensioner for support in the Government Hospital for the Insane at not to exceed $6.66 per month.

In regard to the general status of pensioners committed to the Government Hospital for the Insane see Logue v. Fenning (29 Appeal Cases, Dist. of Col., 519–530).

CHAPTER XLIV.

NATIONAL PARKS.

THE GETTYSBURG NATIONAL PARK.

ERECTION OF MONUMENTS.

2391a. The Gettysburg National Park Commission are authorized and directed, under the supervision of the Secretary of War, to erect such monuments and markers of granite and bronze upon the battlefield of Gettysburg, in the State of Pennsylvania, as will fittingly designate the positions, indicate the movements, and commemorate the valorous services of the following batteries and regiments of United States Regulars upon the battlefield: Batteries E, G, H, I, and K, First United States Artillery; A, B, D, G, L, and M, Second United States Artillery; C, F, and K, Third United States Artillery; A, B, C, F, G, and K, Fourth United States Artillery; C, D, F, I, and K, Fifth United States Artillery; Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Fourteenth, and Seventeenth Regiments of United States Infantry; First, Second, Fifth, and Sixth Regiments of Cavalry; and United States Engineers Detachment.

The Secretary of War shall, so far as practicable, procure the appointment of committees of the survivors of these regiments and batteries, with whom the said commission shall consult, and, with the approval of the Secretary of War, determine the designs and positions of said monuments and markers and the inscriptions they shall bear, and for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, sixty-one thousand five hundred dollars is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated, and the disbursements under this act shall be made on the approval of the Secretary of War. Act of February 18, 1903 (32 Stats., 838).

2391b. The Act of Congress authorizing the Secretary of War to cause to be erected monuments and markers on the battlefield of Gettysburg, in the State of Pennsylvania, to commemorate the valorous deeds of certain regiments and batteries of the United States Army, approved the eighteenth of February, nineteen hundred and three, be, and hereby is, amended by adding to the names of batteries therein mentioned Battery E, Fourth United States Artillery. And for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of said Act as hereby amended the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money not otherwise appropriated. Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 980).

THE ANTIETAM BATTLEFIELD.

2422a. For pay of superintendent of Antietam battlefield, said superintendent to perform his duties under the direction of the Quartermaster's Department and to be selected and appointed by the Secretary of War, at his discretion, the person selected and appointed to this position to be an honorably discharged Union soldier, one thousand five hundred dollars. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 496).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2422.)

THE YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

2443a. Private parties or companies doing business in the Yellowstone National Park under authority from the Government may be permitted, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, to use electricity furnished by the electric lighting and power plant of Fort Yellowstone and Mammoth Hot Springs at actual cost to the Government for operation, maintenance, and depreciation of the plant and ten per centum additional, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War. Act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stats., 1130).

STATUE OF LIBERTY, BEDLOES ISLAND.

2447a. The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to receive the sum of thirty-five thousand dollars, more or less, from the executive committee of the Statue of Liberty erected on land belonging to the United States on Bedloes Island, New York Harbor; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to keep the said statue in repair, and to pay for the same from the appropriation for "Regular supplies," under the Quartermaster's Department, in the appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year in which such expenses shall be incurred. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 498).

CHAPTER XLV.

NATIONAL CEMETERIES.

INTERMENTS.

2460a. For expenses of burying in the Arlington National Cemetery, or in the cemeteries of the District of Columbia, indigent ex-Union soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late civil war and soldiers and sailors of the war with Spain who die in the District of Columbia, or in the immediate vicinity thereof, and of such soldiers, sailors, and marines who die in the District of Columbia and are buried in the immediate vicinity thereof, to be disbursed by the Secretary of War, at a cost not exceeding forty-five dollars for such burial expenses in each case, exclusive of cost of grave, three thousand dollars. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 495).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2460 and the note thereto.)

ROADWAYS.

2465a. No part of this sum shall be used for repairing any roadway within the corporate limits of any city, town, or village. Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats., 495).

CHAPTER XLVIII.

General Staff Corps.

ESTABLISHMENT.

2470. There is hereby established a General Staff Corps, to be composed of officers detailed from the Army at large, under such rules as may be prescribed by the President. Sec. 1, Act of February 14, 1903 (32 Stats., 830).

COMPOSITION.

2471. The General Staff Corps shall consist of one Chief of Staff and two general officers, all to be detailed by the President from officer of the Army at large not below the grade of brigadier-general; four colonels, six lieutenant-colonels, and twelve majors, to be detailed from the corresponding grades in the Army at large, under such rules for selection as the President may prescribe; twenty captains, to be detailed from officers of the Army at large of the grades of captain or first lieutenant, who while so serving shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of captain mounted. All officers detailed in the General Staff Corps shall be detailed therein for periods of four years, unless sooner relieved. While serving in the General Staff Corps, officers may be temporarily assigned to duty with any branch of the Army. Upon being relieved from duty in the General Staff Corps, officers shall return to the branch of the Army in which they hold permanent commission, and no officer shall be eligible to a further detail in the General Staff Corps until he shall have served two years with the branch of the Army in which commissioned, except in case of emergency or in time of war. Sec. 3, Act of February 14, 1903 (32 Stats., 831).

DUTIES.

2472. The duties of the General Staff Corps shall be to prepare plans for the national defense and for the mobilization of the military forces in time of war; to investigate and report upon all questions affecting the efficiency of the Army and its state of preparation for military operations; to render professional aid and assistance to the Secretary of War and to general officers and other superior commanders, and to act as their agents in informing and coordinating the action of all the different officers who are subject under the terms of this Act to the supervision of the Chief of Staff; and to perform such other military duties not otherwise assigned by law as may be from time to time prescribed by the President. Sec. 2, Act of February 14, 1903 (32 Stats., 831).

2473. The Chief of Staff, under the direction of the President or of the Secretary of War, under the direction of the President, shall have supervision of all troops of the line and of the Adjutant-General's, Inspector-General's, Judge-Advocate's, Quartermaster's, Subsistence, Medical, Pay and Ordnance departments, the Corps of Engineers, and the Signal Corps, and shall perform such other military duties not otherwise assigned by law as may be assigned to him by the President. Duties now prescribed by statute for the Commanding General of the Army as a member of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification and of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home shall be performed by the Chief of Staff or other officer designated by the President. Acts and parts of Acts authorizing aids-de-camp and military secretaries shall not apply to general officers of the General Staff Corps. Sec. 4, Act of February 14, 1903 (32 Stats., 831).

CHIEF OF ARTILLERY.

2474. Section five of the Act entitled "An Act to increase the efficiency of the Army," approved February fourteenth, nineteen hundred and three, is hereby amended to read as follows:

" Sec. 5. That the Chief of Artillery shall hereafter serve as an additional member of the General Staff, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a brigadier-general, and when the next vacancy occurs in the office of colonel of artillery it shall not be filled, and thereafter the number of colonels of artillery shall not exceed thirteen; and the provisions of the foregoing sections of this Act shall take effect on August fifteenth, nineteen hundred and three." Act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stats., 1021).

2474a. The Chief of Artillery or Chief of Coast Artillery shall be an additional member of the General Staff Corps, and his other duties shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

When a vacancy occurs in the office of the Chief of Artillery or Chief of Coast Artillery the President may appoint to such vacancy, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an officer selected from the coast artillery, who shall serve for a period of four years unless reappointed for further periods of four years; and any officer who shall hereafter serve as Chief of Artillery or Chief of Coast Artillery shall, when retired, be retired with the rank, pay, and allowances authorized by law for a brigadier-general on the retired list. The position vacated by an officer appointed Chief of Artillery or Chief of Coast Artillery shall be filled by promotion in that arm according to existing law, but the officer thus appointed shall continue in the same lineal position in his arm which he would have held if he had not been so appointed, and shall be an additional number in the grade from which he was appointed or to which he may be promoted: Provided, That there shall not be at any time in the coast artillery more than one additional officer by reason of the appointment of a Chief of Artillery or Chief of Coast Artillery and the relief of an officer from such duty. Sec. 2, Act of January 25, 1907 (34 Stats., 861).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2474.)

CHAPTER XLIX.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS—ACTS OF THE PHILIPPINE COMMISSION RELATING TO THE ARMY.

ATTORNEYS.

2475. Any officer of the United States Army designated by the commanding general of the Division of the Philippines for such purpose shall have the right to appear as attorney before any court in the Philippine Islands in all cases in which the United States Government shall have an interest direct or indirect. Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of April 27, 1903 (No. 856).

PROVOST COURTS.

2476. Section 78 of said Act is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 78. JURISDICTION OF PROVOST COURTS OVER CIVIL AND CRIMINAL ACTIONS REPEALED, WITH CERTAIN EXCEPTIONS, AND ACTIONS PENDING THEREIN TO BE TRANSFERRED.—All military orders, and all acts conferring upon Provost Courts in the Philippine Islands jurisdiction over civil actions and criminal actions, including criminal actions in admiralty, are hereby repealed, except as in this section hereinafter provided. All civil actions now pending in the Provost Courts are hereby transferred to the proper tribunal in which they would have been brought under the provisions of this act, had this act been in force at the time such actions were commenced, and the Supreme Court and Courts of First Instance and Courts of Justices of the Peace established by this act are authorized to try and determine the actions so transferred to them respectively from the Provost Courts, in the same manner and with the same legal effect as though such actions had originally been commenced in the courts created by virtue of this act: Provided, however, that the criminal jurisdiction of Provost Courts in any province or district exclusively under military control shall not be affected by this act, and Provost Courts in such provinces and districts shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the Courts of First Instance over criminal actions in admiralty." Sec. 2, Act of the Philippine Commission of May 16, 1902 (No. 400).

GENERAL COURTS-MARTIAL—CIVILIAN WITNESSES—FEES.

2477. Every person not belonging to the Army of the United States, who, in the Philippine Islands, being duly subpœnaed to appear therein as a witness before a general court-martial of said Army, willfully neglects or refuses to appear, or refuses to qualify as a witness or to testify or produce documentary evidence which such person may have been legally subpœnaed to produce, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, United States currency, or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both, at the discretion of the court, and it shall be the duty of the proper fiscal or prosecuting officer, on the certification of the facts to him by the general court-martial, to file in the proper court a complaint against and prosecute the person so offending: Provided, That one dollar and fifty cents, United States currency, for each day's attendance, and five cents, United States currency, per mile for going from his place of residence to the place of trial or hearing and five cents per mile for returning, shall be duly tendered to said witness: Provided further, That no witness shall be compelled to incriminate himself or to answer any question which may tend to incriminate him. Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of April 28, 1904 (No. 1130).

HABEAS CORPUS.

2478. Nothing in this chapter shall authorize the discharge of any person convicted of an offense or charged with an offense committed in any other part of the Philippine Islands, or in any part of the United States, and who, agreeable to law, ought to be delivered up to the executive power of the United States, or of any State thereof, where the offense is charged to have been committed; nor of any person suffering imprisonment under lawful judgment; nor shall any writ of habeas corpus be issued against a military officer or soldier who is detaining a prisoner in the Provinces of Batangas, La Laguna, Tayabas, Samar, Cebú and Bohol, and in any unorganized province or territory. It shall be a conclusive answer to a writ of habeas corpus against a military officer or soldier, and a sufficient excuse for not producing the prisoner in all other organized provinces than those herein named, if the Commanding General or any general officer in command of the department or district shall certify that the prisoner is held by him either:

"1. As a prisoner of war; or

"2. As a member of the Army, a civilian employé thereof, or a camp follower and subject to its discipline; but this paragraph shall not apply to pending cases; or

"3. As a prisoner committed by a military court or commission prior to October 1, 1901; or

"4. As a prisoner arrested and held for trial before a military court or commission before October 15, 1901, for a violation of the laws of war committed before the same date; or

"5. As a prisoner guilty of violations of the laws of war committed in the unpacified provinces and territory in this section named and who has escaped into provinces officially declared to be under civil control and has been there captured by military authorities and is held for trial for such violations of the laws of war."

All the other provisions of this chapter shall be subject to the limitations and restrictions contained in this section. Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of October 1, 1901 (No. 272).

2479. So much of section one of Act Numbered Two hundred and seventy-two, entitled "An Act amending Chapter XXVI, relating to proceedings in habeas corpus, of Act Numbered One hundred and ninety, providing for a code of procedure in civil actions and special proceedings," as forbids the issuing of any writ of habeas corpus against a military officer or soldier who is detaining a prisoner in the Provinces of Batangas, La Laguna, Tayabas, Samar, Cebu, and Bohol, or in any other province which has been organized under "The Provincial Government Act," or by a special Act, or which may be hereafter so organized, is hereby expressly repealed. Sec. 4, Act of the Philippine Commission of June 23, 1902 (No. 421).

JURISDICTION OVER RESERVATIONS.

2480. SECTION 1. No licenses shall be granted for the sale of or dealing in any intoxicating liquors on any public land reserved by the President of the United States for military purposes in the Philippine Islands.

Sec. 2. The military authorities shall have the right to reject [eject] any intruder or trespasser on any public lands reserved by the President for military purposes in the Philippine Islands, and to suppress open breaches of the peace and abate nuisances thereon.

Sec. 3. No branch of the Civil Government in force on or over any public lands reserved by the President for military purposes, and no civilian residents thereon, shall interfere with military administration or the use of such lands for military purposes.

Sec. 4. The personal property of persons employed in the military service of the United States in the Philippine Islands and used by them incident to said service shall be exempt from all taxation under the laws in force in said Islands.

Sec. 5. No mining claims shall be located by any person on any public lands reserved by the President for military purposes in the Philippine Islands.

Sec. 6. Every person who unlawfully cuts, or aids, or is employed in unlawfully cutting, or wantonly destroys, or procures to be wantonly destroyed, any timber standing upon lands of the United States, which in pursuance of law may be reserved or purchased for military purposes in the Philippine Islands, or removes any other public property, shall, upon conviction, be fined for each offense a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding twelve months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 7. No arrest of any officer, soldier, or civilian employee, in the military service of the United States on any military reservation, camp, or barracks, shall be made except on warrant in due form in writing and served upon the commanding officer thereof.

Sec. 8. All laws or parts of laws in force in the Philippine Islands not inconsistent with military use of any public lands reserved by the President for military purposes shall be in full force and effect over said lands.

Sec. 9. The public good requiring the speedy enactment of this bill, the passage of the same is hereby expedited in accordance with section two of "An Act prescribing the order of procedure by the Commission in the enactment of laws," passed September twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred. Secs. 1 to 9, Act of the Philippine Commission of November 24, 1902 (No. 530).

SALES OF LIQUOR.

2481. Section 1. No license shall be granted by a municipal council or other municipal authority or provincial authority for the sale of any intoxicating liquors, beer, or wine, at any place or on any premises situated within a distance of two miles of land now used or hereafter to be used by the United States for military purposes at Camp Stotsenberg, in the municipality of Mabalacat, Province of Pampanga; Camp Morrison, municipality of Salomague, Province of Ilocus Sur; Camp Jossman, municipality of Guimaras, Province of Iloilo; Camp Gregg, municipality of Bayambang, Province of Pangasinan; in or near the municipality of Los Baños, Province of La Laguna; in or near the municipality of Iligan, Province of Misamis; in or near the municipality of Batangas, Province of Batangas; in or near the municipality of Legaspi, Province of Albay; in or near the municipality of Sorsogon, Province of Sorsogon; in or near the municipality of Santo Tomas, Province of La Laguna; at Fort William McKinley, near San Pedro Macati, Province of Rizal; or within a distance of one and one-half miles of land used or to be used by the United States for military purposes at Camp Wallace, in the municipality of San Fernando, Province of La Union; at Pasay barracks, municipality of Pasay, Province of Rizal; in or near the municipality of Nueva Caceres, Province of Ambos Camarines; in or near the municipality of Lucena, Province of Tayabas; in or near the municipality of Calamba, Province of La Laguna; or within a distance of one mile of land used by the United States for military purposes at Santa Mesa in the city of Manila: Provided, however, That the prohibitions herein provided shall not extend to the following-described land within the prohibited areas: Land situated on the left bank of the Pasig river within one mile of Santa Mesa in the city of Manila; land within a circle with a radius of five hundred and eighty yards with a center at the middle of the road in the immediate front of the parish church of the municipality of Batangas, Province of Batangas; land within a circle with a radius of four hundred yards with the center at the southwest corner of the prison in Albay, Province of Albay; land within a circle with a radius of four hundred yards with the center at the southeast corner of the old Tribunal at Daraga, in the Province of Albay; land within a circle of seven hundred yards with the center at the door of the church of San Rafael, in the town of Legaspi, Province of Albay; land within a circle with a radius of three hundred yards with the center at the door of the parish church in Santo Tomas, Province of Batangas; land within a circle with a radius of five hundred yards with the center at the center of the public square in the town of Pasig, Province of Rizal; land within a circle with a radius of seven hundred yards with the center at the center of the public square in the municipality of Nueva Caceres, Province of Ambos Camarines.

SEC. 2. Any person who shall sell, furnish or give away any intoxicating liquors, wine or beer, within the boundaries prohibited in the preceding section shall be punished for each offense by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, in money of the United States, or by imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding six months, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 3. Persons to whom licenses have heretofore been granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors within the limits prohibited by this Act, and whose licenses have not yet expired, shall be entitled to be reimbursed, from the treasury into which their license fees have been paid, such a proportion of the fees paid as the time for which the license has yet to run bears to the whole time for which the license was granted; but shall be subject to all the penalties provided by law for selling, furnishing, or giving away intoxicating liquors without a license after this Act shall come into force.

Sec. 4. For the purpose of enforcing this Act, and for no other purpose, the commanding officers of the United States troops stationed at the places named in the first section of the law shall have the powers of a justice of the peace, as defined by existing laws. Prosecutions before such officers, acting as justices of the peace, shall be governed by the provisions of General Orders Numbered Fifty-eight, Office of the Military Governor for the Philippine Islands, dated Manila, Philippine Islands, April twenty-third, nineteen hundred, and the amendments thereof, and all rights of appeals secured by such order and the amendments thereof shall be allowed to defendants prosecuted under this Act. Any order for arrest issued by authority of this Act may be executed by a military officer or soldier designated for that purpose by the officer commanding, as justice of the peace. The imprisonment of defendants convicted under this Act shall be in the civil jail of the province, or the city of Manila, as the case may be. All questions of appeal shall be determined in the manner provided in said General Orders Numbered Fifty-eight. Commanding officers, acting as justices of the peace by virtue of this section, shall not be entitled to fees as justices of the peace for services so rendered; nor shall military officers or soldiers making arrests or serving process be entitled to fees for said services. All fines and costs imposed by virtue of this Act shall be paid into the treasury of the municipality in which the offense was committed, or into the Insular Treasury for the benefit of the city of Manila, as the case may be.

Sec. 5. For the purpose of avoiding future misunderstandings and of facilitating the enforcement of this Act, it shall be the duty of the commanding officer of the United States troops stationed at each of the places named in the first section of this Act to notify the municipal authorities of the municipalities affected hereby of the making of a survey and the running of the line of the precincts within which, by virtue of this Act, the licensing of saloons for the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited; and it shall be the duty of such commanding officer and of the municipal officers, after the line shall have been run, to notify all persons then engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors within the prohibited territory of the operation of this Act and of the time within which they must remove their places of business.

Sec. 6. This Act shall take effect on the first day of May, nineteen hundred and three, except in so far as it applies to the saloons now licensed within the municipality of Bayambang, in the Province of Pangasinan, and the municipality of Los Baños, in the Province of La Laguna, and as to the municipality of Bayambang and the municipality of Los Baños, this Act shall take effect six months from the date of its passage. Secs. 1 to 6, Act of the Philippine Commission of March 28, 1903 (No. 709).

2481a. The sale, gift, or other disposal, in the Province of Zambales, to any soldier of the United States Army, Filipino Scouts excepted, or to any sailor or enlisted man of the United States Navy or Marine Corps, of any of the so-called native wines or liquors, such as " vino," " anisado," and " tuba," is hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful.

Sec. 2. Any person violating the provisions of section one of this Act shall, upon conviction thereof, be punishable for each offense by a fine not to exceed two hundred pesos, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. Secs. 1 and 2, Act of the Philippine Commission of July 7, 1905 (No. 1369).

(This paragraph, in effect, amends sections 1 and 2 of paragraph 2481.)

2482. Section 1. Section 1 of Act Numbered Seven hundred and nine, entitled "An Act prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors within certain distances of land used by the United States for military purposes and at certain camps therein named," is hereby amended by inserting after the words " for military purposes at Santa Mesa in the city of Manila," and before the words "Provided, however," the following words: " or within a distance of three-quarters of a mile of land used by the United States for military purposes near the town of Calbayog, in the Province of Samar."

Sec. 2. Section one of said Act Numbered Seven hundred and nine is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following words: " and land within a circle with a radius of seven hundred yards with the center at the middle of the road immediately in front of the parish church at Lucena, in the Province of Tayabas." Secs. 1 and 2, Act of the Philippine Commission of May 31, 1904 (No. 1169).

EMINENT DOMAIN.

2483. Section 1. Section two hundred and forty-one of Act Numbered One hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act providing a code of procedure in civil actions and special proceedings in the Philippine Islands," is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following words:

" The words ' public use ' in this section shall include the use of land in these islands for the construction and maintenance of military posts to be occupied by United States forces stationed in the Philippine Islands, and an action in the name of and on behalf of the Philippine Insular Government for the enforcement of the right of eminent domain for the public use thus described may be instituted under this section and the title acquired by the Philippine Government in this land shall be indefeasible and, in furtherance of the use herein described, may be by the Philippine Government, in accordance with a resolution of the Philippine Commission, transferred by a duly executed deed of the Civil Governor to the United States forever."

Sec. 2. An action for the enforcement of the right of eminent domain on behalf of the Government of the United States may be instituted in the name of the Government of the United States upon the direction of the President of the United States or the Secretary of War, or upon the application of the Commanding General of the United States Army, Division of the Philippines. Secs. 1 and 2, Act of the Philippine Commission of March 5, 1903 (No. 665).

LOCUST PEST.

2484. Nothing in Act Numbered Eight hundred and seventeen, entitled "An Act declaring that the presence of locusts in various provinces of the islands so threatens the food supply for the coming year as to present a public emergency requiring radical action, and authorizing and providing for the appointment of a board in each province with full powers to call upon all able-bodied inhabitants thereof to take united action to suppress the pest, and for other purposes," shall require the services in the suppression of the locust pest of officers or men of the Army or Navy of the United States, civil employees of the United States Government, officers or employees of the Insular Government, or the officers or servants of companies or individuals engaged in the business of common carriers on sea or land, or priests, ministers of the Gospel, physicians, practicantes, druggists or practicantes de farmacia actually engaged in business, or lawyers when actually engaged in court proceedings. Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of August 17, 1903 (No. 834).

RESIDENCE FOR VOTING.

2485. Section 1. Act No. 82, entitled "The Municipal Code" is hereby amended as follows:

* * * * * * *

(c) By adding at the close of section 6 the words "Provided, that officers, soldiers, sailors or marines of the Army or Navy of the United States shall not be considered as having acquired legal residence within the meaning of this section by reason of their having been stationed in the municipalities for the required six months."

* * * * * * *

Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of November 27, 1901 (No. 303).

QUALIFICATIONS OF ELECTORS—ELECTIONS.

2485a. The electors exercising the privilege of choosing elective officers shall be male persons eighteen or more years of age who have had a legal residence in the township in which they exercise the right of suffrage for a period of six months immediately preceding the election, and who are not citizens or subjects of any foreign power: Provided, That officers, soldiers, sailors, or marines of the Army or Navy of the United States shall not be considered as having acquired legal residence within the meaning of this section by reason of their having been stationed in the township for the required six months. Sec. 6, Act of the Philippine Commission of September 14, 1905 (No. 1397).

(This paragraph amends paragraph 2485.)

2485b. In no case shall there be elected or appointed to a township office ecclesiastics; soldiers in active service; persons receiving salaries from provincial, departmental, or governmental funds; those who are delinquent in the payment of public taxes assessed after the passage of this Act; or contractors for public works within the province. Sec. 15, Act of Philippine Commission of September 14, 1905 (No. 1397).

2485c. The following persons shall be disqualified from voting:

(a) Any person who is delinquent in the payment of public taxes.

(b) Any person who has been deprived of the right to vote by the sentence of a court of competent jurisdiction since August thirteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, unless and until acquitted upon appeal to a higher court or restored to all civil rights by amnesty or pardon.

(c) Any person who has taken and violated the oath of allegiance to the United States.

(d) Any person who, after April ninth, nineteen hundred and two, has been or shall be in arms in the Philippine Islands against the authority or sovereignty of the United States, whether such person be an officer, soldier, or civilian.

(e) Any person who, after April ninth, nineteen hundred and two, has made or shall make contribution of money or other valuable thing in aid of any person or organization against the authority or sovereignty of the United States, or who shall demand or receive such contribution from others, or who shall make any contribution to any person or organization hostile to or in arms against the authority or sovereignty of the United States for the purpose of securing any protection, immunity, or benefit, and who has not received the benefit of the Amnesty Proclamation.

(f) Any person who, after April ninth, nineteen hundred and two, has given or in any manner whatsoever shall give aid and comfort to any person or organization in the Philippine Islands in opposition to or in arms against the authority or sovereignty of the United States, and who has not received the benefit of the Amnesty Proclamation. Sec. 8, Act of the Philippine Commission of September 14, 1905 (No. 1397).

TAXATION.

2486. Section 1. Section two of Act Numbered One hundred and thirty-three, entitled "An Act to amend the Provincial Government Act, Numbered Eighty-three," shall be amended by adding to subsection twenty-six thereunder, after the word " navy " in the eighth line of said subsection, the following: " or a civilian employee in the permanent employment of the War or Navy Department of the United States, who was not a resident of the Islands before his employment in such service, but was brought here for the purpose of such employment," so that the said subsection shall read as follows:

" Sec. 26. There shall be collected in each province, by the provincial treasurer, an annual tax of one peso or one dollar, Mexican, to be called the cedula or registration tax, from every male person of eighteen years of age and not more than fifty-five years of age residing in such province, whether a native of the Philippine Islands, a citizen of the United States, or a foreigner, except a soldier, sailor, or officer of the United States Army or Navy, or a civilian employee in the permanent employment of the War or Navy Department of the United States, who was not a resident of the Islands before his employment in such service, but was brought here for the purpose of such employment, a member of a non-Christian tribe, or a foreign consular officer exempted by treaty or international law." Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of June 1, 1903 (No. 785).

GOVERNMENT OF THE MORO PROVINCE.

2487. Section 1. Section fifteen of Act Numbered Seven hundred and eighty-seven, entitled "An Act providing for the organization and government of the Moro Province," is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Provided, however, That the legislative council shall have the power to unite the offices of district secretary and district treasurer, and to provide for the filling of such offices, whether united or separate, by detail of Army officers without civil-service examination, in the interest of economy in the public service. Army officers thus detailed shall receive the same allowance and expenses from the provincial treasury as are allowed to detailed Army officers under section eleven of Act Numbered Seven hundred and eighty-seven." Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of September 17, 1903 (No. 889).

GOVERNMENT OF THE MORO PROVINCE—SALARIES.

2488. Sec. 11. The provincial governor shall receive an annual salary of six thousand dollars and each of the provincial officers shall receive an annual salary of not exceeding four thousand dollars each, in United States currency, to be fixed by the Civil Governor in the appointment and to be approved with the appointment by the Commission. The governors of the districts hereinafter authorized shall receive not exceeding three thousand five hundred dollars annual salary, in United States currency, to be fixed in the case of each district by the legislative council; and the district secretaries and the district treasurers hereinafter authorized shall each receive an annual salary of not exceeding two thousand five hundred dollars, in United States currency, to be fixed for each district by the legislative council. The lieutenant-governor of Dapitan shall receive an annual salary of not exceeding two thousand dollars, in United States currency, to be fixed by the legislative council. In case an officer of the Army is detailed to perform the duties of provincial governor, or provincial engineer, or a governor of a district, he shall receive an allowance equal to twenty per centum of his current proper yearly pay as an officer of the Army and the actual and necessary expenses incurred while absent from his station in the performance of his necessary civil duties.

The salaries of all officers and employees of the province and districts shall be payable out of the revenues of the province. The salaries of the officers and employees of such municipalities as may be organized within the province shall be payable out of the treasury of the respective municipalities. Sec. 11, Act of the Philippine Commission of June 1, 1903 (No. 787).

2489. Section eleven of said Act is hereby amended by striking out the words " the lieutenant-governor of Dapitan shall receive an annual salary of not exceeding two thousand dollars, in United States currency, to be fixed by the legislative council " and by making the next sentence of said section, after the words so stricken out, to read as follows: " In case an officer of the Army is detailed to perform the duties of provincial governor or secretary or provincial engineer, or a governor or a secretary of a district, he shall receive an allowance equal to twenty per centum of his current proper yearly pay as an officer of the Army and the actual and necessary expenses incurred while absent from his station in the performance of his necessary civil duties." Sec. 4, Act of the Philippine Commission of January 13, 1905 (No. 1283).

2490. Section eleven of Act Numbered Seven hundred and eighty-seven, entitled "An Act providing for the organization and government of the Moro Province," as amended by section four of Act Numbered Twelve hundred and eighty-three, is hereby further amended by making the last sentence of the first paragraph of said section read as follows:

"In case officers of the Army are detailed to perform the duties of provincial or district officials of the Moro Province they may be paid an allowance, in the discretion of the legislative council, as follows: Officers above the grade of colonel, not exceeding twenty per centum, and officers of the grade of colonel and below said grade not exceeding fifty per centum, of their current proper yearly pay as officers of the Army, and they shall also receive the actual and necessary expenses incurred while absent from their stations in the performance of their necessary civil duties." Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of September 8, 1905 (No. 1391).

ESTABLISHMENT OF PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.

2491. A civil provincial government is hereby established for each province of the Philippine Islands not organized under the Provincial Government Act Numbered Eighty-three, except the Moro Province. Every provincial government established under this Act shall be a body corporate, with power to sue and be sued, to have and use a corporate seal, to hold property, real and personal, to make contracts for labor and material needed in the construction of duly authorized public works, and to incur such other obligations as are expressly authorized by law.

Sec. 2. Except as hereinafter provided, the officers of each provincial government organized under this Act shall be a provincial governor, a provincial secretary, a provincial treasurer, a provincial supervisor, and a provincial fiscal. No person shall be eligible for any of these offices who is not either a citizen of the United States, a native of the Philippine Islands, a person who has taken the oath of allegiance to the United States and served as a member of the Army or Navy of the United States and been honorably discharged therefrom, or who, not being a subject or citizen of any other power or government, may have under or by virtue of the treaty of Paris acquired the political rights of a native of the Philippine Islands, or who, having taken the oath of allegiance to the United States, shall violate the same. Nonresidence in the province shall not render the person appointed to the office ineligible.

SEC. 3. The provincial officers shall be appointed by the Governor-General, with the advice and consent of the Philippine Commission, and shall hold office during his pleasure. They shall reside and have their offices at the capital of the province. Secs. 1 to 3, Act of the Philippine Commission of September 14, 1905 (No. 1396).

ANNUAL TAX FOR ROADS, ETC.

2492. (a) There is hereby imposed, for the purpose of protecting, improving, and extending the roads and trails of the province and of constructing public works, an annual tax of two pesos on every male inhabitant of the province over eighteen years and under sixty years of age, except soldiers and sailors of the United States Army and Navy, civilian employees of the military branch of the United States Government in the Philippine Islands, consular and diplomatic representatives and of officials of foreign powers in the Philippine Islands, paupers, insane persons, and persons serving a sentence of more than one year in a public prison. This tax shall be collected by the provincial treasurer and his deputies. It shall be deemed to be delinquent after the first day of February of each year: Provided, That the amount of taxes due and payable for the period from the date of this Act to the first day of January, nineteen hundred and seven, shall be two pesos: And provided further, That this amount shall be due and payable on the first day of December, nineteen hundred and five, and shall become delinquent on the first day of January, nineteen hundred and six: And provided further, That persons liable to pay this tax not residents of the province prior to February first of any year, but who enter and reside in the province after that date, may pay the tax within thirty days after their arrival in the province. Sec. 19, Act of the Philippine Commission of September 14, 1905 (No. 1396).

OATH OF OFFICE.

2493. Before assuming office each provincial officer shall take and subscribe to the following oath or affirmation:

"I, --, having been appointed to the office of ------------------------ of the Province of --------------------------------, do hereby solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will well and truly perform all the duties of said office; that I will faithfully account for all moneys coming into my hands as such officer; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the Government of the United States; that I take this oath without any mental reservation whatsoever. So help me God. (In case of affirmation the last four words shall be omitted.)"

The oaths of office may be administered to provincial officers by a member of the Commission, the Executive Secretary, the Assistant Executive Secretary, the governor of the province, or any United States Army officer stationed in the province, by the judge of First Instance within whose judicial district the said province lies, by any notary public or justice of the peace, or by any other person duly authorized in such case to administer oaths. Sec. 5, Act of the Philippine Commission of September 14, 1905 (No. 1396).

TOLL ROADS AND BRIDGES.

2494. Whenever the provincial board of any province shall decide it to be necessary for the proper maintenance of any road or highway within the province, it may designate any such road or highway, or any part of any road or highway, or any bridge, which is maintained, or intended to be built and maintained wholly by provincial funds, as a toll road or toll bridge, and may fix, and from time to time may change, the rates of toll to be paid for the use thereof, which shall be reasonable and shall not be greater than is necessary to produce the revenue requisite for the proper building, maintenance, or improvement thereof during the period while the toll rates are in force. The rates fixed shall be subject to the approval of the Governor-General: Provided, That no toll shall be collected from persons passing over such road or bridge on foot: And provided further, That officers and enlisted men and civil employees of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps shall be exempt from the payment of tolls or charges under this Act. Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of March 20, 1907 (No. 1617).

LEAVE PRIVILEGES.

2495. The provisions of Act Numbered One thousand and forty, in regard to all leave privileges, shall hereafter apply to Army officers serving with the Philippines Constabulary: Provided, however, That the provisions of said Act in regard to half pay while going to and returning from the United States shall apply only to that portion of the compensation of said officers paid from Insular funds. Sec. 1, Act of the Philippine Commission of March 13, 1907 (No. 1607).

ACTS OF CONGRESS.

ARTICLES FREE OF DUTY.

2496. Used household furniture of persons coming to settle in the Philippine Islands, including such articles, effects, and furnishings as pictures, books, pianos, organs, chinaware, and kitchen utensils, in quantities and of the class suitable to the rank and position of the persons bringing the same and intended for their own use and benefit and not for barter or sale: Provided, That they have all been used by said persons for more than one year; that they are brought within a reasonable time after the arrival of the owners, in the discretion of the collector of customs: And provided further, That satisfactory evidence be produced that such persons are actually coming to settle in the Philippine Islands; that the change of residence is bona fide, and that the privilege of free entry under this paragraph has never been previously granted to them: And provided further, That if such persons are coming to the Philippine Islands from the United States and are citizens thereof, the period of one year specified in the first proviso of this paragraph shall not be effective. Officers of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps and religious missionaries taking stations in the islands shall be given the same privileges granted to other persons in this article: And provided further, That all articles of professional equipment, wearing apparel, and household goods belonging to officers of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, officers of the Philippine government, and religious missionaries who are citizens of the United States, imported from the United States for their personal use and benefit and not for barter or sale, may be entered free of duty on the personal certificate of such person that they fulfill the above conditions: Provided, however, That United States Government vessels, whether transports of the Army or naval vessels, when coming from the United States or a foreign port to the ports of the Philippine Islands, shall be subject to the same inspection by customs officers of the Philippine government, for the purpose of determining whether they have on board articles or merchandise dutiable under the laws of the Philippine Islands, as such United States Government vessels are subject to by customs officers of the United States Government when such vessels enter ports of the United States from foreign countries for the purpose of determining whether such vessels have on board articles or merchandise dutiable under the laws of the United States. Sec. 12, Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 974).

TONNAGE DUES.

2497. The following shall be exempt from tonnage dues:

A vessel belonging to or employed in the service of the Government of the United States. * * * Sec. 15, Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stats., 976).

CHAPTER L.

DISTRICT OF ALASKA.

2498. All moneys derived from and collected for liquor licenses, occupation or trade licenses outside of the incorporated towns in the district of Alaska shall be deposited in the Treasury Department of the United States, there to remain as a separate and distinct fund, to be known as the 'Alaska fund,' and to be wholly devoted to the purposes hereinafter stated in the district of Alaska. One-fourth of said fund, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be devoted to the establishment and maintenance of public schools in said district; five per centum of said fund shall be devoted to the care and maintenance of insane persons in said district, or so much of said five per centum as may be needed; and all the residue of said fund shall be devoted to the construction and maintenance of wagon roads, bridges, and trails in said district: And provided further, That the clerk of the court of each judicial division of said district is authorized, and he is hereby directed, whenever considered necessary, to call upon the United States marshal of said judicial division to aid in the collection of said license moneys by designating regular or special deputies of his office to act as temporary license inspectors, and it shall be the duty of said United States marshal to render such aid; and the said regular or special deputies, while actually engaged in the performance of this duty, shall receive the same fees and allowances and be paid in the same manner as when performing their regular duties. Sec. 1, Act of May 14, 1906 (34 Stats., 192).

(This paragraph amends and takes the place of section 1 of the act of January 27, 1905.)

2499. There shall be a board of road commissioners in said district, to be composed of an engineer officer of the United States Army to be detailed and appointed by the Secretary of War, and two other officers of that part of the Army stationed in said district and to be designated by the Secretary of War. The said engineer officer shall, during the term of his said detail and appointment, abide in said district. The said board shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, upon their own motion or upon petition, to locate, lay out, construct, and maintain wagon roads and pack trails from any point on the navigable waters of said district to any town, mining or other industrial camp or settlement, or between any such town, camps, or settlements therein, if in their judgment such roads or trails are needed and will be of permanent value for the development of the district; but no such road or trail shall be constructed to any town, camp, or settlement which is wholly transitory or of no substantial value or importance for mining, trade, agricultural, or manufacturing purposes. The said board shall prepare maps, plans, and specifications of every road or trail they may locate and lay out, and whenever more than twenty thousand dollars, in the aggregate, shall have to be expended upon the actual construction of any road or section of road designed to be permanent, contract for the work shall be let by them to the lowest responsible bidder, upon sealed bids, after due notice, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War. The board may reject any bid if they deem the same unreasonably high or if they find that there is a combination among bidders. In case no responsible and reasonable bid can be secured, then the work may be carried on with material and men procured and hired by the board. The engineer officer of the board shall in all cases supervise the work of construction and see that the same is properly performed. As soon as any road or trail laid out by the board has been constructed and completed they shall examine the same and make a full and detailed report of the work done on the same to the Secretary of War, and in such report they shall state whether the road or trail has been completed conformably to the maps, plans, and specifications of the same. It shall be the duty of said board, as far as practicable, to keep in proper repair all roads and trails constructed under their supervision, and the same rules as to the manner in which the work of repair shall be done, whether by contract or otherwise, shall govern as in the case of the original construction of the road or trail. The cost and expenses of laying out, constructing, and repairing such roads and trails shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury, through the authorized disbursing officer of the board designated by the Secretary of War, out of the road and trail portion of said 'Alaska fund' upon vouchers approved and certified by said board. The Secretary of the Treasury shall, at the end of each month, send by mail to each of the members of said board a statement of the amount available of said 'Alaska fund' for the construction and repair of roads and trails, and no greater liability for construction or repair shall at any time be incurred by said board than the money available therefor at that time in said fund. The members of said board shall, in addition to their salaries, be reimbursed in the sums actually paid or incurred by them in traveling expenses in the performance of their duties, and shall be entitled to receive their actual expenses of living while serving as members of said board within the limits of the district and not stationed at a military post. Sec. 2, Act of May 14, 1906 (34 Stats., 192).

(This paragraph amends and takes the place of section 2 of the act of January 27, 1905, 33 Stats., 616.)

APPENDIX A.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND CERTAIN POWERS FOR THE ADAPTATION TO MARITIME WARFARE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE GENEVA CONVENTION OF AUGUST 22, 1864.

Signed at The Hague July 29, 1899.
Ratification advised by the Senate May 4, 1900.
Ratified by the President of the United States August 3, 1900.
Ratification deposited with the Netherlands Government September 4, 1900.
Proclaimed November 1, 1901.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Convention for the adaptation to Maritime Warfare of the principles of the Geneva Convention of August 22, 1864, was concluded and signed on July 29, 1899, by the Plenipotentiaries of the United States of America, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, China, Denmark, Spain, Mexico, France, Great Britain and Ireland, Greece, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Montenegro, the Netherlands, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Servia, Siam, Sweden and Norway, Switzerland, Turkey, and Bulgaria, the original of which Convention, in the French language, is word for word as follows:

His Majesty the Emperor of Germany, King of Prussia; His Majesty the Emperor of Austria, King of Bohemia etc. and Apostolic King of Hungary; His Majesty the King of the Belgians; His Majesty the Emperor of China; His Majesty the King of Denmark; His Majesty the King of Spain and in His Name Her Majesty the Queen Regent of the Kingdom; the President of the United States of America; the President of the United Mexican States; the President of the French Republic; Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India; His Majesty the King of the Hellenes; His Majesty the King of Italy; His Majesty the Emperor of Japan; His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Luxemburg, Duke of Nassau; His Highness the Prince of Montenegro; Her Majesty the Queen of the Netherlands; His Imperial Majesty the Shah of Persia; His Majesty the King of Portugal and of the Algarves etc.; His Majesty the King of Roumania; His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias; His Majesty the King of Servia; His Majesty the King of Siam; His Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway; the Swiss Federal Council; His Majesty the Emperor of the Ottomans and His Royal Highness the Prince of Bulgaria.

Alike animated by the desire to diminish, as far as depends on them the evils inseparable from warfare, and wishing with this object to adapt to maritime warfare the principles of the Geneva Convention of the 22nd August, 1864, have decided to conclude a convention to this effect:

* * * * * * *

ARTICLE I.

Military hospital ships, that is to say, ships constructed or assigned by States specially and solely for the purpose of assisting the wounded, sick or shipwrecked, and the names of which shall have been communicated to the belligerent Powers at the beginning or during the course of hostilities, and in any case before they are employed, shall be respected and cannot be captured while hostilities last.

These ships, moreover, are not on the same footing as men-of-war as regards their stay in a neutral port.

ARTICLE II.

Hospital ships, equipped wholly or in part at the cost of private individuals or officially recognized relief Societies, shall likewise be respected and exempt from capture, provided the belligerent Power to whom they belong has given them an official commission and has notified their names to the hostile Power at the commencement of or during hostilities, and in any case before they are employed.

These ships should be furnished with a certificate from the competent authorities, declaring that they had been under their control while fitting out and on final departure.

ARTICLE III.

Hospital-ships, equipped wholly or in part at the cost of private individuals or officially recognized Societies of neutral countries, shall be respected and exempt from capture, if the neutral Power to whom they belong has given them an official commission and notified their names to the belligerent powers at the commencement of or during hostilities, and in any case before they are employed.

ARTICLE IV.

The ships mentioned in Articles I, II, and III shall afford relief and assistance to the wounded, sick, and shipwrecked of the belligerents independently of their nationality.

The Governments engage not to use these ships for any military purpose.

These ships must not in any way hamper the movements of the combatants.

During and after an engagement they will act at their own risk and peril.

The belligerents will have the right to control and visit them; they can refuse to help them, order them off, make them take a certain course, and put a Commissioner on board; they can even detain them, if important circumstances require it.

As far as possible the belligerents shall inscribe in the sailing papers of the hospital-ships the orders they give them.

ARTICLE V.

The military hospital-ships shall be distinguished by being painted white outside with a horizontal band of green about a metre and a half in breadth.

The ships mentioned in Articles II and III shall be distinguished by being painted white outside with a horizontal band of red about a metre and a half in breadth.

The boats of the ships above mentioned, as also small craft which may be used for hospital work, shall be distinguished by similar painting.

All hospital ships shall make themselves known by hoisting, together with their national flag, the white flag with a red cross provided by the Geneva Convention.

ARTICLE VI.

Neutral merchantmen, yachts, or vessels, having, or taking on board, sick, wounded, or shipwrecked of the belligerents, cannot be captured for so doing, but they are liable to capture for any violation of neutrality they may have committed.

ARTICLE VII.

The religious, medical, or hospital staff of any captured ship is inviolable, and its members cannot be made prisoners of war. On leaving the ship they take with them the objects and surgical instruments which are their own private property.

This staff shall continue to discharge its duties while necessary, and can afterwards leave when the Commander-in-Chief considers it possible.

The belligerents must guarantee to the staff that has fallen into their hands the enjoyment of their salaries intact.

Article VIII.

Sailors and soldiers who are taken on board when sick or wounded, to whatever nation they belong, shall be protected and looked after by the captors.

Article IX.

The shipwrecked, wounded, or sick of one of the belligerents who fall into the hands of the other, are prisoners of war. The captor must decide, according to circumstances, if it is best to keep them or send them to a port of his own country, to a neutral port, or even to a hostile port. In the last case, prisoners thus repatriated cannot serve as long as the war lasts.

Article X.

(Excluded)

Article XI.

The rules contained in the above Articles are binding only on the Contracting Powers, in case of War between two or more of them.

The said rules shall cease to be binding from the time when, in a war between the Contracting Powers, one of the belligerents is joined by a non-Contracting Power.

Article XII.

The present Convention shall be ratified as soon as possible.

The ratifications shall be deposited at The Hague.

On the receipt of each ratification a procès-verbal shall be drawn up, a copy of which, duly certified, shall be sent through the diplomatic channel to all the Contracting Powers.

Article XIII.

The non-Signatory Powers who accepted the Geneva Convention of the 22nd August, 1864, are allowed to adhere to the present Convention.

For this purpose they must make their adhesion known to the Contracting Powers by means of a written notification addressed to the Netherlands Government, and by it communicated to all the other Contracting Powers.

ARTICLE XIV.

In the event of one of the High Contracting Parties denouncing the present Convention, such denunciation shall not take effect until a year after the notification made in writing to the Netherlands Government, and forthwith communicated by it to all the other Contracting Powers.

This denunciation shall only affect the notifying Power.

In testimony whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention and affixed their seals thereto.

Done at The Hague the 29th July, 1899, in single copy, which shall be kept in the archives of the Government of the Netherlands, and copies of which duly certified, shall be sent through the diplomatic channel to the Contracting Powers.

* * * * * * *

And whereas on an understanding reached by the Government of the Netherlands with the signatory powers it was agreed to exclude from the ratifications of said Convention its Article X;

And whereas the said Convention, with its Article X excluded, was ratified by the Government of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, and by the Governments of the other Powers aforesaid, with the exception of those of China and Turkey;

And whereas, in pursuance of the stipulations of Article XII of the said Convention the ratifications of the said Convention were deposited at the Hague on the 4th. day of September, 1900, by the Plenipotentiaries of the Governments of the United States of America, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, France, Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Siam, Sweden and Norway and Bulgaria; on the 6th. day of October, 1900, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Japan; on the 16th. day of October, 1900, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Monténégro; on the 29th. day of December, 1900, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Switzerland; on the 4th. day of April, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Greece; on the 17th. day of April, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Mexico; on the 11th. day of May, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Servia, and on the 12th. day of July, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Luxembourg:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, have caused the said Convention, with its Article X excluded, to be made public, to the end that the same and every clause thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof,

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this first day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and one, and [L. S.] of the Independence of the United States, the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

APPENDIX B.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND CERTAIN POWERS, WITH RESPECT TO THE LAWS AND CUSTOMS OF WAR ON LAND.

Signed at The Hague July 29, 1899.
Ratification advised by the Senate March 14, 1902.
Ratified by the President of the United States March 19, 1902.
Ratifications deposited with the Netherlands Government September 4, 1900.
Proclaimed April 11, 1902.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Convention with respect to the laws and customs of war on land was concluded and signed on July 29, 1899, by the Plenipotentiaries of the United States of America, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, Mexico, France, Great Britain and Ireland, Greece, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Montenegro, the Netherlands, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Servia, Siam, Sweden and Norway, Turkey, and Bulgaria, the original of which Convention, in the French language, is word for word as follows:

CONVENTION WITH RESPECT TO THE LAWS AND CUSTOMS OF WAR ON LAND.

His Majesty the Emperor of Germany, King of Prussia; His Majesty the Emperor of Austria, King of Bohemia etc., and Apostolic King of Hungary; His Majesty the King of the Belgians; His Majesty the King of Denmark; His Majesty the King of Spain and in His Name Her Majesty the Queen Regent of the Kingdom; the President of the United States of America; the President of the United Mexican States; the President of the French Republic; Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India; His Majesty the King of the Hellenes; His Majesty the King of Italy; His Majesty the Emperor of Japan; His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Luxemburg, Duke of Nassau; His Highness the Prince of Montenegro; Her Majesty the Queen of the Netherlands; His Imperial Majesty the Shah of Persia; His Majesty the King of Portugal and of the Algarves etc.; His Majesty the King of Roumania; His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias; His Majesty the King of Servia; His Majesty the King of Siam; His Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway; His Majesty the Emperor of the Ottomans and His Royal Highness the Prince of Bulgaria.

Considering that, while seeking means to preserve peace and prevent armed conflicts among nations, it is likewise necessary to have regard to cases where an appeal to arms may be caused by events which their solicitude could not avert;

Animated by the desire to serve, even in this extreme hypothesis, the interests of humanity and the ever increasing requirements of civilization;

Thinking it important, with this object, to revise the laws and general customs of war, either with the view of defining them more precisely, or of laying down certain limits for the purpose of modifying their severity as far as possible;

Inspired by these views which are enjoined at the present day, as they were twenty-five years ago at the time of the Brussels Conference in 1874, by a wise and generous foresight;

Have, in this spirit, adopted a great number of provisions, the object of which is to define and govern the usages of war on land.

In view of the High Contracting Parties, these provisions, the wording of which has been inspired by the desire to diminish the evils of war so far as military necessities permit, are destined to serve as general rules of conduct for belligerents in their relations with each other and with populations.

It has not, however, been possible to agree forthwith on provisions embracing all the circumstances which occur in practice.

On the other hand, it could not be intended by the High Contracting Parties that the cases not provided for should, for want of a written provision, be left to the arbitrary judgment of the military Commanders.

Until a more complete code of the laws of war is issued, the High Contracting Parties think it right to declare that in cases not included in the Regulations adopted by them, populations and belligerents remain under the protection and empire of the principles of international law, as they result from the usages established between civilized nations, from the laws of humanity, and the requirements of the public conscience;

They declare that it is in this sense especially that Articles I and II of the Regulations adopted must be understood;

The High Contracting Parties, desiring to conclude a Convention to this effect, have appointed as their Plenipotentiaries, to-wit:—

* * * * * * *

Who, after communication of their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed on the following:—

ARTICLE I.

The High Contracting Parties shall issue instructions to their armed land forces, which shall be in conformity with the "Regulations respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land" annexed to the present Convention.

ARTICLE II.

The provisions contained in the Regulations mentioned in Article I are only binding on the Contracting Powers, in case of war between two or more of them.

These provisions shall cease to be binding from the time when, in a war between Contracting Powers, a non-Contracting Power joins one of the belligerents.

ARTICLE III.

The present Convention shall be ratified as speedily as possible.

The ratifications shall be deposited at the Hague.

A procès-verbal shall be drawn up recording the receipt of each ratification, and a copy, duly certified, shall be sent through the diplomatic channel, to all the Contracting Powers.

ARTICLE IV.

Non-Signatory Powers are allowed to adhere to the Present Convention.

For this purpose they must make their adhesion known to the Contracting Powers by means of a written notification, addressed to the Netherland Government, and by it communicated to all the other Contracting Powers.

ARTICLE V.

In the event of one of the High Contracting Parties denouncing the present Convention, such denunciation would not take effect until a year after the written notification made to the Netherland Government, and by it at once communicated to all the other Contracting Powers.

This denunciation shall affect only the notifying Power.

In faith of which the Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention and affixed their seals thereto.

Done at the Hague the 29th July 1899, in a single copy, which shall be kept in the archives of the Netherland Government, and copies of which, duly certified, shall be delivered to the Contracting Powers through the diplomatic channel.

ANNEX TO THE CONVENTION.

REGULATIONS RESPECTING THE LAWS AND CUSTOMS OF WAR ON LAND.

SECTION I.—ON BELLIGERENTS.

CHAPTER I.—On the Qualifications of Belligerents.

ARTICLE I.

The laws, rights, and duties of war apply not only to armies, but also to militia and volunteer corps, fulfilling the following conditions:

1. To be commanded by a person responsible for his subordinates;
2. To have a fixed distinctive emblem recognizable at a distance;
3. To carry arms openly; and
4. To conduct their operations in accordance with the laws and customs of war.

In countries where militia or volunteer corps constitute the army, or form part of it, they are included under the denomination "army."

ARTICLE II.

The population of a territory which has not been occupied who, on the enemy's approach, spontaneously take up arms to resist the invading troops without having time to organize themselves in accordance with Article I, shall be regarded a belligerent, if they respect the laws and customs of war.

ARTICLE III.

The armed forces of the belligerent parties may consist of combatants and non-combatants. In case of capture by the enemy both have a right to be treated as prisoners of war.

CHAPTER II.—On Prisoners of War.

ARTICLE IV.

Prisoners of war are in the power of the hostile Government, but not in that of the individuals or corps who captured them.

They must be humanely treated.

All their personal belongings, except arms, horses, and military papers remain their property.

ARTICLE V.

Prisoners of war may be interned in a town, fortress, camp, or any other locality, and bound not to go beyond certain fixed limits; but they can only be confined as an indispensable measure of safety.

ARTICLE VI.

The State may utilize the labor of prisoners of war according to their rank and aptitude. Their tasks shall not be excessive, and shall have nothing to do with the military operations.

Prisoners may be authorized to work for the Public Service, for private persons, or on their own account.

Work done for the State shall be paid for according to the tariffs in force for soldiers of the national army employed on similar tasks.

When the work is for other branches of the Public Service or for private persons, the conditions shall be settled in agreement with the military authorities.

The wages of the prisoners shall go towards improving their position, and the balance shall be paid them at the time of their release, after deducting the cost of their maintenance.

ARTICLE VII.

The Government into whose hands prisoners of war have fallen is bound to maintain them.

Failing a special agreement between the belligerents, prisoners of war shall be treated as regards food, quarters, and clothing, on the same footing as the troops of the Government which has captured them.

ARTICLE VIII.

Prisoners of war shall be subject to the laws, regulations, and orders in force in the army of the State into whose hands they have fallen.

Any act of insubordination warrants the adoption, as regards them, of such measures of severity as may be necessary.

Escaped prisoners, recaptured before they have succeeded in rejoining their army, or before quitting the territory occupied by the army that captured them, are liable to disciplinary punishment.

Prisoners who, after succeeding in escaping are again taken prisoners, are not liable to any punishment for the previous flight.

ARTICLE IX.

Every prisoner of war, if questioned, is bound to declare his true name and rank, and if he disregards this rule, he is liable to a curtailment of the advantages accorded to the prisoners of war of his class.

ARTICLE X.

Prisoners of war may be set at liberty on parole if the laws of their country authorized it, and, in such a case, they are bound, on their personal honour, scrupulously to fulfill, both as regards their own Government and the Government by whom they were made prisoners, the engagements they have contracted.

In such cases, their own Government shall not require of nor accept from them any service incompatible with the parole given.

ARTICLE XI.

A prisoner of war can not be forced to accept his liberty on parole; similarly the hostile Government is not obliged to assent to the prisoner's request to be set at liberty on parole.

ARTICLE XII.

Any prisoner of war, who is liberated on parole and recaptured, bearing arms against the Government to whom he had pledged his honor, or against the allies of that Government, forfeits his right to be treated as a prisoner of war, and can be brought before the Courts.

ARTICLE XIII.

Individuals who follow an army without directly belonging to it, such as newspaper correspondents and reporters, sutlers, contractors, who fall into the enemy's hands, and whom the latter think fit to detain, have a right to be treated as prisoners of war, provided they can produce a certificate from the military authorities of the army they were accompanying.

ARTICLE XIV.

A Bureau for information relative to prisoners of war is instituted, on the commencement of hostilities, in each of the belligerent States, and, when necessary, in the neutral countries on whose territory belligerents have been received. This Bureau is intended to answer all inquiries about prisoners of war, and is furnished by the various services concerned with all the necessary information to enable it to keep an individual return for each prisoner of war. It is kept informed of internments and changes, as well as of admissions into hospital and deaths.

It is also the duty of the Information Bureau to receive and collect all objects of personal use, valuables, letters, &c., found on the battlefields or left by prisoners who have died in hospital or ambulance, and to transmit them to those interested.

ARTICLE XV.

Relief Societies for prisoners of war, which are regularly constituted in accordance with the law of the country with the object of serving as the intermediary for charity, shall receive from the belligerents for themselves and their duly accredited agents every facility, within the bounds of military requirements and Administrative Regulations, for the effective accomplishment of their humane task. Delegates of these Societies may be admitted to the places of internment for the distribution of relief, as also to the halting places of repatriated prisoners, if furnished with a personal permit by the military authorities, and on giving an engagement in writing to comply with all their Regulations for order and police.

ARTICLE XVI.

The Information Bureau shall have the privilege of free postage. Letters, money orders, and valuables, as well as postal parcels destined for the prisoners of war or dispatched by them, shall be free of all postal duties both in the countries of origin and destination, as well as in those they pass through.

Gifts and relief in kind for prisoners of war shall be admitted free of all duties of entry and others, as well as of payments for carriage by the Government railways.

ARTICLE XVII.

Officers taken prisoners may receive, if necessary, the full pay allowed them in this position by their country's regulations, the amount to be repaid by their Government.

ARTICLE XVIII.

Prisoners of war shall enjoy every latitude in the exercise of their religion, including attendance at their own church services, provided only they comply with the regulations for order and police issued by the military authorities.

ARTICLE XIX.

The wills of prisoners of war are received or drawn up on the same conditions as for soldiers of the National Army.

The same rules shall be observed regarding death certificates, as well as for the burial of prisoners of war, due regard being paid to their grade and rank.

ARTICLE XX.

After the conclusion of peace, the repatriation of prisoners of war shall take place as speedily as possible.

CHAPTER III.—On the Sick and Wounded.

ARTICLE XXI.

The obligations of belligerents with regard to the sick and wounded are governed by the Geneva Convention of the 22nd August, 1864, subject to any modifications which may be introduced into it.

SECTION II.—ON HOSTILITIES.

CHAPTER I.—On means of injuring the Enemy, Sieges, and Bombardments.

ARTICLE XXII.

The right of belligerents to adopt means of injuring the enemy is not unlimited.

ARTICLE XXIII.

Besides the prohibitions provided by special Conventions, it is especially prohibited:—

(a.) To employ poison or poisoned arms;

(b.) To kill or wound treacherously individuals belonging to the hostile nation or army;

(c.) To kill or wound an enemy who, having laid down arms, or having no longer means of defence, has surrendered at discretion;

(d.) To declare that no quarter will be given;

(e.) To employ arms, projectiles, or material of a nature to cause superfluous injury;

(f.) To make improper use of a flag of truce, the national flag, or military ensigns and the enemy's uniform, as well as the distinctive badges of the Geneva Convention;

(g.) To destroy or seize the enemy's property, unless such destruction or seizure be imperatively demanded by the necessities of war.

ARTICLE XXIV.

Ruses of war and the employment of methods necessary to obtain information about the enemy and the country, are considered allowable.

ARTICLE XXV.

The attack or bombardment of towns, villages, habitations or buildings which are not defended, is prohibited.

ARTICLE XXVI.

The Commander of an attacking force, before commencing a bombardment, except in the case of an assault, should do all he can to warn the authorities.

ARTICLE XXVII.

In sieges and bombardments all necessary steps should be taken to spare as far as possible edifices devoted to religion, art, science, and charity, hospitals, and places where the sick and wounded are collected, provided they are not used at the same time for military purposes.

The besieged should indicate these buildings or places by some particular and visible signs, which should previously be notified to the assailants.

ARTICLE XXVIII.

The pillage of a town or place, even when taken by assault, is prohibited.

CHAPTER II.—On Spies.

ARTICLE XXIX.

An individual can only be considered a spy if, acting clandestinely, or on false pretences, he obtains, or seeks to obtain information in the zone of operations of a belligerent, with the intention of communicating it to the hostile party.

Thus, soldiers not in disguise who have penetrated into the zone of operations of a hostile army to obtain information are not considered spies. Similarly, the following are not considered spies: soldiers or civilians, carrying out their mission openly, charged with the delivery of despatches destined either for their own army or for that of the enemy. To this class belong likewise individuals sent in balloons to deliver despatches, and generally to maintain communication between the various parts of an army or a territory.

ARTICLE XXX.

A spy taken in the act cannot be punished without previous trial.

ARTICLE XXXI.

A spy who, after rejoining the army to which he belongs, is subsequently captured by the enemy, is treated as a prisoner of war, and incurs no responsibility for his previous acts of espionage.

CHAPTER III.—On Flags of Truce.

ARTICLE XXXII.

An individual is considered as bearing a flag of truce who is authorized by one of the belligerents to enter into communication with the other, and who carries a white flag. He has a right to inviolability, as well as the trumpeter, bugler, or drummer, the flag-bearer, and the interpreter who may accompany him.

ARTICLE XXXIII.

The Chief to whom a flag of truce is sent is not obliged to receive it in all circumstances.

He can take all steps necessary to prevent the envoy taking advantage of his mission to obtain information.

In case of abuse, he has the right to detain the envoy temporarily.

ARTICLE XXXIV.

The envoy loses his rights of inviolability if it is proved beyond doubt that he has taken advantage of his privileged position to provoke or commit an act of treachery.

CHAPTER IV.—On Capitulations.

ARTICLE XXXV.

Capitulations agreed on between the Contracting Parties must be in accordance with the rules of military honour.

When once settled, they must be scrupulously observed by both the parties.

CHAPTER V.—On Armistices.

ARTICLE XXXVI.

An armistice suspends military operations by mutual agreement between the belligerent parties. If its duration is not fixed, the belligerent parties can resume operations at any time, provided always the enemy is warned within the time agreed upon, in accordance with the terms of the armistice.

ARTICLE XXXVII.

An armistice may be general or local. The first suspends all military operations of the belligerent States; the second, only those between certain fractions of the belligerent armies and in a fixed radius.

ARTICLE XXXVIII.

An armistice must be notified officially, and in good time, to the competent authorities and the troops. Hostilities are suspended immediately after the notification, or at a fixed date.

ARTICLE XXXIX.

It is for the Contracting Parties to settle, in the terms of the armistice, what communications may be held, on the theatre of war, with the population and with each other.

ARTICLE XL.

Any serious violation of the armistice by one of the parties gives the other party the right to denounce it, and even, in case of urgency, to recommence hostilities at once.

ARTICLE XLI.

A violation of the terms of the armistice by private individuals acting on their own initiative, only confers the right of demanding the punishment of the offenders, and, if necessary, indemnity for the losses sustained.

SECTION III.—ON MILITARY AUTHORITY OVER HOSTILE TERRITORY.

ARTICLE XLII.

Territory is considered occupied when it is actually placed under the authority of the hostile army.

The occupation applies only to the territory where such authority is established, and in a position to assert itself.

ARTICLE XLIII.

The authority of the legitimate power having actually passed into the hands of the occupant, the latter shall take all steps in his power to re-establish and insure, as far as possible, public order and safety, while respecting, unless absolutely prevented, the laws in force in the country.

ARTICLE XLIV.

Any compulsion of the population of occupied territory to take part in military operations against its own country is prohibited.

Article XLV.

Any pressure on the population of occupied territory to take the oath to the hostile Power is prohibited.

Article XLVI.

Family honour and rights, individual lives and private property, as well as religious convictions and liberty, must be respected.

Private property cannot be confiscated.

Article XLVII.

Pillage is formally prohibited.

Article XLVIII.

If, in the territory occupied, the occupant collects the taxes, dues, and tolls imposed for the benefit of the State, he shall do it, as far as possible, in accordance with the rules in existence and the assessment in force, and will in consequence be bound to defray the expenses of the administration of the occupied territory on the same scale as that by which the legitimate Government was bound.

Article XLIX.

If, besides the taxes mentioned in the preceding Article, the occupant levies other money taxes in the occupied territory, this can only be for military necessities or the administration of such territory.

Article L.

No general penalty, pecuniary or otherwise, can be inflicted on the population on account of the acts of individuals for which it can not be regarded as collectively responsible.

Article LI.

No tax shall be collected except under a written order and on the responsibility of a Commander-in-Chief.

This collection shall only take place, as far as possible, in accordance with the rules in existence and the assessment of taxes in force.

For every payment a receipt shall be given to the taxpayer.

ARTICLE LII.

Neither requisition in kind nor services can be demanded from communes or inhabitants except for the necessities of the army of occupation. They must be in proportion to the resources of the country, and of such a nature as not to involve the population in the obligation of taking part in military operations against their country.

These requisitions and services shall only be demanded on the authority of the Commander in the locality occupied.

The contributions in kind shall, as far as possible, be paid for in ready money; if not, their receipt shall be acknowledged.

ARTICLE LIII.

An army of occupation can only take possession of the cash, funds, and property liable to requisition belonging strictly to the State, depôts of arms, means of transport, stores and supplies, and, generally, all movable property of the State which may be used for military operations.

Railway plant, land telegraphs, telephones, steamers, and other ships, apart from cases governed by maritime law, as well as depôts of arms and, generally, all kinds of war material, even though belonging to Companies or to private persons, are likewise material which may serve for military operations, but they must be restored at the conclusion of peace, and indemnities paid for them.

ARTICLE LIV.

The plant of railways coming from neutral States, whether the property of those States, or of Companies, or of private persons, shall be sent back to them as soon as possible.

ARTICLE LV.

The occupying State shall only be regarded as administrator and usufructuary of the public buildings, real property, forests, and agricultural works belonging to the hostile State, and situated in the occupied country. It must protect the capital of these properties, and administer it according to the rules of usufruct.

ARTICLE LVI.

The property of the communes, that of religious, charitable, and educational institutions, and those of arts and science, even when State property, shall be treated as private property.

All seizure of, and destruction, or intentional damage done to such institutions, to historical monuments, works of art or science, is prohibited, and should be made the subject of proceedings.

SECTION IV.—ON THE INTERNMENT OF BELLIGERENTS AND THE CARE OF THE WOUNDED IN NEUTRAL COUNTRIES.

ARTICLE LVII.

A neutral State which receives in its territory troops belonging to the belligerent armies shall intern them, as far as possible, at a distance from the theatre of war.

It can keep them in camps, and even confine them in fortresses or locations assigned for this purpose.

It shall decide whether officers may be left at liberty on giving their parole that they will not leave the neutral territory without authorization.

ARTICLE LVIII.

Failing a special Convention, the neutral State shall supply the interned with the food, clothing, and relief required by humanity.

At the conclusion of peace, the expenses caused by the internment shall be made good.

ARTICLE LIX.

A neutral State may authorize the passage through its territory of wounded or sick belonging to the belligerent armies, on condition that the trains bringing them shall carry neither combatants nor war material. In such a case, the neutral State is bound to adopt such measures of safety and control as may be necessary for the purpose.

Wounded and sick brought under these conditions into neutral territory by one of the belligerents, and belonging to the hostile party, must be guarded by the neutral State, so as to insure their not taking part again in the military operations. The same duty shall devolve on the neutral State with regard to wounded or sick of the other army who may be committed to its care.

ARTICLE LX.

The Geneva Convention applies to sick and wounded interned in neutral territory.

* * * * * * *

And whereas the said Convention was duly ratified by the Government of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, and by the Governments of the other

Powers aforesaid with the exception of Sweden and Norway and Turkey;

And whereas, in pursuance of the stipulations of Article III of the said Convention the ratifications of the said Convention were deposited at The Hague on the 4th day of September, 1900, by the Plenipotentiaries of the Governments of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, France, Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Siam, and Bulgaria; on the 6th day of October, 1900, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Japan; on the 16th day of October, 1900, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Montenegro; on the 4th day of April, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Greece; on the 17th day of April, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Mexico; on the 11th day of May, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Servia; on the 12th day of July, 1901, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of Luxembourg; and on the 5th day of April, 1902, by the Plenipotentiary of the Government of the United States of America:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, have caused the said Convention to be made public, to the end that the same and every clause thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this eleventh day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and two, and of [SEAL] the Independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

By the President:
DAVID J. HILL,
Acting Secretary of State.

APPENDIX C.

Whereas on the twenty-second of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, at Geneva, Switzerland, plenipotentiaries respectively representing Italy, Baden, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, Portugal, France, Prussia, Saxony, and Wurttemberg and the Federal Council of Switzerland agreed upon ten articles of a treaty or convention for the purpose of mitigating the evils inseparable from war; of ameliorating the condition of soldiers wounded on the field of battle, and particularly providing, among other things, in effect, that persons employed in hospitals and in according relief to the sick and wounded and supplies for this purpose shall be deemed neutral and entitled to protection; and that a distinctive and uniform flag shall be adopted for hospitals and ambulances and convoys of sick and wounded and an arm badge for individuals neutralized; and

Whereas said treaty has been ratified by all of said nations, and by others subsequently, to the number of forty-three or more, including the United States of America; and

Whereas the International Conference of Geneva of eighteen hundred and sixty-three recommended "that there exist in every country a committee whose mission consists in cooperating in times of war with the hospital service of the armies by all means in its power;" and

Whereas a permanent organization is an agency needed in every nation to carry out the purposes of said treaty, and especially to secure supplies and to execute the humane objects contemplated by said treaty, with the power to adopt and use the distinctive flag and arm badge specified by said treaty in article seven, on which shall be the sign of the Red Cross, for the purpose of cooperating with the "Comité International de Secours aux Militaires Blessés" (International Committee of Relief for the Wounded in War); and

Whereas in accordance with the requirements and customs of said international body such an association adopting and using said insignia was formed in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, in July, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, known as "The American National Association of the Red Cross," reincorporated April seventeenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, under the laws of the District of Columbia, and reincorporated by Act of Congress in June, nineteen hundred; and

Whereas it is believed that the importance of the work demands a repeal of the present charter and a reincorporation of the society under Government supervision: Now, therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Clara Barton, Hilary A. Herbert, Thomas F. Walsh, Charles C. Glover, Charles J. Bell, Mabel T. Boardman, George Dewey, William R. Day, Nelson A. Miles, James Tanner, William K. Van Reypen, John M. Wilson, Simon Wolf, James R. Garfield, Gifford Pinchot, S. W. Woodward, Mary A. Logan, Walter Wyman, of Washington, District of Columbia; George H. Shields, of Missouri; William H. Taft, F. B. Loomis, Samuel Mather, of Ohio; Spencer Trask, Robert C. Ogden, Cleveland H. Dodge, George C. Boldt, William T. Wardwell, John G. Carlisle, George B. McClellan, Elizabeth Mills Reid, Margaret Carnegie, of New York; John H. Converse, Alexander Mackay-Smith, J. Wilkes O'Neill, H. Kirke Porter, of Pennsylvania; Richard Olney, W. Murray Crane, Henry L. Higginson, William Draper, Frederick H. Gillett, of Massachusetts; Marshall Field, Robert T. Lincoln, Lambert Tree, of Illinois; A. G. Kaufman, of South Carolina; Alexander W. Terrell, of Texas; George Gray, of Delaware; Redfield Proctor, of Vermont; John W. Foster, Noble C. Noyes, of Minnesota; Emanuel Fiske, Marshall Fiske, of Connecticut, together with five other persons to be named by the President of the United States, one to be chosen from each of the Departments of State, War, Navy, Treasury, and Justice, their associates and successors, are hereby created a body corporate and politic in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 2. That the name of this corporation shall be "The American National Red Cross," and by that name shall have perpetual succession, with the power to sue and be sued in courts of law and equity within the jurisdiction of the United States; to have and to hold such real and personal estate as shall be deemed advisable and to accept bequests for the purposes of this corporation hereinafter set forth; to adopt a seal and the same to alter and destroy at pleasure; and to have the right to have and to use, in carrying out its purposes hereinafter designated, as an emblem and badge, a Greek red cross on a white ground, as the same has been described in the treaty of Geneva, August twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and adopted by the several nations acceding thereto; to ordain and establish by-laws and regulations not inconsistent with the laws of the United States of America or any State thereof, and generally to do all such acts and things (including the establishment of regulations for the election of associates and successors) as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this Act and promote the purposes of said organization; and the corporation hereby created is designated as the organization which is authorized to act in matters of relief under said treaty. In accordance with article seven of the treaty, the delivery of the brassard allowed for individuals neutralized in time of war shall be left to military authority.

Sec. 3. That the purposes of this corporation are and shall be—

First. To furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of armies in time of war, in accordance with the spirit and conditions of the conference of Geneva of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and also of the treaty of the Red Cross, or the treaty of Geneva, of August twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to which the United States of America gave its adhesion on March first, eighteen hundred and eighty-two.

Second. And for said purposes to perform all the duties devolved upon a national society by each nation which has acceded to said treaty.

Third. To succeed to all the rights and property which have been hitherto held and to all the duties which have heretofore been performed by the American National Red Cross as a corporation duly incorporated by Act of Congress June sixth, nineteen hundred, which Act is hereby repealed and the organization created thereby is hereby dissolved.

Fourth. To act in matters of voluntary relief and in accord with the military and naval authorities as a medium of communication between the people of the United States of America and their Army and Navy, and to act in such matters between similar national societies of other governments through the "Comité International de Secours," and the Government and the people and the Army and Navy of the United States of America.

Fifth. And to continue and carry on a system of national and international relief in time of peace and apply the same in mitigating the sufferings caused by pestilence, famine, fire, floods, and other great national calamities, and to devise and carry on measures for preventing the same.

Sec. 4. That from and after the passage of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person within the jurisdiction of the United States to falsely and fraudulently hold himself out as, or represent or pretend himself to be, a member of, or an agent for, the American National Red Cross, for the purpose of soliciting, collecting, or receiving money or material; or for any person to wear or display the sign of the Red Cross, or any insignia colored in imitation thereof for the fraudulent purpose of inducing the belief that he is a member of, or an agent for, the American National Red Cross. Nor shall it be lawful for any person or corporation, other than the Red Cross of America, not now lawfully entitled to use the sign of the Red Cross, hereafter to use such sign or any insignia colored in imitation thereof for the purposes of trade or as an advertisement to induce the sale of any article whatsoever. If any person violates the provisions of this section, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable to a fine of not less than one nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or both, for each and every offense. The fine so collected shall be paid to the American National Red Cross.

Sec. 5. That the governing body of the said American National Red Cross shall consist, in the first instance, of a central committee numbering eighteen persons, to be appointed in the manner following, namely: Six by the incorporators herein named and twelve by the President of the United States, one of whom shall be designated by the President to act as chairman. It shall be the duty of the central committee to organize with as little delay as possible State and Territorial societies, including the District of Columbia, under such rules as the said committee may prescribe. When six or more State or Territorial societies have been formed, thereafter the central committee shall be composed as follows: Six to be appointed by the incorporators, six by the representatives of the State and Territorial societies at the annual meeting of the incorporators and societies, and six by the President of the United States, one of whom shall be designated by him as chairman and one each to be named by him from the Departments of State, War, Navy, Treasury, and Justice.

The first six members of the central committee elected by the incorporators at the first annual meeting, and the first six members of the central committee elected by the State and Territorial delegates, shall when elected select by lot from their number two members to serve one year, two members to serve two years, and two members to serve three years, and each subsequent election of members shall be for a period of three years or until their successors are duly elected and qualify. The six members of the central committee appointed by the President at the annual meeting shall serve for one year.

The President shall fill as soon as may be any vacancy that may occur by death, resignation, or otherwise in the chairmanship or in the membership of the central committee appointed by him. And any vacancy that may occur in the six members of the central committee herein provided to be appointed by the incorporators or in the six to be appointed by the representatives of the State societies shall be filled by temporary appointments to be made by the remaining members of the six in which the vacancy or vacancies may occur, such appointees to serve until the next annual meeting.

The central committee shall have power to appoint from its own members an executive committee of seven persons, five of whom shall be a quorum, who, when the central committee is not in session, shall have and exercise all the powers of the central committee.

The Secretary of War shall within thirty days after the passage of this Act call a meeting at a time and place to be designated by him in the city of Washington of the incorporators hereunder, giving at least thirty days' notice thereof in one or more newspapers, and the annual meeting of said incorporators, their associates and successors, shall thereafter be held in said city on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in December, the first of said meetings to be held in December, nineteen hundred and five. Fifteen members shall constitute a quorum at any annual or special meeting.

Voting by proxy shall not be allowed at any meeting of the incorporators, annual or special, nor at any meeting of State or Territorial societies organized under the provisions of this charter.

SEC. 6. That the said American National Red Cross shall on the first day of January of each year make and transmit to the Secretary of War a report of its proceedings for the preceding year, including a full, complete, and itemized report of receipts, and expenditures of whatever kind, which report shall be duly audited by the War Department, and a copy of said report shall be transmitted to Congress by the War Department.

SEC. 7. That Congress shall have the right to repeal, alter, or amend this Act at any time. Act of January 5, 1905 (33 Stats., 599).

(This act takes the place of the act of June 6, 1900, 31 Stats., 277. See pages 1044 to 1047 herein.)
